which have been many months in progress, to establish a cheap, regular, and permanent system of supplying the Public with pure Tea and Coffee, upon the principle of reciprocal benefit, which being now completed, are submitted with a firm conviction that the benefits all classes will derive from their adoption will be their best advocates.

Pure Tea and Coffee, packed in leaden cases of a peculiar kind, to preserve its quality, is delivered to Retail Agents in London, direct from the Company's Ware houses, to sell to the Public for ready money, at a commission of only 5*l.* per cent. (about a third of what is allowed in similar cases) having the price, quality, and Secretary's Signature on each package, to secure its delivery free from adulteration.

Depôts are established throughout ENGLAND—the principal are at

Bristol, under the management of Mr. J. Stevens.
Sheffield - - - - - Mr. R. Harrison.
Leeds - - - - - Mr. J. H. Ridsdale.
Hull - - - - - Mr. T. Topping.
Manchester - - - - Mr. F. J. Glover.
IN SCOTLAND.—At Aberdeen - - - - Mr. J. M'Kay.
Edinborough - - - - Mr. W. Munro.
Glasgow - - - - Mr. M. Leslie.
Lerwick, in Zetland - - Mr. J. Leask.
IN IRELAND.—At Dublin - - - - - Mr. J. West.
Cork - - - - - Mr. R. Hardy.
Waterford - - - - Mr. A. Pope, jun.

and, in a few days, those at Belfast, Athlone, Norwich, Leicester, Newcastle-upon Tyne, Liverpool, Portsmouth, Devonport. Birmingham, and Nottingham, will be opened.

From whence the Retail Agents in these places, and their surrounding districts, will readily obtain supplies for the Public, and always enable the residents in the remote parts of the United Kingdom to purchase Tea and Coffee, free from adulteration, at the reduced rates, as easily and advantageously as in London.

The Company have earnestly endeavoured to enable the working classes to obtain quantities suitable to their means with the same facility as their wealthier neighbours; a measure hitherto deemed unworthy of consideration, though of great importance, from their forming so large a portion of the population, as well as from the necessity of their hard earnings being laid out in the most advantageous manner.

The advantages to be derived by the public from these extensive, liberal, and economical arrangements, are too considerable and obvious to require further commentary; the test by which they can be ascertained—that of comparison—is simple, open to every one, and the East India Tea Company are sure will be conclusive in favour of their pretensions.

TEA.

	lb. s. d.	½ lb. s. d.	¼ lb. s. d.	2 oz. s. d.	1 oz. d.
Bohea	4 9	2 4½	1 2½	0 7½	3¾
Congou	5 3	2 7½	1 4	0 8	4
Ditto	5 11	2 11½	1 6	0 9	4½
Souchong	6 6	3 3	1 7½	0 10	5
Ditto	7 2	3 7	1 9½	0 11	5½
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Fine ditto	10 5	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Pekoe	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Green	7 6	3 9	1 11	0 11½	5¾
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Hyson	8 6	4 3	2 1½	1 1	6½
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Ditto	10 5	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Hyson	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Finest ditto	12 5	6 2½	3 1½	1 7	9½
Gunpowder Hyson	13 1	6 6½	3 3½	1 8	10
Finest ditto	14 4	7 2	3 7	1 10	11

ROASTED COFFEE.

	lb. s. d.	½ lb. s. d.	¼ lb. s. d.	2 oz. s. d.	1 oz. d.
Plantation	1 7	0 9½	0 5	0 2½	1¼
Dutch	1 11	0 11½	0 6	0 3	1½
Fine ditto	2 6	1 3	0 7½	0 4	2
Bourbon	2 10	1 5	0 8½	0 4½	2¼
Turkey	3 2	1 7	0 9½	0 5	2½
Finest ditto	4 2	2 1	1 0½	0 6½	3¼

It is recommended that Coffee be purchased whole berried, as it is as difficult to detect adulteration when ground, as it is easy when otherwise.

Persons wishing to become Agents are to make their applications by letter, (post-paid) to the Depôts, or to

C Hancock Secy

The following Retail Agents are already appointed:—

Mr. G. Herbert, 88, Cheapside.
Mr. Powles, 146, Leadenhall-street.
Mr. F. Ebborn, 121, Grove-street, Camden Town.
Mr. J. Douglas, Kentish Town.
Mr. J. Allen, 11, St. Martin's-le-Grand.
Mr. R. Toms, 146, Edgeware-road, Paddington.
Mr. W. K. Foster, 69, Chiswell-street.
Mr. J. Spraggen, Gravesend, Kent.
Mr. J. Bates, 6, Crombie's-row, Commercial-road.
Mr. T. Body, 47, Edgeware-road.
Mr. M. Arnsby, 8, Staverton-row, Walworth-road.
A. Kay, 101, London-road, Southwark.
J. Peachy, 10, Garlick-hill, Upper Thames street,
Mr. J. Hutton, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.
Mr. W. Thornton, Isleworth.
Mr. G. Harris, 16, King-street, Westminster.
Mr. J. D. Bird, 80, Fore street, Cripplegate.
Mrs. Land, 26, Warwick-row, Blackfriars-row.
Mr. J. Davall, Woodstock-street, Oxford-street.
Mr. H. Callard, 15, Craven-place, Bayswater.
Mr. Holdsworth, 11, York-street, Cambridge-place, Hackney-road.
T. Hanks, 49, Seymour-street, Euston-sq.
G. Bowen, Harrow.
T. Gould, Fulham.

RICHARDSON, GOODLUCK, and Co. respectfully acquaint their Friends and the Public, that the Lottery will be decided in one day, 18th of next Month. The Scheme contains

SIX Prizes of £20,000,

Besides numerous other Capitals. There are no Blanks, as every number will have 5*l.*—Tickets and Shares, chances for the above prizes, all to be decided the 18th of October, are selling by Richardson, Goodluck, and Co. at their Office, 104, corner of Bank Buildings, Cornhill, and by their agents in the country.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, Ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed.—Lessons at home or abroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 104, High Holborn.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER, (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture, of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1s. 4d.	1s. 6d. and	1s. 9d. per lb.
Best Grey Goose		2s. and	2s. 6d.
Excellent White Goose		3s.
Real White Dantzic		3s. 3d. and	3s. 6d.
Hudson Bay, Mecklenbergh, &c.

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell, as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.

	l. s. d.		l. s. d.
Feather Beds, from	2 5 0	to	3 3 0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3 10 0	to	5 10 0
Best White Dantzic Beds	4 10 0	to	6 10 0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only			8 10 0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0 15 0	to	1 4 0

MATTRESSES.

Mattresses	0 10 0	to	1 8 0
Real Horse Hair and Wool Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliass	0 14 0	to	1 4 0

BEDSTEADS.—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES.—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap, and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts.—Brussels, Kidderminster, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions. Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re made and cured of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's Buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half-mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

 Please to observe the name of SLATER.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS.—Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor —Liverpool through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle and Congleton —Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne and Chippenham —Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton and Collumpton —Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford and Dorchester —Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke and Macclesfield —Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles).—Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston and Garstang.—Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham —Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge —Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.—Milford Haven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen —The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES.—Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock.—Holyhead (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock.—Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock.—Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning at a quarter before nine.—Liverpool (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock.—Windsor and Eton coaches daily.—Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five —Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two.—Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock —Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four —Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half past five —Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock.—Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six —Coventry light 4-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six —Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon —Chester and Park-Gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight and evening at half-past five o'clock.—Worcester coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock. —Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five.—Tamworth, Atherstone, and Hinckley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock. —Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four.—Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock —Dudley and Stourbridge 4-inside post coach, every afternoon at five.—Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening.—Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening —Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares.—Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse), through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence; the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five —Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two —Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two —Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours.)—Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning.—Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narberth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock.—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.—N. B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom

W WATERHOUSE and Co Proprietors.

††† The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5*l*, unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage, to them or their agents—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 6th inst. at Bishop's Court, the Right Honourable Lady Graves, of a son.—On the 7th inst. at Rochester, the lady of Captain Fenwick, R. E. of a daughter. Same day, the lady of the Rev. Edwin Lance, of a daughter.—On the 9th inst. at his house, Regent's Park, the lady of Major Carmichael, of a daughter.—On the same day, in Old Burlington-street, the lady of E. Cutler, Esq. of a daughter.—On Monday last, at Lydbury, near Bishop's Castle, the lady of Major Brown, of a son.—On Tuesday last, at Hampstead, the wife of Thomas Farrer, of a daughter.—Same day, at Cheltenham, Mrs. Wm. Ashton, of a son.—Same day, in Old Burlington-street, the lady of Lieut.-Colonel Cavendish, of a son.—On Friday last, at Clapton, the lady of Herman William Mertens, Esq. of a daughter.—Same day, in Euston-square, Mrs. Wright, of a son.

MARRIED.

On the 29th ult. at Kedleston, John Beaumont, Esq. of Barrow-upon-Trent, to the Honourable Mary Curzon, daughter of Lord Scarsdale.—On the 9th inst. at Narton, in Suffolk, John Thomas Selwin, Esq. of Down Hall, Essex, and of Bosmere, Suffolk, to Isabella, second daughter of the late General Leveson Gower, of Bill Hill, Berkshire.—On Monday last, at Uppark, by special licence, Sir Harry Featherstonhaugh, Bart. to Miss Mary Ann Bullock.

DIED.

On the 14th July last, at Kingston, Jamaica, Mr. Henry Robarts Hibbert, youngest son of George Hibbert, Esq. of Portland-place.—On the 24th ult. on his return from Switzerland, Joseph James, Esq. of South Lambeth.—On the 9th inst. in London-street, Fitzroy-square, after a few days' illness, Henry Boetefeur, Esq. aged 39 years.—On Monday last, at Broadstairs, John Paton, Esq. of Bow-churchyard, aged 61.—On Wednesday last, in Leicester square, Joseph Knight, Esq. aged 66.—On the 26th March last, at Purneah, Eliza, the wife of Captain J. Aubert, of the Bengal Native Infantry.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 20. SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1825. Price 7*d*.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—On Monday, Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Intrigue.
On Tuesday—Paul Pry, with the Deaf Lover, and Midas.
On Wednesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and My Grandmother.
On Thursday—Paul Pry, with (never acted) a Comic Piece in One Act, called Which is my Cousin? and (by permission of the Proprietors of the Theatre Royal Covent Garden) the Farce of X. Y. Z. being for the benefit of Madame Vestris.
On Friday—Paul Pry, with other entertainments.
On Saturday—Paul Pry, with other entertainments.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE.—On Monday—Jonathan in England, the Boarding-House, and other entertainments.
On Tuesday—Inkle and Yarico, with the Boarding-House.
On Wednesday—(31st time) Broken Promises, with (2d time this season) the Blind Boy.—For the Benefit of Mr. Stevenson.
On Thursday—Inkle and Yarico, with the Boarding-House.
On Friday—(13th time) the Shepherd Boy, with Gretna Green, and the Turnpike Gate.
On Saturday—Jonathan in England, and other entertainments in which Mr. Mathews will perform, being positively his last appearance this season.

LAST WEEK OF THE PRESENT SPECTACLE.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—On Monday, 26th September, and during the week, the entertainments to commence with the grand historical and military Spectacle of the BURNING OF MOSCOW. After which the Scenes in the Circle, the grand American Cavalcade, and Mr. Woolford's surprising Horsemanship Evolutions on a Single Horse, without saddle or trappings.—The whole to conclude with the gorgeous Spectacle of THE CORONATION, or SIGHTS IN ENGLAND AND FETES IN FRANCE. The King's Carriage, drawn by Eight Horses, Military Ballet, National Allegory, Naval Fete, &c.
Places for the Boxes to be taken at the Box Office from Ten to Four.
Boxes, 4s.—Pit, 2s.—Gal. 1s.—Doors open at Half-past Five.

THE LAST WEEK OF NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE.

ROYAL COBURG THEATRE.—On Monday next will be performed, for the first time, a new grand Melo-Drama, in Three Acts, called THE SPY OF THE NEUTRAL GROUND, or the American War in 1780; supported by the whole strength of the company, and in which Miss R. Adcock, from the Theatre Royal, Norwich, will make her first appearance.—To conclude with (first time at half-price) The LAST DAYS of NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE, comprising every incident of his life, from his flight from Waterloo till his death at St. Helena, in the course of which will be exhibited a Grand Naval Moving Panorama.

NEW PIECE.
First Appearance of Mr. Rowbotham, and Last Week of Mrs. Kennedy.

NEW SURREY THEATRE.—On Monday, Sept. 26, and during the week, an entirely new Melo-Drama, called THE MAID OF VENICE, or the Prophet's Priest; in which Mr. Rowbotham will make his First Appearance, and in which Mr. Huntley will perform.—A new Ballet, composed by Mr. Ridgway, called THE OLD COMMODORE, or Cross Purposes.—After which, Monsieur Gouffe, whose extraordinary performances in the Lazaretto, will in that piece, renew his admirable efforts which have excited such an unusual sensation through every circle, including his extraordinary leaps, features of agility and gymnastic displays, horizontal balancings, supporting a boy on his shoulders, never attempted by any man but himself; to conclude with his running round the fronts of the Boxes and Gallery, supported only by the thread-like mouldings.—To conclude with a New Musical Extravaganza, (by C. Dibdin, called THE OLD BEAR; principal characters, Messrs. T. B. Clifford, J. Jones (from the English Opera House), Gallot, Clifford, Fitzwilliam, Vale, Mrs. Kennedy (from the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden), Madame Simon, and Miss Tunstall.

EXHIBITION (at No. 8, Soho-square, near the Bazaar) OF MODELS OF THE MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN SWITZERLAND, upon a very large scale, by which the Artist has been enabled to combine the most faithful representations of the natural grandeur of Swiss scenery, with the most perfect accuracy of detail. That of Mont Blanc, including the Valley of Chamouni, 14 feet by 8, is eminently calculated to give a correct idea of this magnificent object, with its snowy mantles, its extensive glaciers, and the numerous needles by which it is surrounded. Also a Model, upon a large scale, of that wonderful work of Buonaparte's, the Road over Simplon into Italy. One of Mont Righi, with the Valley Goldau, represented in the state of devastation caused by the falling of the Rosberg, in 1806. One of the Passage of St. Gothard and the Devil's Bridge. Also the interesting Passage of Mont Cenis. Models of the Cities of Geneva and Edinburgh; and various others, all executed with due regard to accuracy and effect.—Admission 1s.—Small Models of the above made for Sale.

ORGAN MUSIC.—To be Published in Numbers, price 3s. each, by CLEMENTI and Co. 26, Cheapside, BLEWITT's ORGAN SERVICE of the CHURCH of ENGLAND and IRELAND, comprising a first and last Voluntary, with a choice selection of the most approved Chaunts, &c. with appropriate Preludes and Interludes composed expressly for the work.—Although these Pieces were composed for the Organ they will be found highly useful to the Pianoforte Student as a practice for the formation of the true legato style; they will also, it is hoped, form an acceptable appendage to the Piano forte in private families, as a Sunday evening recreation. In the course of the work a concise treatise on the Organ will be given, with an entire new set of Interludes on a novel plan; this treatise will not only comprise instructions for the proper blending of the stops, but rules for tuning and regulating the reed-work. The First Number will be ready for delivery on the 1st day of October, and continued monthly until completed.

SIX TWENTY THOUSANDS IN ONE DAY, AND NO MORE LOTTERIES AFTER THESE DRAWINGS.

J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT solicit attention to the present brilliant Scheme, which not only retains all the late popular attractions, but embraces for the first time since the establishment of Lotteries, and before their final conclusion, SIX 20,000*l*. 20,000*l*. 20,000*l*. 20,000*l*. 20,000*l*. 20,000*l*. &c. &c. exceeding One-Fourth of a Million of Money, ALL IN ONE DAY, 18th OCTOBER.
Tickets and Shares are now on Sale at J. and J. Sivewright's fortunate Offices, No. 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 38, Haymarket, London; where they sold in One Lottery, 12,478, a Prize of 30,000*l*. and several other Capitals; in the Lottery drawn 15th July last, 3613, a Prize of 21,055*l*. besides other Capitals.

TRAVELLERS UP THE RHINE and ROTTERDAM are respectfully informed, a line of Steam Packets is already established at Rotterdam, thence up the Rhine to Niemegen, Dusseldorf, and Cologne, and that communication with them is opened by the LONDON and ROTTERDAM STEAM PACKETS;
KING OF THE NETHERLANDS, Captain John Slater; and QUEEN OF THE NETHERLANDS, Captain John Pearson;
which depart regularly every Wednesday and Saturday from off the Custom-house, at Eight o'clock in the Morning, for the conveyance of Passengers, Carriages, and Luggage to Rotterdam.—For farther particulars application to be made to the General Packet Office, 358, Strand; and for securing Beds, to N. W. Symonds, Agent, 7, Crescent, Minories.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest Manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	1	6
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia (A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6
The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Serenry (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0

GUN and PISTOL REPOSITORY, 42 and 43, Oxford-street.—D. GASS respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and Sporting Gentlemen, he has added to his choice and well-selected Stock of New and Second-hand Flint and Detonating Guns, the principal part of Mrs. Wilson's, late of Vigo-lane, (retired from business.) Guns by Manton, Purdey, Forsyth, Smith, Nock, Moore, Egg, Mortimer, and other makers, at half their original cost, warranted. Rifles, Air Guns, and Canes, by Staudenmayer, and other makers. Duelling, Holster, and Pocket Pistols in great variety. An assortment of Plate and Plated Articles, very low, for ready money. Guns and Pistols bought or taken in exchange. Merchants and Captains supplied.—42 and 43, Oxford street, near Berners-street.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6*s*. each, or cases of four bottles for 1*l*. forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

NEW FOREIGN PIANO-FORTE MUSIC.—Admired Airs from Spohr's Faust, by J. H. Griesbach, 3*s*.—The Jaeger Chorus, Waltz, March, Laughing Chorus, and Through the Forests, all from Der Freyschutz, by the author, 3*s*.—Hertz's 24 Grand Studies in all the Major and Minor Keys, composed, fingered, and dedicated to Hummel, of Vienna, 2 books, each 5*s*. N. B. This edition of the above celebrated studies has been revised, and passages for the additional arranged for Piano-fortes up to C. by Mr. Moscheles.—Griesbach's (J. H.) Piano-forte Student's Companion, 7*s*. 6*d*.—Also, by Camille Pleyel, Melange on Il Crociato in Egitto, in which is introduced Giovinetto, and five other popular airs, from the same Opera, 4*s*.—Aurora, 3*s*.—Second edition of Amor possente nome, 4*s*.—Cruda Sorte, 3*s*.—March from Mose in Egitto, 2*s*.—Rondo from La Gazza Ladra, 2*s*.—Two Polonaises, each 2*s*.—and Three French Rondos, each 1*s*. 6*d*., all by C. Pleyel.—C. Czerny's 1st and 2d Rondinos, each 3*s*. 6*d*.; and O Pescator, 3*s*.; Pixis' Fra tante, 3*s*.—Hummel's March from Cendrillon, 4*s*.—London: printed and sold by R. Cocks and Co. 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 38, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom. Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. HOSE, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

GENUINE SELTZER MINERAL WATER.

THE Nobility and Public can be supplied with the Real Genuine Mineral Water, imported direct from the Spa, at Seltzer, in Germany, in stone bottles, by applying (if by letter, post paid) to N. W. Symonds, 7, Crescent, Minories.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—
BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Morning, at a Quarter-past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, BATH, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, BRISTOL, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.
Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.
FARES.—Inside . . . . . 2*l*. 5*s*. Outside . . . . . 1*l*. 1*s*.
Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1*s*. 6*d*. per Head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3*s*. per Head, also including Waiters.
Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through DEVIZES, &c.
FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l*. 18*s*. Outside . . . . 0*l*. 18*s*.
Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2*s*. 6*d*. per Head, including Waiters.

BRIGHTON, IN SIX HOURS.

The Company's Brighton New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Day at Half-past One o'Clock, Sundays excepted, (and calls at the ELEPHANT and CASTLE,) to No. 5, CASTLE SQUARE, BRIGHTON.
FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l*. 1*s*. Outside . . . . 12*s*.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.
 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

By Order of the Directors,
Axe Inn, Aldermanbury. C. BURTON, Secretary.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street,

By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries	sung by	Mr. Braham, 2*s*.
What blissful visions		ditto, 2*s*.
Thus lowly bending		Mr. Atkins, 2*s*.
Blest light of heaven		Chorus, 2*s*.
Now bid with our joyous		ditto, 2*s*.
Silly woman		Miss Paton, 2*s*.
Sire, to me		ditto, 2*s*.
Ah! where the fairy vision		ditto, 2*s*.
Where now are flown		Miss Hamilton, 2*s*.
Whilst here in anguish		ditto, 2*s*.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet		Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton, 2*s*.
Evening now softly closing, ditto		Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton, 2*s*.
To woman's power surrender, Trio		Paton, Boden, and Thorne, 2*s*.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto		Paton, Hamilton, and Boden, 2*s*.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also			Miss Paton, 1*s*. 6*d*.
Why didst thou leave me	ditto		ditto, 2*s*.
Oh, turn again on me love	ditto		ditto, 2*s*.
Ah, why that look of sorrow	ditto		ditto, 1*s*. 6*d*.
My morning prayer	ditto		ditto, 1*s*. 6*d*.
In young life's morning			Mr. Thorne, 2*s*.
Her I love so dearly			Mr. Broadhurst, 2*s*.
Though sorrow may come			Miss Stephens, 2*s*.
In such a bustle			Miss Kelly, 2*s*.
Oh, I could weep			Mr. Thorne, 2*s*.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6*s*.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 33, newly arranged by the author, 4*s*.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2*s*. 6*d*.; 2 and 3, 3*s*. 6*d*. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variation, 2*s*. 6*d*.
2. Irish Air, ditto, 2*s*. 6*d*.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2*s*. 6*d*.
4. Kelvio grove, divertisement, 2*s*. 6*d*.
5. Love, good night, variations, 2*s*. 6*d*.
6. Greeo grow the rushes, O! do. 2*s*. 6*d*.

THE ALLIANCE BRITISH and FOREIGN LIFE and FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 4, New-court, St. Swithin's-lane.
Established by Act of Parliament.—Capital 5,000,000*l*. sterling.

PRESIDENTS.
John Irving, Esq. M. P.
Francis Baring, Esq. | N. M. Rothschild, Esq.
Samuel Gurney, Esq. | Moses Montefiore, Esq.

DIRECTORS.

J. Alexander, Esq. M. P.	C. Greenwood, Esq.
G. H. Barnett, Esq.	J. Heygate, jun. Esq.
Charles Bevan, Esq.	Wm. Howard, Esq.
John Bowden, Esq.	J. Innes, Esq. M. P.
Archibald Campbell, Esq.	Wm Kay, Esq.
William Crawford, Esq.	Oswald Smith, Esq.
Timothy A. Curtis, Esq.	H. M. Thornton, Esq.
Francis Cresswell, jun. Esq.	Thos. Wilson, Esq.

AUDITORS.
T. Fowell Buxton, Esq. M. P.—C. Campbell, Esq.—T. Masterman, Esq.
Bankers—Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths—Messrs. Hoare, Barnett, and Co.
Actuary—Benjamin Gompertz, Esq. F.R.S.
Secretary—Andrew Hamilton, Esq.
Physician—John R. Hume, M.D. Curzon-street.
Counsel—Lancelot Shadwell, Esq.
Solicitor—John M. Pearce, Esq.
Surveyor—Thomas Allason, Esq. Percy-street, Bedford-square.

REDUCTION OF PREMIUM.

The Company have resolved to make the following Reduction in the Rates of Premium hitherto charged on the three common Classes of Fire Assurances. This Reduction will equally apply to Assurances in London, and throughout the country, except in special cases:—

1st Class is reduced from 2*s*. to 1*s*. 6*d*. per cent
2d - - - - 3*s*. to 2*s*. 6*d*.
3d - - - - 5*s*. to 4*s*. 6*d*.

By Order of the Board, A. HAMILTON, Secretary.

ALBION FIRE and LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,

NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS,

EMPOWERED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

CAPITAL—ONE MILLION.

INSURANCES falling due at MICHAELMAS will expire, unless renewed within fifteen days from that period.

The Company's Rates and Conditions are of the most reasonable description:—no Charge is made for Fire Policies, when the Premium exceeds 5*s*.—no Admission Fine is charged on Life Insurance—a liberal Commission is allowed to Solicitors, and others, who effect Life Insurances—and every facility is afforded by which the Interest and Convenience of the public may be promoted.

WARNER PHIPPS, Secretary.

WINES AT REDUCED PRICES FOR CASH ONLY.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

	per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27*s*. to 30*s*.
Ditto, Crusted	36*s*. to 42*s*.
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48*s*. to 56*s*.
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27*s*. to 36*s*.
Ditto, Amontillado	42*s*. to 48*s*.
Madeira, West India	36*s*. to 42*s*.
Ditto, East India	48*s*. to 60*s*.
Bucellas	36*s*. to 42*s*.
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30*s*. to 36*s*.
Claret, St. Julien	48*s*.
Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72*s*. to 96*s*.
Sparkling Champagne	72*s*. to 84*s*.
Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96*s*.
St. Peray, dry and spark	72*s*.
Chablis	63*s*.
Hermitage, Red and White	96*s*.
Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60*s*.

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.
Superior Gin, 14*s*.; Jamaica Rum, 15*s*.; Brandy, 25*s*. per gallon—Six Dozen packed ina hogshead gratis—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder, Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2*l*. 18*s*. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3*l*. 15*s*. Trowsers, 18*s*. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30*s*. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7*s*. to 14*s*. Merchants and Captains who expect the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,
At J. ALBERT'S, TAILOR and DRAPER,
47, Fish street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

MOURNING.

DR. WINN's TRUE ANTICARDIUM PARIS BLACK or BLUE REVIVER, which is so much esteemed for its excellent qualities and superiority over all other Compositions that have been offered to the Public. It has the wonderful effect of restoring, in a few minutes, every description of Ladies and Gentlemen's faded Mourning, Black Hats and Coats, Silk Stockings, Crape, Lace, Silks, Muslins, Cotton, Jean Boots, &c. without injuring the texture of the most delicate article; it removes dirt and grease, will retain its virtues in all climates, and for any length of time.
T. PRICE, Oilman, near the Bricklayer's Arms, Kent-road, London, begs leave to assure persons who constantly use the above Article for restoring Gentlemen's faded Suits, that he is the sole possessor of the Receipt for preparing the invaluable and justly celebrated Mourning Reviver; and, as a proof of its rare and excellent qualities, begs to state, that he has had the most unpreceedented demand for it during the last 20 years.
May be had at the Proprietor's Oil and Colour Warehouse; and, Wholesale, of Messrs. T. and C. Butler, 4, Cheapside, and 220, Regent-street, London; 20, Waterloo-place, Edinburgh; and 34, Sackville-street, Dublin; at Messrs. Barclay and Son's Medicine Warehouse, Fleet-market; Mr. Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Messrs. Sutton and Co. Bow Church-yard; and, Retail, by all the principal Oilmen, Druggists, &c. in Town and Country.

MONEY, DISCOUNTS, &c.—50*l*. to 5000*l*. to advance upon the acceptances of Noblemen, Gentlemen, and persons of responsibility, at long or short dates, with the greatest possible privacy. Loans also upon every description of convertible security upon equitable terms. Personal applications, or letters, post-paid, to G. at letter A. No. 8, Carlton Chambers, Regent-street, St. James's, near Pall-mall, will meet due attention.—Attendance from 11 till 6.

DUTCH FLOWER ROOTS.

A Choice Collection of FLOWER ROOTS, just imported from Haarlem, the property of a highly respectable Florist there,
TO BE SOLD BY Mr. JOHN KING,
At the AUCTION MART, on WEDNESDAY, September 28, 1825,
At Twelve o'clock.

The collection consists of double and single Hyacinths, Duc Van Thol and other named Tulips, Crocus, Narcissus, Gladiolus, Spanish Iris, &c.
To be viewed the Morning of Sale, and Catalogues had at the Mart, and of the Auctioneer, Hackney-road.

RICHARDSON, GOODLUCK, and Co. respectfully acquaint their Friends and the Public, that the Lottery will be decided in one day, 18th of next Month. The Scheme contains

SIX Prizes of £20,000,

Besides numerous other Capitals. There are no Blanks, as every number will have 5*l*.—Tickets and Shares, chances for the above prizes, all to be decided the 18th of October, are selling by Richardson, Goodluck, and Co. at the Office, 104, corner of Bank Buildings, Cornhill, and by their agents in the country.

MESSRS. ROWLAND and SON, Sole Inventors and Proprietors of THE MACASSAR OIL and KALYDOR, return their most grateful thanks to the nobility, gentry, and public at large, for the continued distinguished patronage with which they are favoured, by the extensive demands for those highly popular articles. It is in consequence of such flattering patronage that some daring adventurers are endeavouring to deceive the public, by vending spurious and base imitations of the above articles, copying even the very words prefixed to their labels and advertisements. Messrs. Rowland and Son deeply regret that the public should be thus imposed upon, by the purchase of the infamous trash, SUBSTITUTED for those articles which are held in such high estimation. To detect the counterfeits, Messrs. A. Rowland and Son enclose each bottle of their genuine Macassar Oil in a new envelope, the label of which is designed and executed at a great expense by Messrs. Perkins and Heath, to whom the imposter had the audacity to apply for a similar label, in order more easily to delude the public. As a further guard against such imposition, Messrs. A. R. and Son respectfully beg to notice that their name is signed in red on each bottle of their genuine articles.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Scilly.—The equinoctial gales may be said to have commenced on Saturday, the 10th instant, when it blew very strong from the S. W., with heavy squalls, and much rain. Towards the evening, a dismasted vessel was seen about two leagues from the northward of the islands: and, after great exertions and danger on the part of the men who went out to her assistance, was safely brought into the harbour of New Grinsey, where she now lies performing quarantine. She proves to be a French schooner, called La Sidona, Amelme master, from Alicant for Rouen, with barilla. She lost both her masts, together with all her sails, rigging, &c., in a violent squall, in the early part of the day above named. In the confusion of clearing the wreck, one of the crew had three of his fingers chopped off by an axe. On the following day (Sunday) the fine large brig Birkby, Captain Miller, from the Havannah for Cowet, with sugar, while passing near the islands, carried away her foretopmast and main gallantmast, and was brought into St. Mary's Roads to repair the damage. Heavy rains, accompanied by much lightning and some thunder, have marked the commencement of the present stormy season.—West Briton.

Pittenweem.—The resuscitation of this borough (disfranchised by Court of Session for irregularity in election in 1823), which was to be effected by a royal warrant on Tuesday last, was preceded by a fortnight's carousing amoug the voters, and a zealous coaxing by the parties to gain proselytes. The Lord Advocate, who was understood to have got a hint that he was rather active in his interference on a former contest, was not expected to attend; but his Lordship made his appearance, accompanied by Duncan Macniel and Walter Cook, Esqrs. as his Counsel and Agent. The party opposed to the Lord Advocate had the advantage so far, as they had been appointed managers of the borough on its disfranchisement by the Court of Session, and had in consequence possession of the records, &c. On the day of election 22 voters came to the scratch, 11 for the Lord Advocate or Anstruther party, and 11 for the opposite party. The latter, however, would not admit the Lord Advocate's vote, on the ground that, though elected as a counsellor on the 15th of September, 1823, he had not qualified on that day, though he had subsequently acted as a counsellor with the party whose proceedings had been reduced and declared null and void by the Court of Session; and that the royal warrant entitled only the qualified counsellors of the 15th September, 1823, to vote at this election. Being in this way eleven to ten, the majority thus created filled up the new council with persons in their own interest—the Lord Advocate's party protesting against the election. The minutes, it is said, were then closed; and the clerk retired with the record, &c. The party who had thus in their opinion achieved a victory, met and dined in the council-room; and were just prepared to give three cheers to a bumper toast in honour of their success, when the other party, who had come to the resolution also to elect a council, and had applied to the Sheriff and obtained a warrant to force open the council-room and admit themselves and a clerk, broke in upon the carousers; and having elected Mr. Conolly to be their clerk, proceeded to elect a Council and Magistrates; in which operation they met no opposition. We are, therefore, in the mean time, blessed with two sets of Counsellers and Magistrates, who must fight their future battles for preferment through the agency of the gentlemen of the long robe in the Court of Session.—Dundee Advertiser.

Combination.—Lately two of Mr. Farie's colliers having presumed to disobey the grand committee, and put out more coals than they were pleased to allow, they were assaulted. Mr. Farie instantly dismissed five of those whom he suspected to have been principally concerned in the outrage. As might have been expected, the rest of the colliers made cause with these injured men, and every one of them struck, unless they were restored to their former employment. As Mr. Farie was determined to have the sole power of dismissing his servants, he firmly resisted being dictated to, and after standing out for some days, the colliers resumed work, without getting the dismissed men back.—Glasgow Chronicle.

Galway, Sept. 15.—We regret to state, that a spirit of combination has manifested itself among the journeyman nailers of this town, who have, almost without an exception, "turned out" for an advance of wages far beyond all reason; and this demand not having been readily acceded to, they commenced in the real Dublin style. On Tuesday last, between one and two o'clock, as Mr. Davis (a respectable and industrious master nailer) was passing over the West bridge into town, he was most wantonly assaulted by eight or ten of those ruffians; who, having succeeded in knocking him down, kicked and trampled on him in the most brutal manner. They likewise assaulted two or three journeymen who refused to join in their illegal measures. Mr. Davis, we are glad to hear, has indicted the parties under the Combination Act; and we trust the example will have the effect of discouraging others from taking the law into their own hands.—Connaught Journal.

FATAL ACCIDENT TO A WATER PARTY.

Yarmouth, Sept. 19.—On Friday afternoon last, between five and six o'clock, a most distressing scene was witnessed on our river, near Fisher's Quay, caused by the upsetting of a boat. A large party of ladies and gentlemen, consisting of Mr. Andrews, the Misses Sarah, Catherine, Mary, and Frances Andrews, son and daughters of the late Rev. Mr. Andrews, of Flempton Hall, near Bury; the Rev. Mr. Harris, Mr. Power, and Mr. Cape, engaged a boat in the morning of the above day of Mr. J. Stone, on the North Quay, for the purpose of enjoying a sale on that fine piece of water near this town, called Braydon. The party left Mr. Stone's quay about eleven o'clock, and had spent the day in the most pleasant and agreeable manner possible. On their return, when near Turner's Bowling Green, it was suggested that they should land there, but a man, named James Bull, in the employ of the owner of the boat, observing their intention, advised them to proceed to the place from whence they started, and there land; Bull, then, unsolicited, got into the boat with the party, for the purpose of assisting them down with it. The boat afterwards gently dropped down the river with the tide, about 200 yards further, when they arrived at Mr. Stone's quay, where they were about to land. One of the gentlemen here got into a smaller boat, in which were two boys, and was put on shore. Bull then threw the jib-halyards to the gentleman on shore, for him to make it fast, without properly securing it first to the side of the boat, which he ought to have done; the rope was thus fast from the mast head to the shore.—The tide was running very strong at the time, which caused the head of the boat to sheer off from the shore, consequently it was carried round with its side to the current, and, owing to the rope being improperly fast at the mast-head, it upset, when all on board were precipitated into the river. The distressing and heart-rending scene that followed may be imagined, which it is scarcely possible to describe. Eight individuals were seen in the water struggling for life, with their hats, bonnets, oars, &c. floating about in all directions, and from the strength of the tide, they were carried to the middle of the river, which increased the apprehensions for their safety.

The accident was observed by many people, who gave the alarm, and several boats immediately put off to their assistance, some without oars, others with only one, and from the confusion which necessarily ensued it was much doubted whether any of them could be saved. We are, however, happy to add, that the passengers were almost miraculously snatched by those in boats from a watery grave, some of them in a very exhausted state, the spark of life being nearly extinct. The gentlemen suffered but little inconvenience, as they were, we understand, able to swim, and thus kept themselves above water; but the ladies floated down the river, buoyed up only by their clothes, some of them nearly to the bridge, a distance of 200 yards, before they were picked up. The first female that was landed was Miss S. Andrews, in a very exhausted state; she was immediately taken to the St. John's Head house, where every assistance was rendered, and she soon recovered. The other three, as they were brought on shore, apparently in a helpless state, were taken to the house of our Mayor Elect, Charles Costerton, Esq., which was soon filled with friends anxious to render their assistance. Mr. Costerton (who is an eminent surgeon of very extensive practice,) was fortunately at home, or the lives of some of the young ladies would most probably not have been spared. —The usual means for restoring suspended animation were resorted to by Mr. Costerton and assistants, who shortly succeeded in restoring two of them. Considerable apprehensions were entertained about Miss C. Andrews, it being full ten minutes before the least appearance of life in her could be produced; she was, however, eventually restored to her friends. The three ladies were put to bed at Mr. Costerton's, where they remained that night, receiving the kindest attentions from Mr. and Mrs. C. They were removed to their lodgings in Harrison's Buildings on the following day, and we are happy to hear they are all fast recovering. The most distressing part of this unfortunate occurrence remains to be related, that of one life being lost.—James Bull, the man who went on board unsolicited, was in the boat when it upset, and has never since been seen or heard of. It is supposed he must have been stunned by a blow on the boat going over, as he was an excellent swimmer. The body of Bull has not yet been found. He has left a wife and five small children, the whole of whom have been bad with the small pox, and a sixth child died about a fortnight of the same dreadful disease. We therefore hope, from the distressing situation in which the family is thus suddenly placed, some humane individual will take up their case, and befriend the widow and the fatherless.

VARIETIES.

BOLIVAR AND JOSEPH LANCASTER.

The following interesting letter from General Bolivar, dated Lima, March 16th, addressed to the celebrated Joseph Lancaster, now residing in the Caraccas, is extracted from the Colombiano, received this morning:—

"Lima, March 16, 1825.

"My Dear Sir—I have the honour to receive your very flattering letter from Baltimore, the answer of which was directed to the United States of America by a circuitous route, which would considerably delay your receipt of it. I have now the greatest pleasure in learning, by your favour from Caraccas, the determination you have formed of residing amongst us, with the laudable objects of disseminating, and bringing to perfection, the Lancasterian system of education, which has done, and will continue to do, essential service in promoting the cultivation of the human intellect—a wonderful work, which we owe to the singular genius of the man who has had the goodness to devote himself to the instruction of my young fellow-citizens!

"You seem to think assistance necessary to the realization of your beneficent intentions; I therefore hasten to offer you twenty thousand dollars to be employed in advancing the education of the children of Caraccas. These twenty thousand dollars will be paid to you in London by the Agents of Peru, on whom you may draw for this sum in three or four months. The said Agents have orders to pay the amount to whoever you may direct to receive it. In case it should not be your wish to employ the entire sum in London, you may easily cause the remainder of it to be transmitted to Caraccas.

"I have further to add that I will with pleasure advance you a larger sum with the like view, should you think that it can be usefully employed. To enable me to comply with this offer, be pleased to communicate to me your opinion in such terms as you may think fit.

"The Government of Peru has been to me most generous in a thousand ways, and has moreover placed at my disposal a million of dollars for the service of the Colombians. Public education will receive my first attention in the distribution of this sum. For this reason it is no inconvenience to me, to promote the advancement of those establishments for education which are under the direction of your fine genius.

"Receive the expression of my admiration, my respect, and my gratitude, for the preference you have given to my native country, by establishing yourself therein.

"I am your most affectionate and attentive Servant,

"BOLIVAR."

PUBLIC EDIFICES.

Buckingham House.—The workmen are employed in raising a new back, by which the depth of the structure will be increased. The projections in front of the Palace will form a colonnade of Corinthian pillars. No persons, with the exception of the workmen and tradesmen employed on the building, are permitted to enter any of the doors in the high fence which surrounds the works. Nothing but the external walls of the old Palace are standing.

The grand front erecting at Whitehall, begins to shew the plan of the architect. That part of Parliament-street, near the Banquetting-house, will soon form a stately avenue to the British Senate. The building now raising, promises not only to become a public ornament, but to benefit the nation, by forming a sufficient number of Government Offices, in which the more important duties of the State will be conveniently discharged. The Secretaries of State have been for years packed up, as it were, in Downing-street, with offices not larger than the room of a Police Magistrate.

The great machinery of public business will work with more facility when the new arrangements are terminated. It is intended to pull down the buildings in Downing-street, and to remove the offices of the Secretaries of State to Whitehall. Some now in Somerset House will also be removed to the same building.

Among the handsome new churches built and building, none seems more admired than the Church of St. George, Pimlico, now erecting at the end of Grosvenor-street, near the King's Road. This structure is remarkable for taste and neatness, upon a very able design. The architecture is in the Grecian style.

The Royal Mews at Pimlico, also forms a work which adds much to the appearance of that neighbourhood.

MR. CHRISTMAS.

The following letter has been addressed hy the above person to the Editor of the New Times:—

Newgate, Sept. 19, 1825.

Sir—As I am well satisfied the columns of your paper are as equally open to the unfortunate and oppressed as to the rich and powerful, I venture to request that you will do me the favour to insert a few observations, which I am induced to offer, in consequence of an article which appeared in the News of yesterday, in allusion to my having stated, in my defence, that my misfortunes were attributable to certain gambling transactions in the Stock Exchange, principally in time bargains, into which I was induced to enter by the artifices of two designing brokers.

The paper in question observes, "If it turn out to be, what we suspect, the desperate invention of the prisoner, we shall not fail to give the utmost publicity in our power to the refutation."

As I have not sought to shelter myself from the consequences of my own actions, by falsely or unjustly attributing them to others; and as my character for veracity has hitherto stood unimpeached, I wish, although I am about to leave my native shores (perhaps for ever), that justice may be rendered to me, and that I may not depart under the burthen of more obloquy than justly attaches to my conduct: I beg leave to state, that if the Editor of the News, or any other gentleman, will condescend to call upon me, I have here for inspection documents affording undeniable proof of the truth of the declaration made in my defence.

The broker examined at the trial was not, as stated in the News, the bondsman to Messrs. Hoare; but his partner in these transactions was my security.

I am, Sir, your most obedient and very humble servant,

Wm. Christmas.

ACCIDENTS, OFFENCES, &c.

A considerable robbery was effected early on Saturday morning, at the house of Mr. Gurney, a tailor, in St. James's-street, by two men, who were observed to leave the house by the watchman, but were not apprehended, as it was supposed by their dress that they were gentlemen who had been spending the evening there. Two women who were on the outside, and who were supposed to be connected with the robbers, were detained and taken to Marlborough-street police office, where not being able to give a satisfactory account of themselves, they were ordered to find bail for being out at unseasonable hours, and in default of bail were locked up. Subsequently one of the burglars was taken, and the officers are in active pursuit of the other.

The Boston Advertiser of the 26th August gives the following distressing account of the mortality in New York and Philadelphia:—

Deaths in New York, last week, 127—adults, 57; children, 70. Of fever, 14; dysentery, 11; measles, 5; and consumption, 19.

In Philadelphia, 111—adults, 54; children, 57. Of bilious fever, 11; other fevers, 10; cholera morbus, 13; dysentery, 8; and consumption, 2.

Another Steam-packet Accident.—On Saturday morning a distressing scene was witnessed on the river, occasioned by the speed with which the steam-packets pass through the Pool. A gentleman had hired a boat at about half-past eight in the morning, at Battle-bridge Stairs, to convey his lady, himself, and their infant child, together with their luggage, on board the Dart steam-packet for Margate, which was proceeding down the river on her course. When the boat approached the packet, the surf swamped the boat and engulfed all within it. The gentleman and the waterman could swim, and they saved their own lives; but the lady and her infant must have perished but for that promptitude which distinguishes the watermen on such occasions, and they too were rescued from death.

In the afternoon of Monday, the coroner for the county held his court at Kirkby Laythorpe, to investigate the case of a horrid murder which had been committed on the body of a man unknown, who was found dead in a gravel-pit in the above parish, covered with hay and rushes, and having his throat cut from ear to ear, the wind-pipe completely severed, his nose broken, and his bottom lip cut. It is supposed that the body must have lain in the pit for about three weeks. The inquest stands adjourned until Friday next, in order to the obtaining of further information, if possible. It is imagined that the deceased had been one of a party of Irish labourers resorting to this county for harvest work, and that he was murdered for the sake of his share of their earnings.—Lincoln Mercury.

About two o'clock on Wednesday morning, a fire of a most destructive appearance broke out in the house of Messrs. Kay and Co., the linen-drapers, of No. 13, King-street, Covent-garden, which almost instantaneously communicated to the house No. 14, occupied by Mr. Downes, a woollen-draper; and threatened destruction to the adjoining buildings. The fire must have broken out in the back part of the house—for at all times the back part of the houses on fire looking into the church-yard, burnt with greater fury than they did in King-street. The difficulty of getting water, although plentiful, to the rear of the burning houses through Covent-garden Church-yard was such, that in a short time the backs of the houses fell into the Church-yard. At the same time the top of the house No. 12, occupied by a tailor caught fire, and it was distressing to hear the cries of the females from the back windows. After their own preservation, property of every description was thrown indiscriminately from the back windows into the Church-yard, where a great number of persons got in by forcing the iron gates, facing the western end of the Church. The rear of the printing-office of Mr. Harjette, of No. 29, Bedford-street, looking into the Church-yard, was in great danger at one time; but, fortunately, from the strong party wall between Mr. Downes' house and No. 15, occupied by Mr. Nutting, a button-manufacturer, which screened that part of the printing-office, those valuable premises were preserved without injury.

On this occasion the supply of water was plentiful, and the fire-men, as usual, were most active in the performance of their arduous duties. At one time we saw ten engines playing upon the burning houses in King-street, and two more under every difficulty, were at work in the Church-yard. We did not hear of any accident during the calamity.

CATASTROPHE AT PORTSMOUTH.

The following official communication has been published by the Hon. Sir G. Grey, Bart.:—

"As it is not improbable that erroneous statements of the fatal accident which occurred upon the day on which the Princess Charlotte was launched from the Dock-yard, at this port, may obtain currency, it will, no doubt, be satisfactory to the public to receive an authenticated account from me, of this melancholy event. On Wednesday last, the day of the launch, the tide rose so rapidly, and to so unusual a height, that the ship was obliged to be launched sooner than was anticipated; the same great rise of water occasioned such a powerful pressure against the gates of the south dock in the basin, as to cause them to burst inwards, and to carry, with impetuous violence, into the empty dock, the bridge which rested upon the gates, and, with the bridge, the persons who were unfortunately passing over it at the time, on their way to view the launch. The torrent of water, which rushed into the vacant dock below, overwhelmed the unhappy individuals; and I grieve to say, that, notwithstanding the active and prompt exertions of those who beheld the dreadful catastrophe, and of the boatmen who immediately hastened to the spot, but few persons were rescued from their perilous situation. The proper means were immediately resorted to for the recovery of those who were picked up, in which the surgeons of the Dock-yard were most humanely and ably assisted by the medical gentlemen of the place. The following is the list of those who were restored to life, and of those known to have perished:—

Restored to life—Mr. Sabben, of St. George's-square, Portsea; Mrs. Bloomfield, a soldier's wife, her infant, and sister; Mrs. Mitchell, of Charlotte's-row, and daughter; a boy, name unknown.

Drowned—Mr. Deering, a midshipman of the Victory; Mr. Stanfield, a Custom-house officer—has left three children; Mr. Showers, a dealer in ships: Mr. Hart, a slopseller, of Portsea; his daughter, aged 17 years, and nephew, aged 7 years. A man-servant of Mrs. Osborne, of Broomfield-house.

	Names.	Age.
Young Women—	Froggett,	20,	daughter of a labourer
	Knight,	18,	ditto sawyer
	Knight,	14,	ditto ditto
Boys	Ball	2,
	Taylor	15,	Painter's apprentice
	Hewett	14,	father a wheelwright.
	Nineham,	14,	ditto a shipwright
	Leal,	12,	mother a widow, 7 children
	Hawser	13,	father a shipwright.

Every exertion has been used to find the bodies of other sufferers, and every endeavour to ascertain what persons are missing. From the best information I have been able to obtain, it appears that there may be still five or six bodies not found, but this is as yet uncertain. The list already given tells a melancholy tale, but it is consolatory to my own feelings, as it will be to the relatives of the sufferers, and satisfactory to the public generally, that no human foresight could have averted this dreadful calamity, and that it was entirely unconnected with the preparations made for the launch; and further, that it happened at a time when, most providentially, no persons were employed at work in the dock; for had that been the case, the disaster, severe as it is, would have been tenfold greater.

GEORGE GREY, Commissioner.

Portsmouth Dock-yard, Sept. 17, 1825.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—Monday, Sir Paul Baggot, Bart., and a Magistrate for the County of Gloucester, Alfred Barrett, Esq., and James Sims, Esq., were brought up from St. James's watch-house, before F. A. Roe, Esq. the sitting Magistrate, on various charges of assault.

It appeared from the evidence of several witnesses, that a squabble arose between Mr. Barrett and a watchman in Regent-street, on Saturday night; that Sir Paul Baggot joined in the fray in support of his friend; that a grand contest followed, in which Mr. Sims was by some means or other involved; and that, finally, the guardian of the night obtained the aid of a number of hostlers and post-boys from a neighbouring stable, and succeeded in capturing the three Gentlemen, who were ordered to find bail for the alleged assaults.

BILL DISCOUNTING.

HATTON-GARDEN.—Monday, a very elderly man, of short stature, and in perfect clerical costume, was brought up, charged by Mrs. Ann Elfinn, a fur dyer, in Back-lane, St. Luke's, with illegally keeping possession of a bill of exchange.

Mrs. Elfinn deposed that she had been in the habit of getting bills discounted by the defendant, she being a widow woman, and of course not conversant with the ordinary facilities which trade afforded in such instances. She paid at the rate of 10 per cent. discount, with a bonus of six shillings a month, according to the length of date of the bills.—In the course of last week she gave the defendant a bill for fifty-one pounds, drawn by her and accepted (at four months' date) by Mr. Richards, of Warwick-court, Holborn, to get it discounted. Some days elapsed without any thing being done, and on Saturday last, as she was short of money to pay twenty pounds, she insisted on the defendant either giving her the cash for the bill or returning the bill. He refused acquiescing in either request, and accordingly she gave him in custody yesterday.

During the complainant's statement, as also before the defendant was introduced from the outer office, he appeared anxious to take many technical objections to the proceedings, and Read, the chief officer, was compelled to shew him the "Lock-up-house," to instruct him in the law of the land.

His defence appeared in the following dialogue:—

Mr. LAING (the presiding Magistrate)—What are you, Sir?

Defendant—Oh! a gentleman.

Magistrate—But are you not in some line of business?

Defendant—Oh! yes—the protector of the fatherless and widows.

Magistrate—What were you before you undertook this occupation?

Defendant—I really don't know that I should answer this question—but—but—I'll confess I was a respectable private teacher; there's no controverting that fact.

Magistrate—But why did you detain this bill of exchange?

Defendant—Because, as I said before, I have been for years the "protector of the fatherless and widows," and accordingly I have interested myself for the complainant. Finding her affairs not flourishing as well as I could wish, I struck a balance of accounts, after discounting many bills, of 71*l.* 18*s.* in my favour. Her acceptance for this balance becomes due this month, and I feel myself authorized in detaining the 51*l.* acceptance as part payment.

Mr. LAING observed to the complainant the imprudence of persons under such circumstances as she was placed in being engaged in bill transactions. The case did not come within his jurisdiction, but a solicitor would direct her in the course she should pursue. The "discounter" then hastily withdrew, and the complainant proceeded to have Mr. Harmer's advice.

THAMES OFFICE.—On Monday, Thomas Rice, the person we mentioned in our last report from this office, as implicated in bill swindling and robbery was brought up for final examination.

Mr. Broderip, the presiding Magistrate, desired Mr. Evans, the principal officer, to inquire of the different persons in and about the office, if they were prepared to prefer any further charge against him. Mr. Evans having made necessary inquiries, informed his Worship that there were not then any, but at the same time said that there were persons in attendance who had drafts, acceptances, and bills of the prisoner; these had not yet arrived at maturity, and the holders of course could not make any charge.

Mr. Broderip then asked Mr. Evans if he had inquired about the acceptors and drawers of the bills, left by Mr. Potter on the day of the last examination, and ascertained whether they were the genuine acceptances of the parties whose signatures they professed to bear. Mr. Evans answered that as well as he had been able to discover, they were, with the exception of one, all correct as to the signature; that one was the acceptance of Snell, which was signed by his wife, and in doing which he understood she had the authority of her husband.

Mr. BRODERIP addressing himself to the prisoner—At present there is no other charge against you, except that of the robbery on which you were committed at your last examination by my brother Magistrate. The bills I direct to be retained in the hands of the officers, for it may so happen, in the event of your acquittal this Sessions, that though the signatures to these different bills may be the signatures of the persons they purport to be, a case may be made out to implicate you with others, in a most extensive conspiracy to defraud the public. You are now to take your trial on the capital offence.

The prisoner was then transmitted to Newgate.

BOW-STREET.—Thursday morning, when Sir RICHARD BIRNIE had disposed of the night charges, and there was little or nothing to occupy his attention, Mr. R. Martin, M. P., entered the office, and having exchanged a few whispering words with the Chief Magistrate, the hon. legislator took a station in the centre of the bench, and delivered himself to the following effect:—"Sir Richard Birnie, I have called here this morning for the purpose of informing you of my intention to appear before your honourable self and your colleagues to-morrow, attended by my solicitor, in order that I may have the advice of the first bench of police magistrates in Europe, as to the best mode of making the proprietor and editor of the Morning Chronicle newspaper, Mr. Clement and Mr. Black, amenable to the law for publishing a series of libels, reflecting in a high degree upon my character as a man, a gentleman, and a legislator. It is by this time pretty well known, Sir Richard, all over the kingdom, that I am the author—the father I may say—of an Act of Parliament, for the prevention of cruelty to animals; and I think it not a little hard, your worship, that because I have chosen to interpose my humble exertions for the protection of the inferior animals against the brutality of the superior kind, called (sometimes nicknamed) men, I should be held up to public ridicule and contempt, and libelled in all sorts of ways in the columns of the Morning Chronicle. Such however is the fact, as I shall show you by and by. I shall show you that Mr. Clement, and his man, Mr. Black, have pursued a systematic course of libellous abuse and invective against me. It is well known that I have very often had occasion to appear as the prosecutor of offences under the Act which I was the means of bringing into Parliament, and I appeal to every magistrate in London before whom I have appeared, whether I have not always conducted myself with fairness and moderation; and yet I am always abused and libelled in the Morning Chronicle. It is no matter, whether I charge a man with battering the ribs of a half-starved cow—with half-fracturing the skull of an over-driven sheep—with endeavouring, by the use of the whip, to make serviceable, as an animal of draught, a poor devil of a horse that is only fit for the knackers, or with beating out the eye of an unhappy ass—it is all the same, the Chronicle is sure to be at me. Now, mark what this paper said the other day, when I prosecuted a ruffian for beating out the eye of an ass: it commenced its account of that transaction with "Mr. Martin, and another unfortunate ass"—meaning, of course, to couple me with the long-eared quadruped. Whether I deserve to be placed on a level in character and intellect with that very useful but much-abused and unfortunate animal, the public, in the course of the long life which Providence has enabled me to enjoy, have had an opportunity of judging; if they think I do bear any affinity to the ass, why I must e'en be content to sit down quietly under the burden; but if they do not think so, I shall be perfectly satisfied with their opinion in opposition to that of the Morning Chronicle. Any abuse which that journal may choose to heap upon me I am aware can do me no harm: it falls, I may truly say, like dew-drop upon the lion's mane—'tis shook into air; but still Mr. Clement, who I believe is a great capitalist, had better cease his invectives against me, or he will be injuring his property very materially; for I appeal to the public—that public to which the Morning Chronicle is indebted for its very existence—whether the journal is not in its abuse of me running counter to the good sense of all the nation. I very believe that all the good part of the community think my efforts laudable, and if the Morning Chronicle continues its virulence against me—if, I say, it persists in opposing by every species of calumny, that which by the community is deemed laudable and praiseworthy, he will in no very long time find that the 40,000*l.* which he says (how truly, God only knows) he gave for the Chronicle has been thrown away, and that 40 pence is 3*s.* 4*d.* more than it will be worth. Now, Sir, to show the animus, I will mention to you another article which has appeared in the Morning Chronicle, but at the same time I beg to acquit Mr. Clement or his Editor of being the author of it, because it is avowedly copied from a very scurrilous publication, called Blackwood's Magazine. Now this article is not confined to mere abuse, it does not merely hold me up to public ridicule, but, your Worship—and, perhaps you will scarcely believe such a thing—it contains an attempt to excite and stir up a certain description of persons to commit the crime of assassination. And this, please your Worship, is not an indirect attempt; the exhortation is not put hyperbolically; the article does not say, as a man might in mere figure—"Hoot him out of society," or "tear him in pieces," or "exterminate him," or "annihilate him;" but it goes at once plainly and undisguisedly to say, "Why don't you kill him?" "Why don't you kill him?" repeated Mr. Martin, in a subdued tone, three times over I should tell your Worship, however, that the Chronicle (and I cannot help admiring its moderation) does not actually insert this atrocious, this murderous paragraph, but stops short at it, and says, "the rest is too terrific for us to trust in our columns." But then your Worship will see that it immediately tells its readers where the remainder is to be found, by referring to the pages of Blackwood's Magazine. This, Sir, is the libel of which I have more particularly to complain. After talking of my punishing a man for beating the sides of a fat ox, the article says, "why don't you kill him at once?"

Sir R. BIRNIE.—Pray, Mr. Martin, may not that mean the ox, and not you?

Mr. Martin.—Oh, no, my dear Sir, it means me—clearly me. In conclusion I would observe, that men in my rank in life have another mode than that I have adopted of seeking redress—namely, by an application to the Court of King's Bench for a criminal information; but I claim no other privilege than that of a man, and I shall seek no other remedy than that which would be open to the compositor who set the vile libel of which I complain into type.

Sir R. BIRNIE.—I apprehend, Mr. Martin, that you have mistaken the regular way of proceeding. Your proper course would be to go at once before the grand jury, and prefer an indictment.

Mr. Martin.—I am informed it is too late for this sessions. I have taken counsel's opinion, and am prepared to make deposition of all that I have stated; and to-morrow I shall take the liberty of attending here with my legal adviser for that purpose.

Sir R. BIRNIE.—I dare say you are well advised, Sir, and I shall of course listen to you with attention.

Perry, the officer, in pursuance of the instructions which he received from Mr. Minshull on Thursday, to execute the warrant against Mr. Clement, the proprietor of the Morning Chronicle, in such a way as not to inconvenience that individual, called on that evening at the office of the paper, and left a message for Mr. Clement to attend at twelve o'clock yesterday, that being the hour appointed by Mr. Minshull for the hearing of the case. Perry was then told that Mr. Clement was so ill as to make it extremely unlikely that he could attend in person, but that at all events the charge would be met by some one as his representative.

Mr. V. Dowling, one of Mr. Clement's literary establishment, appeared as the representative of that gentleman, and before the arrival of Mr. Martin, or of Mr. Adolphus, who was to attend as counsel for the defendant, he informed Mr. Minshull that Mr. Clement was so exceedingly ill with a gouty affection, as to be unable to leave his room, and that of course he was quite incapable of attending here today.

Mr. Adolphus came in at 12 o'clock, but Mr. Martin had not arrived, and the learned gentleman went away on other business, for half an hour. Meanwhile Mr. Martin entered the office, in his usual bustling manner, and was informed of Mr. Clement's indisposition.

Mr. Adolphus here said he was attending for Mr. Clement, and he was only waiting to know what course the magistrate intended to pursue?

Mr. MINSHULL said the case must be regularly gone into, and the publication proved.

Mr. Martin said there was an officer from the Stamp Office in attendance.

Mr. Dowling said, that Mr. Clement's wish was, with as little trouble as possible to the bench, to submit to whatever decision might be come to.

Mr. MINSHULL.—The utmost that I can do is to order bail to be given for future appearance, to answer to the charge—there my power ends; but to do even that, I must have something in the shape of regular proof.

Mr. Martin said he should like very much to have the hearing postponed for a short day, to enable Mr. Clement to attend and put in bail in person, in open court.

Mr. MINSHULL.—All this is premature and irrelevant. Let the proof be called.

Mr. Mallison, from the Stamp Office, proved the publication, and produced the office copy of the Morning Chronicle of the 6th of September, containing the article complained of as libellous.

Mr. MINSHULL said he must have a proof that Mr. Clement had a share in the publication of the paper, and asked Mr. Mallison if he had brought the affidavit deposited according to act of Parliament at the Stamp Office?

Mr. Adolphus said he would not suffer the time of the magistrate to be wasted, but would at once admit that Mr. Clement was the proprietor and publisher of the paper. Having made that admission, he must now beg the clerk to read from the paper the whole paragraph, without suppression or falsification, because affidavits were one thing, and facts another, as would appear in the reading.

Mr. Woods then read the paragraph, which commenced thus—"Blackwood and Mr. Martin. It is well for the former, that a considerable interval separates him from Mr. Martin, otherwise we think his friends might be in some apprehension for him. Our hair absolutely stood on end when we read the following attack in the last number." Then follows the quotation from Blackwood, beginning "That Irish jackass, Martin, &c."

Mr. Adolphus then proceeded to argue, that there was nothing in the whole paragraph which called at all for the interference of a justice of the peace; and that Mr. Martin, if he had been, or fancied he was, injured at all, ought to be left to the ordinary remedies which the law afforded. He understood it was the wish of Mr. Martin, that the defendant should be held to bail for this alleged libel The doctrine, that a man might be held to bail by a justice for a libel, was of recent date, but the question had been argued, and was now pretty clearly defined, and it was well understood, that it was only where there was imminent danger of a breach of the peace, that this power was to be exercised, and that in ordinary cases of libel the parties were still to be left to their remedy by indictment or action. It was not because a man (deservedly, perhaps) was called an ass, or that he idly fancied himself alarmed at some newspaper squib, that an individual, whether rich or poor, but especially a man of known respectability, who was to be found at any time, should be dragged from his home to a police-office, and compelled to give bail. Mr. Adolphus then commented upon the manner in which Mr. Martin's affidavit was framed It contained, he said, all the declarations, averments, and innendoes which were to be found in an indictment, of which it had much more the form than of a simple information, and it could only have been so framed for the purpose of producing effect. But let their worships examine what this pretended libel really was. The publication in the Chronicle was nothing more than a criticism upon Blackwood, quoting certainly, as was the practice, part of the article remarked upon. The Chronicle commenced with saying it was well for Mr. Blackwood that Mr. Martin lived at a considerable distance from him, otherwise his friends might be under some apprehension for his safety; and at the conclusion, it is said, there was something about murdering, which they dare not quote; and so, because the Chronicle begins with a little good-humoured banter, and ends with saying that there was something about murdering, which they suppressed, Mr Martin swears—he must say, most outrageously swears—that he believes the article contained an incitement to murder! Because a journalist said there was something about murdering which he would not quote, and he did actually abstain from quoting it, Mr. Martin swore that he believed the intention of that journalist was to incite people to murder him! He (Mr. Adolphus) was astonished at such swearing. It must either have been sworn in ignorance or in malice—if the former, he pitied the intellect of the man who could so swear; if the latter, he would say God forgive him! and he said that in common charity, for that man would have much more to answer for than the brutes for whom he affected to feel so much compassion.—Mr. Adolphus, after sounding the praises of Blackwood's Magazine, in very lofty terms, observed, that it was its practice and its delight to detect and expose to public scorn and ridicule every thing in the shape of humbug; and if they found a man stalking abroad who deserved the title of humbug, he was certain of being properly shown up, and cut up in that excellent publication. If they found a man in the world who, having neither rank, nor talent, nor any one quality to entitle him to eminence, chose to set himself up as the friend of humanity, but who in that character really practised nothing but tyranny and oppression against every unfortunate wretch upon whom he laid his hand, him they called a humbug, and dealt with him accordingly. There might be such men in the world, and Blackwood might think Mr. Martin one of them. With respect to the "angry gabble" spoken of in the article in question, it was well known to all who read the papers of the day, that there was a person who went about to the various police-offices, disgusting every body with his angry and vulgar gabble, dealing out by wholesale and without discrimination, such epithets as "atrocious wretch, savage scoundrel, ruffianly miscreant," and a dozen others equally violent. If he stopped there, perhaps there would be no great harm, for those who heard these rantings could judge of their value; but when that man could deliberately swear that he saw an animal beaten savagely with a bludgeon, which bludgeon afterwards turned out to be a mere switch, ("A switch!" repeated Mr. Martin;) yes, a switch—when he could magnify a switch into a club or bludgeon, and that, too, on his solemn oath, he (Mr. Adolphus) could not, he would not trust himself to express his opinion of him; and when such men as that came forward with such a charge as the present, it ought indeed to be received with great caution. Let it not be supposed that he (Mr. Adolphus) was an advocate for cruelty to the brute creation. If he had been in Parliament, which he did not wish to be, nor would he ever be, and therefore he spoke it very innocently, he should have given the bill in question all the support in his power, and he had always been determined, since the bill became a part of the law of the land, to enforce its provisions against any one whom he might see inflicting cruelty upon a beast; but in all his walks through the streets, he had never happened to meet with an instance of the kind. But there were some tender-hearted men who could magnify a switch into a bludgeon, and because the miscrable wretch whom they charged came clothed in rags, could tell him that 14 days at the tread-mill was the greatest treat he could have. Long experience had shown, that under the colour of humanity the greatest tyranny imaginable was often practised. So a man who affected to be the advocate of decency and morality, often under that semblance uttered the grossest obscenity; and again, no one talked so loudly of virtue as he who assumed the outward appearance of it to hide the infamy of his own heart. Everybody knew what Sterne said, speaking in the same strain of virtue—"Give it a head, and it becomes a rampant lion." The paragraph quoted from Blackwood began—"That Irish jackass, Martin." Now he observed that the affidavit was signed by one Richard Martin; and whether the writer called him Dick-ass or Jack-ass, it was all the same. It was well known, that in Essex and some other neighbouring counties it was as common to say Dick-ass as Jack-ass, and therefore either would apply. He (Mr. Adolphus) should like to know which was libelled by the application of the term jackass in the paragraph—the ass or Mr. Martin? There was one ass, it would be recollected, which spoke but once, and never told a lie: was that the case with Mr. Martin? He (Mr. Adolphus) was afraid not. There was another ass who provoked a fit of laughter from a philosopher by his funny way of eating a basket of figs. Let Mr. Martin go into a grocer's shop, and devour a dozen baskets, and he would never move the risible muscles of any human being. One of the ancients had written an eulogy upon the ass, but no one, he would venture to say, would ever write one on Mr. Martin. The learned gentleman, after proceeding in this strain for some time, returned to the subject of the affidavit, denied that it could be regarded as an incitement to the Smithfield drovers, who, he would be bound, never read Blackwood, and perhaps seldom the Morning Chronicle. Their reading (if they could read at all) was, he durst say, almost confined to the publican's Morning Advertiser, which was every where to be found in their travels. He would, with leave of the bench, proceed to call evidence to show that Mr. Martin's declarations upon oath here, and his assertions elsewhere, were widely different, and that so far from feeling any fear as he had sworn, he had treated the matter with the greatest levity, for he had gone even into the lion's den, the Chronicle office, only on Thursday night, a few hours after swearing the affidavit, and said "Well, how do ye get on? What's doing? This is all nuts for me; it brings me into popularity; I like all this sort of thing." And in so delivering himself the gentleman rubbed his hands in great glee; and yet to-day he came—he had the audacity to come forward in support of that most improper affidavit—

Here Mr. Martin, who for some time had exhibited symptoms of the greatest impatience, threw himself forward on the table, and exclaimed, in a tone of violent anger—"You scoundrel, how dare you say it is an improper affidavit?"

Mr. MINSHULL.—Mr. Martin, I am astonished. I must hold you to bail, Sir.

Mr. Martin (to Mr. Adolphus).—I say you are a scoundrel.

Mr. MINSHULL.—Sir, I desire you to hold your tongue, and I must hold you to bail.

Mr. Martin.—I have said it, Sir; do as you please with me.

Sir R. BIRNIE.—Mr. Martin, you have said you are a magistrate—pray pay some respect to the bench here, whatever may be the custom in Ireland.

Mr. Adolphus begged Mr. Minshull would not hold Mr. Martin to bail on his account; he felt no apprehension.

Mr. Martin was about to reply to Mr. Adolpus, when

Mr. MINSHULL said he should determine the case at once, without allowing another observation. He had heard sufficient to authorize him to call upon Mr. Clement to give bail.

Mr. Martin wished to make one or two observations in reply to "that man" (meaning Mr. Adolphus) but Mr. Minshull would not allow it.

Mr. Dowling.—It is quite evident, as we could have shown, that Mr. Martin can say one thing and swear another.

Mr. MINSHULL said he would not allow such remarks to be made.

Mr. Adolphus asked the amount of recognizances that would be demanded, and being told Mr. Clement in 200*l.* and two sureties in 100*l.* each, he said, "The amount is a matter of total indifference to my client, he pays his debts and has no privilege." The learned gentleman then left the bench, and would have been closely followed by Mr. Martin, who seemed in very angry mood, had not the hon. gentleman been stopped almost by force by Mr. Minshull. The hon. member, in speaking of the amount of the recognizances as being in his opinion too small, repeated that he considered his life in danger. He had never been chary of his life when his honour or any circumstances required its risk, but he did, notwithstanding, think it now in danger.

Mr. Dowling said he was sorry the magistrate had not given an opportunity for the defendant to prove by evidence how inconsistent with his oath of that day were Mr. Martin's declarations of the previous night at the Morning Chronicle office.

Bail to the amount required was then put in, and here for the present the matter rests. The office was much crowded.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The Military Defaulter, in the tirade of his last publication, has literally, poor devil, made us laugh, and we really wish, for his own sake, he could make his readers do the same. The supposed sly touch at us in his Notices, alighting merely on the shoulders of some obscure unoffending individual, is not among the worst specimens of his fun, as the intended blow falling harmless, we can thereby laugh the louder—and, as to fighting, that is totally out of the question; because in the event of any accident happening to him, the Secretary at War might call upon us for arrears of accounts

We perfectly agree with Dramaticus, in thinking performers of the Patent Theatres ought not to call upon the Public for support at their benefit, in the Spring at the Winter Theatres, and in the Autumn at the Summer ones, as he states Madame Vestris, Farren, and others have done:—but it is a subject on which we cannot interfere; besides the evil will correct itself, for we know the gentleman he alludes to last by his Benefit, at Covent Garden, and the Benefits at the Haymarket are all shared with the Manager, which is in every sense of the word, quite an unfair arrangement, as far as the Public are concerned.

G. G. requests us once more to inform the Morning Herald that Miss Goward is not a pupil to Miss Kelly, as stated in a criticism in that paper, on Friday last.

Lieutenant-Colonel Fairman's private communication has been received, and an answer has been sent.

The information of Spy, Observer, Senator, and Squib, relative to the anticipated General Election has been received, and we have availed ourselves of its contents.

The letter to the Noble Lord, alluded to by us last week, has hitherto been delayed, in consequence of some peculiar circumstances we have been put in possession of, and which may alter the complexion of some part of its contents; and with reference therefore to the conference held by His Lordship with our Publisher, we have to request His Lordship will suspend his judgment, until he shall be reminded of those circumstances on which his memory appeared to be a little treacherous, in a conversation we happened to overhear, when standing in his presence the beginning of the past week

Errata in our last Number: for "sabre, task or," read "sabre-tash, or," in the Song;—for "the least ones, to do," read "the ones least to do," in the Letter;—and for "a parut et disparut," read "parut et disparut," in the Theatrical Criticism.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. shut.	Bank Stock, shut.
Cons. Three per Cents. 88½	Long Annuities, shut.
Three and a half per Cents. shut.	India Stock,
3½ per Cents. Reduced shut.	India Bonds, 14
Four per Cents. 102⅞	Exch. Bills (1½d.) 5
Consols for Acc 88⅞ ¾

THE AGE.

LONDON, September 25.

The announcements which have been made by the numerous candidates, on the supposed dissolution of Parliament, require considerable examination, for there never was a period at which the principles of those gentlemen who constitute the lower House of Parliament should b sounder than at the present moment; our feelings have but lately recovered from the infliction they underwent on the vital discussion of the Catholic Question, and it consequently behoves us to watch, with all possible scrutiny, the movements of those persons who were instrumental in effecting the majority carried by the House of Commons, when it was brought before them. As we deem it an indispensable duty to look into the pretensions of all those who aspire to the Representation of the Country, so do we consider there is no criterion by which such pretensions can be so thoroughly appreciated. as by a reference to the agitation of that momentous subject, the advance of which is of the grandest importance to the true welfare of Great Britain; and we fearlessly assert that the return of a General Election is the time when the conduct adopted during the late Session should be, and we have no doubt will be, most scrupulous y investigated, and the sense of the Nation evinced in the countenance given to the supporters of Popery.---The decision of all constituents, with reference to those Parliamentary tools, who are presented with a seat merely to vote at the back of their patrons, is not so much the subject for consideration, as is the influence of those patrons themselves; although at the same time we would not have one name on the black list omitted; but it is to the predominance of those individuals, whose purses have procured that patronage their principles or abilities never could, that we more immediately direct the strictest attention of every voter in the Empire, desirous, by the decision he makes, of upholding the character of his Nation, and at the same time anxious not to tarnish his own. There is not a subject which so affects the safety of our constitution, that so directly aims at the subversion of all its best interests, at the undermining of all its envied prosperity, the blemish of all its glory, and the very solidity of all its welfare, as the Catholic Question; and the attempt at its introduction is in our sight nothing more than the want of principle, or the want of intellect, either of which at once disqualify a man from representing the character of his country, or advancing any of its prerogatives. As a common, every-day kind of man, he must be ignorant of the calamities which have been visited upon her, previous to the Protestant ascendancy, and as such utterly incapacitated for assisting her in the light of a senator; he can only appear as a hireling voter, or a miserable bigot, from the manacles of both of which our public councils must be freed. It is in the spirit of this determination we shall, from time to time, enumerate such persons as we deem, from a recurrence to recent circumstances, or from a general knowledge of their views and intellects, to be incapable of executing the high trusts the people repose in their representatives; for while the cry among these very persons of Parliamentary Reform is annually echoed from one end of the Empire to the other, we cannot do better, in subscribing to its necessity, than enumerate some instances by which the wishes of these howlers can be carried into effect, while we also, in so doing, protect ourselves from the invasion of their dangerous policy, and liberate the state from the alarming inroads the Papists have lately made on the establishments of her religion. We are quite confident that the views of many parties (concurring in the sentiments of the Roman Catholics, and aiding by advocacy their advancement) have nothing to carry beyond a personal object, and as long as they can flutter about and buzz once a year in the ears of their constituents, they literally do not care whether it is in the cause of a vital subject, or in the furtherance of all the insipid movements of Joe Hume---they must take what is foolishly called the popular side of the question, if the very empire were wrecked by its disquisition; but it is this very consideration which renders the necessity of a proper selection still more imperative; for while there are knaves enough abroad to excite a clamour, and fools enough to keep it up, a clamour there will be; and it is therefore to this end that we shall direct all the attention of those persons whose judgment in an ensuing contest will, as a matter of course, be taxed, and whose support will be petitioned on every side.

It is the most diverting thing imaginable to watch the shallow policy of the candidates who have started, as well as of those who are about to start for public favour, as set forth in the columns of the daily press: we hear of one man's charity, who was never known before to give away a shilling in his life---another man's princely entertainments to his neighbours, whose society he previously despised---another's reduction of rent to his tenantry at the present quarter, which he will be sure to raise again at the next---a great bluster made about the talents of a fourth, known to be an actual fool---of the independence of many others, set down and marked as actually time-servers, whose very breath is that of their patrons, and whose brains lie in the purses of those who "bring them in." We shall place upon record the names of a few persons who have been for the last month so unusually industrious; and if qualifications are to constitute success, our readers will see the very great chance they stand of obtaining their wishes. My Lord George Cavendish, for the purpose of once more trying to return young hopeful, Charles Compton Cavendish, Esq.!! for the County of Sussex, has been attending, within these few days, the meetings of Bible Societies at Tunbridge Wells and Brighton, in the capacity of Chairman and Speaker, and while His Lordship's well-known general pursuits so eminently qualify him for the fulfilment of the saintly duties of so distinguished a situation, the oratorical powers of the family, like those of Sir William Guise, the Gloucester whig, if possible, surpass all their other attainments---and Master Charles, who has just discernment enough to know that he did not make his own head, and is no more accountable for its emptiness, than for that of his illustrious cousin, the Duke, has therefore the satisfaction of knowing that in consequence of his sheer incapacity to address the Electors, the modern Cicero, his father, will do it for him, as he did at the last Election for this County! His Lordship, we rather imagine, has lost sight, in his calculations, of the Egremont and Richmond interest, and forgot, in another quarter, the old score of the last Election for the City of Gloucester is not yet washed off. The present Noble Representative of Rochester, satisfied at having once been in, and seeing no chance of being so situated again, has announced his intention of resigning his seat, which forcibly reminds us of a speech of Sheridan's, in one of his plays--"Like a well-bred dog, who leaves the room when he sees preparations on foot for kicking him down stairs;" while in the strength, no doubt, of the following verse of a song, which appeared in our 18th number, Mr. Warre has acted upon Mr. Baring's example, and settled to retire from the contest:

> "At Taunton they all are so sick of their lot,
> "That the cry is—'No bearing—the member we've got:'
> "Besides as to Peace they are all so inclined,
> "It's no wonder that Warre's not at all to their mind."

And in consequence of such abdication, a meeting has been convened, under the sanction of that republican quack, Doctor Blake, to condole with the people on the loss they have sustained, by the privation of these Members of their "body corporate." Tom Duncombe left Madame Vestris in Curzon-street, for the Maidenhead, Hertford, where he harangued the people about independence, and soon announced his determination to stand the contest. Now, although no one can think more highly, as a gentlemanly, good sort of fe low (to use a worldly phrase) of Duncombe than ourselves, yet the idea of a man without a farthing in the world, talking of independence, and starting off in proof of it as a Whig Candidate, is to our simple faculties perfectly laughable. There has been a joke abroad that Hume has recommended, by letter, to the Electors of Dover, two new candidates in lieu of Messrs. Wilbraham and Butterworth; but we think the Scotchman is too good a judge to trouble himself about the return of other persons, when his own is a matter of such great uncertainty. There is to be a contest for Worcester, and Colonel Davies will of course be turned out, as Deerhurst, in a speech the other day, told the Electors he was glad from his heart there was to be a struggle for the honour of representing them, as he should have an opportunity of spending his money amongst his constituents.---The poles have met!! We really hope, on account of his debts, that poor Martin, with all his tomfooleries, will be returned again, and that Lord Belgrave, as postage must be of consequence to the heir of the Grosvenor family, will not be displaced from Chester, though in every other point of view two more inefficient personages do not at present sit in Parliament.

Both the sitting Members for Stockbridge, from their strenuous support of the Roman Catholics, will certainly be thrown out, should a fourth person enter the field, as Sir Henry Cooke, who represents Lord Hertford's interest, will start as one candidate, and is sure to succeed; and as far as general attainments and an inculcation of truly constitutional principles go, no one is more desirable than our excellent friend Kang. And as further proof of public feeling on the subject of Popery, we believe there is no doubt that Fyshe Palmer and his colleague will both be displaced at Reading---at least, as respects the former, there is no doubt at all, from the opinions we collected during our visit there this last week, in spite of that flourish of bribery, so profusely paid for in the Reading Mercury, stating a contrary impression; no one is more unpopular than Palmer, and the Catholic tendency of his public conduct has made him more so. Colonel Strutt, who retires from the representation of Maldon, will be succeeded, beyond the shadow of a doubt, by his son, and consequently the fight will be between Mr. Lennard, the present Member for Ipswich, and Mr. Gaskell, the sitting Member, also a supporter of Popery. The retirement of the present Representatives for Southampton will make room for two firm supporters of Government in the persons of Mr. Dottin and Mr. Mackinnon, as even in the event of Mr. Mildmay making a stand, he will stand---no more chance than his sagacious father-in-law Mr. A. Baring would at Taunton. We further hear that a Roman Catholic gentleman of great wealth is about to attempt dis-seating Massy Dawson from Clonmell, on the interest of Lord Glengall; but when we come to consider the principles of Mr. Dawson, and the influence of Lord Glengall in the county of Tipperary!! we must confess our hopes are not very sanguine in behalf of this wealthy Papist. We have not forgotten his Lordship's own election for this county, nor have the electors, he may feel perfectly well assured. The people in the county of Monaghan having just found out that Mr. Shirley has been giving 50*l.* a year, for the last fifteen years, to the education of his own tenantry, talk of starting him against Messrs. Leslie and Westenra, but the firm support of Protestantism by the former gentleman will, at least, keep him secure in his seat. Coming a little nearer home, we find that Waithman has some idea of starting for the city, but upon what principle, has not been yet made known to us: he had much better think of standing---behind his counter, and taking measure of twills and jaconets, than taking any measure from which a recurrence to every public action of his life, either in shrievalty, mayoralty, or any other city distinctions, will cause him an immediate expulsion.

After having given the good people thus much information relative to the motions of some of the different candidates on the assurance of a General Election, it only remains for us to state distinctly that, for the present, there will be no Election at all!

In the absence of any thing of more consequence to attract the public attention during the last week, we have been afflicted by an almost daily account of the appearance of Mr. Martin, the Member for Galway, at Bow-street, complaining of some vituperation he has received from the Editor of the Morning Chronicle, on the subject of his frequent informations against sundry maltreatments of the dumb part of the creation, in defiance of the Act of Parliament bearing the Honourable Member's name. On the mere principle of humanity, we rejoice in common with our kind, at any suppression of so heinous a crime as the ill-usage of a thing which cannot protect itself; and for the furtherance of this desirable object, Mr Martin is entitled to the proper estimation of every right-thinking man; but it is a feeling that may be, and by this gentleman has been, carried a great deal too far; and the very insignificant and vexatious charges preferred by him so continually, have served to weaken the advocacy of more serious charges, and somewhat diverted the attention of the Magistracy from a due consideration of their nature. We premise thus much merely with reference to the Honourable Member; but in allusion to the attacks which have been made upon him, in the Journal against which he has founded this complaint, we cannot avoid expressing our thorough disgust at its conduct throughout, for a more ignorant, a more vulgar, or a more unnecessary system of personality has seldom been indulged in by any public prints; for while the feelings of the veriest vagabond on earth find, in the columns of this paper, a sure defence against the summary infliction of proper punishment for actual crimes, the inhumanity complained of by Mr. Martin, and which has so frequently become, by his interference, subject to the law, is invariably treated by its conductor in a manner derogatory even to common sense or justice. The publicity of this business has been altogether kept up by the Chronicle, for the sole purpose of helping out, in these dull times, its slackened sale, as no other consideration (nor would that have operated on most other minds) could have induced its proprietor, on appearing before a bench of justice, to suffer itself to be represented by such a man as Adolphus, a person only fit to squabble with all the cut-throats and robbers he has to contend with at the Old Bailey; for one of more vulgar and coarser manners, of more actual impudence passing off for ability, and of lower habits and language, is not allowed to associate with gentlemen. We never see this man, or read his name, without recurring to that nonsensical stanza, descriptive of the result of his quarrel with ALLEY,—

AL abuses DOL—
DOL calls AL a skulker;
Fol de rol de rol,
Close by St. Sepulchre.

And no one but a person who had been a party concerned in that memorable and mortal defiance, could have used the beastly allusion to Mr. MARTIN'S protection from creditors by the privilege of Parliament, made by him in the course of the examination at Bow Street; and we suppose it is only Mr. MARTIN'S remembrance of the courageous termination of that affair, which has induced him not to force him to one of a similar nature, as he never can have met with a more flagrant instance of the violation of all etiquette, or common civilization, in the course of his whole life.

We must not omit to mention, before we conclude these remarks, our conviction that Mr. MARTIN has acted too precipitately in the business throughout, and attached to the fulminations of the Morning Chronicle a consequence that no other person in the kingdom would think it entitled to; he has, moreover, by the violence of his own remarks, and by his singular gesticulations, thrown an air of ridicule over the whole matter, which most probably it would never otherwise have been subject to, and, unless by exposing the ignorance and vulgarity of the paper, he has gained a very trifling advantage. We cannot avoid mentioning another instance of how much a man may err in his desire to do good, which has occurred this week with the Honourable Gentleman, whose conduct we are now discussing, for it will surely be allowed that a more ill-judged or officious letter was never sent by one person to another, than the one lately published in the Morning Herald, as forwarded from MARTIN to Mr. BALL HUGHES; and after deprecating the impropriety of such a step, and the liberty of sending a gentleman any letter on such a subject, which Mr. HUGHES very justly declined answering, we can only say, that if the horse, once Mr. HUGHES'S property, be now in the plight Mr. MARTIN describes, the best way he can act to get him out of it, is to buy it himself for the paltry sum to which he refers.

We are glad to perceive that the proceeds of the YORK FESTIVAL have turned out so highly advantageous, as in addition to the great cultivation of MUSIC which such meetings promote, their contributions, in the holy cause of CHARITY, throw a noble reflection on the character of our country; but we must be permitted, with reference to its management, to notice a circumstance not only injurious to the prosperity of such CELEBRATIONS, but conveying a species of insult to the public generally. We allude to the late exclusion of the PRESS, by the Committee superintending the concern; which could only arise through motives of conceit and consequent insolence, or the apprehension of any ignorance in the arrangements being necessarily detected—although we must confess, that the mixture of economy and extravagance apparent throughout the conduct of the whole affair, is quite extraordinary; while we see, as one instance, so insignificant a foreign singer, as MADAME GARCIA receiving £336 for chiming half a dozen songs, when to our own enchanting vocalist, Miss STEPHENS, was paid little more than half that sum, and her brother refused a complimentary admission for the purpose of conducting his sister to the orchestra, literally the most outrageous piece of assurance we, at the present moment, recollect. Really, the REVEREND A. DIXON, at the head of this precious Committee, seems little calculated for his situation; and if we were to mention some other traits in this divine's administration, it might propably be the means of opening the eyes of the ARCHBISHOP of YORK, his Patron, who should, we think, have interposed his authority to prevent such a foolish slight to those journals, through the medium of which, alone, that publicity so serviceable to the welfare of this FESTIVAL could be obtained. We make these observations on a general principle, and not with any personal consideration in mind, as we never have, and never will receive that mark of favour which a trifling sum will always procure us; and in closing this notice, we may as well state, that the nature of a part of these animadversions will apply with equal force to the management of the late HEREFORD MEETING, of which a superannuated gentleman by the name of WHITFIELD was conductor, and who, as one specimen of his sagacious administration, obtruded his own trashy compositions, in lieu of the sublime productions of the ANCIENT MASTERS.

WANTED,

Whenever A GENERAL ELECTION does take place, the following description of persons for the undermentioned places:

For Westminster—A modest man in the room of JOHN CAM HOBHOUSE, who, in the event of his coming to the Poll, will find no more use in it, than there is in his own.

For Great Yarmouth—Two PROTESTANT Members in the room of the present sitting ones.

For Coventry—A GENTLEMAN in the room of PETER MOORE.

For the City of Gloucester—A person who can read and write, in the lieu of Mr. WEBB. And

For the County of Gloucester—A Gentleman with a head upon his shoulders, and a tongue in his mouth, in place of his brother-in-law, SIR W. GUISE.

LETTERS OF TON.—No. II.

Poetical Effusion, in a Letter from B. H. in reply to the one sent him last week by his Friend T. R.

DEAR R—KES,

Your epistle has put us all three,
Down at Oatlands, my boy, in such charming esprits,
That for PARIS I sigh, as my thoughts linger o'er
The many a spree we have had there before.
Why don't you return, and not torture us thus
With your brilliant descriptions, but let us discuss (With a glass of that famous old sherry in view,
Which you know has been always so cheri by you)
All your many bon-tons, all your dames friandises,
And how oft you've been put to your derniere chemise?
That 'twill please us to see you I need hardly say,
And you know that we're all in the family way:
N B—Not the way, which in SHAKSPEARE I see,
The ladies who 're fond of their lords wish to be.
As you name your pursuits, and your women, and wine,
I suppose you would like to hear something of mine:
After breakfast I study an hour—then write—
Then set down in a book how we pass'd the last night—
Sometimes je vais promener sur le dos d'un cheval,
But whatever I do, my wife says "*c'est egal*e;"
Although in the same light her words I can't see,
As I'm told that they mean she is equal to me!
Went shooting last Tuesday—had "beaucoup de jeu"—
And LADY B—— begs I'll transmit some to you:
I shall therefore send over deux couple perdrix,
If you'll promise they shan't make such game there of me;
Though to send game to you may be somewhat amiss,
As you've plenty of game-ing HOUSE there, as it is.
The Parliament's like to be soon liquéfie,
And a GENERAL CHOIX, as the French people say,
We're to have, which, as KING ALLEN whisper'd to me
Of BOB WILSON, a very choice General will be.
Two or three caught this year at the Fishmongers' HELL,
Sont tombé ensemble par derers les oreils,
And CROCKY and I—, did I tell you before?
As we say on the Boulevards, have "tombé dehors."
Did you hear that we had, t'other day, a debate
On a beautiful print of NAPOLEON THE GREAT,
When a Mounseer amongst us presumed to exclaim—
"Ce n'est pas la resemblance—c'est, c'est lui-même:"
While one at his back, who stood watching the scene,
Said, "'tis BUONAPARTÉ surely, not LOUIS you mean!"
And though upon me this French joke they would fix,
'Tis FARLEY'S, who makes all the Pantomime tricks.
Made a trifling mistake at the Café to-day,
For LLOYD, who dined with us, just happened to say,
Looking first at the bill—then each separate dish—
"Now BALL, my good fellow, quelle part de l'affiche?"
I replied (and just then by ill luck not a word,
Though alt mouths were open, from any was heard,
For converse, when dinner is served up, will droop)
"I thank you—no FISH—I had rather take soup!"
St. Leger just over, and MEMNON has won—
I hear he's a roarer's most favorite son *;
The Greeks were for HOMER—not quite enough cunning—
And they say that the ALDERMAN'S too fat for running.
MADAME HUGHES has a Les mauvais room, and of course
Is very chévat—(in English, is hoarse.)
Adieu, my dear TOM, and whatever should chance,
I shall name it, the next time I write off to France,
And remain (having sent you all possible news)
Aussi long que ma vit,

Your's sincerely,

B. H—HES.

P.S. I have heard that the reason they call
The kingdom of France, by the title of Gaul,
Is, because in their politics, pleasures, or larks,
The French are so bitter in all their remarks.

Oatlands, Sept. 23, 1825. B. H.

Mr. HUGHES must here metaphorically allude to MEMNON, the supposed son of the Goddess Aurora.

COBBETT'S NEW COMEDY.

The following character of Mr. BRIC, the advocate of O'CONNELL, and Editor of the Dublin Morning Register appears in a Comedy in three acts, just published by COBBETT, on which it would be superfluous to offer a remark:

Act. I.—Scene 1.—Dialogue between COUNSELLOR PATRICK, COUNSELLOR HOWITZER, COUNSELLOR BLUNDERBUSS.

PAT. But, into whose hands, have you heard, is it intended to put this brief, if it should (contrary to my hope, I must confess) be resolved to offer a defence?

HOWI. Why, don't you know?

PAT. How should I? I have never been consulted until now.

BLUND. Guess.

HOWI. That he will never do, if you give him an age.

BLUND. 'Tis "Counsellor" BRICK!

PAT. "Counsellor" BRICK! What! that reporter to what BIG O used so justly and so often to call "the basest of all earthly things;" that clerk to BIG O, who used to receive the attorneys cap in hand, and, as he pocketted their shillings, used, like a true-bred huckster, to spit in his hand, for luck; that understrapper, that errand-bearer, that:....

HOWI. and BLUND. It is a shame, indeed. (Aside.)

PAT. .... that fellow, who is much more like a great sawyer than a great lawyer, ...

HOWI. and BLUND. Ah, a, a, a, a, ah!

PAT. .... that hulky heap of stuff, which, apparently conscious of the aptness of the name to the matter, has cut off the final K! That pier, that jamb, that pile of rough brickwork, which seems to have been put up by drunken workmen, who, ashamed of their job, left it unpointed and unplastered, and, as it were in derision, to have taken a shovel of mortar, and therewith to have clapped a handful of unbroken bull's hair on its top!.....

HOWI. and BLUND. Ah, a, a, a, a, a, a, *, ah!

PAT. .... that walking heap of rubbish, which, in its excessive modesty, says, that it, "like Lord Redesdale, is a stout special pleader";* that villanous lump, which seems to cry, as it goes, stand clear of brick-dust and dirt, and, at the grave of which, the parson (for no priest will ever go) will certainly say, not "ashes to ashes," but brickbats to brickbats!

HOWI. & BLUND, Hear! hear! hear! hea.... hush! hush! [Aside.

* Brick's Speech at Cork.
"A ball of new-dropp'd horse's dung,
"Mingling with apples in the throng,
"Said to the pippin, plump and prim,
"See, brother, how we apples swim." Swift.

Now, I most seriously declare my belief, that, as to all those points in which men differ from the brute creation, Brick is farther distant from Lord Redesdale than a ball of new-dropped horse's dung is from a Newtown pippin.

As soon as LORD DARLINGTON made his appearance on the Doncaster Race Course, after attending the York Festival, the MARQUIS OF LONDONDERRY asked him what brought him there?—"Why, to tell you the truth," replied his Lordship, "I was so sick of the CLERGY that I am come to see what I can MAKE of the *Lay*MEN."

THEATRICALS.

DRURY LANE THEATRE opened last evening, but as our limits do not admit of entering into any minutiæ of the performance, we must content ourselves by remarking, that the Theatre looked extremely splendid; the performers, according to their respective merits, were all well received, and while we cannot admire J. RUSSELL'S Mephostophiles, who was but "a poor devil" compared to his admirable original, or the Adine of Miss GRADDON, with the recollection of her predecessor, still we expect things will improve, although if the Farce of Raising the Wind was acted in the hope of so doing, it had not the desired effect. Among the changes at the two Patent Theatres, we find that DOWTON is engaged; that "overtures are pending with those great artistes," BRAHAM, LISTON, and Miss KELLY; that a Mr. WILLIAMS from the Theatre Royal, Worthing, is to appear in a Comedy with Mrs. DAVISON, and that Mr. WALLACK is appointed acting Manager. Well! WALLACK is a clever man, and if the cacoethes of acting does not visit him too violently, he is quite capable of doing justice to the important duties of his new station, and is a relief, for which we cannot be too grateful, to the miserable impotence of that Mr. WINSON, who has been so long retained as a kind of JACKAL to this concern, although the display we have had of his public abilities would rather bespeak another sort of termination to the first syllable of this quadruped caterer; and to sum up the prospects of Drury, Mr. BOOTH has announced his intention of returning from America to fill KEAN'S place, on the position, we presume, that but we can tell the great Junius Brutus, that our theatres have quite enough of the mummeries of a Fair, as it is, without having another booth in them. At Covent Garden we find MR. WARDE, of considerable provincial celebrity, is engaged, and appears to-morrow in the character of Brutus, in Julius Cæsar; that, moreover, a MR. BLAND, son of our old favourite, is retained, and who, if he have the least particle of his mother's vocal celebrity, must prove an important acquisition. MADAME VESTRIS is also added to the list, with her suivante, MRS. GLOVER, of whom they tell the following anecdote: that MORRIS was remarking how ill MRS. G. generally looked of a morning, when MADAME, touching on the lady's acquaintance with MR. HOWARD PAYNE, the American actor, remarked, that she did not all wonder at it, as she had always such a pain in her side—which was the cause, we further hear, of the late healed-up breach between these two Dianas. MRS. CHATTERLY actually appears, it seems; and Miss LOVE, whose hopes of marriage have miscarried, has returned fully invigorated from the Dover Peer breezes.

"Two stars shine not together in one sphere."

It is also stated (whether effected by the letter which appeared in this Paper to Mr. CALCRAFT, or not, we do not presume to determine) that the Managers of these two Theatres have come to a resolution, not to give more than 20*l.* per week to any actor or actress, however great their celebrity; and that Miss STEPHENS, "much to the credit of her feelings," has acceeded to this resolution. Now none can be more delighted than ourselves at the return of this enchanting singer, but what credit there can be in accepting 20*l.* per week, when you are assured you will not attract individually as many shillings, we are quite at a loss to determine. The nation, we are quite certain, will be pleased to hear the true cause why Mr. BRAHAM did not open the Messiah at the late York Festival, so they shall have it in the following interesting extract from a Morning Paper:

"The various erroneous impressions existing as to the cause of Mr. Vaughan's opening the Messiah at York, when Mr. Braham was present, we feel pleasure in stating what we know to be the real fact. Madame Catalani, to prevent a disorganization of the whole Festival in 1823, was allowed to open the Messiah, but in compensation for the disappointment, Mr. Vaughan was promised that he should certainly have justice done him whenever a repetition of the Festival occurred On this being stated to Mr. Braham, that gentleman, with the liberal feeling which has ever actuated him, cheerfully coincided in the arrangement."

Mr. LISTON'S benefit turned out, what the benefit of such a great comedian always should be, A BUMPER, though we find, by a letter in the Morning Herald, that M. K. and his brother were "robbed by the barefaced and outrageous conduct of a gang of pickpockets;" on which we can only remark, that these two worthy people are not the only ones whose pockets were picked, that went to see such trash as the Sorrows of Werter.

COLEMAN'S piece of Inkle and Yarico has been produced at the English Opera House, principally we presume, for the purpose of shewing MORRIS how to cast it; for a more powerful assemblage of talent, in so trifling an entertainment, we seldom remember to have witnessed. The exquisite acting of Miss KELLY in Yarico, was greatly relieved by the comicallity of MATHEWS in Trudge, and COOPER'S Inkle was as correct a representation as could be wished or conceived, while Miss PATON in Wowski sang with all that mastery of voice, and brilliancy of execution, of which she is almost the exclusive possessor, and if we could find any fault in her appearance, it would be the obscuring in so very black a dye, a face by nature so very pretty. Beyond these points, we are not aware that any thing of import has occurred; the following week will probably unravel some of the mysteries of the Cabinets of the two National Theatres, and as they arise before our sight, and arrest our judgment, we shall not fail to communicate them to our readers, who, we are well aware, must be all anxiety to know any and every thing, concerning such an extraordinary set of people

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

NEW YORK, AUGUST 22.

The Court Martial at Washington, have found Commodore Porter guilty of both the charges preferred against him, and adjudged that he be suspended for the term of six months. The sentence has been approved by the President of the United States.

The 1st charge against the Commodore was—"Disobedience of Orders, and conduct unbecoming an officer," in having while in command of the United States, naval forces in the West Indies, on the 14th November, 1824, with a part of the said forces landed on the Island of Porto Rico, in the dominions of the King of Spain, then and still in amity with the United States, and committed in a forcible and hostile manner acts of hostility against the subjects of the said King of Spain, in contravention of the law of nations, and in violation of his instructions from the United States.

In deciding upon this charge, the Court "feels itself called upon to ascribe the conduct of the accused which is deemed censurable, to an anxious disposition on his part to maintain the honour, and advance the interests of the nation, and of the service."

The 2d charge was—"Insubordinate conduct, and conduct unbecoming an officer."

(From the Boston Centinel of August 27.)

The last National Journal contains an article signed by this officer, in which he makes comments on the publications recently made by Mr. Randall, late Special Agent to Cuba, Mr Coxe, the Judge Advocate, and to some editorial remarks in the Journal, in which he refers to the Proceedings of the Courts respecting him, an official record of which is now in the press, for his vindication of the remarks of the two former, and, in allusion to the latter, he has this paragraph: —"I have only to say, that I have been tried and judged by my Peers, and I bow with deference to their decision. I have endeavoured throughout my trials to defend my honour as become a man, and I trust that I can bear my punishmeut without repining. No one has heard me murmur at my sentence; and until they do, no apology appears necessary for either the Court or the prosecution. I do not express a doubt that strict justice has been dispensed to me, and I know not what causes induce* you (the Editors) to believe that doubts rest on the minds of others, as the article alluded to would seem to imply."

The Washington Gazette says,—Among the visitors at the Court Martial on Wednesday, we observed the French Admiral commanding the fleet lately arrived in Hampton Roads.

* The Editors make a very suitable exposition of the causes which induced them in the premises.

CONSTANTINOPLE, AUG. 23.—Ibrahim Pacha has fixed his headquarters at Tripolizza; the main body of his army is concentrated near that town, which is the basis of his operations.

Setting out from this point, the Egyptian commander has undertaken several expeditions in all directions; several of the enemy's corps under Colocotroni, Ypsilanti, and other chiefs, which attempted to disturb his cantonments, or which threatened his communications, have been constantly repulsed with more or less considerable loss.

The most serious actions since the pretended battle of Tripolizza, (5th July) were fought on the 20th and 21st July, to the south east of Tripolizza, on the road from that town to Mistra.

The report of the death of Ypsilanti, which was spread before the departure of the last courier, is not confirmed. It seems to have been caused by the deaths of two other Greek chiefs, George Gika and Polichroni, who were killed in these engagements. According to the assurances of a witness, Demetrius, and one of the sons of Colocotroni, (probably the one who is known by the name of Genneos) had arrived at Napoli di Romania, as fugitives, and not as conquerors. Several thousand fugitives from the interior of the country are encamped in barracks before the gates of that town. Wretchedness, want of provisions, and a fatal epidemic, daily carried off numbers of these unhappy people. All the fugitives from the Morea, who arrive in Cerigo, one of the Ionian islands, are obliged to go to Calasmo, a small island belonging to the Ionian territory, which is hardly capable of containing so great a number.

After several fruitless attempts, the Capitan Pacha had succeeded, on the 21st of July, in penetrating, with small boats, into the Lagoons before Missolonghi. On the same day the fort of Anatolico, an island to the north of Missolonghi, surrendered to the Turks. The garrison of 300 men are prisoners of war. The inhabitants, to the number of 1500, received entire liberty to retire without obstacle into the interior of the country. The Seraskier Redschid Pacha had already succeeded in cutting off the water of Missolonghi, and in erecting several batteries at a small distance from the main works of the place. The ramparts have already been much injured by the fire of the besiegers; a part of the ditches was already filled up, and several attacks had been attempted against the fortress, when, in the beginning of August, the Greek fleet of nearly sixty sail, including fire-ships, appeared at the entrance of the Gulf of Patras, and revived the courage of the besieged, who, by the confession of their enemies, had valiantly defended themselves, against all their attacks, and the more so as the Capitan Pacha, according to news from Zante, of the 10th of August, seems to have quitted the vicinity of Missolonghi.

BAYONNE, SEPT. 10.—The five Generals are still resident here; the troops forming the garrison, and those in camp, consisting of four regiments complete (say about four thousand men), are drilled or exercised daily. In case of necessity they could quit the field of exercise, and proceed at once on a campaign. No more troops have arrived, though the report is continued that many may be expected in this quarter ere long. The Minister of War will positively be here on the 21st or the 22d of this month, and, it is presumed, before his arrival, considerable reinforcements may be expected. Government has rented an immense tract of land near to the camp of Marac, where the troops are accustomed to sham fights and every manœuvre of battle. In Spain every thing is in confusion, particularly in the capital. The Swiss are much harassed, and being almost continually under arms, about 150, who have served their period of engagement, and refused to renew it, arrived here yesterday. They are heartily tired of the service. They will leave this to-morrow, each for his home or destination. Couriers from France to Spain, and vice versa, pass frequently, and the telegraph is often in motion, consequently it is presumed that matters of importance are on the tapis.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

An apprehension, it is said, prevails, that the individual who shot himself in Paris lately, was Captain Gough, late of the Life Guards. Captain Gough, it is stated, was residing, with his lady, in the same hotel with the unfortunate suicide, but had left it a few days prior to the commission of the deed. The name of the suicide was Goff.

Mr. Chantrey, the sculptor, is now busily engaged in preparing a marble statue of Mr. Grattan, for Dublin. It is designed, and will be a full-length figure, representing him in the double capacity of a senator and an orator.

A reward of two hundred guineas was offered in Saturday's Gazette for the apprehension of the person or persons who lately set fire to two of the new houses erecting near the end of Gray's Inn-lane.

On the 1st instant, an elderly man was discovered lying upon a bed of leaves, in a wood, in the township of Adlington, near which spot he had remained, we understand, from the 16th of August, with the intention, it appears, of courting death in its most horrible form, by exposing himself to the lingering effects of famine and the unwholesome damps of night. Being taken, however, to the constable of Blackrod, who humanely interested himself in his behalf, he was aroused to a sense of his situation; and after receiving some relief, set out on his way to Penrith, in Cumberland. He was in a dreadfully emaciated state, and without a coat, but his appearance otherwise was highly respectable. The following memorandum was found in his pocket by the constable, which was well written, with a pencil:

"August 16th, 1825.—I find myself very fit to die, but not to live; my misfortunes have been great, and I am reduced to poverty. I cannot work; to beg I am ashamed; and to be beholden to my friends I cannot, neither to a parish can I entreat. I have made my peace with God, and I am in perfect charity with all mankind. I was born in the parish of Aldingham, March 30th, 1772. Mean to lie here till I die.

Bolton Express. "ROBERT JACKSON."

The Lord Bishop of Barbadoes has arrived in England. His Lordship came a passenger in the Fortitude. Letters are in town from Tobago of the 9th of August, and from Demerara to the 1st. By the latter it appears that two overseers have been poisoned; and the life of Mr. Simpson also attempted by poison. It will be recollected that Mr. Simpson was particularly active in suppressing the insurgents.

HAMPSHIRE MILITIA.—The Duke of Wellington, as Lord Lieutenant of the county, has ordered the North Hants Regiment of Militia to assemble at their head-quarters, in the city of Winchester; and the South Hants Regiment at Southampton, on Wednesday next, for the purpose of being trained and exercised for twenty-eight days.

An inhabitant of Sprattau, in Silesia, was lately arraigned for the crime of bigamy. On the trial it appeared that he had successively married nine wives, who were all present at the trial. The Judges decreed that the best punishment would be to make him live hereafter with the whole nine. The prisoner pleaded the capital punishment on hearing the decision of the Judges, but without effect.

A watch was stolen in the pit of the Opera in Paris; the loser complained in a loud voice, and said, "It is just seven; in a few minutes my watch will strike—the sound is strong—and by that means we shall instantly ascertain where it is." The thief, terrified at this, endeavoured to escape, and by his agitation discovered himself.

Their Graces of Northumberland arrived, last week, at Alnwick Castle, and were received by a very large number of tenantry with strong demonstrations of joy at their coming from abroad. The Duke, on alighting from his carriage, returned his best thanks for their kind feelings towards him, and took occasion to mention, as appropriate to the cause of their meeting him, that he was sure they would receive pleasure at being informed how incorrect the newspaper accounts were on the subject of his mission, as, from the King to the peasant, a marked attention was paid to the British embassy, and to him as his Majesty's representative, which he thought it a duty he owed to the Court of France to acknowledge.—Carlisle Patriot.

NEW IRISH COIN.—The most prompt and efficient measures for circulating the new, and withdrawing the old, Irish coin have been adopted. Last week Commissary-General Cumming and Mr. Malassez, the Commissioners for changing the coin, arrived at Greer's Hotel, Omagh. The same day a large train of waggons, heavily laden with the new silver, and guarded by a detachment of the 63d regiment, marched into town. The following day, detachments of the train proceeded for Derry, and the other large towns in the northern district. The currency is now being exchanged at the Court-house, and we hope this desirable object will soon be accomplished.—Irish Paper.

Madame de Genlis is at present residing at Boulogne, a small village near St. Cloud, in a maison de Santé, where she is actively employed in preparing the last volumes of her Memoires.

VOLTAIRE.—The period approaches for the opening of the sanctum sanctorum at Paris—namely, the apartments of Voltaire, which have been locked up at his desire ever since his death.

The hop plantations at Whimple, near Exeter, are in a very healthy and luxuriant state, and there is every appearance of an abundant and excellent crop.

THE LATE MRS. WELLESLEY POLE LONG.—On Monday morning last, at the hour of nine o'clock, the remains of this amiable, unfortunate, and much-lamented lady, were removed from Richmond, where she died, on their way to Draycot, in Wiltshire, the seat of Lady Tilney, there to be deposited in the family vault. The melancholy procession consisted of the hearse, in which the coffin was borne, drawn by six horses, and three mourning coaches, drawn by four horses each. The first coach contained Mr. Scarborough and Mr. Wright, and in the two following were the nurse, three maid-servants, coachman, and footman of the late lamented lady. The two Misses Long, and Mr. Bicknel, the late unhappy lady's steward, set off for Draycot post. His Grace the Duke of Wellington joined the mournful procession on Thursday, at Chippenham, within five miles of Draycot.

QUARANTINE.—The following communication from the French Consul-General in London, was yesterday posted at Lloyd's:—

"French Consulate General, Sept 20, 1825.

"SIR—Having been authorised by my Government to acquaint you for the information of Lloyd's, and all others whom it may concern, that the restrictions which had been enforced by the Board of Health at Marseilles, and by the Home Department, have been withdrawn, both for the harbour of Marseilles, and for the other French Ports in the Ocean; and that in future all ships bound from any Port in Great Britain to any Port in France, shall be as formerly admitted, notwithstanding their having or not any Levant goods on board.

"I am, &c. &c.

"Baron SEGUIR, French Consul General.

"To John Bennett, Esq. Lloyd's."

EXECUTION OF PATRICK WELSH.

The firmness which this unhappy man manifested during his trial, he preserved to the termination of his wretched career. Notwithstanding he protested his innocence at his trial, he had no sooner left the Court and returned to his cell than he acknowledged the crime of which a Jury of his country had found him guilty, on evidence which, though strong proof, was still only circumstantial, and in the course of which even the medical evidence had erred most materially, in supposing that the wound which caused the death of his wife was inflicted by a hatchet, whereas it appears from his own statement that her death was in reality caused by repeated blows of a scrubbing-brush.

It cannot be a question that in all cases where the proof of murder rests entirely on circumstantial evidence, the testimony of the medical witnesses who have seen the body is that part of it which will most strongly influence the verdict of the Jury. And the present case in particular furnishes an example, in which it may be presumed that that verdict was founded, in a considerable degree, on the medical testimony; that testimony was in substance, that the death of the woman was caused by an "incised wound" on the back of the head, which it was alleged could only have been produced by a sharp instrument, such as a hatchet. The murderer himself said all along that the wounds in question were produced by a fall down stairs upon some tiles; and it is clear that the tiles were at least as likely to give all the appearances of an incised wound as the scrubbing-brush. We mention this merely to suggest the necessity for extreme caution in the delivery of positive medical opinions.

A very few minutes before eight o'clock the culprit was brought from his cell to the Sheriffs' room. His irons had been already struck off, and though his appearance was sufficiently wretched, he walked in apparently quite unconcerned by his approaching fate. He manifested no recklessness or levity; his demeanour was entirely that of calm resignation, of one who was conscious that the time of his departure was come, and who had been enabled to surmount its terrors. He was accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Devereux, a Catholic Priest, who had attended him through the night. To a question from Mr. Sheriff Brown, whether he had any thing to communicate, he replied that he had nothing to say. He then, while the officer was pinioning his arms, turned suddenly round, and was proceeding with great earnestness to give some directions as to the disposal of his clothes, when Mr. Sheriff Brown intimated the propriety of his withdrawing his thoughts at such a time from all earthly matters, and he instantly resumed his former quiet position. When every thing was ready, and he was about being led out, he intimated a wish to pray, and he knelt down with his face to the wall, and for a few seconds seemed to be absorbed in mental supplication to the throne of mercy. He then rose, and in answer to a question from Mr. Sheriff Brown, said, "I am ready in the name of God." These were his last words; he was then led to the scaffold, and in a few seconds he was one of the countless millions who are no more.

EXTRAORDINARY CLAIM.

It will be recollected that a poor woman applied, a short time ago, at the Mansion-house, for advice as to the manner in which it would be advisable for her to proceed in order to make known a claim which she had upon the Duke of Northumberland, to his Grace, and that she stated that her grandfather, Mr. Lomas, who was married to the dowager Duchess of Somerset, had magnanimously given up to the Percy family 80,000*l.*, for which he had the bond of his wife. All the circumstances stated upon that occasion were, it appears, well founded; but there were two or three inaccuracies, which, as the case is so extremely important to both parties, we think it necessary to correct. The name of the unfortunate grand-daughter of Mr. Lomas is Webster, and not Lomas; her father was a citizen of London, and carried on business at No. 87, Newgate-street. Mr. Ceasar, one of the parish officers who investigated her case when she was compelled by the sudden death of her father, and the refusal of the Northumberland family to make any provision for her, states that he believes it to be true in all its leading particulars. The statement that the applicant's mother had received a pension was erroneous; for her mother was no more before her grandmother, who was the wife of Mr. Lomas, died.

Notwithstanding the fact that many days have elapsed since the publication of the remarkable circumstances of the case, and that the Duke of Northumberland has been applied to by petition and by letter, no notice whatever has been taken of the matter, and the unfortunate pauper has often expressed a wish, that if the Duke supposes her to be an impostor, he would vindicate himself by prosecuting her—a course by which her claim would be settled beyond the possibility of further dispute. When the widow of Mr. Lomas died, her only survivor (the complainant) applied to the Rev. Dr. Macleod, the rector of St Anne's, Soho, and put into his possession, according to her statement, the original letter of the late Duke of Northumberland, promising to take care of the descendants of Mr. Lomas, in order that he might interfere with the Percy family in her behalf, and procure a continuance of the annuity of 25*l.* per annum, which had been paid to Mrs. Lomas for 32 years. The Duke of Northumberland, it was stated to the parish officers, excused himself from making any provision for the descendant of Mr. Lomas, on the ground that the Earl of Beverley, the second grandson of the Duchess of Somerset, was in possession of the magnificent fortune which Mr. Lomas gave up with such noble disinterestedness. In August, 1820, the Earl of Beverley paid a visit to the widow of Mr. Lomas, and gave her a guinea. He was exceedingly desirous that she should give up the letter of the late Duke of Northumberland, acknowledging the obligations of the family to the descendants of Mr. Lomas, but this additional evidence of the disinterestedness of his family she positively refused to give; and being a woman of a high spirit, addressed his Lordship in terms not by any means agreeable to the delicate ear of prosperity, especially from one who was considered by some in the light of a poor relation. The Earl has mostly resided in France since that period, and therefore has not been applied to.

We have learned, that soon after the pauper had put her case into the hands of the Rev. Doctor Macleod, and entrusted him with the letter of the late Duke, she was asked by him, whether if the Duke made a permanent provision for her, she would consent to give up the letter containing the secret. To this she readily consented, understanding that the Rev. Gentleman had been in communication with his Grace. She was somewhat surprised a short time afterwards upon learning from the Doctor, that his Grace would give no more than 25*l.*, and that upon the receipt of that sum he (the Doctor) had given up the letter. She then had no alternative; she was in a deplorable condition, and she took the 25*l.* No application was made by her until about two years afterwards, when she applied in a supplicatory letter to Lord Prudhoe, the brother of the Duke of Northumberland, stating the nature of her claims. From his Lordship she received 5*l.* When this pittance was exhausted she applied again, and the Duke sent her 20*l.*, on which she lived for twelve months. All her subsequent applications proved fruitless, and she was driven, as was before stated, to seek relief from the parish. The parish officers, although they can make no allowance to the descendant of the gallant gentleman, to whose generosity the Noble Family are indebted for so large an addition to their wealth, treat her with great respect and kindness. Mr. Ceaser, the hosier, of Newgate-street, when in office as an overseer, very benevolently exerted himself in her behalf.

The following, we are assured, is a verbatim copy of the letter from the Duke of Northumberland, to suppress which such strenuous exertions were made:

"To John Cowslade, Esq.

"Ainwick, January 1, 1790.

"DEAR SIR—I have received yours, enclosing one from Mrs. Lomas, and in consequence of your information and her distress, I am very willing to allow her 50*l.* a year for life, which I shall commence as from Christmas last. I have therefore, enclosed a check for 25*l.* for the first half year. I should not have troubled you on the occasion, but I thought it would give Mrs. Lomas an additional pleasure to receive this information from your hands; and I have no doubt but my brother, who is in possession of my late grandmother's personal fortune, which Mrs. Lomas undoubtedly might have claimed, will make any addition as may be thought necessary to the above sum.

"Yours sincerely, NORTHUMBERLAND."

The Duke afterwards made use of the remarkable expression, "Whilst a Percy lives, a descendant of Lomas shall never want."

Such, at least, is the story; and we do not think the Noble Family appealed to would be wrong in doing something about it.

The unfortunate female appeared at the Mansion-house on Monday, to inquire whether any communication had been made respecting her case, and was answered in the negative. Her appearance is indeed well calculated to excite commiseration.

OLD BAILEY SESSIONS.

(Before the Common Sergeant and a Middlesex Jury.)

Phillis Isted was indicted for stealing 19 yards of riband and other articles, the property of Christian Kidney.

The prosecutrix deposed that she lived at Maida-hill. The prisoner had been her confidential servant for three years, but she discharged her on the 25th of July last. After the prisoner was gone the prosecutrix missed some articles, in consequence of which she caused her lodgings to be searched; and in a trunk belonging to the prisoner were found the riband mentioned in the indictment, a locket, a necklace, and some trimming, all of which belonged to the prosecutrix.

The prisoner in her defence said that all the articles had been given to her by her mistress.

Mrs. Brown stated she had formerly been in the prosecutrix's service. The prosecutrix's memory was not good, in consequence of her being addicted to drinking. Since the prisoner had been in custody, the prosecutrix had offered to give witness an anodyne necklace, if she could give any information against the prisoner.

Several witnesses gave testimony in favour of the prisoner's character.

The Jury found the prisoner Not Guilty.

Elizabeth Cox, another servant of Mrs Kidney, was indicted for stealing, on the 8th of June, a gold pencil-case, the property of Ernesto Diana Dominico Spagnioletti.

Mrs Kidney deposed, that Mr. Spagnioletti came to her house on the 8th of June, the day before the drawing-room, to give her a lesson in music. He went away, leaving his gold pencil-case behind.—On the following day, the three servants, Isted, Cox, and Waters, came up into the drawing-room to see her in her court-dress. The pencil-case was then in the room. On the return of the witness from the King's drawing-room, she missed the pencil-case. The servants said they knew nothing of it.

Michael Morris, a police-officer, proved that he found the pencil-case in the prisoner's husband's house, on the 25th of July.

Mr. Spagnioletti identified the pencil-case. It had belonged to Naldi, the singer.

The Jury found the prisoner Guilty

Barbara Waters was next indicted for stealing various articles, the property of Miss Kidney, but was acquitted.

OLD COURT.

James Collins, aged 24, a coachman, was charged with the wilful murder of Nicholas Dawkins, by wilfully and maliciously throwing and casting him upon the ground, and then forcing the wheel of a coach he was driving over the right leg of the deceased, which fractured it, and caused his death.

The prisoner was also charged on the Coroner's Inquest with manslaughter.

Mr. BOLLAND stated the case.

The Earl of Westmorland sworn, examined by Mr. BRODERICK, stated as follows:—I was at Lord George Cavendish's, in Burlington-house, on the evening of the 23d of May last. I went from the house about half-past twelve, towards the gate, and observed two carriages closely jammed together I asked for a police-man, whom I desired to do his duty: he spoke to the person whom I since knew to be Collins, the prisoner, and then went in front of the carriage the prisoner was driving. I apprehend the other carriage must have given way, as the prisoner drove with great velocity immediately after into the yard. Being struck with his improper conduct, I followed the carriage, and asked the driver whose it was, he said it belonged to Lady Lambert. I then returned to the house, and told her what had passed On my return I found the police officer lying against the wall with his leg broken; he must have been the man I spoke to to do his duty, but I did not observe him so closely as to be positive he was the same. I saw him in front of the carriage, but did not hear what he said. I saw no violence on his part.

James Porter—I am servant to Lord Westmorland, and attended his Lordship to Lord George Cavendish's; we got to the gate, and there were two carriages jammed in it; some person called a police-man, who went in front of them with a staff in his hand, and desired the coachman to move back. The officer took hold of the reins of one of the carriages, and it gave way; the other then passed in at a fast trot; whilst passing through the gateway, the carriage passed quite close to me, and struck the officer on the leg; he immediately fell, and I went to his assistance; he complained of great pain, could not stand, and said his leg was broken; he was then placed on a door, and taken to St. George's Hospital.

To questions by Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE---I don't know which carriage entered first.

Samuel David Dance---I am porter to Lord George Cavendish. I collect seeing a number of carriages come to Burlington House on the night of the accident. There were two gates opened on that night. The carriages advanced through the centre or western gateway. Two carriages were jammed together, and the coachmen were flogging their horses, when my Lord Westmorland came up, and desired the officer to do his duty, who did so, by trying to force them back. One of them went back, and there was then a general rush in; the officer was thrown down where I stood, about four or five yards from the gate.

Cross examined—This being the western-gate, was the proper access to the house. The carriage drove the officer in four or five yards, and he was then knocked down, and run over. I did not particularly notice whether the horses, finding the passage freed, did not rush on of their own accord without being whipped; the transaction occurred so suddenly it was certainly an accident.

By Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE—I did not see the officer hang by the reins or the pole. As he passed me he was in front of the horses, a little way beyond me; he was either thrown down or fell down.

The Rev. Dr. Goodwin—I was passing along Piccadilly, and saw a number of carriages extending from the gateway to St. James's-street; they were not in line; all in confusion. Two carriages were whipped up furiously together into the western gate They were contending for priority of entrance. The gateway being insufficient for two they became blocked up; the coachmen persevered whipping, and I told them it was a shame, as they could not both get in together. They took no notice, and I repeated, "You scoundrels, you will spoil your masters' horses and carriages too." I was either disregarded or not heard by them, and they continued lashing their horses. Several persons exclaimed to me, "Bravo, Sir!" I called for an officer, and some person in the yard called out, stand back, or put back. Both men backed a little, and one of the drivers renewed his whipping, and darted into the yard furiously. I then heard a cry that a man was run over. I did not see what took place inside, as the multitude prevented me.

Thomas Dawkins—I am brother to the deceased, and visited him daily at the hospital after the accident occurred. He was perfectly acquainted with his dangerous state for two months previous; the night before he died, he said he knew he must go (die). On that same night he told me to come next morning early, and he died at half-past nine o'clock; he said "he was a murdered man, that it was all dickey with him;" he said "if the coachman had not whipped on so, he would not have been run over;" this he repeated half an hour before he died. A fortnight before his decease, he said that when the coachman drove on he had hold of the pole and the reins, that he was going backwards and down he fell, when the wheel went over his leg.

Cross examined.—I heard him say the surgeon had given him some hopes of living.

Mr. Pittman and Mr. Jefferies, surgeons in St George's Hospital, described the nature of the wound received by the deceased.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE called on the prisoner for his defence.

The prisoner said he was heartily sorry for the accident, and was not aware of it at the time it occurred.

Mr. Moses Holland (for the defence) stated, that he witnessed the confusion that took place amongst the carriages opposite Burlington House, and he did not think the prisoner had used much whipping to his horses.

Lady Lambert and several other respectable persons gave him a good character.

Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE summed up the evidence to the Jury, and said it did not appear that there was any particular malice that could have operated on the mind of the prisoner to induce him to cause the death of the deceased. Perhaps, on the score of humanity, they could infer, that as the prisoner had not seen the deceased, he could not be considered guilty of murder—though with regard to the charge of manslaughter, the evidence was entitled to their consideration

The Jury retired for a short time, and returned a verdict of Not guilty.

(Before Mr. Justice GASELEE.)

William Leadley was arraigned for the manslaughter of Jane Leadley, his wife.

Anne Major deposed that she saw the prisoner beating the deceased with a stick; the latter was at that time partially intoxicated. The marks of the blows appeared on her arm. She died thirteen days after, in her own house. The prisoner was an affectionate husband while the deceased remained sober, clean, and comfortable. The deceased took refreshment several times after she had received that beating; she drank gin the very hour before her death—(Here some laughter sounded through the Court; his Lordship severely censured it as indecorous and unfeeling.) She was generally addicted to the use of strong liquors.

It appeared from the evidence of her medical attendants, that the bruises on her arm arising from the blows of the stick, had been inflamed by the excessive quantity of spirits drunk by her during her illness, and that the injurious effects of the spirits upon her constitution were the real cause of her death, and that the blows of the stick were not.

Mr. Justice GASELEE stopped the trial here, and directed the Jury to acquit the prisoner—Not Guilty.

His Lordship complained of the discrepancies which occurred between the depositions of witnesses before the Magistrates and their subsequent evidence before the Court. In the present case the first witness had said before the Magistrate that the prisoner had kicked his wife; to-day she deposes that he did not. The frequency of these inconsistencies called for the strictest attention of the Police Magistrates to the manner of taking the depositions.

(Before Mr. Justice LITTLEDALE.)

Mary Goggin, a young Irishwoman, was arraigned for having in company with two Irishmen (Brown and Sullivan) not yet in custody, robbed Catherine Sweeny, a compatriot of her's, of two sovereigns and a gold ring, in a field near the Commercial-road.

The prosecutrix, one os the most eloquent of her sex, swore to the commission of the offence, in language more copious and energetic than correct or intelligible.

Mr. Adolphus's cross-examination of her was an amusing conflict between practical acuteness on one side, and crafty evasion on the other. The Learned Gentleman's ingenuity was exhausted in obtaining direct answers to his questions, and failed to elicit any thing which could shake the statements in her examination in chief.

The Jury, however, appeared to differ in opinion from the prosecutrix, as they acquitted the prisoner.

NEW COURT.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

James Short, a man about 50 years of age, who was employed as an hostler at the Bull and Mouth Inn, was put to the bar, charged with having, in the month of July last, "unlawfully and designedly" killed two mares, the property of Mr. Shearman, the proprietor of the Bull and Mouth Inn.

The case was clearly made out against the prisoner.

The Jury found the prisoner Guilty.

CASE OF MR. PALIN FOR THE ROBBERY AT THE AUCTION MART.

This case, which has excited such a general degree of interest, stood No. 18, on the list, and the Court fixed the trial for five o'clock precisely. Immediately after Mr. COMMON SERGEANT left the Bench, Mr. ARABIN took his seat; and the prisoner, who had been out upon recognizances, appeared on the floor, and was instantly placed in the dock. He is a man apparently sixty years of age, of small features, very respectably dressed, and wore a profusion of powder.

Mr. Shelton, the Clerk, then arraigned the prisoner, and read the indictment, which charged him with stealing, in the parish of St. Mary-le-Bow, four Bank of England Notes for the payment of 1,000*l.* each, the property of Mr. Francis Robinson—to which the prisoner pleaded "Not Guilty."

Mr. BRODERICK and the Hon. Mr. LAW conducted the prosecution, and Messrs. ALLEY and ADOLPHUS the defence.

Mr. BRODERICK rose and stated, that he begged leave to move for a postponement of this important trial, which he grounded upon facts stated in an affidavit which he held in his hand, made by Mr. Hobler, the Solicitor for Mr. Robinson, in which the prosecutor himself joined —which went to state, that to support this case to a conviction, the evidence of three persons was very material and necessary: these persons were—Mons. Emericque, the money-changer at Paris; and his wife, and Mademoiselle Marcelli, the keeper of the Hotel Valvois, in the same capital. An application had been made to his Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, to procure the attendance of these individuals from Paris; a communication was in consequence made to my Lord Granville, the British Secretary at Paris—and by that Nobleman to the French Government, communicating the wish of the British Government. A few days ago, a despatch arrived from Lord Granville at the Foreign Office in Downing-street, stating that he would report the case to the French Ministers, who would act as they deemed proper. And, on Friday last, Mr. Hobler received a note from Mr. Dawson, the Under-Secretary of State, stating, that in another despatch that had arrived from Paris, he had received a letter from Lord Granville upon the subject, stating that he had laid the case before the French Authories—and, up to the time of the despatch leaving Paris, they had returned no answer.. The Learned Counsel said it was upon these grounds that he moved for a postponement of the trial. It might be said that the affidavit did not say at what period the witnesses named would be in attendance, but that would be next to an impossibility, under all the circumstances; and when it was considered that the case was in agitation between the British and French Governments, there could be no specific time stated when it was likely to procure the attendance of these witnesses. The Learned Counsel, therefore, trusted the Court would consider the affidavit shewed sufficient cause, and that there had been the necessary exertions and vigour used on the part of the prosecution to prevent any unnecessary inconvenience to the accused, or to avert the ends of justice.

Mr. LAW, on the same side, urged that the affidavit just read by his Learned Friend was couched in those terms of certainty that left no doubt but exertions were making by the British Government with the French nation to procure the appearance of the foreign witnesses.

Mr. ADOLPHUS replied against the application, and was followed by Mr. ALLEY.

The COURT was of opinion that the application should be granted.

The trial was then adjourned. and the accused entered into his own security in 2,000*l.*, and four sureties in 500*l.* each, to appear when called upon.

YORKSHIRE MUSICAL FESTIVAL.

YORK, SEPT. 17.

The third Concert on Thursday was not so well attended as the second, but the company was much more select. The heat, however, was grievously oppressive, and compelled many to retire before the performance concluded. To the inadequate means of ventilation the extreme sultriness of the weather was superadded, for during the whole week the sun has not only been excessively fiery, but the atmosphere close, and both quite exhausting, even to persons of robust constitutions. The whole of the performances on Thursday evening went off with eclat.

Yesterday morning exhibited the same hurry and crowding to arrive at the Cathedral as the preceding one. The Duke of Devonshire entered the Royal box along with the Archbishop of York. The Earl of Harewood was also present, together with a host of other Noblemen. After the chorus from the Dettingen Te Deum, Miss Travis sang Handel's "What though I trace," with remarkable judgment, taste, and effect. The last line, "How vain were all I knew," contrasted in the most beautiful manner with that which it succeeded, and the execution of the cadence, was gracefully precise. Phillips's "Tears such as tender fathers shed," was very successful; and the Dead March in Saul, which followed, was performed with fearful solemnity. Miss Stephens's "Praise the Lord," was not exactly suited to her powers or style. After some other pieces not peculiarly effective, a motet, by Hadyn, "The arm of the Lord is upon them," as introduced into the Oratorio of Judah, by Gardiner, of Leicester, was performed, and imparted unmixed delight. The rest of the performances gave much satisfaction, and lasted till within a few minutes of six o'clock in the evening. The Fancy Ball in the evening was really splendid, and the company of the very first class. The Duke of Devonshire was present in military uniform, and had a circle round him of the first beauty and brilliancy. The Marchioness of Londonderry was said to wear jewels and other costly ornaments to the value of 30,000*l.*

From the calculations already made, the amount received is about 20,000*l.*; expended, 18,000*l.*, from which, deducting the 6,000*l.* for the erection of the Music-Hall, and there will remain 8,000*l.*

The following is a statement of the number of persons present each day:—

MORNING.		EVENING.
Tuesday	3,400	Tuesday	1,180
Wednesday	5,850	Wednesday	1,894
Thursday	6,123	Thursday	1,470
Friday	5,500	Fancy Ball	2,200

In the morning, after the conclusion of the Festival, the Marquis of Aylesbury presented the Committee with 50*l.*, making the whole receipts 20,250*l.*

No better proof can perhaps be found of the prosperity of the country than that which this Festival exhibits. The sum expended in the purchase of tickets, it has been already stated, exceeds 20,000*l.*; and the expenses of the company in coming to, and returning from, York, and their lodgings and other accommodations and purchases in that city, will add at least 100,000*l.* to that sum for the week's entertainment.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY OF GREAT BRITAIN, and most of the Nobility and Gentry, use now PRINCE'S celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints; but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even eminent medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Grant has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair.—Also a Gentleman, turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark; it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oils it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children, and if used constantly not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair, will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying—'Tell the truth, and fear nobody.' If persons are bald, and the roots are entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone, by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely, if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil—the Ounce Bottle 5s.; a large bottle containing Five Ounces, 1*l.* which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A Prince, No. 9, Poland-Street, Oxford Street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose.—Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as imposters are going about to counting-houses with counterfeit Russia Oil, saying it is the genuine.

BY the KING'S ROYAL PATENT.—GODBOLD'S VEGETABLE BALSAM, the greatest discovery ever found out for Coughs, Consumptions, and Asthmas.—Messrs. N. and S. GODBOLD beg leave to inform the Public, that the Honourable Commissioners of his Majesty's Stamp Office have allowed their names to be printed on the stamps that cover the corks of their VEGETABLE BALSAM, to secure it from fraud. The Purchaser may in consequence rely on its being genuine. The various and sudden changes of the weather at this season of the year are particularly dangerous to the above complaints, the Balsam is therefore strongly recommended to be kept in the house by every family, that is may be taken on the first attack of cold. In that case it never has failed of its usual success, or even in the first stage of a consumption it has restored the patient, and distinguished itself by cures unequalled, under circumstances when numbers of the first medical abilities had consigned their patients to despair, and it is allowed by them to be the only efficacious remedy. Stronger proofs cannot be given, than being recommended by the following nobility:—The Most Noble the Marquis of Lothian, the Right Hon. Viscount Dudley and Ward, the Right Hon. Lords Macdonald, Grantley, Fortescue, Montford, the Right Hon. late Viscountess Dudley and Ward, Dowagers Grantley, Falmouth, and Fortescue, Lady Appreece, Sir Francis Blake, Edward Newnham, John Coghill, George Armstrong, and Robert Peate, Generals Doyle and Dronly, Colonels Baker, Debath, Lenox, &c.—Advice every day from ten to two, at No. 3, Bloomsbury square, where only it is sold at Cost Price, as usual, to the Poor.—Sold Wholesale and Retail, No. 3, Bloomsbury-square; and retail at Messrs. Newbury and Sous, and Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Messrs. Sutton and Co. Bow Church-yard; T. and C. Butler, Cheapside; Sanger, No. 150, Oxford-street; J. & C. Evans, Long-lane, and all principal Venders in town and country, at 18s. the pint, and 9s. the half-pint.—Orders sent to any part of England by coach in quart, three pint, four ditto, and six pints to any part of England applicable to ease stated.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. STIRLING, Chemist, &c. No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel, and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.—Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling," on the Stamp Label, with his own writing.

A REAL BLESSING TO MOTHERS.—There is not, perhaps, in the whole Materia Medica any one remedy which so effectually relieves the pain of a suffering patient as the AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP. Who can watch the writhing tortures into which a lovely infant is often convulsed during the period of dentition, without feeling sympathy for its sufferings? and who would hesitate to procure a remedy, when a remedy can be found, which is obvious by the effectual relief afforded in so many distressing cases which are daily coming to the notice of Mrs. JOHNSON? Therefore, mothers ought never to be with out the American Soothing Syrup in the Nursery; for if a child awakes in the night with pain, by only rubbing the gums with a few drops of the Syrup, it will immediately open the pores, heal the gums, and thereby prevent fevers and convulsions; for should it come in competition with any other disorder, it often destroys the mother's brightest hopes.—To be had wholesail and retail, of Johnson and Co. 28, York-place, City-road; and by their appointment, of all principal Medicine Venders in town and country, at 2s. 9d. per bottle.—None are genuine, unless signed on the stamp with Mrs. Johnson's own hand-writing, as there are several spurious sorts.

BURGESS' ESSENCE OF ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, Corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above:—the general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection, J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;"—others "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.—Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes, having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce—will keep good in all climates.—Warehouse, No. 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish Sauce Warehouse.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are peculiarly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½*d.* and 2s. 9*d.* each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street, and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Hollies street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford street; White, No. 1, and Yarde, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom, Mr. Renard, No. 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

A CHALLENGE FOR 1000 GUINEAS.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER, and PERFUMER, No. 181, FLEET-STREET, (Two Doors from Fetter-lane, claims the honour of announcing that by the urgent request of many distinguished friends, who so highly patronised him while conducting Mr. Money's business, he has opened an Establishment, and respectfully solicits the attention of the connoisseurs in the scientific Art of Hair-cutting. By many years application to this particular department of his profession in London and Paris, he is enabled to introduce a new and peculiar system, never contemplated by the vulgar empirics who presume to call themselves Hair cutters, but who in fact only destroy the head of hair. Moss's style rigidly adhering to fashion, always adapts itself to each particular countenance the grand desideratum, and his intercourse with the Courts of Europe furnishes him with a never failing variety. Moss begs to state that his personal attention, and that of his Chief Artist late with Money, are devoted to Hair-cutting, as he never trusts so important an operation to inexperienced apprentice boys.

The beautiful system of fabricating perukes, scalps, and heads of hair, Secundum Naturam, has claimed Moss's particular attention, and he submits to the Beau Monde an exquisite specimen of talent in his new system of Wig making, every hair is singly inserted, the superfluous of the skin and complexional colours of the head are astonishingly imitated—the whole forming a coup d'œil, the most brilliant and natural, calculated to embellish the charms of youth or cover the deficiencies of age.

Moss has prepared a superlative choice of Ladies' Fronts, on a new system, that always retain their curl. Platts and Curls, in all the variegated Tints and shades of nature, which, with an assortment of French Perfumery, he invites his best friends—the public—to examine. Patent Hair Brushes on Moss's new plan, are ready for the taste of the curious: and for One Thousand Guineas he challenges competition with all Europe in every branch of his Profession.—Vivat Rex et Industria omnia vincit.

FROM LAST N[illegible]'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

War-Office, 23d Sept. 1825.

3d Regiment of Dragoon Guards, E. Wetherel to be Cornet, vice Dundas—9th Regiment of Light Dragoons, Cornet Hon. W. E. Fitz Maurice to be Lieutenant, vice Musgrave—N. Weekes to be Cornet, vice Fitz Maurice—18th Regiment of Foot, Ensign E. K. Young to be Lieutenant, vice Lynar—29th ditto, Lieut. J. Weir to be Captain, vice Pennington; Ensign G. Browne to be Lieutenant, vice Weir; P. S. Fitz Gerald to be Ensign, vice Browne—32d ditto, Ensign F. D. Hodges to be Lieutenant vice Harrison—C. S. Beazley, to be Ensign, vice Hodges—40th ditto, J. Stopford, to be Ensign, vice Floyer—46th ditto, F. W. Martin, to be Ensign, vice Taylor—53d ditto, T. Cargeny, to be Ensign, vice Hill—58th ditto, K. Mackenzie, to be Ensign, vice R. A. Mackenzie—Ceylon Regt., Lieut. W. Keen, from the half-pay of the 97th foot to be Lieut.

Royal Veteran Companies for Service at New South Wales.—To be Captains—Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. Dumaresq, from half-pay 9th foot—Capt. R. Robinson, from half-pay 17th Light Dragoons—Capt. J. D'Arcey, from half-pay 26th foot—To be Lieutenants—Lieut. W. Bell, from the 3d Royal Veteran Battalion—Lieut. J. Warner, from the 1st West India Regt.—Lieut. S. Collins, from the 1st Royal Veteran Battalion—Lieut. R. Travers, from the 2d Royal Veteran Battalion—Lieut. R. Dutton, from the 98th foot—Lieut. J. Sweeny, from the 60th foot.

BANKRUPTS.

W. HARVEY, Islington, surgeon. Sol. Mr. Johnson, Carmarthen-street, Tottenham-court-road.

W. WALKER and T. BAKER, Cannon-street, City, wholesale grocers. Sol. Gadsden and Barlow, Austin Friars.

Z. HULTUM, Catherine court, Tower-hill, merchant. Sol. Messrs. Tomlinson, Thomson, Baker, and Smith, King's Arms-yard, Colman-street.

T. AUGHTIE, Poultry, seal-engraver. Sol. Mr. Webb, Bartlett's-buildings, Holborn.

R. ROBINSON, Saracen's Head, Friday-street, tavern-keeper. Sols. Mr. Fisher, Featherstone-buildings, Holborn.

G. HUDDY, Mark-lane, hop and seed-merchant. Sol. Mr. Robinson, Walbrook

W. J. ROBSON, Oxford-street, grocer. Sol. Messrs. Amory and Coles, Throgmorton-street.

J. EMERSON and S. S. EMERSON, Whitechapel-road, corn-factors. Sol. Mr. C. Eicke, Old Broad-street.

T. TUCKER, High-street, Borough, oilman. Sol. Messrs. Atkins and Davis, Fox Ordinary-court, Nicholas-lane.

J. O. JOHNSON and J. O'CALLAGHAN, Liverpool, merchant, Sol. Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and Faulkener, Bedford-row, London.

N. BYERS, Bath street, Clerkenwell, oilman. Sol. Mr. Harrison, Walbrook buildings, Walbrook.

T. BUTLER, Old Radford, Nottingham, joiner. Sol. Mr. Gregory, Clement's-inn.

J STEVENS, Lime-street, wine-merchant. Sol Sweet, Stokes, and Carr, Basinghall-street.

J. BOOTY, Newport, Isle of Wight, grocer. Sol. Messrs. Ellis, Sons, Walmsley, and Gorton, Chancery-lane.

J. G. M[illegible]LEN and R. ALGER, Change-alley, timber-merchants. Sol. Mr. Godmond, Nicholas-lane, Lombard-street.

DIVIDENDS.

Oct. 17. R. Johnson, Lane-End, Stafford, earthenware-manufacturer.—Oct. 25. T. Ho[illegible]es, Nottingham, corn factor.—Oct. 27. T. Holland, Nottingham, lace-manufacturer.—Oct. 15. J. Tomsey, Beaumont-street, Mary-le-Bone, grocer.—Oct. 1[illegible]. D. Hazard, Hackney, merchant.—Oct. 14. C. Eade, Stowmarket, Suffolk, grocer.—Oct. 15. J. Lancaster, jun. Bethnal-Green-road, butcher.—Oct. 14. C. W. Corfield, Norwich, currier.—Oct. 17. D. Stones and T. Ashworth, York, turners.—Oct. 1[illegible]. [illegible] Pine and E. Davis, Maidstone, millers.

CERTIFICATES.—Oct 15.

T. Borer, Sutton, Surry, horse-dealer.—J. Wright, St. Pancras, cheesemonger.—J. Badcock, Abingdon, Oxford, gentleman.—T. T. Mare, J. E. Mare, and W. Mare, Plymouth, iron-founders.—R. Drury, Park-street, Southwark, brewer.—J. Carter, Hanover-square, milliner.—J. Beazley, Houndsditch, trunk-maker.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

G. Gifford and W. J. Gifford, Gillingham, Kent, grocers.—E. Barham and M. Barham, Bread-street, milliners.—J. Cork and J. Blagg, New Bond-street, silk-mercers.—T. Howard, W. Howard, and S. Howard, jun. New Broad-street, merchants.—H. Parry and T. Jackson, Birmingham, tailors.—M. Howard and W. T. Smith, stock-brokers.—B. Eatly and H. Orum, Sutton, Surry, lime-burners.—S. S. Lawrence and J. Bonner, Hatton-garden, dress-makers.—T. Pope and W. Pope. Bedeque, Prince Edward's Island, ship-builders.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

Whitehall, Sept. 16.

The King has been pleased to constitute and appoint William Brent Brent, Esq. Barrister-at-law, Steward and one of the Judges of His Majesty's Palace Court of Westminster, in the room of Burton Morice, Esq. deceased.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

GIACOMO DONIA, JOHN POOK, and THOMAS SARDY, Colonnade, Haymarket, tavern-keepers, from Sept. 24 to Oct. 29.

BANKRUPTS.

WILLIAM LOW, Wood-street, Cheapside, haberdasher. Sols. Messrs. Van Sandau and Tindale, Dowgate-hill.

SAMUEL FERRY, High-street, Shoreditch, tripeman. Sol. Mr. Brough, Shoreditch.

WILLIAM ADAMS, Wallingford, Berkshire, innkeeper. Sols. Messrs. Williams and White, Lincoln's-inn.

GEORGE LYNAM, Stoke upon-Trent, Staffordshire, flint and colour grinder. Sol. Mr. Edmunds, Chancery-lane.

DAVID CRESWELL, Nottingham, twist-machine-maker. Sols. Messrs. Long and Austen, Gray's-inn.

WILLIAM WHEELHOUSE, Norwich, linen-draper. Sols. Messrs. Taylor, Featherstone-buildings, Holborn.

DIVIDEND.

Oct. 11. W. Lacon, Oswestry, Shropshire, ironmonger.

CERTIFICATES.—Oct. 11.

R. J. Greetham, Liverpool, ship-chandler—J. and S. Waldie, Dalston, Cumberland, manufacturers—H. Congrave, Chapel-street, Edgeware-road, tailor—E. Willington, Birmingham, cabinet-case maker—F. Nicholson, Manchester, corn dealer.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. Stevenson and J. Otley, Sheffield, merchants—T. Evans, H. Christie, and F. Ball, Ilkeston, Derbyshire, bobbin-net machine-manufacturers—R. Dix and C. Edwards, Three-Hammer-alley, Broadway, Southwark, brewers—J. Edleston and G. Lowe, Manchester, manufacturers—E. Place and E. Mullett, Bond-street, Hanover square, dress-makers—E. Furber and W. Makinson, Liverpool, timber-measurers.—J. Brown, W. Harwood, and J. W. Brumby, Nottingham, lace-manufacturers—J. M'Crum and E. Ainsworth, Liverpool, brewers—R. Lovett and F. Moore, Nottingham, lace-manufacturers—D. Trafford and R. Towers, Lincoln, maltsters—J. Kelly and W. Neilson, Leicester, drapers—J. Osmond and J. Brett, Smithfield, beast salesmen—J. Andrews and J. Buckley, Salford, Lancashire, woollen printers—J Thomas and W. Lloyd, Liverpool, ship-brokers—W. D. Moore and T. Hastings, Clement's-lane, dealers in hams.

DONCASTER ST. LEGER.

The Great St. Leger Stakes, of 25 sov. each, for 3 yr. old colts. 8st 2lb., and fillies, 8st. St. Leger Course. (88 sub.)

Mr. Watt's b c. Memnon, by Whisker........................ 1
Mr. Russell's b. c. The Alderman, by Bourbon................ 2

Twenty-eight others started, but were not placed.

Fleur-de-Lis fell (crossed as reports says, by a north country jockey), and over him dropped Zirza, but luckily neither of the riders nor horses were injured. Such was the crowded situation of this race, that Arnall, who rode Brother to Addy, and many others were absolutely obliged to place their knees and legs along the horses' shoulders and necks, having no possible means of riding otherwise. W. Scott rode Memnon. The ground was run in three minutes and twenty-three seconds and a half.

BETTING AT STARTING.

3 to 1 agst. Memnon	12 to 1 agst. Cleveland
6 to 1 —— Homer	17 to 1 —— Addy
5 to 1 —— Redgauntlet	25 to 1 —— Pastime
10 to 1 —— Alderman	1000 to 20 —— Dauntless

 Among the arrivals from Paris we observe the names of those celebrated Hair-cutters and Perruquiers, MONEY and HIPPOLITE, of 13, Fleet-street, who had the honour of attending the Duchess de Berri the Vice Chancellor, and many distinguished personages then visiting Boulogne, after which these fashionable Coeffeurs went on to Paris, and now returned with a large assortment of ornamental hair, of the newest fashion.

To Sail from Gravesend, October 3, and has room for a few Passengers only,

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH [illegible], the fine coppered Ship, PRINCE REGENT, burthen 400 Tons. WIL[illegible] B. LAMB, Commander. Lying in the London Dock. Has very superior [illegible] accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers.—For Freight or Passage apply to [illegible], BAGSTER, and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE TAUGHT IN THREE [illegible] Professor F——, removed from Chancery Lane to 56, High Holborn, [illegible] to give Lessons at home and abroad, with an incomparable success. His s[illegible] a fashionable conversation, so dexterously united with theory, and so agr[illegible], that pupils are warranted to understand it before one month's instruct[illegible] without the trouble of learning by heart.——Furnished apartments, with [illegible] board. Apply at 56, High Holborn, opposite Great Turn Style.

SODA WATER.—WM. CLARK, No. 21, MAIDEN-[illegible] Covent Garden, Soda Water Manufacturer to the Royal Family, most [illegible] informs the Nobility, Gentry, and the public in general, that he man[illegible] the above article of a very superior quality: it is warranted to be f[illegible] metallic impregnations in consequence of its being prepared in glass [illegible] N. B. Superior Jamaica Ginger Beer, and Fine Sparkling Lemonade, [illegible]ttles.) They are warranted to keep good to twelve months.

FOR SEPTEMBER.

THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY's PACKETS start from off the Custom-house or the Tower, for CALAIS, daily, (Sundays excepted);
BOULOGNE, every Wednesday and Saturday;
OSTEND, every Wednesday and Saturday;
HAMBURGH, every other Saturday; 10th and 24th;
YARMOUTH, every Thursday Morning;
MARGATE, every Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at Nine o'clock, and also on every Saturday at Twelve o'clock;
RAMSGATE and BROADSTAIRS, every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at Eight;
NEWHAVEN to DIEPPE every Wednesday and Saturday, calling at Brighton Pier when the weather permits;
RAMSGATE to CALAIS, every Friday, and RAMSGATE to BOULOGNE, every Monday.

For the convenience and safety of the Public, the time of Starting is regulated to secure the entrance of the Packets into the Harbours on arrival.

Full information may be had at the Agents, viz.—Mr. Saunders, Calais and Boulogne, Mr. Chapman, Dieppe; Mr. Crowe, Ostend; Mr. Delaval, Hamburgh; Mr. Galignani, Paris; Messrs. Laws and Son, Yarmouth; Messrs. Squire and Edwards, Norwich; Mr. Carter, Margate; Mr. Black, Lucumbe's Library, Brighton; Mr. Martin, Ramsgate; Bull and Mouth, Western, Coach-office, 40, Regent Circus, Piccadilly; Sharpus, 13, Cockspur street; Middleton, 359, Exeter 'Change, Strand; Steven's Hotel, Bond-street; Brown's, Park-street, Oxford-street; Regent Bazaar, New Road; Murray, 63, Fleet-street, corner of Bouverie-street; at the Custom-house Quay, and at the Company's Office, 24, Crutched Friars.

CHAS. BESSELL, Secretary.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a physician and botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet Market.

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s. The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular PIANO-FORTES; also HARPS, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

 Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, Ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed.—Lessons at home or abroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 104, High Holborn.

EAST INDIA HOUSE, 91, CHEAPSIDE.

WHITRIDGE and Co. are now supplying the Public with TEAS, exactly at the Wholesale Prices:—

BLACK TEAS.	s. d.	GREEN TEAS.	s. d.
Good Congou . . . 5s. 4d. and	5 8	Twankay	7 0
Strong Congou	6 0	Bloom Hyson	8 0
Fine Congou	6 4	Fine Hyson	10 0
Superior Congou	6 8	Young Hyson	10 0
Good Souchong	7 0	Finest Hyson	12 0
Fine Souchong	8 0	Gunpowder . . . 12s. 14s. and	16 0
Superior Souchong	10 0

PRIME MIXED TEA, 6s. 4d.

	s. d.		s. d.
Jamaica Coffee	1 6	Fine Berbice . . . . 2s. 4d. to	2 8
Dutch ditto	2 0	Mocha	3 4

Offices, No. 149, Leadenhall-street, London, Sept. 11, 1825.

IT is evident from recent communications (though numerous convictions took place some time since) that Tea continues to be adulterated with spurious leaves, which at once accounts for the difficulty so generally experienced of purchasing it genuine, or if it happens to be of good quality, at reasonable prices. This, as well as a Combination taking place among nearly all the extensive Tea Dealers, of an injurious public tendency, which the East India Company strongly objected to, and have ineffectually endeavoured to prevent, caused very extensive arrangements to be made by which have been many months in progress, to establish a cheap, regular, and permanent system of supplying the Public with pure Tea and Coffee, upon the principle of reciprocal benefit, which being now completed, are submitted with a firm conviction that the benefits all classes will derive from their adoption will be their best advocates.

THE EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY,

Pure Tea and Coffee, packed in leaden cases of a peculiar kind, to preserve its quality, is delivered to Retail Agents in London, direct from the Company's Ware houses, to sell to the Public for ready money, at a commission of only 5*l.* per cent. (about a third of what is allowed in similar cases) having the price, quality, and Secretary's Signature on each package, to secure its delivery free from adulteration.

Depôts are established throughout ENGLAND—the principal are at

	Bristol, under the management of	Mr. J. Stevens.
	Sheffield	Mr. R. Harrison.
	Leeds	Mr. J. H. Ridsdale.
	Hull	Mr. T. Topping.
	Manchester	Mr. F. J. Glover.
IN SCOTLAND—At	Aberdeen	Mr. J. M'Kay.
	Edinborough	Mr. W. Munro.
	Glasgow	Mr. M. Leslie.
	Lerwick, in Zetland	Mr. J. Leask.
IN IRELAND.—At	Dublin	Mr. J. West.
	Cork	Mr. R. Hardy.
	Waterford	Mr. A. Pope, jun.

and, in a few days, those at Belfast, Athlone, Norwich, Leicester, Newcastle-upon Tyne, Liverpool, Portsmouth, Devonport. Birmingham, and Nottingham, will be opened.

From whence the Retail Agents in these places, and their surrounding districts, will readily obtain supplies for the Public, and always enable the residents in the remote parts of the United Kingdom to purchase Tea and Coffee, free from adulteration, at the reduced rates, as easily and advantageously as in London.

The Company have earnestly endeavoured to enable the working classes to obtain quantities suitable to their means with the same facility as their wealthier neighbours; a measure hitherto deemed unworthy of consideration, though of great importance, from their forming so large a portion of the population, as well as from the necessity of their hard earnings being laid out in the most advantageous manner.

The advantages to be derived by the public from these extensive, liberal, and economical arrangements, are too considerable and obvious to require further commentary; the test by which they can be ascertained—that of comparison—is simple, open to every one, and the East India Tea Company are sure will be conclusive in favour of their pretensions.

TEA.

	lb. s. d.	½ lb. s. d.	¼ lb. s. d.	2 oz. s. d.	1 oz. d.
Bobea	4 9	2 4½	1 2½	0 7½	3¾
Congou	5 3	2 7½	1 4	0 8	4
Ditto	5 11	2 11½	1 6	0 9	4½
Souchong	6 6	3 3	1 7½	0 10	5
Ditto	7 2	3 7	1 9½	0 11	5½
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Fine ditto	10 5	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Pekoe	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Green	7 6	3 9	1 11	0 11½	5¾
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Hyson	8 6	4 3	2 1½	1 1	6½
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Ditto	10 5	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Hyson	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Finest ditto	12 5	6 2½	3 1½	1 7	9½
Gunpowder Hyson	13 1	6 6½	3 3½	1 8	10
Finest ditto	14 4	7 2	3 7	1 10	11

ROASTED COFFEE.

	lb. s. d.	½ lb. s. d.	¼ lb. s. d.	2 oz. s. d.	1 oz. d.
Plantation	1 7	0 9½	0 5	0 2½	1¼
Dutch	1 11	0 11½	0 6	0 3	1½
Fine ditto	2 6	1 3	0 7½	0 4	2
Bourbon	2 10	1 5	0 8½	0 4½	2¼
Turkey	3 2	1 7	0 9½	0 5	2½
Finest ditto	4 2	2 1	1 0½	0 6½	3¼

It is recommended that Coffee be purchased whole berried, as it is as difficult to detect adulteration when ground, as it is easy when otherwise.

Persons wishing to become Agents are to make their applications by letter, (post-paid) to the Depôts, or to

C. Hancock Secy

The following Retail Agents are already appointed:—

Mr. G. Herbert, 88, Cheapside.	Mr. J. Hutton, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.
Mr. Powles, 146, Leadenhall-street.	Mr. W. Thornton, Isleworth.
Mr. F. Ebborn, 121, Grove-street, Camden Town.	Mr. G. Harris, 16, King-street, Westminster.
Mr. J. Douglas, Kentish Town.	Mr. J. D. Bird, 80, Fore street, Cripplegate.
Mr. J. Allen, 11, St. Martin's-le Grand.	Mrs. Land, 26, Warwick-row, Blackfriars-row.
Mr. R. Toms, 146, Edgeware-road, Paddington.	Mr. J. Davall, Woodstock-street, Oxford-street.
Mr. W. K. Foster, 69, Chiswell-street.	Mr. H. Callard, 15, Craven-place, Bayswater.
Mr. J. Spraggen, Gravesend, Kent.	Mr. Holdsworth, 11, York-street, Cambridge-place, Hackney-road.
Mr. J. Bates, 6, Crombie's-row, Commercial-road	T. Hanks, 49, Seymour-street, Euston-sq.
Mr. T. B[illegible] 47, Edgeware-road.	G. Bowen, Harrow.
Mr. M. Arnsby, 5, Staverton-row, Walworth-road.	T. Gould, Fulham.
A. Kay, 101, London-road, Southwark.	116, Goswell-road, opposite the Turn
J. Peach, 10, Garlick-hill, Upper Thames street,

EMMETT'S QUEEN'S GOLD and SILVER-EYED NEEDLES.—T. EMMETT, (late Trott,) Pin, Needle, and Fish-Hook Maker, (by appointment,) to their Majesties, wholesale and retail, No. 27, HOLBORN-HILL, London, Established upwards of a century. Pins of every description. Needles, bead, betweens, blunts, book-binders, carpet, chenille, cotton, cross-stitch, embroidering, glovers, groundowns, harness, lamb'ag, loping, mattress, netting, packing, quilting, rug, saddlers, sail, sharps, surgeon, tambour, veining yarn, &c. Fish-hooks, lines, and tackle; gilt, plated, black, and white Hooks and Eyes. Thimbles, gold, silver, metal, white steel, &c. steel thimbles lined with silver; bodkins, knitting-pins, meshes, cap-pins, quilters, &c. Improved travelling and dressing-cases, with complete fittings; work-boxes, reticules, and needle-cases in tortoise-shell, Morocco and Russia leather, &c.; cutlery; scissors, penknives, razors, tweezers, &c.; combs, fancy, gilt, and steel goods; beads, bracelets, buckles, centres, clasps, cork-screws, ear rings, elastic girdles, neck-chains, necklaces, purse-snaps, reticules, slides, tassels, watch-chains, ditto guards, and every other article in the fancy line; gilt, silvered, and coloured lustre pins, hair pins, needle and brass points; brass, copper, and elastic wire.—A liberal allowance to merchants, captains, and others.

LAST DAYS OF NAPOLEON.—Great Room, Spring Gardens.—MARSHALL'S NEW PERISTREPHIC PANORAMA, with additions lately made, illustrative of all the events that occurred to Bonaparte from the Battle of Waterloo till his death, displaying Thirteen Views of St. Helena, the Battles of Genappe, Trafalgar, &c. The Figures, Ships of War, &c. being on the largest scale, and accompanied by a full Military Band, give a complete sensation of reality—Day exhibitions from 12 to 5.—Evening ditto, by gas, at 7 and half-past 8 o'clock.

FEATHERS, FEATHER-BEDS, and MATTRASSES.—W. TIBBATTS, Feather-bed, Mattrass, Bedstead, and S[illegible] Bedding Manufacturer, No. 330, HIGH HOLBORN, near Chancery-lane, begs leave to return thanks to his Friends and the Public in general, for the very liberal support he has met with, and assures them that no pains shall be spared on his part, to supply them good clean Bedding at fair and moderate prices, not pretending to sell cheaper than other tradesmen; but to sell such goods as will always be a credit to himself, and really serviceable to his customers. W. T. trusts by assiduity and perseverance, and an honourable mode of conducting business, still to merit the favours of a generous and discerning public.—Families Furnishing and Tavern Keepers, will find their advantage.

		l. s. d.		l. s.
Superior stoved best White Goose Feathers		0 3 6			per lb.
Best White Goose	from	0 2 9	to	0 3	do.
Best Grey Goose Feathers	from	0 1 6	to	0 2	do.
Best Poultry	from	0 1 0
White Goose bordered Beds, Bolsters, & Pillows	from	3 10 0	to	7 10	do.
Plain White Goose Beds	from	1 15 0	to	4 0	do.
Flock Beds and Bolsters	from	0 18 0	to	1 5	do.
Good common Mattrasses, with borders	from	0 10 0	to	1 2	do.
Superior White Wool bordered Mattrasses	from	1 15 0	to	3 0	do.
Very best Horse-hair Mattrasses	from	1 15 0	to	3 15	do.

Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.—Feathers and Bed Ticking sold to any quantity.—Old Feather Beds dressed, and Mattrasses re-made, or taken in exchange.

 Bedsteads made to order, but no fixed price, as the Proprietor is determined not to sell trash of any description, and knows, as a man of business, that it is impossible to make Bedsteads at the price some tradesmen advertise.—Schools liberally supplied.

It is the Proprietor's particular request that those families who honour him with their commands, will send their servants, or some trusty friend, to see the Feathers put into the Ticks, and by that means prevent any possibility of being deceived, and have the great advantage of buying their Feathers by weight, so that it will remain entirely with themselves what price they give for Beds.—Persons fearful of not having their Feathers quite dry, may see them put into their Ticks hot from the stove.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS.—Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—Liverpool through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle and Congleton—Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne and Chippenham—Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton and Collumpton—Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford and Dorchester—Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke and Macclesfield—Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston and Garstang.—Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.—Milford Haven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES.—Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—Holyhead (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnal, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock.—Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock—Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning at a quarter before nine—Liverpool (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—Windsor and Eton coaches daily—Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport, every day at five—Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two.—Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four—Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half past five—Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock.—Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—Coventry light 4-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—Chester and Park-Gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight and evening at half-past five o'clock.—Worcester coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock.—Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five.—Tamworth, Atherstone, and Hinchley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock.—Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—Dudley and Stourbridge 4-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening.—Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares.—Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse), through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence; the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours.)—Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning.—Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N. B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

‡†‡ The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5*l*, unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage, to them or their agents—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 16th inst. at Tunbridge Wells, the lady of Henry Alexander, Esq. of a daughter.—On the 20th inst. the lady of John Thornhill, Esq. of a son.

MARRIED.

On the 6th inst. at Bonnington, near Edinburgh, John, eldest son of Robt. Haig, Esq. of Dublin, and grandson of the late Sir Wm. Wolsely, Bart. of Wolsely Hall, Staffordshire, to Jane, third daughter of the late John Haig, Esq of Bonnington.—Same day, Wm. Stirling, Esq. of the Hon. E. I. C. Military Service, to Sibella Pearce, second daughter of Wm. Lamb Hockin, Esq.—On the 13th inst. at Lancaster, Mr John Holden, of Liverpool, solicitor, to Mary Agness, daughter of Mr. John Walmsley, of Lancaster and Demerara.—On the 16th inst. the Rev. George Pearson, Rector of Castle Camps, Cambridgeshire, to Catherine, second daughter of Philip Humberstone, Esq. of Friars, Chester.—On the 17th inst. John Meadows White, Esq. solicitor, Great St. Helen's, London, to Anne, eldest daughter of Robt. Crabtree, Esq. of Halesworth.—On the 19th inst. Beaumont, only son of the late Wm. Atkinson, Esq. to Elizabeth, only daughter of the Rev. J. J. Ellis.

DIED.

On the 23d of July, at his house at Smyrna, Wm. Barker, Esq. at the advanced age of 86.—On the 16th inst. at Ro-hampton, of the hooping-cough, aged 11 months, Helen Jane, the infant daughter of A. Brymer Belcher, Esq.—On the 14th inst. T. Brodie, Esq.—On the 18th inst. Harriet, eldest daughter of R. G. Fricker, Esq.—Same day in the 21st year of his age, James Gunsley, youngest son of Mr. Matson, of Battersea.—On the 19th inst. Mrs. Shearman, aged 51.—On the 13th inst. Ensign Henry Conyngham Coxen, of the 14th Regiment of Foot, late of Croydon.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

ALBION CLUB

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 21. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Tuesday, the Drama of Faustus, with the new Divertisement of the Camp, and the Son-in-Law; Bowkitt, Mr. Harley; Signor Arionelli, Mr. J. Russell.
On Thursday—The Road to Ruin; Old Dornton, Mr. Williams, (from the Theatre Royal, Worthing, his 1st appearance on this stage); Harry Dornton, Mr. Wallack; Goldfinch, Mr. Harley; Sulky, Mr. W. Bennett; the Widow Warren, Mrs. Davison; Sophia, Miss Kelly.
On Saturday—The tragedy of Brutus; Lucius Junius Brutus, Mr. Booth.
On Monday, Oct. 10—The tragic play of Pizarro; Rolla, Mr. Wallack; Elvira, Mrs. Bunn; Cora, Mrs. West.—After which Valentine and Orson.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—On Monday, Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Lock and Key.
On Tuesday—Paul Pry, with Deaf as a Post, and A Roland for an Oliver.
On Wednesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and other Entertainments.
On Thursday—Paul Pry, with the Deaf Lover, and Family Jars.
On Friday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Fliteh of Bacon.
On Saturday—Paul Pry, with Of Age To-morrow.

THEATRE ROYAL, ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE.—On Monday—(32d time) Broken Promises, with a variety of Songs, and Gretna Green.—For the benefit of Mr. Broadhurst.
On Tuesday—(12th and last time this season) The Shepherd Boy, with Free and Easy, and the Rival Soldiers.
On Weduesday—Broken Promises, a Musical Olio, and the Padlock, being the last night of the Company's performing this Season.

ROYAL COBURG THEATRE.—On Monday next will be performed, for the first time, a new grand Melo-Drama, in Three Acts, called THE SICILIAN MOTHER, or the Voice of Nature. After which a new serious Pantomime, called THE ASSASSIN OF SMOLENSKO. To which will be added, a new Burletta, in One Act, called THE AFFECTIONATE SON. The whole to conclude with THE SPY OF THE NEUTRAL GROUND, or the American War in 1780.

FOR THIS WEEK ONLY.

NEW SURREY THEATRE.—On Monday, Oct. 3, and Five following Evenings, the new Melo-Drame, called THE MAID OF VENICE, or the Prophet's Priest. The New Dance, called THE OLD COMMODORE, or Cross Purposes. The extraordinary performances of Monsieur Gouffe, in the ISLAND APE, which continues to attract in the most unprecedented manner, and are received with the most tremendous bursts of applause. The entertainments to conclude with the favourite revived Melo-drame, called THE MAN SLAYER, or Mountain Smugglers.—A New Melo-drame and other novelties are in active preparation, and will speedily be produced.

LAST WEEK BUT ONE.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Mr. DUCROW has the honour of announcing to his Friends and the Public, that his Benefit will take place TO-MORROW EVENING, Monday, October 3, on which occasion he has prepared such entertainments as he presumes are worthy of being offered to them. To give a full opportunity of witnessing his exertions in every branch of the Equestrian Art, he will appear in Four different Scenes, viz The Death of General Jacko, for the first time—The Knights of Palestine, a splendid Scene, with costly Dresses, concluding with a new Quadrille, by the Knights and their Ladies riding their richly caparisoned Palfreys—The Pas de Grace of the Troubadour, on his rapid Courser, and—The paramount feat of the Indian Hunter on his Two wild Horses.
The entertainments to commence at a Quarter past Six, with the Military Spectacle of the BURNING OF MOSCOW, and to conclude with, for the first time, a new melo-dramatic After-piece, called THE FELON'S HATE, or the Valley of Chamouni, with New Scenery, Dresses, &c.
Places for the Boxes to be taken at the Box Office from Ten to Four.
Boxes, 4s.—Pit, 2s.—Gal. 1s.—Doors open at Half-past Five.

EXHIBITION (at No. 8, Soho-square, near the Bazaar) OF MODELS OF THE MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN SWITZERLAND, upon a very large scale, by which the Artist has been enabled to combine the most faithful representatious of the natural grandeur of Swiss scenery, with the most perfect accuracy of detail. That of Mont Blanc, including the Valley of Chamouni, 14 feet by 8, is eminently calculated to give a correct idea of this magnificent object, with its snowy mantles, its extensive glaciers, and the numerous needles by which it is surrounded. Also a Model, upon a large scale, of that wonderful work of Buonaparte's, the Road over Simplon into Italy. One of Mont Righi, with the Valley Goldau, represented in the state of devastation caused by the falling of the Rosberg, in 1806. One of the Passage of St. Gothard and the Devil's Bridge. Also the interesting Passage of Mont Cenis. Models of the Cities of Geneva and Edinburgh; and various others, all executed with due regard to accuracy and effect.—Admission 1s.—Small Models of the above made for Sale.

FOR OCTOBER.

THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY'S PACKETS start from off the Custom-house or the Tower, for CALAIS, every Monday, Weduesday, and Saturday;
BOULOGNE, every Tuesday and Friday;
OSTEND, every Saturday;
HAMBURGH, every other Saturday; being 8th and 22d;
YARNOUTH, every Thursday Morning;
RAMSGATE and BROADSTAIRS, every Wednesday and Saturday, at Eight o'clock;
MARGATE, every Tuesday and Thursday, at Nine o'clock;
NEWHAVEN to DIEPPE every Saturday, calling at BRIGHTON PIER when the weather permits;
RAMSGATE to CALAIS, every Friday;
And RAMSGATE to BOULOGNE, every Monday.

For the convenience and safety of the Public, the time of Starting is regulated to secure the entrance of the Packets into the Harbours on arrival.
Full information may be had at the Agents, viz.—Mr. Saunders, Calais and Boulogne, Mr. Chapman, Dieppe; Mr. Crowe, Ostend, Mr. Delaval, Hamburgh; Mr. Galignani, Paris; Messrs. Laws and Son, Yarmouth; Messrs. Squire and Edwards, Norwich; Mr. Carter, Margate; Mr. Black, Lucumbe's Library, Brighton; Mr. Martin, Ramsgate; Bull and Mouth, Western Coach-office, 40, Regent Circus, Piccadilly; Sharpus, 13, Cockspur street; Middletou, 359, Exeter 'Change, Strand; Steven's Hotel, Bond-street; Brown's, corner of Park-street, Oxford-street; Murray, 63, Fleet-street, corner of Bouverie-street; Regent Bazaar, New Road; at the Custom-house Quay, and at the Company's Office, 24, Critched Friars.
CHAS. BESSELL, Secretary.
N.B.—The Half-yearly Dividend at the rate of 16/. per cent. per annum, together with a Bonus of 7s. per Share, may be received by the Proprietors, at the Company's Office, every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 11 to 3 o'clock. The Transfer Books will be open on the 10th of October.

TRAVELLERS UP THE RHINE and ROTTERDAM are respectfully informed, a line of Steam Packets is already established at Rotterdam, thence up the Rhine to Niemegen, Dusseldorf, and Cologne, and that a communication with them is opened by the LONDON and ROTTERDAM STEAM PACKETS;
KING OF THE NETHERLANDS, Captain John Slater; and QUEEN OF THE NETHERLANDS, Captain John Pearson;
which depart regularly every Wednesday and Saturday from off the Custom-house, at Eight o'clock in the Morning, for the conveyance of Passengers, Carriages, and Luggage to Rotterdam.—For further particulars application to be made to the General Packet Office, 358, Strand; and for securing Beds, to N. W. Symonds, Agent, 7, Crescent, Minories.

A regular Trader.—To succeed the Prince Regent.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine coppered ship, PRINCESS CHARLOTTE, burthen 400 Tons, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander; will load in the London Dock. Has very superior accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers. For Freigbt or Passage apply to BUCKLES, BAGSTER, and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

MONEY.—50*l.* to 5000*l.* to advance upon Bills of Exchange accepted by responsible persons; several sums upon Mortgage and Annuity Loans, also upon every species of convertible property, with the greatest possible privacy, and any Lady or Gentleman, &c. waited upon if wished. Personal communications, from 10 till 5, or letters, post-paid, addressed to Mr. E. H. G. at letter A. No. 8, Carlton Chambers, Regent-street, Pall-mall, will meet immediate attention.

ADVANCES of MONEY to any amount to Gentlemen, Ladies, &c.—The advertiser will advance any sum of money, for a short or long period, to any respectable person that may require temporary aid upon deposit of valuable Property, Plate, Jewels, Pictures, &c.; the greatest secrecy will be met with. Letters, post-paid, addressed to C. S. B. at No. 6, Royal Arcade, Pall-mall, will be replied to immediately from the residence of the advertiser, and any person waited upon if wished.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	1	6
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6
(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)
The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	6
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.
CHERRY RIPE (second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.
The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.
Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular PIANO-FORTES; also HARPS, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.
 Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street,

By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries	sung by	Mr. Braham,	2s.
What blissful visions	ditto,		2s.
Thus lowly bending	Mr. Atkins,		2s.
Blest light of heaven	Chorus,		2s.
Now bid with our joyous	ditto,		2s.
Silly woman	Miss Paton,		2s.
Sire, to me	ditto,		2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision	ditto,		2s.
Where now are flown	Miss Hamilton,		2s.
Whilst here in anguish	ditto,		2s.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet	Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton,		2s.
Evening now softly closing, ditto	Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton,		2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio	Patou, Boden, and Thorne,		2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto	Paton, Hamilton, and Boden,		2s.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stepheus, also	Miss Paton,	Is. 6d.
Why didst thou leave me ditto	ditto,	2s.
Oh, turn again on me love ditto	ditto,	2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow ditto	ditto,	1s. 6d.
My morning prayer ditto	ditto,	1s. 6d.
In young life's morning	Mr. Thorne,	2s.
Her I love so dearly	Mr. Broadhurst,	2s.
Though sorrow may come	Miss Stephens,	2s.
In such a bustle	Miss Kelly,	2s.
Oh, I could weep	Mr. Thorne,	2s.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variation, 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
4. Kelvin grove, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
5. Love, good night, variations, 2s. 6d.
6. Green grow the rushes, O! do. 2s. 6d.

This day is published, the Eighth Edition, corrected, price 3s. 6d. bound,

A NEW SET of FRENCH IDIOMATICAL PHRASES and FAMILIAR DIALOGUES, in which the most necessary Words are introduced under their respective Constructions, and with the several relations they bear to each other. A work intended to promote the practical knowledge of the French Language, and designed for the Use of Schools. To which is prefixed a Compendious Vocabulary,

By M. DES CARRIETES.

London: Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker; Longman and Co.; C. and J. Rivington; Baldwin and Co.; Boosey and Son; and J. Souter.

This day is published, in 12mo. the Fourteentb Edition, Corrected and Illustrated with Maps, price 4s. 6d. bound,

GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY, selected by a Lady, for the Use of her own Children.

London: Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker; Longman and Co.; Baldwin and Co.; Hamilton and Co.; Harvey and Co.; C. and J. Rivington; J. M. Richardson; Simpkin and Co.; Sherwood and Co.; Boosey and Sons; Baker and Co.; and J. Souter.

This day is published, in 12mo. Seventb Edition, Corrected and Improved, Price 3s. 6d. bound,

THE ELEMENTS OF READING; being Select and Easy Lessons, in Prose and Verse, for Young Readers of both Sexes.
By the Rev. J. ADAMS, A. M.

London: Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker; Longman and Co.: C. and J. Rivingtou; Harding and Co.; Hamilton and Co.; Simpkin and Co.; J. Souter; and Baker and Co.

Also, by the same Author,

2. A History of Great Britain to 1825, on the plan of Dr. Henry. Sixth Edition, 12mo, 4s. 6d. bound.
3. A History of Rome, from the Foundation to the Subversion of the Eastern Empire, 12mo. 4s. 6d. bound.
4. Elements of Useful Knowledge; comprehending Short Systems of Mechanical, Natural, and Experimental Philosophy. Fifth Edition, 12mo. 6s. bouud.
5. Lectiones Selectæ; or Select Latin Lessons in Morality, History, and Biography. Eleventh Edition, 18mo. 1s. bound.
6. Select Latin Lessons; being a Translation of Lectiones Selectæ. Ninth Edition, 18mo. 1s. bound.

WINES AT REDUCED PRICES FOR CASH ONLY.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

	per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s. to 30s.
Ditto, Crusted	36s. to 42s.
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s. to 56s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s. to 36s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s. to 48s.
Madeira, West India	36s. to 42s
Ditto, East India	48s. to 60s.
Bucellas	36s. to 42s.
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s. to 36s.
Claret, St. Julien	48s.
Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s. to 96s.
Sparkling Champagne	72s. to 84s.
Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s.
St. Peray, dry and spark	72s.
Chablis	63s.
Hermitage, Red and White	96s.
Moselle, Santerne, &c.	60s.

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.
Superior Gin, 14s.; Jamaica Rum, 15s.; Brandy, 25s. per gallon—Six Dozen packed ina hogshead gratis—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder, Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

THE ALLIANCE BRITISH and FOREIGN LIFE and FIRE ASSURANCE COMPANY, 4, New-court, St. Swithin's-lane.
Established by Act of Parliament.—Capital 5,000,000*l.* sterling.

PRESIDENTS.
John Irving, Esq. M. P.
Francis Baring, Esq. | N. M. Rothschild, Esq.
Samuel Gurney, Esq. | Moses Montefiore, Esq.

DIRECTORS.
J. Alexander, Esq. M. P. | C. Greenwood, Esq.
G. H. Barnett, Esq. | J. Heygate, jun. Esq.
Charles Bevan, Esq. | Wm. Howard, Esq.
John Bowden, Esq. | J. Innes, Esq. M. P.
Archibald Campbell, Esq. | Wm Kay, Esq.
William Crawford, Esq. | Oswald Smith, Esq.
Timothy A. Curtis, Esq. | H. M. Thornton, Esq.
Francis Cresswell, Jun. Esq. | Thos. Wilson, Esq.

AUDITORS.
T. Fowell Buxton, Esq. M. P.—C. Campbell, Esq.—T. Masterman, Esq.
Bankers—Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Smiths—Messrs. Hoare, Barnett, and Co.
Actuary—Benjamin Gompertz, Esq. F.R.S.
Secretary—Andrew Hamilton, Esq.
Physician—John R. Hume, M.D. Curzon-street.
Counsel—Lancelot Shadwell, Esq.
Solicitor—John M. Pearce, Esq.
Surveyor—Thomas Allason, Esq. Percy-street, Bedford-square.
Office in Pall Mall

The Company beg to intimate than on Monday next, the 3d of October, they will be ready to transact business at their NEW OFFICE, No. 8, Pall Mall, opposite Carlton House, on the same terms as at their Office in the City. Hours of business from ten to four o'clock.

REDUCTION OF PREMIUM.

The Company have resolved to make the following Reduction in the Rates of Premium hitherto charged on the three common Classes of Fire Assurances. This Reduction will equally apply to Assurances in London, and throughout the country, except in special cases:—

1st Class is reduced from 2s. to 1s. 6d. per cent.
2d - - - 3s. to 2s. 6d.
3d - - - - 5s. to 4s. 6d.

By Order of the Board,
A. HAMILTON, Secretary.
New Court, St. Swithin's-lane, Sept. 28, 1825.

GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.—Fire, Lives, and Annuities.—PALL MALL and CORNHILL.

DIRECTORS.
SIR GEORGE ABERCROMBIE ROBINSON, BART. CHAIRMAN.
JOSEPH DORIN, ESQ. DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.

WILLIAM ABBOTT, Esq. | EDWARD GRIDSHIP, Esq.
CHARLES R. BARKER, Esq. | ISAAC L. GOLDSMID, Esq.
THOMAS BARROW, Esq. | MATTHEW ISAACKE, Esq.
JONATHAN BIRCH, Esq. | JOHN LATHAM, M. D.
THOMAS BLAIR, Esq. | JOHN NEAVE, Esq.
SIR C. CHICKERELL, BART. M. P. | WILLIAM PHILLIMORE, Esq.
THOMAS COLES, Esq. | FREDERICK JOHN PIGOU, Esq.
BOYCE COMBE, Esq. | PHILIP RIPLEY, Esq.
JOHN FAIRLIE, Esq. | SIR WALTER STIRLING, BART.
GEORGE FRASER, Esq. | JAMES TADDY, Esq.
GEORGE CARR GLYN, Esq. | EDWARD VAUX, Esq.

Capital ONE MILLION Sterling, the whole paid up and invested, thereby affording to the Proprietors security against further calls, and to the assured an immediate available fund for the payment of the most extensive losses.
This Company have determined to make a Reduction of Premium on the three ordinary classes of Fire Insurance, not confining it to the Country Risks, and the Villages and Districts in the outskirts of the Metropolis, and to private Dwelling-houses only in the best situations within it, but extending it generally throughout London, as well as through the country, in England and Scotland, so as to include this plain and intelligible proposition, that all Policies of those Classes hitherto charged at—

2s. are reduced to 1s. 6d. per cent. per annum.
3s. - - - 2s. 6d.
5s. - - - 4s. 6d.

The Company's Agents are instructed to make the same Reductions, but Farming Stock, if insured without specification, will still be charged 2s. per cent. If a sum is specified on Stock in each Building, and in each Stack-yard, or with an average clause, it may be reduced to 1s. 6d. per cent.
No Policy to be entitled to Reduction unless the Premium amounts to 5s.

By Order of the Board,
London, Sept. 20, 1825. JOHN CHARLES DENHAM, Secretary.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House, (Manufactory, 54, Crutched Friars,) respectfully return their best thanks to the Public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit their future favours, by CONTINUING TO SELL SUPERIOR MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assemblage of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, after the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage; likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, wind-up, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.
The LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, stair-case, and gallery railing, balconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and bookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and no abatement.—Stoves and Ranges set, in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in Exchange.

RICHARDSON, GOODLUCK, and Co. respectfully acquaint their Friends and the Public, that the Lottery will be decided in on day, 18th of this Month. The Scheme contains

SIX Prizes of £20,000,

Besides numerous other Capitals. There are no Blanks, as every number will have 5/.—Tickets and Shares, chances for the above prizes, all to be decided the 18th of October, are selling by Richardson, Goodluck, and Co. at their office, 104, corner of Bank Buildings, Cornhill

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. HOSE, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

TO PERSONS FURNISHING HOUSES, PRIVATE FAMILIES, &c.—DEPOT, 75, LONG-ACRE.—Families, &c. will realise a considerable saving by purchasing at this Establishment, where a variety of useful articles are constantly on sale at least 20 per cent. under the regular trade prices. For immediate disposal, 100 dozen capital Steel Table Knives and Forks, 7s. 6d. per dozen; likewise a variety of Ivory-handle Table Knives, at similar low prices. In Fire-irons, some at 5s. 9d. the set; very handsome Polished Steel, 10s. 6d. such as are usually charged 18s.; a variety of Metal and other Tea-pots, Candlesticks, Snuffers, Trays, &c. A quantity of elegant Tea-trays in Iron and Paper, some rich cut-glass Dessert Services, Decanters, Wine-glasses, Tumblers, and Salts, with a variety of Plated Articles of superior quality, with entire silver edges and mounts.—Observe, 75, Long-Acre, a few doors from Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 24s. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3*l.* 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s. to 14s. Merchants and Captains who expect the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,
At J. ALBERT'S, TAILOR and DRAPER,
47, Fish street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, Ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed.—Lessons at home or abroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 104, High Holborn.

FASHIONABLE INTELLIGENCE.

Friday evening his Majesty entertained the following distinguished characters at dinner:—

Their Royal Highnesses the Princess Augusta and the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke of Dorset, and the Marquis and Marchioness of Conyngham, Earl and Countess Mount Charles, Lord A. Conyngham, Lord St. Helens, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. A. Stanhope, Sir W. Keppple, Sir W. Knighton, Sir E. Nagle, and Col. Thornton.

At seven o'clock the party entered the suite of rooms extending the south front of the Royal lodge, which were most tastefully illuminated and decorated, when a superb banquet was served up. At a quarter before nine the private band of his Majesty was stationed in the Conservatory, from which time until eleven they entertained his Majesty and guests with their performance of some choice pieces from the new operas of Il Crociato in Egitto, Preciosa, &c. and the grand Coronation Chorus, which was particularly admired. Shortly after eleven o'clock their Royal Highnesses the Princess Augusta and the Duchess of Gloucester took leave of his Majesty, and returned to Frogmore Lodge.

The Duke of York had a Levee on Tuesday, at his Office, in the Horse Guards. The following General, and about thirty other Officers, purposed paying their respects to his Royal Highness:—Major-General Cumming, Lieut.-General Bayly, Major-General Mackie, General de Steigner, General Hompesch, Lieut.-General Sir Henry Ward, and Viscount Strangford.

The Cabinet Ministers assembled Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock, at the Foreign Office, and continued in deliberation for four hours, not separating till five o'clock. The Ministers present were, the Duke of Wellington, the Earls of Liverpool, Westmorland, Bathurst, and Harrowby, Mr. Secretary Peel, Mr. Secretary Canning, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Viscount Melville, Lord Bexley, Mr. Huskisson, Mr. Wynn, &c. After the breaking up of the Cabinet, the Chancellor of the Exchequer left town for Beckenham.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Menai Bridge.—About sixty yards of this great work now appear suspended from the main chains, and, from the active exertions making, there is every probability of the whole being completed in about two months.

The Journals of Amsterdam and Brussels have been much occupied lately with the details of a curious scene which occurred about a fortnight ago at the theatre of the Hague. An actor of the name of Edward, being received with groans and hisses, for some time made head against the storm; but finding that the public were determined not to hear him, he advanced to the lamps, made a profound bow, and retired. On this the tumult redoubled, and Edward was loudly called for, and required to ask pardon on his knees, which he very properly refused to do.

The new Bishop of Salisbury has announced his first ordination to take place in November, when the candidates are to be examined as to their qualifications in reading the Liturgy and the delivery of Sermons, by Commissioners appointed for that purpose.

Upwards of 60,000 persons are said to have arrived at Margate this season by the different steam packets.

Trade with the Netherlands.—From the Agent to Lloyd's at Antwerp, dated 24th inst.:—"Sir, I have the satisfaction to acquaint you, for the information of the Underwriters of Lloyd's, and the British ship-owners, that henceforth British vessels trading to this city are only chargeable with the same pilotage dues as those under the Netherlands or Dutch flag, being a reduction of 25s. on payments hitherto exacted. (Signed) "A. ELLERMAN,

"H. B. M. Pro Consul."

"To John Bennett, Esq. Secretary to Lloyd's"

Mr. Meredith, the wealthy stable-keeper, who is in the 65th year of his age, and rides thirteen stone, undertook on Friday morning to ride four horses from Reading to Knightsbridge park-gates, calculated at thirty-six miles, by the Windsor Forest road, in two hours and a quarter. He started upon Bacchanalian, a fleet and strong hunter, and performed ten miles, to the beginning of Bracknal, Berks, in 35 minutes 10 seconds He rode the second horse, eight miles, to the top of the hill at Virginia Water, in 27 min. 13 sec. when the sporting Milton found horses. The third horse brought the equestrian eleven miles through Hounslow, in 40 min. 12 sec.; and the fourth horse the remaining seven miles, in 24 min. 20 sec., winning well. Total, 2 hours 5 minutes 55 seconds. The match was for 100 sovereigns.

It is reported that Austria is about to establish a cordon sanitaire in Dalmatia and Friouli, to keep out the plague which has burst out in Greece.—Journal de la Belgique.

On Saturday last, about one o'clock, as a girl, about eight years of age, the daughter of Mr. Thwaites, hatter, of the Commercial road, was crossing the road in returning from school, she was run down by the Blackwall stage. The horses went over her, when, momentarily drawing up her feet close to her body, the stage likewise passed over her without doing her the least injury except a slight bruise on the toe

The following anecdote will show that the Americans are not the first architects who have constructed ships of an unwieldy size:—"So early as about the years 1538, a ship of 2,000 tons burden was built at Havre de Grace. The cables were of the thickness of a middle-sized man's leg. It had a tennis-court and windmill. It was called La Grande Française, and was designed for the East Indies: but such was the trouble and labour in getting it to the end of the pier, that it was ordered to be hauled up the harbour again, and there pulled to pieces. Its materials served for the building of a great many houses."—The Marquis de Courtenraux' Expedition.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

FORGERY.

Bow-street.—On Saturday Major Berger, alias De Clifford, was examined for the third time before G. R. Minshull, Esq. on a charge of forgery.

The following new evidence was then produced:—

Joseph Green, the supposed drawer of the checque on which the information was founded, was called.

Mr. Humphreys, who appeared for the prisoner, objected that his evidence could not be received, because it would not be admissible at the trial, from his being an interested witness.

Mr. Minshull said he should not admit Mr. J. Green as a witness, because his being an interested witness would prevent his admission at the time of the trial.

George Downe was then called—I am the principal waiter at the Colonnade Hotel, in Charles-street, St. James's-square. I have seen the prisoner come there in company with a young man named Peckham. There was a short young man with him on one occasion, whose name I do not know; he was not the witness Johnson, who has been shown to me. The prisoner then passed by the name of De Clifford. There was present on that occasion a young man, about 14 or 15 years of age. I don't think it was the witness Johnson.

The hearing all the evidence with which the prosecutors were prepared, the whole of the evidence already produced was read over to the respective witnesses.

Mr. Humphreys submitted that there was no evidence confirmatory of the witness Johnson, who was an accomplice; he therefore thought that the Magistrate would not commit on these proofs.

Mr. Bodkin submitted, on the other hand, that the evidence of the other witnesses had materially confirmed the statement of the accomplice.

Mr. Minshull said he should certainly commit on this evidence, but he was in doubt whether to commit immediately, or defer it till another day.

Mr. Humphreys said that the most convenient course, under all circumstances, was, that the prisoner should be brought up again for re-examination.

Mr. Minshull then agreed to the proposition of Mr. Humphreys, and the prisoner was removed from the bar.

Marlborough-street.—On Saturday Mr. Harnett, the Attorney, of No. 29, Northumberland-street, Strand, came before Mr. Conant, Sir George Farrant and Mr. Roe, the Sitting Magistrates, and complained of a letter which had appeared that day in the Morning Chronicle, which he held in his hand. The letter was annexed to a report from this Office, of the committal of John Burton Lane, the apprentice of Mr. Spilsbury, the chief witness against Muirhead, for having enlisted for a soldier, and is as follows:—

"No. 29, Northumberland-street, Strand.

"Sir—From a very close intimacy for more than fifty years with the unfortunate J. G. Muirhead, Esq. I can most truly and faithfully assure, that he is one of the best, most hospitable, and benevolent men living. If really he is guilty of the indecencies laid to his charge, I more pity than blame him. Alas! we are all, even the best of us, poor, weak, imperfect creatures; and let him who, laying his hand upon his heart, can say I am unconscious of any secret sin, throw the first stone at poor Muirhead. You, my good Sir, have it in your power to perform a praiseworthy action, by saving that poor, infirm man, seventy-eight years of age, from shame; your apprentice, the chief evidence against him, is in custody, and your bail for his appearance on the day of trial is eighty pounds. Now, good Sir, if by any means you can contrive to get him out of custody, and let him enlist to go abroad, I willingly, as an old friend of Mr. Muirhead's, take upon myself, not only to reimburse you the 80*l.* but to add 500*l.* as a present. As there is nothing unworthy a perfectly honest man in what I propose, and which you may with perfect propriety accede to, I shall expect your written answer; after which, should we agree, I shall appoint an interview somewhere out of town, to avoid being interrupted.

"Address to me as above.

"Yours, &c. "JO. EVANS, sen.

"Mr. Spilsbury, 1, Poland-street, Broad-st. Golden-square."

Mr. Conant asked him of what part of the statement he complained?

Mr. Harnett—I complain, Sir, of the letter which is addressed from 29, Northumberland-street, Strand, which is my residence; I have lived eight years in that house in respectability; I have a family of children; I have no lodgers in my house, nor have I any client named Joseph Evans; and nothing could equal my surprise and indignation on receiving a letter from a friend of mine, Captain Cooper, with the Morning Chronicle of this day, informing me of the publication of that abominable production. I never knew Muirhead, or saw him in my life, and I felt it to be my duty to come forward and disavow all knowledge of the production until I saw it in the newspaper. I therefore request that the Magistrates will allow me to see the letter, to enable me to trace the author, for I have strong grounds to believe that the fabricator of the letter is a person connected with the public press, attending at this office, whom I have sued for a debt.

The Magistrates expressed very great surprise at the statement, and cast a very significant glance at the Reporters present.

Mr. H. continued—I wish to see the letter.

Mr. Conant handed the letter to Mr. Harnett, who instantly said that he believed he could produce letters of the same hand-writing.

Mr. Roe—Pray, Sir, who are you? (addressing himself to Mr. Harnett.)

Mr. Harnett—I am James Harnett, an attorney, of 29, Northumberland-street, Strand.

Mr. Roe—Perhaps you will have no objection to write on paper a copy of the two or three first lines of the letter.

Mr. Harnett said certainly not, and instantly wrote several lines, which, on being compared with the original letter, were found to be very dissimilar.

Mr. Harnett observed to Mr. Roe, while he was comparing the handwriting, "I see, Sir, the motive you had in view in asking me to write; I despise the insinuation it conveys—I feel very much obliged to you."

The Magistrate denied that he had insinuated any thing at all injurious to the character of Mr. Harnett.

Mr. Conant said, he would be greatly obliged to Mr. Haruett, if he would call upon him with the anonymous letters which he stated he had by him, and which he believed had been written by the same person who wrote the letter in question.

Mr. Harnett promised to call on an early day.

Mr. Roe referred to the London Directory, and found there was a Mr. Joseph Evans, a master tailor, residing at 25, Northumberland-street, Strand.

Mr. Harnett said that he had a neighbour of that name, whom he was not on terms of intimacy with, but, from his known respectability, he did not believe he could be the author of the letter to Mr. Spilsbury. He would, however, take the trouble to go to him instantly with a friend, and make an inquiry upon the subject.

In about an hour afterwards Mr. Joseph Evans, a man of very respectable appearance, with his hair powdered, came into the office with Mr. Harnett and two other gentlemen. Mr. Evans said that he never heard of the letter till Mr. Harnett called upon him with the newspaper, and as he was the only Joseph Evans in that street, he was fearful his friends might suppose that he was the writer, and that the No. 29, was merely an error in the printing. He was anxious to express his abhorrence of the production, which was the fabrication of some wicked person. Mr. Evans, at the Magistrates' request, wrote his name and address on a sheet of paper, but the writing did not at all resemble that of the alleged fabrication.

The Magistrates expressed themselves perfectly satisfied with the statements of the parties, and after Mr. Harnett had made some private communication relative to the adoption of some means for the detection of the writer of the letter, this mysterious affair terminated.—Plank, the officer, was ordered to keep possession of the letter.

Lane, the evidence against Muirhead, will remain in custody until the trial comes on at the ensuing Westminster Sessions.

Guildhall.—A poor fellow, named George Canes, a sort of little pig-jobber, was brought up on Tuesday before Mr. Alderman Wood, the sitting magistrate, on a charge of felony, under which he had been detained in custody the whole of the previous night.

The facts of the case, when stated before the magistrate, were these:—One Ragan, a pig-jobber, had come up from Ilford, to the Smithfield market on Monday, and in the course of his business had purchased of a stranger in the market, for which he was to pay 6*l.* 18*s.* After the bargain had been concluded and the seller gone away, Ragan discovered that he had paid him 9*l.* 18*s.* instead of 6*l.* 18*s.* He knew neither the name, the residence, nor even the person he had been dealing with. The prisoner Canes, however, though unacquainted with the stranger's name, was well acquainted with his person as a frequenter of the market, and thought he knew where to find him; and, in consequence, Ragan agreed to give him 3*s.* to hunt the man out, and get the three sovereigns returned. In both of these commissions Canes succeeded, but as his clue was somewhat imperfect, and it had cost him upwards of four hours, and taken him a circuit of nearly twenty miles, to find his man, he thought himself entitled, on his return, to a greater reward than 3*s.* more especially as he had lost all that he should have earned in that time in the market, and had also been obliged to treat the man with 1*s.* worth of liquor before he would return the sovereigns. Ragan, however, would have nothing but the bond, and persisted that he was only entitled to the 3*s.* Canes being equally positive as to his extra demand, and beginning to regale himself with some liquor, by changing one of the sovereigns, Ragan became alarmed, and getting a constable, gaves Canes into custody upon a charge of felony.

On hearing this statement, Mr. Alderman Wood observed it was really too great a stretch of authority to detain the man in custody under such circumstances. There was no pretence whatever for charging him with a felony; and he must therefore be immediately set at liberty. As to the sum he was entitled to for his trouble, he, of course, had no authority to interfere; he should, however, think that 3*s.* was much too little, and that he had fairly earned at least double that sum. Ragan was content to take the magistrate's hint, and Canes accordingly returned him the balance, after deducting the 6*s.*

A respectable-looking, middle-aged man, who gave his name Stephen Hawke Cathcart, the principal clerk to an eminent solicitor in the vicinity of Finsbury-square, was charged with an assault of a rather aggravated nature. The complainant, Edward Bromley, a boot-maker residing in Leicester-street, Regent-street, stated that he was passing through Fleet-street about eleven o'clock on the previous night with his wife, who is far advanced in pregnancy, when one of the wretched females who infest that thoroughfare struck Mrs. B. a violent blow on the back. The act was one of sheer wantonness, and fearing a repetition of it, he turned round to expostulate with the woman. This brought a crowd instantly around them, and the prisoner, who had a female of the same grade upon his arm, pressing through, demanded in an imperious tone to know what was the matter. Witness told him it was nothing that concerned him, to which he replied that he would make it something that should concern him, and seizing the witness by the collar, at the same time put in two smart blows upon his breast. A watchman now came up, and he was about to give the girl who had caused the affray into custody, but was prevented by the prisoner immediately ordering the watchman to take charge of him. The girl then slunk off, and he was accordingly led to the watch-house of St. Dunstan's. The officer of the night, however, had the good sense to dismiss the complaint of the prisoner, and receive his present charge for the assault. The defendant said, that seeing the mob collected, he came up to ascertain what was the cause. Upon reaching the spot, the complainant first attacked him, and he in consequence gave him in charge. He admitted that he had been drinking rather freely.—Mr. Alderman Heygate considered this an aggravated assault, and said, that unless Mr. Cathcart made an apology, he should call upon him to find bail. The complainant consented to receive an apology. He considered the defendant's conduct as an act of drunken officiousness, and if he had apologised on the previous evening, he might have gone about his business. The defendant said he would give bail. Several opportunities for accommodation were offered, but Mr. Cathcart said he would give bail, and which he obtained.

Ann Southgate, a woman of decent appearance, was brought before Alderman Cox, on a sort of a mixed charge of being disorderly, and with endeavouring to pass bad money.

The woman, in answer to the charge, said that she was a servant in a boarding-house at Margate, and worked hard to support a family of seven small children. A few days since she received a letter from the person who had the care of an infant daughter in Fetter-lane, stating that the child was dangerously ill, and desiring her to come up to town immediately to see it. She accordingly came and arrived in London by one of the Margate boats, very late in the evening, and feeling herself faint by the journey, she stopped at the tap of the White Horse Cellar in Fetter-lane, to take a draught of porter before she went into the nurse's house. The tap, she said, was a very awkward place for a lone female to go into, and finding a person waiting there, she sent him in with a shilling to fetch her a pint of porter to the gate; that person soon returned, saying the landlord had refused to take the shilling, as being a bad one, and she gave him another which was returned for the same reason, and at the same time the master of the house sent for a watchman and had her given into custody. She was then taken to the watch-house without being suffered to go to see her child, and had been kept a prisoner ever since.

Mr. Alderman Cox asked the watchman if there was any thing disorderly in the conduct of the woman.

The watchman said he saw nothing; he had been told that she wanted drink to be brought her in the street.

The Alderman.—Well, that may be so; you heard her reason for that, which is not improbable. Where is the landlord of this public-house?

The watchman said he had promised to attend, but he had not.

The Alderman.—And was the money she offered bad? Where is it?

The watchman produced the money, and on its being examined, both the shillings turned out to be perfectly good.

The Alderman.—Really this poor woman has been very harshly treated, there does not seem to be the slightest pretence for taking her into custody. The landlord of this tap ought to be prosecuted for false imprisonment.

The poor woman said she felt the case harder, as when she was taken into custody she did not know but that her dear child was dying, and yet she was not permitted to go near it, although that was the only reason for her coming to town.

The Magistrate directed the landlord of the tap to be summoned to attend, and said, if he failed in explaining his conduct satisfactorily, he (the Magistrate) would direct the City Solicitor to commence a prosecution against him.

The case was dismissed, with instructions to Mrs. Southgate to attend the next day (Tuesday); but when the parties were called, Mr. Jones, the landlord, was not present, and the matter was ordered to stand over till to-morrow (Wednesday.)

Marylebone-Office.—Tuesday, one of the overseers of the parish of Harrow, applied to Mr. Griffiths, the sitting Magistrate, for a warrant against the husband of a woman who accompanied him to the office, for having deserted her.

The applicant stated to the Magistrate that the young woman had been but a short time married, and her husband, who was in a situation, and was able to grant her necessary support, had deserted her, in consequence of which she had applied to the overseers of her parish for relief. The husband being alive, and living in London, he thought it to be his duty to apprehend the husband, and for that purpose he applied to him (Mr. Griffiths) for a warrant.

Mr. Griffiths.—From what parish have you brought the young woman?

Overseer?—I have brought her from the parish of Harrow this morning.

Mr. Griffiths asked him why he had brought her so great a distance, when there were Magistrates residing there to whom he could apply for the warrant?

The Overseer replied that the Magistrates were all out.

Mr. Griffiths called upon the young woman, who appeared to be in a delicate state of health, to explain her own case.

She stated that her husband was a carter in the employ of Mr Treble, of Marylebone-lane, and that he had left her, and refused to lend her the least assistance, and complete distress urged her to apply to the parish.

Mr. Griffiths.—Have you any family?—She answered that she had not, but she was very unhealthy, and unable to procure her own living.

Mr. Griffiths conceived that it was a case in which he could not interfere, but recommended her to apply to Mr. Treble, her husband's master, who probably would, on having the circumstances of her case explained, cause her husband to render her assistance out of his wages.

The Overseer did not feel satisfied with the view which Mr. Griffiths took of the case, and said, that this was a case of desertion, where the wife became chargeable to her parish, and he wished to have a warrant issued against the husband to have him apprehended.

Mr. Griffiths again informed him, that it was a case in which he could not interfere; and said, that as there were Magistrates in the parish of Harrow, they were the persons to whom he could and ought to apply, and recommended him to do so.

The Overseer said that he had come all the way to town with a view of getting a warrant against the husband, who was actually living in the parish of Marylebone, and enjoying a salary, out of which he refused to grant his wife any support; and he thought he was entitled to a warrant.

Mr. Griffiths.—What relief have you given her? How long have you supported her?

Overseer.—Oh! we have given her nothing yet.

Mr. Griffiths.—What; no parochial relief at all!

Overseer.—No; certainly not.

Mr. Griffiths.—Then I cannot interfere; the woman has not become chargeable, and I have nothing to do with it.

Overseer.—I consider that as we have accepted her, she has become chargeable, and therefore we have a right to complain against the husband, and have him taken into custody on a warrant.

Mr. Griffiths.—Oh no! you have no such right. Such a doctrine would be nonsensical. You have been foolishly advised.

Overseer.—Why, Sir, our opinion is, that having once accepted her, she became chargeable, whether she has relief or not.

Mr. Griffiths (laughing).—No, no; that is all nonsense. You must first of all give her relief, before you can proceed against the husband, or compel him to support her.

The Overseer still seemed to think that he had a right to have a warrant.

Mr. Griffiths.—Well; I have told you that I have nothing to do with it. You had better apply to your own magistrates at Harrow, and I dare say they may know better.

ACCIDENTS, OFFENCES, &c.

Wounded Intestines.—A few nights since, a young girl of the name of Mary Brien, while driving some cows to water, about two miles from the town of Tralee, received a slight stab in the left side of the belly, from the point of one of their horns, which threw her into a ditch, and the greater part of the intestines and mesentery rushed out through the opening. On examination, one of the intestines was found to be slightly wounded, and bits of hay strewed on the surface of others, which being carefully removed, it was found impossible to reduce them through the narrow opening, which was obliged to be considerably enlarged. With great difficulty and much perseverance, owing to the struggles and screams of the girl, the final reduction of the entire of the protruded parts was effected, and the wound brought together. She was attacked with alarming symptoms that night, which were subdued with appropriate remedies, and the girl is now perfectly convalescent, being one of the most extraordinary cases of the kind on record, of recovering after such an accident. The girl's mother is dead, and her father was buried the day before this accident occurred.—Tralee Paper.

Burnt to Death.—A person of the name of James Holt, who resided in Silver-street, Hulme, was burnt to death in the following dreadful manner:—He was extremely decrepid, and on this occasion, we believe, not quite sober. About seven o'clock in the evening he was left alone in the house by his wife, who went to market; and in a short time afterwards a neighbour, who went into the house to get a little water, saw him putting tobacco into a pipe as if he was about to light it. In a few minutes afterwards, a man who had occasion to go to the house opened the door, and saw, as he supposed, a log of wood lying on the fire, but, on a closer inspection, he was dreadfully shocked to find that it was the unfortunate master of the house, who, it appears, in attempting to light his pipe, had fallen with his left side upon the grate, and was unable to extricate himself from this dreadful situation. The man removed him from the fire, but he was so much burnt as to be quite insensible, and died in about an hour afterwards. An inquest was held on the body last night, at the Blue Ball, Hulme, when the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death."—Manchester Advertiser.

Last Saturday evening, as Mr. John Beard, eldest son of T. Beard, Esq. of Rottingdean, was riding at a very moderate pace, on the road leading to Kemp-town, Brighton, his horse fell, and threw him with great violence, and pitched him on his head, without his hat, which had fallen off; his skull was so dreadfully fractured, that he died about two hours afterwards, though medical skill was promptly called to his assistance. It is only five weeks ago, this day, that we announced in our paper the marriage of the unfortunate deceased gentleman to a very amiable young lady, now, alas! a widow.—Sussex Advertiser.

About four o'clock on Sunday morning, a fire of a most alarming nature broke out in the large drug-mills and rock-salt warehouses of Mr. F. Andrews, in Lamb-alley, Sun-street, Bishopsgate-street; and, from the quality of the property on the premises, and the density of the buildings immediately behind Mr. Andrews's warehouses, nothing short of a total destruction of the whole neighbourhood was anticipated. It would appear that the fire broke out in the back part of Mr. Andrews's premises, where the drug-mills and steam-engines were situate; and this part of the buildings burnt with a fury that defied the exertions of the fire-men and engines, aided by a plentiful supply of water—as it was found impossible, from the closeness of the adjoining houses, for some distance from the seat of the fire, to get engines so close to the rear of the premises as would be desirable. In a short time, the whole of the drug-mills, steam-engines, and apparatus, fell in with a tremendous crash, to the imminent danger of a large timber-yard immediately adjoining, belonging to Mr. Bateman, the timber-merchant, in Sun-street.

Tuesday, about noon, two houses in New Round-court, Strand, fell in with a tremendous crash. Happily their unsound condition was previously known, and they had been in consequence, for some time past, uninhabited. Beyond, therefore, the almost suffocating clouds of dust which the fall occasioned, and the alarm which it naturally excited, the neighbourhood sustained no other damage. The dust arose in such quantities, as at a distance to be mistaken for fire, which instantly brought several engines to the spot.

Tuesday morning an unfortunate wretch, who was convicted at the London Sessions of stealing a quantity of lead from some buildings in Fleet-market, was publicly whipped at the cart's tail, from the corner of Fleet-street to the end of George-alley, Fleet-market, in the presence of thousands of spectators. He was a man of colour, named Courtland. Previous to his being tied to the cart, a man stripped, and offered to undergo the punishment for the black. Upon being refused, he poured forth a volume of abuse ou Mr. Cope, the City Marshal.

Dreadful Suicide.—Mr. Ram, a respectable woollen-draper and tailor, many years resident at Witham, on Friday morning last destroyed himself by cutting his throat with a razor, in the presence of his wife and daughter. Mr. Ram had been indisposed for a short time, accompanied with lowness of spirits, insomuch that a delicate hint had been communicated by his medical attendant, that great caution of his person was necessary, and be had, in consequence, been closely watched. The previous day he had attended a parish meeting. On the fatal morning, Mr. Ram remained in bed, but apparently not more indisposed than usual. Mrs. Ram had risen to provide him with some tea; on her entering the room, the unfortunate man was at the instant getting hastily into bed, having, as it since appears, unlocked a drawer in which he found the deadly instrument. He took the tea, but instead of drinking it, he bit a piece out of the saucer, and having diverted the attention of Mrs. Ram and one of his daughters to something at another part of the room, he committed the act of suicide so effectually, that notwithstanding he survived ten minutes, all the medical skill in the world could not have rescued him from the jaws of death. Mr. Ram had been married to his second respectable wife but a few months, who was the widow of the late Mr. Barwell, of Witham, butcher, and who had taken upon herself the heavy charge of eight children, we believe all girls, by his first wife, who was a Miss Staggs, the daughter of inhabitants of this town. Mr. Ram has left considerable property in estates, having made a number of purchases within a short period, and built many houses. Whether his speculations have been prudent or not, we have yet to learn; they were not so extensive, however, but if he had made known his difficulties, if any existed, he had friends who would have assisted him in removing them; he was the purchaser of one of the estates of the late William Waltham, Esq., sold a short time since at the Saracen's Head Inn, in this town, under the directions of the Court of Chancery, in which sales it is not customary to take a deposit. A Coroner's Inquest was held on Saturday, before William Codd, Esq. and a very respectable jury, when a verdict was returned of "Insanity."—Essex Herald.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

CALAMITOUS SUICIDE.

Monday, a Coroner's Inquisition was taken at the Cadogan Arms Tavern, Sloane-street, Chelsea, before Thomas Stirling, Esq., the Coroner, on the body of F. Tolfrey, Esq., a gentleman of fortune, who put a period to his existence under the following distressing circumstances:—

James Sadler, servant to the deceased, stated, that on Saturday night, between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock, as he was going to bed, he was called by his mistress, who desired him to go down stairs and call his master, who she was afraid had been taken ill. Witness accordingly went down, and on his reaching the passage, he was shocked to find his master lying on the ground, with his head reclining on his son's shoulder; the blood was running copiously from a wound in his throat, and a razor was lying on the floor near the deceased. The deceased's son, Mr. Tolfrey, jun., appeared distracted at his father's situation, and on seeing witness, he ran up stairs apparently in a state of delirium; witness instantly gave the alarm through the house, and others coming to his assistance, he ran out and procured a medical gentleman of the name of Morrah, residing at the corner of Hans-street, who immediately attended; however, his lamented master was too far gone, and at the expiration of about 25 minutes from the first discovery of the dreadful act, the deceased expired in witness's arms. Previous to the deceased's dissolution he intimated to witness by signs, that he wished for ink and paper, which being supplied him, the deceased, in the agonies of death, wrote a few almost unintelligible words, which witness (being accustomed to the deceased's hand-writing) read as follows:—"My beloved Mary, forgive me, pray for me, I am going—Oh, God!" This was produced before the jury, who were wholly unable to decipher the characters, but who expressed themselves satisfied as to the meaning given by the witness.

Mr. William Morrah, the surgeon, was next examined. He stated that on the night in question he was fetched by the last witness to attend the deceased. Witness found him lying in the hall, supported by one of his servants, and most of the family surrounding in a state of distraction; witness instantly examined the deceased; a large cut, apparently done by a sharp instrument, was across the throat, and the carotid artery had an incision in it; several other minor arteries were divided; witness took up the whole, and afterwards sewed up the main incision; at this time the deceased was in a complete state of exhaustion, in consequence of the immense quantity of blood which had issued from the carotid artery before his arrival. At first witness had some hopes of the deceased, but feeling his pulse, he found it nearly extinct, and that the deceased was on the eve of eternity. Witness, by every possible means, endeavoured to preserve existence, by opening the temporal arteries, fomenting the bowels, extremities, and other parts, as also violent internal restoratives; but his exertions proved abortive, as the deceased sunk and died about thirty minutes after his being called in. The deceased died in consequence of the wound which was inflicted in his throat.

Mr. Whitfield, the Foreman of the Jury, binted to the Coroner and his brother Jurymen, whether it would not be advisable to have the son examined, to ascertain what state of mind the deceased was in, some time previous to his committing the act.

The Coroner said, that if it was possible to avoid calling in Mr. Tolfrey, jun. it would be best, as it must necessarily torture his feelings; he (the Coroner) thought that the deceased had destroyed himself whilst labouring under insanity; but if the Jury thought that gentleman's evidence necessary, he should be sent for.

The Jury, however, said his presence would be dispensed with, as the evidence of Sadler had perfectly satisfied them, and after a few minutes' consideration they returned a verdict, "that the deceased had destroyed himself while in a fit of temporary derangement."

BRUTAL ASSAULT.

Yesterday, at ten o'clock, Mr. Stirling, and a respectable Jury, assembled at the Bunch of Grapes public-house, Castle-street East, Marylabonne, to inquire into the cause of the death of Simon Sullivan, an infant child, whose death was alleged to have been caused by a kick given to its mother before its birth.

Mary Sullivan, a decent-looking married woman, residing at No. 12, Adam and Eve-court, Oxford-street, was the first witness examined. She deposed that the deceased child was born on Wednesday morning last, and died on Saturday morning at eight o'clock. On Monday evening the witness, her husband, Mary Sullivan (the womau injured) and her husband, and also another man and woman, went to a public-house on Saffron-hill, where a Catholic club for the relief of poor Irish children was held; they all subscribed something, and having drank a pot or two of porter, were on their return bome, and when between Rathbone-place and Newman-street, Oxford-steet, their husbands being some distance in advauce, three men came up to them, one saying "Here's one a-piece;" one of the men seized her hy the gown, and pulled her about; the man's companions did the same with the others. The witness begged them to desist, at the same time saying, her husband and his friends were on before. The men still behaved rudely; one of them, who is named Alfred Flowers, took the sick woman by the arm, and dragged her on some distance, until her husband came up, and asked him what he was about, when Alfred Flowers struck him; he returned the blow, and they had a scuffle. The witness ran away and joined her husband, but returned again, aud met the sick woman, Mary Sullivan, who is her sister-in-law, staggering on the pavement. The witness asked her what was the matter; she replied, "the baker," meaning Alfred Flowers, "had kicked her." The witness perceived she was bleeding, and assisted her to the watch-house; the men ran away. The witness was sober, and so were her friends; they had given no offence whatever to the men, either by word or deed. The witness heard the men's names were Alfred and Edward Flowers, and Gotterall, and were all relations.

Daniel Sullivan, the husband of the injured woman, and father of the deceased child, stated, on his wife's being attacked he came to her assistance, and was struck by Alfred Flowers; he returned the blow, and had a round or two with the man; the fight abruptly terminated, and the man ran away with his (witness's) hat, and while witness was looking about he lost sight of him; on again seeing his wife, sbe was sitting on the curb-stone crying, and said the man (Alfred Flowers) had kicked her on the lower part of the abdomen. She was in a dreadful state, and is so still.

Mr. Thomas Denton, of Castle-street, surgeon, stated he had attended the wife of last witness from Tuesday morning last. On his first seeing her she was not in labour. See was seized with labour about the middle of Tuesday, and the child was born about two o'clock on Wednesday morning; it was decidedly a premature birth. The witness is of opinion, that the premature labour was produced from the injury received by the kick. The woman is not now in a dangerous state.

William Firth, watchman of Oxford-street, proved having received into his custody Alfred Flowers, who is still in custody, and all the others.

After hearing the foregoing, the Jury proceeded to take the evidence of the mother of the deceased, who was unable to be removed; but her evidence was a mere repetition of what had been already stated; and the Jury having returned to their room, the Coroner addressed them at considerable length, and explained the nature of the law as it respected murder and manslaugbter. The room was then cleared for their deliberation. In a few minutes they announced their verdict to be—"Manslaughter against Alfred Flowers, having by a kick caused a premature birth and death of the infant."

The witnesses were then bound over to prosecute.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others.—By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS; they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, for a Superior Beverage is produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared, that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths; it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

Sold Retail by all Grocers and Druggists in the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. Matthias Robinson and Co. No. 64, Red Rion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words Robinson's Patent, the Royal Arms, and the signature of Matts. Robinson, are affixed to each Package, as none others are genuine.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are peculiarly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street, and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, No. 1, and Yarde, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom, Mr. Renard, No. 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a physician and botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's Vegetable Medicine has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet Market.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. Stirling, Chemist, &c. No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel, and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.—Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling," on the Stamp Label, with his own writing.

BURGESS' ESSENCE OF ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, Corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the Original, to observe the Name and Address corresound with the above;—the general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection, J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;"—others "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.—Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes, having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce—will keep good in all climates.—Warehouse, No. 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish Sauce Warehouse.

EMMETT'S QUEEN'S GOLD and SILVER-EYED NEEDLES.—T. EMMETT, (late Trott,) Pin, Needle, and Fish-Hook Maker, (by appointment,) to their Majesties, wholesale and retail, No. 27, HOLBORN-HILL, London, Established upwards of a century. Pins of every description. Needles, bead, betweens, blunts, book-binders, carpet, chenille, cottoning, cross-stitch, embroidering, glovers, groundowns, harness, lambing, looping, mattress, netting, packing, quilting, rug, sadllers, sail, sharps, surgeon, tambour, veining yarn, &c. Fish-hooks, lines, and tackle; gilt, plated, black, and white Hooks and Eyes. Thimbles, gold, silver, metal, white steel, &c. steel thimbles lined with silver; bodkins, knitting pins, meshes, cap-pins, quilters, &c. Improved travelling and dressing-cases, with complete fittings; work-boxes, reticules, and needle-cases in tortoise-shell, Morocco and Russia leather, &c.; cutlery; scissors, penknives, razors, tweezers, &c.; combs, fancy, gilt, and steel goods; beads, bracelets, buckles, centres, clasps, cork-screws, ear rings, elastic girdles, neck-chains, necklaces, purse-snaps, reticules, slides, tassels, watch-chains, ditto guards, and every other article in the fancy line; gilt, silvered, and coloured lustre pins, hair pins, needle and brass points; brass, copper, and elastic wire.—A liberal allowance to merchants, captains, and others.

A CHALLENGE FOR 1000 GUINEAS.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER, and PERFUMER, No. 183, FLEET-STREET, (Two Doors from Letter-lane, claims the honour of announcing that by the urgent request of many distinguished friends, who so highly patronised him while conducting Mr. Money's business, he has opened an Establishment, and respectfully solicits the attention of the connoisseurs in the scientific Art of Hair-cutting. By many years application to this particular department of his profession in London and Paris, he is enabled to introduce a new and peculiar system, never contemplated by the vulgar empirics who presume to call themselves Hair cutters, but who in fact only destroy the head of hair. Moss's style rigidly adhering to fashion, always adapts itself to each particular countenance (the grand desideratum), and his intercourse with the Courts of Europe furnishes him with a never failing variety. Moss begs to state that his personal attention, and that of his Chief Artist (late with Money), are devoted to Hair-cutting, as he never trusts so important an operation to inexperienced apprentice boys.

The beautiful system of fabricating perukes, scalps, and heads of hair, Secundum Naturam, has claimed Moss's particular attention, and he submits to the Beau Monde an exquisite specimen of talent in his new system of Wig making, veery hair is singly inserted, the superfices of the skin and complexional colours of the head are astonishingly imitated—the whole forming a coup dœil, the most brilliant and natural, calculated to embellish the charms of youth or cover the deficiencies of age.

Moss has prepared a superlative choice of Ladies' Fronts, on a new system, that always retain their curl. Platts and Curls, in all the variegated Tints and Shades of nature, which, with an assortment of French Perfumery, he invites his best friends—the public—to examine. Patent Hair Brushes on Moss's new plan, are ready for the taste of the curious; and for One Thousand Guineas he challenges competition with all Europe in every branch of his Professiou.—Vivat Rex et industria omnia vincit.

MOURNING.

DR. WINN's TRUE ANTICARDIUM PARIS BLACK or BLUE REVIVER, which is so much esteemed for its excellent qualities and superiority over all other Compositions that have been offered to the Public. It has the wonderful effect of restoring, in a few minutes, every description of Ladies and Gentlemen's faded Mourning, Black Hats and Coats, Silk Stockings, Crape, Lace, Silks, Muslins, Cotton, Jean Boots, &c. without injuring the texture of the most delicate article; it removes dirt and grease, will retain its virtues in all climates, and for any length of time.

T. PRICE, Oilman, near the Bricklayer's Arms, Kent-road, London, begs leave to assure persons who constantly use the above Article for restoring Gentlemen's faded Suits, that he is the sole possessor of the Receipt for preparing the invaluable and justly celebrated Mourning Reviver; and, as a proof of its rare and excellent qualities, begs to state, that he has had the most unprecedented demand for it during the last 20 years.

May be had at the Proprietor's Oil and Colour Warehouse; and, Wholesale, of Messrs. T. and C. Butler, 4, Cheapside, and 220, Regent-street, London; 20, Waterloo-place, Edinburgh; and 34, Sackville-street, Dublin; at Messrs. Barclay and Son's Medicine Warehouse, Fleet-market; Mr. Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Messrs. Sutton and Co. Bow Church-yard; and, Retail, by all the principal Oilmen, Druggists, &c. in Town and Country.

A REAL BLESSING TO MOTHERS.—There is not perhaps, in the whole Materia Medica any one remedy which so effectually relieves the pain of a sufferiug patient as the AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP. Who can watch the writhing tortures into which a lovely infant is often convulsed during the period of dentition, without feeling sympathy for its sufferings? and who would hesitate to procure a remedy, when a remedy can be found, which is obvious by the effectual relief afforded in so many distressing cases which are daily coming to the notice of Mrs. JOHNSON? Therefore, mothers ought never to be without the American Soothing Syrup in the Nursery; for if a child awakes in the night with pain, by only rubbing the gums with a few drops of the Syrup, it will immediately open the pores, heal the gums, and thereby prevent fevers and convulsions; for should it come in competition with any other disorder, it often destroys the most brightest hopes.—To be had wholesail and retail, of Johnson and Co. 28, York-place, City road; and by their appointment, of all principal Medicine Venders in town and country, at 2s. 9d. per bottle.—None are genuine, unless signed on the stamp with Mrs. Johnson's own hand-writing, as there are several spurious sorts.

☞ For Promotions, see last Page.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are obliged to MEMNON, and are glad to see by his communication that he has not "trained off." He must excuse the trifling alteration which, for the sake of poetic effect, we have been induced to make in his lines.

We have nothing to do with the blunders of the MORNING HERALD, committed in last Monday's notice of the Drama of FAUSTUS, on the NOVELTY of Mr. WALLACK'S appearance in that character, though we are equally obliged to AMICUS: but we shall beg leave to observe to the Editor of that Paper, that if he thinks it worth his while to insert any articles which have appeared in the AGE without the common courtesy of acknowledgment, we shall look upon it in the light it deserves, and issue a PERSONAL notice on the subject accordingly. If he or his contemporaries are fearful of aiding us by avowedly quoting from us, they should not be mean enough to do it, in a manner that would lead the people to think the fun, as well as the nonsense, in that sagacious journal, was ALL ITS OWN.

The letter from WORCESTER, relative to the announcement of Mr. ROBINSON, as a candidate at any future election, has been received, and we differ with its writer on the subject of LORD DEERHURST'S return; for in the agitation of a public question of such importance as the representation of the country, private character is less to be considered than public principles, and as far as the two present Members are concerned, the politics of COLONEL DAVIES possess about the same respectability as the character of his lordship. We KNOW DAVIES did not vote FOR the Catholics, because through actual fear of his constituents HE DID NOT VOTE AT ALL!! Any thing is fair as an election squib, and therefore ROBINSON is quite right, as our Correspondent says, to give his Worcester friends "a full, true, and particular account" of the indictment of LORD DEERHURST, this time twelvemonth, at Portsmouth, FOR A LITTLE exposition to some boys there!! Every one knows DEERHURST'S precious propensities this way, and will agree that they ought to be EXPOSED, quite as much as their exhibitor.

NEWS is thanked, but we had heard the remark relative to MISS CHESTER'S marriage; for a friend was in her room, and actually heard her say, that she was convinced the AGE would not be severe upon her, if its Editor knew her situation with Mr CALCRAFT. We know another person who says he had actually heard its truth SWORN TO, and we shall therefore give her PROPER title for the future.

The ribaldry going on in the Haymarket Green-room, sent us by PERCY, cannot well come under our cognizance. Those who wish to avoid the indelicacies of LISTON'S conversation, or the impudent inuendos of Mrs. GLOVER, should cut the company of all people avowedly addicted to drinking, and scandalizing every person of character, without considering the EXACT PURITY of their own.

The joke of LENO on Mrs. SERRES is very stale, and if the old lady SHOULD be sent to Bedlam, rather unfeeling.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. shut.	Bank Stock, shut.
Cons. Three per Cents. 88	Long Annuities, shut.
Three and a half per Cents. shut.	India Stock,
3½ per Cents. Reduced shut.	India Bonds, 15
Four per Cents. 102⅞	Exch. Bills (1½*d.*) par.
Consols for Acc. 88⅛ 8 ⅛

PRICE OF FOREIGN STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Austrian 5 per Cents.	Mexican Bonds,
Brazilian Bonds,	Mexican Scrip, dis.
Brazilian Scrip, dis.	Neapolitan 5 per Cents.
Ditto Ditto (1825) dis.	Neapolitan Scrip, dis.
Buenos Ayres Bonds, 83	Peruvian Bonds, 67½
Chilian 6 per Cents. 74	Peruvian Scrip, dis.
Colombian 6 per Cents.	Portuguese Bonds,
Ditto Ditto (1824) 74½	Prussian 5 per Cents.
Danish 5 per Cents.	New ditto,
French 5 per Cents.	Russian 5 per Cents. 93½
French Rents,	Spanish 5 per Cents. (1818) 16½
Greek Bonds, 30½	Spanish ditto (1823)
Greek Scrip., 23¼ dis.	Guatimala, dis.

THE AGE.

LONDON, OCTOBER 2.

The Euphrates, which sailed from Bengal on the 20th of April, and from St. Helena on the 6th of August, has arrived, bringing home the particulars of the important capture of Arracan, the circumstances of which great achievement, we were partially possessed of by the arrival of the Albion, on board of which the late MR. ADAMS died. We have given in another part of our paper the details of these events; we have only to sum up the general movements attendant thereon, by which it appears, that on the 26th of March, General MORRISON attacked the enemy, posted on the Padoaah Hills, drove them from the pass, and advanced to within a mile of Mahatee. On the 27th Colonel W. RICHARDS's brigade was employed in the attack of a strong position at M hatee, where the Burmese were entrenched on the opposite bank of a river. The troops forded the river, and gallantly carried the position, with the loss of two or three men killed. On the 28th the force halted. On the 29th it advanced about seven miles, and came in sight of the very strong position taken up by the enemy for the defence of Arracan. It was a range of hills almost inaccessible in front from swamps, the summits being cleared and entrenched. An attack on these heights was conducted by Brig.-Gen. M'BEAN on the 29th, but it failed, in consequence of the extreme difficulty of ascending the heights, and the successful resistance of the enemy in rolling down stones. Our loss on this occasion was one officer, Capt. French, of the Madras 16th Regiment, killed; Major Kemm, Captain Fitton, and some other officers, wounded; about 30 men killed and 100 wounded. On the 30th batteries were opened on the enemy's works, and on the evening of the 31st arrangements were made to attack a fortified height, which was the key of their position. Brigadier RICHARDS, with a part of his Brigade, consisting of detachments from his Majesty's 44th Regiment and from the 26th and 49th Regiments of Native Infantry, were employed on this service, which was performed entirely with the bayonet, without firing a shot, and announced to the camp by striking up the British drums and fifes from the summit.

During the night reinforcements, and two guns, were sent up to Brigadier RICHARDS, and on the morning of the 1st instant a general attack was made on all the enemy's works, which were carried with admirable bravery in an hour, the Sepoys vying with their fellow-soldiers of his Majesty's service in pushing on after the defeated enemy. The 26th regiment is said to have been particularly distinguished in this gallant exploit, the native officers being anxious to deserve the approbation of their Brigadier, who had formerly belonged to that corps.

THE Whigs are quite bad enough as it is, if merely left to the display of their political feelings, but when, for the purpose of furthering their object, they mix up religious discussions with their miserable party spirit, it is high time to give them a check. The principles upon which BROUGHAM and his adherents, in the last Session, seriously introduced the subject of a LONDON COLLEGE, has been acted throughout the country in a most miraculous way, and every post brings us either an account of the meetings of all the shop-boys in the country, who not being quite knaves enough already, are conniving to cheat their employers out of so many hours of time, merely to indulge in all the vices of the age, under the shallow pretence of study and mental improvement—or the particulars of some assembly for the establishment of schools, reading, or Bible Societies, and other such bombastic affairs. As far as regards those men, who are now defrauding, by such employment, comparatively helpless females of their situations behind counters, to dispose of those articles with which from knowledge and delicacy they are of course best acquainted, we can only say, we wish a little time was given them for study, or at least reflection, and they might then be convinced of the contemptible duties in which they are now engaged; and instead of seeking for the self-occupation of a few more hours a week to indulge in those worldly amusements which will only render their situations more degrading, they would rather enlist as common soldiers, than bear any longer such a disgusting onus. This spirit after all is but a portion of the same feeling, which pervades the entire counsels of the Whigs—that attempt to equalize all branches of society—to convince the menials, ordained to fulfil the necessary duties of life, of their destitute situation, and to excite them into a notion of ameliorating it—that determination to level all classes of the community, and almost at last to make your horse rebel against its rider—and when every other exertion to effect such purpose has completely failed, why, as the last effort, RELIGION is sure to be laid hold as a never-failing operative on the minds of the weak, or the dispositions of persons very easily prejudiced!

We are led into this train of argument by an announcement in Wednesday's Chronicle, of a meeting lately held at Birmingham, for the purpose of establishing an INFANT SUNDAY SCHOOL! in that already enlightened town, by which our youngsters just swaddled are to become perfect proficients, imbibe the rudiments of the classics with every spoonful of pap, and like a second Hercules, turn out giants in their cradles. The moralizing LORD CALTHORPE figured away in the chair on this sublime occasion, surrounded by a sufficient quantity of Doctors, Parsons, Methodists, and Quakers; and considering both the RELIGIOUS and POLITICAL purposes HIS LORDSHIP came there to advocate, no fitter person could probably be found, than an avowed enemy to the Ministry, a superintendant of RELIGIOUS TRASH SOCIETIES, and a firm supporter of CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION. But in order that we may not do injustice either to His Lordships attainments or principles, we submit the following extract of his speech, which served as a prelude to the morning's entertainments:

"Lord CALTHORPE, in opening the business of the meeting, said, he felt peculiar satisfaction on this occasion; for since he had the opportunity of witnessing the great advantages derived from infant schools in other parts of the kingdom—how beneficial their effects had been even in country villages—he felt a strong desire that a place circumstanced like this, requiring, from the nature of its manufactures, that children of an early age should be engaged in occupations little consistent with RECEIVING THE ADVANTAGES OF EDUCATION, should possess an Institution, by means of which, at the earliest periods of their lives, they might receive moral and religious instruction."

Now it certainly must be very satisfactory to establish an infant school in a place "whose manufactures," to use his LORDSHIP'S OWN WORDS, "engaged children in occupations little consistent with receiving EDUCATION!" but his LORDSHIP is quite as good further on, where he says,—

"It was, therefore, with peculiar satisfaction he found this plan had engaged the interest of so many respectable individuals of this town, and that the plans were so far matured, that one school at least would be formed here for the education of INFANTS. He was persuaded, that if any now entertained doubts as to the propriety and expediency of bringing children at so early an age to school, those doubts would vanish, when they had only witnessed the effects produced, and the wonderful progress of the children, and at what an early period they are susceptible of receiving impressions of a beneficial and salutary nature. This Institution, besides producing the effect of withdrawing children in the lower spheres of life from the scenes of vice, idleness, and corruption, to which they are so frequently exposed, would be the means of their receiving moral and religious instruction in a mode which combined pleasure with profit."

At which latter idea, of RELIGION combining pleasure and PROFIT, the Methodist preachers present gave considerable applause to their noble Chairman, who then delivered the following sublime touch, and sat down:

"He was convinced if such had been the effect of infant schools in other places, that here, in particular, they would be found the instruments for producing immense benefits, and he thought there was no man, however he might wish for the diffusion of the manufacturing interest and commercial greatness of this empire, that could well reconcile with the promotion of those manufactures, and the stimulating of that industry for which this country was so celebrated, a coldness and indifference to an institution so fruitful in beneficial effects to the younger part of the population. Where manufactures were formed, infant schools appear to be peculiarly fitting antidotes to the evils which a high state of manufacturing activity generally produced, unless guarded by such institutions as they were about to establish."

After a Mr. STARCH, or some such name, had read a Report of the Committee, and given a hint of what funds might be wanted, a DOCTOR EDWARD JOHNSTONE thus delivered himself:—

"The reason why infant schools had not been before established, was owing to the idea that instruction was not to be communicated at so early an age, but it had now been FOUND THAT IT MIGHT BE SO, and with great beneficial effect. If they considered that it was from the impressions of sense we must derive intellect, it was of the utmost importance that they should enable THE MINDS OF INFANTS to take large and PLEASING surveys of nature, and thence to lead them to the knowledge of the Great Creator. These, however, were advantages which could ONLY be received in the higher classes of life. In the houses of manufacturing labourers, where every thing was unpleasant and confined, associations of this kind could not be expected to be formed, and it was only by drawing the children from those scenes to others, where they might have opportunities of viewing the beauties of Nature, that they could receive the education and imbibe those impressions necessary to their comfort and happiness in future life."

DOCTOR E. JOHNSTONE by this important discovery—that knowledge may be communicated at an early age, and that consequently the MINDS of infants might take LARGE and pleasing surveys of HUMAN NATURE, will undoubtedly be handed down to posterity, equal in learning and fame to his illustrious namesake and neighbour, the great SAMUEL of Litchfield; and when the DOCTOR further tells us, that it is only in the HIGHER WALKS of life where INFANTS can VIEW the beauties of Nature, we are at a loss in whose favour to decide, the LORD's or the DOCTOR's, both of whom we conclude are of course SPECIMENS of infantine EDUCATION. The next and most important point was an exposition of the objects proposed for the enlightening the minds of the baby button-makers, which is thus stated by the Rev. Mr. Hodgson:—

"The objects of the institution were first, to preserve the children from evil, and save them from the numerous accidents daily caused by the neglect which always took place among the poorer classes, from the want of parental superintendence. When young children were sent to a day-school, where every little was really learnt—they were crowded together into some damp and dark apartments where they were kept all day in a state of unnatural restraint; no judicious mode of instruction was pursued; and he conceived that nothing could be more injurious to the children than the system of sending them to day-schools, as they were at present regulated. If their objects were merely negative, in keeping children from the dangers and bad moral effects occasioned by the present manner in which they were brought up, these he should consider as great advantages; but they also proposed positive advantages in a great variety of ways. The paramount objects to which they attended were health and activity. A spacious PLAY-GROUND would be attached to the school, which would consist of a large room, in which the children were not kept sitting still, but a great part of the time was devoted to exercise. At nine o'clock the instruction of the day began with the Lord's Prayer, or some appropriate hymn. They then went to their lessons, none of which were too long to cause fatigue, then half an hour was devoted to exercise in marching them about the room, in different manners, as they were ordered, and in doing this they acquired the habit of OBEDIENCE, which of itself constituted one of the great moral duties. There was, however, a still greater benefit to be acquired. Man was a mortal being—he had an immortal soul to be lost or saved—and the great thing in the education of youth was to instil into their infant minds the principles of religion, and to teach them to know, remember, reverence, and love the Immortal Being, to whom they must at last render an account of their actions."

HODGSON's mode of educating infants is capital fun—they are, it seems, to have a PLAY-GROUND attached to the SCHOOL, where they are not to be kept sitting still, but after saying the Lord's prayer, they are to march about, in order to acquire habits of OBEDIENCE; from which the common inference of course is, that they will all turn out private soldiers. After this amusing piece of information, the REVEREND MR. HODGSON was followed by the REVEREND MR. JAMES, and here we must be permitted to expatiate on the extraordinary circumstances under which religion and politics now become blended together, as will be fully demonstrated in a perusal of the following tirade from this reverend personage.

"The Rev. J. A. JAMES, in seconding the Resolution, said he was happy in meeting his Lordship in a situation which he had so frequently seen him occupy in forwarding the cause of religion and humanity; that it appeared as if they were growing into a holy familiarity in the cause of righteousness. Infant schools had long been a desideratum in this town. Some time ago he was for many months employed in looking out for a building where the experiment might be tried, a benevolent gentleman of this town having offered to support an infant school in Birmingham six months at his own expense. It would be presumptuous in him, after what had been said, to think he could throw one new ray of light upon this mode of education; he considered it to be all that was wanting to complete the grand moral machinery now at work in our highly favoured land. He rejoiced that education was the watchword of this country—he rejoiced in the projection of a Metropolitan College, and considered it as a singular coincidence, that at a time when that institution was forming in London for the instruction of the sons of gentlemen and tradesmen in the middle classes of life, that efforts of a more noble and disinterested nature were making here to increase the lamps of knowledge, kindled in the humble dwellings of the poor. The Rev. Gentleman then proceeded, in a speech of considerable length, to point out the peculiar advantages to be derived from the formation of infant schools in Birmingham."

We had occasion some weeks since to animadvert on a man by the name of FLETCHER, rendered notorious by the infamy of his conduct to a MISS DICK, for which he was expelled by the Scottish Synod, from the meeting over which he presided, and we find by the papers that the miscreant, after violating GOD's commandments, dares to return to the land from which he had been expelled, and presume to preach GOD'S HOLY WORD, for the sole purpose of raising money to build him a new chapel in London; that is one sample of religion, here is another—a man by the name of JAMES, styling himself Reverend, by a display of unparaleled assurance, has so far ingratiated himself into the opinions of some deluded people in this town, as to induce them to build him a splendid conventicle, where he preaches the commandments which he goes home and breaks, and then has the audacity to attend a public meeting for forming an INFANT SCHOOL, on the principle that a Metropolitan College has just been projected; the thing is too barefaced, and such humbug attempts to delude the minds of the people, must and shall be exposed: the idea of such ranters as this fellow JAMES talking about religion and morality, when he has trampled on the first duties of both; he has not only "coveted his neighbours goods," but actually got possession of them; for the circumstances of his second marriage, which was obtained by a violation on his part of every social and manly virtue, were merely hushed up by a LARGE PECUNIARY DOUCEUR out of his wife's jointure. to his injured FRIEND; and yet such people as these are suffered to talk to us about RELIGION, MORALITY, and the BLESSINGS OF EDUCATION!

It will only be sufficient to conclude these remarks by observing, that the meeting, on the very showing of its precious organ, the Morning Chronicle, was any thing but of the first respectability, for not one of those names which generally appear in our press, when any loyal address is sent to the Crown, or a meeting is assembled to support its prerogatives, are to be seen figuring away on this occasion. The wiser part of the community, who alone constitute the "respectability" of this, or any other town, well know the delusion practised on such occasions---that the whole object of them is to raise money---to give a few mountebanks, who come up in support of it, a "brief authority," only to render them an eternal laughing stock, and that the sole purpose to be attained is the subversion of all the best principles of life, and THE ENTIRE DISORGANIZATION OF SOCIETY.

It would be a task of supererogation to enumerate the continual attempts that are made by the mal-contents to cavil at every occurrence that arises, but there are some it is quite impossible to pass over silently, as betraying malevolence of disposition without a motive, and an ignorance of the most lamentable quality. Those interesting samples of genuine genius, the Times and Morning Herald, have lately made a dead set at the DUKE OF WELLINGTON, on the subject of a supposed encroachment on what these Cockneys call the privileges of the people, by the enclosure of a small spot of ground now forming a portion of Hyde Park, at the back of Apsley House. If any man will take the trouble to go and inspect the alterations now going on there, and then amuse himself by ruminating on that piece of land which is thus designated "a privilege of the people," he will find it in reality to consist of a small enclosure between the carriage drive and Park-lane, of no earthly use or even ornament to any one of HIS MAJESTY'S subjects, and both for safety and convenience much better railed off---but it is quite sufficient to excite a feeling of jealousy on the part of a narrow-minded cit, who, trudging through the beauties of Blackfriars'-road for six days, knows no happiness beyond a look into the Park on the seventh. THE KING has purchased the extraordinary popularity he enjoys, by the consideration he has always paid to the wishes and gratifications of his subjects, and instead of infringing on any of their enjoyments, would use every exertion to render them even greater than they are; and when HIS MAJESTY sanctioned this trifling alteration in the allotment of the ground adjoining the DUKE'S mansion, he was conscious that he was thereby consulting the best feelings of the people, who would rather strive to augment than decrease the possessions of their ILLUSTRIOUS CHIEFTAIN, as some partial compensation for the vast accession of power and territory brought to them by his splendid achievements.

To discuss the matter seriously is laughable---for instead of an enclosure just extensive enough to build HIS GRACE a pig-stye upon, one would really imagine, to hear these numskulls talk, that he was receiving an allotment of half the land his valour has won from his Country's enemies.

THE NEW SHERIFFS.

We cannot call to mind the nomination of any gentlemen to the fulfilment of the important office of SHERIFFS, that has given us more complete satisfaction than that of MESSRS. CROWDER and KELLY who were sworn into office on Friday, before the Cursitor BARON OF THE EXCHEQUER, whose opinion of the public principles of these individuals, was of the most satisfactory nature. It is only by men of such integrity, such sound character, and correct dealing, that the character of our great metropolis can be honourably supported: and after witnessing the degradation under which it laboured during the period of WAITHMAN and WOOD'S Mayoralty, and other similar visitations, we are bound still more feelingly to hail the accession of those who will not alone uphold the glory of their country untarnished, but will be the means of wiping away any previous unfavourable impression, or any injury received. We admit all this so fully, that we are sure no one will grudge us the enjoyment of a joke, and that a joke will as invariably attend a city excursion as a dinner, is beyond all doubt. In proposing the healths of the new Sheriffs, at the inauguration feast they always give on this annual event, the LORD MAYOR said, "that the gentlemen were too well known to their fellow-citizens, to need his commendation; but if they had not been so, the VERY HANDSOME MANNER in which they had entertained their friends this day, would have left no doubt of the way in which they intended TO SUPPORT THE CITY," every word of which, of course, is true, as far as giving a good dinner is concerned. But this apt remark of our worthy CHIEF MAGISTRATE falls very far short of an observation that dropped from SHERIFF KELLY, who "assured his fellow-citizens, that among the pleasing duties of the office of Sheriff---that of maintaining the duties of the civic hospitality would not be forgotten either by his colleague or himself"---now as one of the principal duties of the Sheriff is to see all malefactors duly HUNG (to say nothing of other trifling duties done by himself and OFFICERS) Mr. KELLY'S notions of pleasing, we must say, are very different from ours.

THEATRICALS.

The play selected for the opening of Covent Garden Theatre had our fullest concurrence. It not alone revived our most delightful recollections of the best days of the English drama, but is was a harbinger to us of their renewal---the very green curtain which greeted the eye on our entrance last Monday, seemed a kind of peace-offering, in the shape of an old friend, for all the ribaldry that had been carried on during the reign of its predecessor; and the admirable production of the tragedy, in most respects, confirmed every previous prepossession. The appearance of the new candidate, MR. WARDE, strengthened these feelings; for any thing calculated to bury in oblivion the least trace of that miserable little gentleman, who, as the Manx people say, is now in "the clouds of the Atlantic Ocean," was to us a happiness of the highest quality; but when, exclusive of such feeling, this tragedian comes recommended by first-rate ability, seconded evidently by good taste, the interest is at once complete. The selection of the character of Brutus at the present moment, for a debût, was very judicious, as tending to banish that barbarous system of distinguishing any individual at the expense of his community---as exhibiting a play well cast throughout---and reviving those principles of classicality, which the mummeries for so many years past of the Drury Lane school had totally banished; and although thousands of cavillers will be found to set down Mr. WARDE'S selection for his debût, as a stroke of policy on Mr. KEMBLE'S part, to prevent his attaining by a first impression that eminence the latter has so long aspired to, yet the liberal and judicious would rather deem it a desire, on the manager's side, to submit a combination of his forces, instead of an exclusive display; being well aware that Englishmen like enough for their money, notwithstanding they have more than they know what to do with. Mr. WARDE possesses most of the requisites for the situation he has leapt into; his figure is quite commanding enough, being the pleasing medium between the grandeur of the KEMBLE, and the deformity of the KEAN; his voice is both melodious and powerful, his countenance expressive, and his action both free and graceful---the whole style of his performance, as well as the choice of what he had to perform, assures us that his taste is of the best order; and while thus highly endowed, it would be a wonder if he had been less successful than he was, it is gratifying to record, that fluctuating as public opinion is, it has had discernment enough to rank him among the most accomplished of modern aspirants. We were in good humour with the play, throughout; CHARLES KEMBLE'S Marc Antony, "the last remains of Princely York," is equal to any piece of acting on the stage: it forced back upon our memories associations of the most agreeable nature, and what is saying more, they came upon us without any disadvantage. His representation of Antony is equal to the Brutus of his departed brother, and language can say no more---we fancied him as Young and as handsome as ever. We almost thought too that COOPER'S Cassius deserved a part of the applause it received; that MRS. BARTLEY was respectable and agreed; with HIS HIGHNESS PRINCE WILLIAM OF GLOUCESTER (who sat incog. in a private box next to ourselves,) that even MEARS, who played Cinna, was not such a "miserable sinner" as heretofore. So far so good. From this exhibition we were determined to see more of MR. WARDE, and attended Town and Country on Friday, and although we are sure nothing but a managerial freak could have placed him in such a character as Reuben Glenroy, for establishing the impression his previous appearance had excited; yet, as far as respects MR. WARDE, he pourtrayed the part with all that ability we had heard of his possessing---but for the rest (barring MESSRS. FAWCETT and BLANCHARD, MRS. GIBBS and MRS. DAVENPORT) they would have disgraced the veriest barn in Christendom. MR. BAKER was the Plastic, where we formerly had CHARLES KEMBLE, (and why we had not on this occasion it would be idle to divine, for after his personation of Charles X. nothing can be called a degradation);---Mr. MASON the Captain Glenroy, a sort of psalm singing, methodistical sample of a KEMBLE; a MISS JONES simpered through the part of the Honourable Mrs. Glenroy; and MRS. CALCRAFT (the ci-devant MISS CHESTER) appeared as Rosalie Somers, a part wherein she substituted fine airs for feeling, flaunting for innocence, and altogether lost sight of the character in every respect.---MRS. CALCRAFT should have played the part enacted by MISS JONES: but when we inform our readers that the following names filled up the remaining parts, they will be quite as able to judge of the result as ourselves; MR. HENRY! MR. EVANS! MR. CLAREMONT! MR. ATKINS! MR. PARSLOE! MR. HORREBOW! MR. LEY! MR. T. COOPER! (who distributes the play-bills) MRS. HUDSON! MISS GIFFORD! MISS HENRY! We were quite at a loss to account for this villainous display, until, persuaded by a friend to sit out the Coronation, we found most (not all, as those funny things the play-bills, say) of the first rate performers WALKING IN THE PAGEANT!! We despise humbug so much, that we shall always expose it wherever we can, and when the managers announce that "the whole of the company of their establishment" appeared in the SHOW, we distinctly say, that neither MISS PATON, MRS. CHATTERLEY, MRS. CALCRAFT, MISS LACY, MR. WARDE, nor MR. SINCLAIR made their appearance; and we moreover say, they were quite right if THEY REFUSED TO DO IT.! We know that MR. KEMBLE, who is a gentleman, a scholar, a man of fine sense and taste, and as an actor himself capable of appreciating the consequence of others, would never sanction such proceedings; but as only one of a managerial triumvirate, he is overruled by the disgusting meanness of a low sailor, earwigged by the artifices of a commissariat clerk, who, like his master, will poke his nose every where, and presume to interfere in the arrangements of our national theatre, with one of the KEMBLES at the head of it!! The consequences, from such an impertinent assumption of authority, may be so fatal to the best interests of the Drama, and must so cramp the energies of its conductors, that we shall feel it a duty to lash, ad infinitum, every instance of it which may be brought to our knowledge.

We fear that Mr. WALLACK is not allowed to exercise the full force of his managerial abilities, for so talented as he is, and so anxious as he must be to display those talents, he would not willingly suffer such things to go on, as we have been witnesses this last week to; for, instead of concealing the weakness of a company in a novelty of performance, we have seen it displayed as open as the day, by the representations which have been given us. We know how fine a Falstaff DOWTON is, without being reminded what miserable Merry Wives MISS GRADDON and MISS CUBITT are, or what admirable ones MISS STEPHENS and MADAME VESTRIS were---to say nothing of the difference between MESSRS. BRAHAM and HORN in Fenton. Then again Mr. TERRY was so identified with Mephostophiles, that RUSSELL'S appearance herein is barely passable; and it will therefore surely be admitted, that as comparisons are at all times odious, so also are they unfortunate when of the character of those now under our consideration. We perceive with a degree almost of horror the play of Lucius Junius Booth, or Brutus, or whatever it is, announced at Drury Lane Theatre; and the person, part of whose ominous name it bears, who conducted himself so disgracefully some years ago, and has since been vagabondizing in America, appears on Saturday next. What can be the meaning of this? We see the announcement of WALLACK for William Tell superseded by that of BOOTH for Brutus! We have had the KEAN school till we are sick---we have had BOOTH till we were sick---we had this monodrame of blue fire and liberty, till we were sick---and now when we were in hopes of a little quiet, and felt assured that the energetic and at all times most agreeable performances of WALLACK, would repay any one amply for whatever loss he might feel in the absence of such strollers, we are again to be visited with an exhibition, the exact quality of which we thoroughly know---and for what? the cui bono we ask? Can there be the least attraction in such a wretched actor as BOOTH---or in all the plays united, which, as KEAN'S successor! he will be sure to appear in, when they all failed with KEAN on the spot? Downright, absolute nonsense. We last year had MACREADY; the least we could now have is WALLACK, and the present announcement, if persevered in, will completely empty the Theatre. We are so disposed to back the present management, through thick and thin (more particularly while so many are endeavouring "to visit the SINS of the FATHERS upon the CHILDREN,") that we only find fault to produce amendment, and when we see the talent there is in the Theatre, not to suffer it to be substituted by actual mummery. The appearance of Mrs. DAVISON was hailed with perfect enthusiasm, as indeed it ought to be; and we are very much mistaken if the fine cast of the Road to Ruin (wanting only the name of DOWTON) will not assemble such an audience, as will convince the management of Drury-lane of the exact state of public opinion; for while a partial preponderance in favour of the MEN at the rival Theatre is very apparent, the abilities among the LADIES here is still more so, when we find that it now possesses the FOUR FIRST ACTRESSES OF THE DAY, in the persons of MRS. DAVISON, MRS. BUNN, MISS KELLY, and MISS STEPHENS---therefore only give MR. WALLACK fair play, and with such performers as these he will do wonders, depend upon it. It is only necessary to notice the ballet of the Camp, for the sake of remarking, that all those who have not seen the TAMBOUR MAJOR of NOBLE, have no idea of the most perfect representation of this odd character that ever appeared on the stage.

The Haymarket is retrieving a very bad season by the unabated success of POOLE'S excellent comedy, and the Lyceum about to terminate on Wednesday a very brilliant season, by those means which alone can ensure it, judicious selections, liberality of expenditure, and a due estimation of performers abilities. By way of a wind up, we insert the following lucubration of a Correspondent:---

EPIGRAMMATIC DIALOGUE BETWEEN THE COVENT GARDEN MANAGERS:

Says KEMBLE to FORBES, "I think it would do,
To engage the Anatomie Vivante---don't you?"
To which SAWNIE replied, with a frown on his phiz,
"Our houses are quite thin enough, as it is."

MICHAELMAS DAY.

His magnanimous Highness PRINCE WILLIAM OF GLOUCESTER,
On Michaelmas day gave a hint to his wife,
That a very fine Goose would but six shillings cost her,
And his table had ONE on that day all his life!

The butler was sent off to purchase a BILLY,
When the poulterer, guessing the PLACE whence he came,
Observed---"If you'll go up Park-lane, Piccadilly,
You'll meet with the greatest GOOSE London can claim.

The joke in NORMANBY'S Matilda, on the substitution of matelot for matelas, happened to BALL HUGHES, who, on reaching Calais, was desirous of having two mattresses on his lady's bed, and accordingly said "Portez MADAME HUGHES deux Matelots"---and his consternation may easily be imagined, on hearing TWO SAILORS knocking at his chamber, just as MADAME and himself were retiring to rest.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

EAST INDIES.

CAPTURE OF THE FORT AND CAPITAL OF ARRACAN.

(From the Calcutta Government Gazette Extraordinary of April 14.)

FORT WILLIAM.

POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, APRIL 14, 1825.

The following copies of despatches regarding the recent operations of the British forces in Arracan, are published for general information:—

TO GEORGE SWINTON, ESQ. SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT, POLITICAL DEPARTMENT.

SIR—I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to transmit in original, a despatch this day received from Brigadier-General Morrison, C. B., commanding the South-Eastern Division, dated April 2, announcing the capture of Arracan, after a succession of the most brilliant operations against the enemy.

His Excellency regrets that the enclosure No. 2, alluded to by the Brigadier-General, viz. copy of Brigadier Richard's report of the success of his night attack on the heights, situated on the right of the enemy's position, has, by some unaccountable accident, been omitted to be sent. I have, &c.

(Signed) W. L. WATSON,
Deputy Adjutant-Gen. of the Army.

Adjutant-General's Office, Presidency
Fort William, April 14, 1825.

Camp, Arracan, April 2, 1825.

Sir—The Almighty has been pleased to permit that the exertions of the south-eastern division of the army should be crowned with complete success. Arracan was yesterday taken, and the 10,000 men that acted under Atown Mungza have, as a military body, been nearly annihilated. The proceedings that have led to this result, I shall now have the honour to detail for the information of the Commander-in-Chief.

On the 24th ult., the arrangements for the movement of the force from the camps on the Oratung were completed, and the head-quarters of the division were established with the 2d Brigade in advance at Chabattee Bhoong, within two miles of the enemy's position in the Padha Hills, the march of the remainder being directed as pointed out in enclosure No. 1.

On the 25th ult., boat and pontoon bridges were thrown across the Chabattee and Waibraing rivers, and in the evening a reconnoissance was made, in order to ascertain the situation of the passes through the hills, and the obstacles to be encountered. The natural ones were considerable, arising principally from the steepness of the ascents, and from the course of deep tide nullahs.

On the 26th, the troops then present crossed the Waibraing by daybreak, and were formed into four columns:—Right column, under Brigadier Grant, C. B., 1 12-pounder, 2 6-pounders. The 2d brigade, 1 company, 2d Light Infantry, battalion; 1 ditto of regular pioneers; centre column, Brigadier Richards, 2 12-pounders, 2 howitzers, Lieut.-Colonel Lindsay. The 1st brigade, 2 companies, 2d Light Infantry battalion, 1 ditto regular pioneers: left column to act with the gun-boats; Captain Leslie. His Majesty's 54th Regiment; 2 companies ditto; 2 ditto 2d Light Infantry, battalion rifle company, Mug Levy; 2 companies Mug pioneers. Reserve, Lieut.-Col. Walker, C. B., His Majesty's 54th, 1 12-pounder, 2 6-pounders; 3 companies of His Majesty's 54th Regiment; 3 ditto 26th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry; 2 ditto 49th; 3 ditto temporary pioneers; 1 ditto Mug ditto; 2d local horse.

The right and centre columns then advanced to force the two passages, while the left, with the gun-boats, under Captain Crawford, Hon. Company's marine, was to have ascended the river, which appeared to flow through the hills. The boats, however, having grounded on a shoal, Captain Leslie landed his men, and was then directed to skirt the river, and, if possible, to pass by the extreme right of the first range of hills, with a view of attacking the enemy from their rear, or of intercepting them in their retreat.

The centre column had not proceeded far ere the tocsin of alarm, and shouts from the hills, gave notice where they were occupied, and that the enemy were in force. The advance, consisting of the light infantry companies of the 26th, 28th, 49th, and 63d regiments, under the command of Captain Mason, 49th regiment, was directed to gain the summit, which was effected in the most gallant manner. The column then moved to its left, to the attack of a stockade; while the light infantry companies, keeping nearly parallel to it, drove the enemy from several entrenched positions along the crest of the hills. Two rounds from the 12-pounders caused the but partly finished stockade to be abandoned; the men who retired from it immediately occupied strong grounds on the heights above. Here, the left column, from being compelled to diverge from the river, joined; and a smart fire was continued, till the grenadiers of his Majesty's 44th regiment and left grenadiers of the 49th regiment Bengal Native Infantry, began to ascend at two different points; the enemy then fled; on which the centre column retraced its steps, and defiled through the abandoned pass, while the left column proceeded in furtherance of the orders first given. The ground on the north side of the hills proved to be an extensive plain, intersected by several deep tide nullahs belted with jungle. In such a country the flying foe easily escaped, as the cavalry was unable to pursue, till assisted by the labour of the pioneers. The forward movement was, however, continued till the three columns united at the Jeejah river; here it was intended to have halted, till the artillery, under the protection of the reserve, could be brought up, but a few companies of the 49th regiment Native Infantry, under Lieutenant-Colonel Smith, having been pushed across to ascertain what was in front, the report was made that the enemy were approaching in column, supported by cavalry. So desired an opportunity was immediately embraced, the low state of the tide, and the sandy bottom of the river, enabling the troops to pass without impediment. The heads of the columns had, however, no sooner debouched from the jungle, than the enemy fled, and reached, with but little loss, their works that covered the fords of the Mahattee.

The troops had now been under arms nine hours, and were still anxious to proceed, but a consideration for their physical strength, with an unwillingness to remove still further from the supplies, whose arrival must necessarily be retarded by the nature of the country passed over, caused me to direct, that positions, where shelter from the sun might be obtained, should be occupied. The fire of the enemy, while they opposed us, was noisy, but ill-directed. A further consequence of this day's action, beyond the advantage immediately gained, was, that the enemy abandoned their stockades at Kheong Peela (alias Chamballa)

The troops, with the exception of the reserve, which did not arrive till near midnight, having gained their exertions to enable the artillery to join, bivouacked by brigades.

On the 27th, when the fog dispersed, the order of advance was resumed, and Major Carter, His Majesty's 44th Regiment, with three companies of that corps, covered by the light infantry company His Majesty's 54th Regiment, was directed to carry a small hill in front of the enemy's works, while the remainder of the force moved forward in columns, at quarter distance, with the artillery on the reverse flank.

The enemy's position was well chosen, being situated on a peninsula, protected by a broad river, whose fords are only passable at nearly low water, and whose banks are not only steep, but covered with sharp stakes. Their defences consisted of deep entrenchments along the margin, with epaulments left to protect them from an enfilading fire: in the rear, high conical hills, surmounted by pagodas, and surrounded by entrenchments, served as numerous citadels, and appeared to be occupied

On the advance of the party under Major Carter, the enemy that occupied the hill retired across the river, when a fire from those parts of their works that commanded it, was immediately opened; four 12-pounders, two 5½ inch howitzers, and two 6-pounders, were placed in position, while the first brigade was moved to the right to attack a column that appeared in that direction, and which I now judge to have been an intended reinforcement; it did not, however, long remain in sight, or reach Mahatte. The fire of the artillery soon silenced the enemy's, and checked the effective fire of their musketry; and as the fords were then passable, the 2d brigade took ground to the left, in order to cross to the right of the enemy's defences. The 1st brigade, and two ressalas of horse, were moved at the same time forward, the reserve (formed as on the preceding day, with the addition of three companies 2d light infantry battalion, and a rifle company Mug Levy) following.

On the 2d brigade descending into the river, the enemy abandoned their post, while the troops on the right (the situation of the ford having been ascertained) crossed, but from the steepness of the bank on the opposite side, had great difficulty in entering the works. A ressala of horse, with the rifle company Mug Levy, were pushed over still further to our right to gain the road by which the enemy were retreating, and arrived in time to do some execution among their rear, and to prevent the destruction of bridges on the road to Arracan.

I have omitted to mention, that during the commencement of the action (which lasted about two hours) I received the pleasing intelligence of the near approach of Brigadier-General M'Bean, with the 5th brigade.

On the 28th, it was necessary to halt to obtain information, and allow of a junction being formed of the troops still in the rear, and by the flotilla under Commodore Hays, who was in progress for that purpose; in the evening this was effected, and the enemy's position partly reconnoitred.

On the 29th, the division moved forward at day light: the advance under Brigadier-General M'Bean consisted of 1 ressala of horse, two 6-pounders, two howitzers, 5th brigade, six companies of his Majesty's 54th regiment, 2d Light Infantry battalion, rifle company, Mug Levy, one company of regular Pioneers, one ditto Mug ditto, 16 scaling ladders. Considerable delay was occasioned by fog, and which at first prevented the great strength of the enemy's position from being discovered. It occupied a range of connected hills (since ascertained to be from 350 to 450 feet in height), strong by nature, and rendered still more so by art, escarpement, abbatis, and masonry having been resorted to, where those means could not be most efficaciously employed. One pass alone leads through them to the capital, and that was defended by a fire of several pieces of artillery and about 3,000 muskets; the whole number of the enemy ranged along the heights may be estimated at from 8,000 to 9,000 men; the ground in front is an extensive valley entirely clear of jungle, but in depth not altogether out of the range of the enemy's artillery.

Where the advance halted, it was partly covered by a tank, and Brigadier-General M'Bean made a disposition for acquiring the principal hills in the first range at the commencement of the pass. Four pieces of artillery were forwarded to cover the attack, and the troops for the assault, consisting of the Light Infantry Company His Majesty's 54th Regiment, four Companies 2d Light Infantry Battalion, and the Light Infantry Companies of the 10th and 16th Regiments Madras Native Infantry, with the Rifle Company Mug Levy, were placed under Major Kemm; a support of six Companies 16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, under Captain French of that corps, followed The assault commenced, and in spite of a well-directed fire, and of the steepness of the ascent, which was occasionally nearly perpendicular, many gained the summit. Lieut. Clarke, Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier-General M'Bean, with several of the Light Infantry Company of His Majesty's 54th Regiment, got their hands on the trench; but even with the assistance such a hold afforded, were unable to maintain their ground: large stones were rolled on them, and smaller ones discharged from bows; the consequence was, they were precipitated to the bottom. In this attempt the efforts were persevered in till every officer was wounded.

I cannot here avoid interrupting the detail to make known to his Excellency, that on no occasion could British gallantry be more conspicuously displayed; the conduct of the officers was emulated by the men, and European and native troops vied with each other to equal the example set.

The guns, in the ardour of the moment, had been advanced by Captain Lamb, who commanded them, so far, that on the retreat of the troops they became too exposed to be longer served; and the retiring of them at the time was impracticable, without the hazard of sacrificing the men, who would have been obliged to effect it by the drag-ropes.

While the attack was being carried on at the pass, the right of the enemy's position was cannonaded, but without any apparent effect; the 12-pounders and heavy howitzers were afterwards moved to play upon the works at the pass. The fire was continued for an hour, but appearing to be but a useless waste of ammunition, I caused it to be discontinued, and those guns to be withdrawn; at the same time an encampment was marked out, the tents were pitched, and at one o'clock the troops fell back upon them, with the exception of the advance, which was continued during the day in the position they occupied. In the dusk of the evening the wounded were brought off, the guns withdrawn, and the whole retired without further loss, though a heavy fire had been continued by the enemy at intervals during the day.

From observations made, the conviction was established, that the right of the enemy's defences was the key of his position. Here the natural obstacles were the greatest, the approach being protected by a small lake, the ascent being more abrupt, and the height being more considerable. These seemed to have given a confidence in its security; and though the summit was crowned with a stockade, and part of the way up thickly abbatised, the number of men to guard it was not considerable. This point was therefore selected for the principal future attack; at the same time, the construction of a battery for four mortars, two 24-pounders, four 12-pounders, and two 5½-inch howitzers, to play on the works at the pass, and to draw the enemy's attention entirely to that point, was ordered: the senior engineer officer, Lieutenant Thompson, received directions to that effect, and the day of the 30th was employed in bringing from Mahattee the necessary material. At half-past seven that evening ground was broke; by three o'clock the battery finished, and before day-light completely armed, when the guns opened, and continued during the day a heavy cannonade, which had the effect of checking the enemy's fire, though it was not entirely silenced.

Instructions were given to Brigadier Richards to make a night attack with the force as per margin:—Right column.—Major Carter, his Majesty's 44th Regiment, 2 companies of his Majesty's 44th ditto, 2 ditto (Grenadiers) 26th Regiment, 30 troopers (dismounted). Left column.—Two companies of his Majesty's 44th Regiment, 1 ditto, 26th Regiment (Light Infantry Company); 1 ditto, 49th Regiment, (ditto, ditto), 30 flotilla seamen. Reserve under Captain Shelton, his Majesty's 44th Regiment.—Two companies of his Majesty's 44th ditto (Grenadiers), 49th regiment, 40 pioneers. On the right of the enemy's position, at half-past eleven, the appointed rocket signal of success was thrown up, and Lieutenant Wroughton, Surveying Department, in a short time after returned from the height, bringing the grateful intelligence, that though the fire of the enemy had been heavy, the Stockade had been gained without a man on our side being killed, and with only a few slightly wounded. A copy of the Brigadier's Report of the affair (No. 2) is herewith enclosed.

A reinforcement of the remainder of the 1st brigade, with two six-pounders on elephants, was immediately despatched; arrangements had also been made for storming the works at the pass, on the morning of the 1st, should the fire from the battery have produced such an effect as would almost ensure the certainty of success. Brigadier Richards was also directed to commence, at day-light, an attack on the defences of the intervening heights.

The difficulty of carrying the guns up the hill caused a delay, and it was near seven o'clock before one was mounted, a few rounds from which silenced the fire of a 6-pounder that the enemy had planted on the next summit, when the Brigadier advanced to the assault. The enemy did not stand; advantage was taken of the panic of the moment, the detachment under Brigadier General M'Bean, which consisted as follows:—[a subaltern's detachment of artillery, 60 troopers (dismounted,) 2d brigade (except four companies of His Majesty's 54th Regiment, who were attached to the 5th brigade;) four companies 2d L. S battalion, 30 flotilla seamen, detachment of regular pioneers with scaling ladders]—allotted to the attack of the pass, was directed to move forward. The enemy were soon seen abandoning all the heights; from that moment opposition ceased, and Arracan was gained.

Enclosed are returns of the casualties that have occurred during the several actions with the enemy since the division entered Arracan, and also of the ordnance found in position on the east front of the heights covering the capital; the quantity captured is so widely dispersed, that there has not yet been time to allow its being ascertained.

Several Sirdars have surrendered themselves, and prisoners are hourly being brought to the camp. Grounding my opinion on the general assertion of the captives, I may venture to suggest the probability that not 1,000 of the Burmese, who were serving under Atown Munja, will reach Ava, but by the permission of the Governor-General. I have, &c. (Signed)

T. W. MORRISON, Brig.-Gen. Comg. S. E. Div.

LIST OF KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Return of Wounded of the South Eastern Division of the Army, under the command of Brigadier-General Morrison, C. B., in action with the enemy of the 26th March, 1825.

2d Local Horse.—Wounded, 2 rank and file, and 3 horses; 2 horses missing.

Right Wing of His Majesty's 44th Regiment.—Wounded, 1 sergeant, 4 rank and file, 1 bheestie, and 1 bullock-man.

Right Wing of His Majesty's 54th Regiment.—Wounded, 1 drummer, and 1 rank and file.

26th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 2 rank and file, and 1 bheestie.

49th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 2 rank and file.

(Signed) W. B. SCOTT, Dy. A. Adj.-Gen.

Return of Killed and Wounded of the South Eastern Division of the Army, under the command of Brigadier-General Morrison, C. B., in action with the enemy on the 27th of March, 2d Local Horse.—Wounded, 2 horses.

Artillery Division.—Wounded, 2 rank and file.

Right wing His Majesty's 44th Regiment.—Wounded, 4 rank and file.

His Majesty's 54th Regiment.—Killed, 1 sergeant; wounded, 9 rank and file.

26th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 1 captain, 2 subadars, 1 sergeant or havildar, and 13 rank and file.

42d Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 1 lieutenant, 1 sergeant or havildar, and 10 rank and file.

49th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 6 rank and file.

Left wing 62d Regiment Bengal Native Infantry.—Wounded, 3 rank and file.

Pioneers.—Wounded, 1 sergeant or havildar, and 6 rank and file.

Names of Officers wounded.

Captain Seymour, 26th Regiment Bengal Native Infantry, slightly.

Lieutenant M'Kean, 42d Bengal Native Infantry, severely, not dangerously.

(Signed) W. B. SCOTT, Dy. A. Adj.-General.

Return of Killed and Wounded of the South Eastern Division of the Army, under the command of Brigadier-General Morrison, C. B., in action with the enemy between the periods of the 29th of March and the 1st of April, 1825.

Camp, Arracan, April 2, 1825.

General Staff—Wounded, 1.

2d Local Horse—Wounded, 6 rank and file, and 1 horse.

Artillery Division—Killed, 1 bombardier; wounded, 3 rank and file, and 5 gun drivers.

His Majesty's 44th Regiment—Wounded, 4 rank and file.

His Majesty's 54th Regiment—Killed, 2 rank and file; wounded, 1 captain, 1 lieutenant, 1 volunteer, 1 serjeant or havildar, and 12 rank and file.

26th Regiment Bombay Native Infantry—Wounded, 2 rank and file.

42d Regiment Bombay Native Infantry.—Wounded — rank and file.

2d Light Infantry Battalion.—Killed, 2 havildars and 6 rank and file; wounded, 1 major, 1 jemadar, 5 serjeants or havildars, 1 drummer, and 35 rank and file—2 rank and file since dead.

10th Regiment Madras Native Infantry.—Killed, 1 havildar, and 6 rank and file; wounded, 13 rank and file.

16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry—Killed, 1 captain, 1 havildar, and 9 rank and file; wounded, 2 lieutenants, 1 serjeant or havildar, 29 rank and file, 1 bheestie.

Mug Levy Rifle Company—Wounded, 1 subadar, 1 havildar, and 6 rank and file.

Pioneers—Wounded, 1 captain.

(Signed) W. B. SCOTT, Deputy A. Adj.-General.

Return of Officers Killed and Wounded of the South Eastern Division of the Army under the command of Brigadier-General Morrison, C. B., in action with the enemy between the periods of the 29th of March and the 1st of April, 1825.

Camp Arracan, April 2, 1825.

KILLED.

16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry—Captain A. French.

WOUNDED.

General Staff—Lieutenant J. Clarke, Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier-General M'Bean, severely, not dangerously.

His Majesty's 54th Regiment—Captain E. A. Evanson, severely, not dangerously; Lieutenant H. W. Harris, severely, not dangerously; Volunteer Mr. J. Graham, slightly.

2d Light Infantry Battalion—Major W. H. Kemm, slightly.

16th Regiment Madras Native Infantry—Lieutenant J. R. Sword, severely, not dangerously; Lieutenant F. B. White, slightly; Lieut. R. S. Gledstanes, slightly.

Pioneers—Captain P. B. Fitton, severely, right leg since amputated.

(Signed) W. B. SCOTT, Depnty A. Adjutant-General.

(Signed) A. LINDSAY, Lieutenant-Colonel,
Commanding Artillery, with S. E. Divis. of the Army.

Camp, Rajapatta, April 2.

By command of the Right Hon the Governor-General in Council,
GEORGE SWINTON, Secretary to Government.

BOULOGNE, Sept. 25.—On Wednesday morning the Rev. Mr. Edge a minister, but recently arrived as a visitor, and whose talents as a preacher were highly appreciated here, met with a fatal accident. Mr. Edge was fond of bathing, and on this occasion while preparing to indulge in his favourite recreation, he was advised by a friend to be on his guard against the effects of the current, as there was some danger when the tide was in the state in which it then was. The rev. gentleman on receiving this caution treated it rather lightly, observing, that for him the peril was not so great as bad been supposed, seeing he was an excellent swimmer. He proceeded to bathe, when the current to which his attention had been called, carried him away from the land: his efforts to return were ineffectual, and he sunk to rise no more with life. The French spectators of this catastrophe, though anxious to save the sufferer, had it been practicable, displayed a remarkable indifference to his fate when the mournful result was ascertained. They coolly remarked, that the danger was well known, and if English gentlemen would venture beyond the third beacon they must take the consequences of such temerity. The news of this tragical event was communicated with appropriate delicacy to his wife and sister, who had accompanied him, by the Rev. Mr. Simmonds and another gentleman. To describe the effect of the afflicting intelligence on the ladies is impossible. The sister rushed frantically forward to seek her lost relative: she was with difficulty restrained; and the wife sunk to the ground, overwhelmed with the awful tidings, in a fainting state. She remains inconsolable. Every effort has since been made to recover the body, but without effect. It is supposed to have been carried into deep water by the storm which followed, and it is now expected that the heart-broken survivors will not be permitted to have the mournful satisfaction of consigning his remains to the grave with the ceremonies of that religion to the interests of which, while living, his days were consecrated. The vigilance of the French police was rather singularly marked on this sad occasion. Those who witnessed the accident, and knew the deceased, were not permitted to take care of his clothes, and deliver them to those who had a right to claim them. Before they could be given up, certain official forms were necessary to be gone through, and the mourners were obliged to establish their relationship previous to the restoration of the property.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

DREADFUL FIRE AT BATH.—Saturday night, about half-past eight o'clock, the inhabitants of the Orange Grove, and its vicinity, were alarmed by a cry of "Fire," and it was soon ascertained that the upper part of a house in Wade's Passage, in which Mr. Paisey, tailor, resided, was in flames. One of the Abbey bells was immediately tolled, and an immense concourse of persons hastened to the spot. The alarm was dreadful: several women were seen running about in a state of distraction, while the inhabitants of the neighbouring houses were busy removing their goods. The confusion has not been equalled in this city since the memorable 21st of December, 1820, when the Lower Rooms, which were situated not far from the same spot, were entirely consumed. On the present occasion the flames burst through the windows with resistless violence; and although the engines speedily arrived, the supply of water was so small, that all attempts to check them proved unavailing. The flames continued raging for some time, and serious apprehensions were entertained that they would extend to the Abbey Church, a fine Gothic building, to which the house immediately adjoined. These fears were rendered the more intense, as the organ and other valuable articles had, on account of some important alterations now going on in the Church, been placed on that side of it. All these, however, fortunately escaped injury, and about half-past 9 o'clock, it was evident that the flames had been partly got under. Several fire-men, with the utmost promptitude and intrepidity, mounted the roof of an adjoining house, and succeeded in hewing down the windows, &c. when, at length, the roof fell in with a tremendous crash. A better supply of water was now procured, and soon after 10 o'clock the flames were so far got under as to do away with all idea of serious danger. This is the third fire that has happened in that neighbourhood within the last twelve months.

The damage is not so great as was at first apprehended. The flames, it appears, extended no farther than to the upper part of the two adjoining houses. Had they not, however, been checked by a party wall, or had the fire taken place two hours later, when the wind was somewhat rough, the whole crowded pile of buildings in that quarter must inevitably have been consumed. We understand that the fire originated in the workshop of Mr. Paisey, the men, it is supposed, having accidentally dropped a spark which mouldered for some time, and did not burst into flame until after they had left work.

FARINGDON.—On Thursday se'nnight an inquest was taken at the Horse and Groom, at Black Bourton, Oxon, before W. Macey, Esq. coroner, on the body of John Rouse, aged about 15, who met his death while in the service of Mr. Arkell, of Haddon Farm. It appeared from the evidence that the carter and this boy had been sent with a waggon and four horses to Radcott for ten quarters of wheat for seed, that they had been drinking rather freely, and that the carter was sleeping on the top of the load, while the boy stood on the shafts driving the team. In passing a field where the mother of the boy was working, she saw the perilous situation of her son, and commanded him instantly to get down; in alighting it appears that by some means or other he lost his equilibium, and fell beneath the wheel, which passed over his neck; the mother then caught him by a part of his dress, and endeavoured to pull him away before the other wheel took him, but had only time to move the position of the body before the other wheel took his chest, and passed over it. The lad never spoke after, although he lived an hour. It is remarkable that notwithstanding the load was so heavy, the skin was not in the least cracked, nor a bone broken. Verdict—Accidental Death. Deodand on the wheels 5s. on each. The carter received a severe reprimand from the coroner, who hoped the distressing accident his carelessness had occasioned, would be a warning to others.—Berkshire Chronicle.

BARBAROUS OUTRAGE.—ABERDEEN, Sept. 22.—Alex. Mackay, a respectable man, about 60 years of age, belonging to the parish of Farr, in Sutherlandshire, who had been in the south country, in the way of business, which was that of a drover, in returning northward lately, fell in with one William Allan, who resides at Cuminestown, Aberdeenshire. They travelled together over the Cairn O'Mount, and on Friday last had come as far as Kirktown of Daviot. Mackay having expressed an intention of attending Tarves market on Tuesday, Allan made him an insidious offer of accommodation at his house in Cuminestown, until the market took place; and for that purpose they set out from Daviot on Saturday morning. He had previously excited some unpleasant suspicions in the mind of Mackay, by urging him to take a by-road; and had also, by exhibiting and counting his own money, as they went along, induced this unsuspecting individual to communicate the amount that was in his pocket at the time, and which, it now appears, consisted of the paltry sum of five and thirty shillings, but which proved too powerful a stimulant to the cupidity of his fellow traveller. Watching a favourable opportunity at a lone part of the footpath, about half a mile from the toll-bar of Fyvie, he levelled a blow with the but-end of his whip at the head of the unfortunate man, which laid him prostrate at his feet; and when down, it would appear that he had struck him repeated blows on the head, face, and other parts of the body, by which his skull was dreadfully fractured, and one of his ribs broken. In this pitiable condition he left him, having previously rifled his pockets. Mackay was able to crawl, feeble and bleeding as he was, to Lewes of Fyvie, where medical assistance was immediately procured. His skull had to undergo the operation of the trepan, in the course of which large portions of the brain were brought away; and although still alive by the last accounts, very faint hopes are entertained of his recovery. The presence of a magistrate having been procured, he distinctly related all the particulars of the assault, and his perfect recollection that the person who committed the barbarous deed had called himself William Allan, and had mentioned that he was a witness in a case of forgery to be tried at the ensuing Aberdeen circuit. Immediate search was made for the culprit by the Sheriff's officers in the neighbourhood, and information at the same time sent to Aberdeen, from whence Mr. John Fyfe, messenger, set off, and succeeded, along with Mr. Urquhart's messenger, Fyvie, in apprehending Allan, within a short distance of his own house. Being carried to Lewes of Fyvie, he was fully identified by the unfortunate sufferer. Mr. Simpson, the Procurator Fiscal of the county, having opportunely arrived at Fyvie upon other official business, promptly entered upon a precognition of the whole circumstance; and Allan has since been brought to town in charge of Mr. Fyfe, and committed to gaol. He is a young man, apparently not more than 20 years of age.—Edinburgh Observer.

OUTRAGE IN IRELAND.—At a late hour on last Saturday night a numerous party of ruffians attacked the house of John Murray, a poor farmer residing at Tullyreagh, near Brookeborough. They knocked at the door and demanded entrance, under pretence that they were the police. Murray spoke out, and requested them to go to a window of the house, that he might know them to be policemen, and then he should readily admit them. Having gone accordingly to the window, one of the villains flung a stone through it at Murray, and the rest immediately forced in his door. They beat him and his wife, an aged woman, with staves and a spade, in so cruel and sanguinary a manner, as to render their recovery doubtful. Murray's left arm is broken, and his body greatly injured. Before the fellows departed, they lit up some straw and tow on the floor, to enable them, it is supposed, to find a desperate club, of a remarkable form, which they left behind, and which, it is hoped, will aid in their discovery. On going away, they said to Murray, "'Tis for Billy Gawley you have got that." Gawley lives next door to Murray, and it appears they are not on friendly terms. Sir Henry Brooke and Major Irvine promptly proceeded to Murray's house next day to investigate the circumstances of the outrage. We believe Murray's informations are not yet taken; but we understand he can identify several individuals of the party who beat him; a few of them are farmers of some consequence in the neighbourhood, who, Murray states, have borne him a grudge. Gawley, he says, was of the party; and he even accuses a sergeant of the police, as the first man who entered his house and struck him with a bayonet. Can there be found a farmer or man of any note, in this proverbially loyal county, and particularly in that orderly and quiet neighbourhood, so wicked and recreant as to commit or abet midnight outrage? And can it be believed that there is among our constabulary corps, (who have, since their establishment, so effectually conserved the public peace,) one who would unlawfully assail a poor man's cottage, and dash his bayonet against a defenceless peasant? 'Tis monstrous! We withhold our credence, and we abstain from publishing names till the facts of the case shall be more fully developed. One of the men charged by Murray has been apprehended, and admitted to bail. We understand that Surgeon West's report of Murray and his wife is favourable. We presume Sir Henry Brooke and Major Irvine deferred the taking of Murray's informations, and postponed the investigation, upon proper grounds, and for good reasons. As magistrates, their vigilance, their uprightness, and impartiality, are well known; and as this outrage was dared to be committed in their own immediate vicinity, we feel quite confident they will exercise the most rigid scrutiny and anxious solicitude, to crush these lawless and alarming proceedings, and to bring the perpetrators, be they who they may, to speedy and condign punishment. Erne Packet.

SPORTING.

DONCASTER RACES.

Last Friday the Races concluded, after a week of admirable sport; and we are satisfied that all who were present will agree with us that it has been the most splendid of the year, and the greatest that has ever been held in Yorkshire, or perhaps in the kingdom.

The day's sport was as under:

Three Year Old Filly Stakes of 20 sovs. each, for fillies, and 20 added by the Corporation, 8st. 2lb. each, St. Leger course; 19 subscribers.

Sir M. W. Ridley's Fleur de Lis..... 1
Mr. Smith's ch. Conviction..... 2
Mr. Watt's by Wattun, Altisidora..... 3
Sir W. Milner's br. Hybla..... 4
Lord Muncaster's b. c. Jessy..... 5

Lord Darlington's Bird of Passage, Mr. Russel's Sophy, and Lord Milton's Beatrice, paid forfeit.

Betting 2 to 1 on the winner.

Match 100 sov. 8st. 2lb each. Red House In.

Lord Muncaster's b. f. Garcia, 2 yrs..... 1
Col. Yate's b. f. Ellen, 2 yrs..... 2

Betting 2 to 1 on Garcia.

Ellen took the lead at starting, and made all the running to the stand, when Garcia came up, and, after a sharp contest, won by upwards of a length, cleverly, rode by Nicholson.

Three Year Old Sweepstakes of 30 sovs. each, 10 ft. colts, 8st. 2lb., and fillies 8st., one mile; 26 subscribers.

Mr. Russell's b. c The Alderman..... 1
Mr. Baird's b. c. Cleveland..... 2
Mr. Lambton's ch c Count Pozzo..... 3
Sir J Byng's Trinculo..... 0
Mr. Watts' Zirza..... 0
Lord Kelburne's Actæon..... 0

The following paid forfeit:—Daredevil, Brigand, Escape, His Grace, Bob Logic, Crowcatcher, Catterick, Veluti, Spinaway, Humphrey Clinker, Hybla, and Skipper.

Match, 100 sovs., h. ft. St. Leger Course.

Mr. Wortley's ch. f. Carmelite, 8st. 2lb... 1
Mr. Petre's b. g. Velluti, 8st. 2lb..... 2

2 to 1 on Carmelite, who took the lead and won easy; rode by R. Johnson.

Sweepstakes of 25 gs. each; four-yr-olds, 7st. 9lb.; five, 8st. 5lb.; six and aged, 8st. 10lb. Four miles; three subs.

Lord Milton's br. c. Confederate, 4 yrs..... 1
Mr. Lambton's b. c. Buzzard, 4 yrs..... 2

2 and 3 to 1 on Buzzard.

One Hundred Plate for three and four-yr-olds; three years, 7st. 5lb; four, 8st. 7lb.; maiden colts allowed 2lbs., and maiden fillies, 3lb. Heats, two miles.

Mr. Payne's ch. c. Barytes, 3 yrs.....	5	1	1
Mr. Lambton's b. c. Canteen, 4 yrs.....	1	2	2
Mr. Richardson's br. c. Brownlock, 3 yrs.....	3	3	dr.
Mr. Wright's b c. Octavius, 3 yrs.....	2	4	dr.
Mr. J. Scott's br c. by Magistrate, 3 yrs.....	4	5	dr.

Betting before starting, 5 to 4 against Canteen, and 7 to 4 against Barytes, and after the first heat 5 to 4 on Canteen.

The Race-course on Friday was not so well attended as before, owing to great numbers having departed. It was admirably kept by Mr. Lockwood, Clerk of the Course, who has seen every heat run for during the last fifty years.

THE WINNERS OF THE GREAT ST. LEGER

The following List of the Winners of this important Stakes, from the commencement to the present period, will serve as a reference to sporting men, and may prove acceptable to our readers in general:—

1776, Lord Rockingham's br. f. by Simpson, rode by Singleton.
1777, Mr. Sotheron's Bourbon, by Le Sang, rode by John Cade.
1778, Sir T. Gascoigne's Hollondaise, by Match'em, rode by G. Heron.
1779, Mr. Stapleton's Tommy, by Wildair, rode by G. Lowry.
1780. Mr. Bethell's Ruler, by Murski, rode by J. Mangle.
1781, Col. Radcliffe's Sarina, by Goldfinder, rode by R. Foster.
1782, Mr. Goodricke's Imperatrix, by Alfred, rode by G. Searle.
1783. Sir J. L. Kay's Phenomenon, by King Herod, rode by A. Hall.
1784, Mr. Coates's Omphale, by Highflyer, rode by J. Kirton.
1785, Mr. Hill's Cowslip, by Highflyer, rode by G. Searle.
1786, Lord A. Hamilton's Paragon, by Paymaster, rode by J. Mangle.
1787, Lord A. Hamilton's Spadille, by Highflyer, rode by J. Mangle.
1788, Lord A. Hamilton's Young Flora, by Highflyer, rode by J. Mangle.
1789, Lord Fitzwilliam's Pewitt, by Tandem, rode by W. Wilson.
1790, Mr. Goodricke's Amhidexter, by Phenomenon, rode by J. Shepherd.
1791, Mr. Hutchinson's Young Traveller, by King Fergus, rode by J. Jackson.
1792, Lord A. Hamilton's Tartar, by Florizel, rode by J. Mangle.
1793, Mr. Clifton's Ninety-three, by Florizel, rode by W. Peirse.
1794, Mr. Hutchinson's Benningborough, by King Fergus, rode by J. Jackson.
1795, Sir C. Turner's Hambletonian, by King Fergus, rode by J. Jackson
1796, Mr. Cookson's Ambrosio, by Sir Peter, rode by J. Jackson.
1797, Mr. Goodriche's Lounger, by Drone, rode by J. Shepherd.
1798, Sir T. Gascoigne's Symmetry, by Delpini, rode by J. Jackson.
1799, Sir H. Vane's Cockfighter, by Overton, rode by F. Field.
1800, Mr. Wilson's Champion, by Pot-8-os, rode by F. Buckle.
1801, Mr. Goodricke's Quiz, by Buzzard, rode by J. Shepherd.
1802, Lord Fitzwilliams's Orville, by Benninghorough, rode by Singleton, jun.
1803, Lord Strathmore's Remembrancer, by Pipator, rode by B. Smith.
1804, Mr. Mellish's Sancho, by Don Quixote, rode by F. Buckle.
1805, Mr. Mellish's Staveley, by Shuttle, rode by J Jackson.
1806, Mr. Clifton's Fyldener, by Sir Peter, rode by T. Carr.
1807, Lord Fitzwilliam's Pantini, by Sir Peter, rode by W. Clift.
1808, Duke of Hamilton's Petronius, by Sir Peter, rode by B. Smith.
1809, Duke of Hamilton's Ashton, by Walnut, rode by B Smith.
1810, Duke of Leeds' Octavian, by Stripling, rode by W. Clift.
1811, Mr. Gascoigne's Soothsayer, by Sorcerer, rode by B. Smith.
1812, Mr. Hoh's Otterington, by Golumpus, rode by R. Johnson.
1813, Mr. Watts's Altisidora, by Dick Andrews, rode by J. Jackson.
1814, Duke of Hamilton's William, by Governor, rode by J. Shepherd.
1815, Sir W Maxwell's Filho da Puta, by Haphazard, rode by J. Jackson.
1816, Sir B Graham's, The Duchess, by Cardinal York, rode by B. Smith
1817, Mr Peirse's Ebor, by Orville, rode by R. Johnson.
1818, ——— Reveller, by Comus, rode by R. Johnson.
1819, Mr. Ferguson's Antonio, by Octavian, rode by J. Nicholson.
1820, Sir E. Smith's St. Patrick, by Walton, rode by R. Johnson.
1821, Mr. T. O. Powlett's Jack Spigot, by Androssan, rode by W. Scott.
1822, Mr. Petre's Theodore, by Woful, rode by J. Jackson.
1823, Mr. Watts's Barefoot, by Tramp, rode by Goodison.
1824, Mr. Gascoigne's Jerry, by Smolensko, rode by B Smith.
1825, Mr. Watts's Memnon, by Whisker, rode by W. Scott.

THE ARMY.

Detachments belonging to the 16th, 23d, 28th, 36th, 40th, 41st, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 54th, 60th (2d Batt.), 94th, 95th, and 98th Regiments of Foot, the Royal African Corps, the East India Company's Artillery and Infantry, embarked on the 13th ult., under the command of Staff Serjeant Mitchell, at Cork, for England.

Detachments belonging to the 25th and 33d Regiments of Foot, embarked on the 12th ult., at Dublin, for England, on the Recruiting Service.

Detachments belonging to the 25th and 63d Regiments of Infantry, embarked on the 13th ult., at Dublin, for England, on the Recruiting Service.

A detachment of the 96th Regiment of Infantry, marched on Tuesday last, from Westminster, for Winchester.

A detachment belonging to the 95th Regiment of Foot, marched on Tuesday last, from Westminster, for Gosport.

A detachment of the 68th Regiment of Infantry, marched on Tuesday last, from Westminster, for Chichester.

Detachments belonging to the 2d, 5th, 8th, 12th, 13th, 18th, 21st, 24th, 27th, 28th, 30th, 31st, 35th, 36th, 38th, 44th, 45th, 46th, 47th, 54th, 57th, 59th, 64th, 70th, 81st, 85th, 87th, 89th, 95th, 96th, and 99th Regts. of Foot, the Royal Staff Corps, the East India Company's Artillery and Infantry, embarked, on the 18th ult., under the command of Staff Serjeant Mac Gregor, at Dublin, for England.

Detachments belonging to the 29 and 97th Regiments of Foot, embarked on the 20th ult., at Dublin, for England.

A detachment belonging to the 84th Regiment of Infantry, embarked on the 20th ult., at Dublin, for England, on the Recruiting Service.

The 1st Division of the 39th Regiment of Foot arrived on the 28th ult. on board the Hope transport, at Chatham, from Cork.

Six Companies belonging to the 24th Regiment of Infantry embarked on the 27th ult. on board the Diadem transport, at Plymouth, for Cork.

The 42d (Royal Highlanders) are ordered from Dublin, to embark at Cork, for Gibraltar, to relieve the 64th, who are coming to England.

MONTHLY MILITARY OBITUARY.

General Stevens, Colonel of the 8th Foot, and Governor of Fort William.

Colonel Lord Henry Moore, Kildare Militia.

Major Williamson, half-pay Waggon Train, Parson's-green.

CAPTAINS—Lord S. Kerr, 32d Foot, Corfu; Kelly, 45th Foot; Fairis, 88th Foot, Templemore; Donaldson, 92d Foot, Up Park Camp, Jamaica; Wilson, half-pay 15th Foot, Cheltenham; Ruttledge, half-pay 47th Foot, Castlebar; H. Mackay, half-pay 7th West India Regiment, Islington; Willis, half-pay Fish's Corps; Gordon, half-pay Portuguese Service; Brinckmann, half-pay 8th Line, German Legion, Hanover.

LIEUTENANTS—Duke, 46th Foot; Butt, 56th Foot, Port Louis, Mauritius; Penn, 69th Foot, Fort St. George, Madras; Molony, 30th Foot, Malta; Splaine, Royal African Colonial Corps, Africa; Gilchrist, late 7th Veteran Battalion, Worcester; Carleton, half-pay 1st Dragoon Guards, Lisburne, Ireland; Stewart, half-pay 30th Foot, Perth; Small, half-pay 32d Foot, Hatfield, Herts; Nickson, half-pay 60th Foot; Ditmas, half-pay 68th Foot, Burlington Quay; Scott, half-pay 91st Foot; Egan, half-pay 95th Foot, Jersey.

ENSIGNS—Battley, 30th Foot, Kamptee, Madras; M'Pherson, half-pay 6th Foot, Ardersier, Inverness.

Paymaster Mansell, half-pay 66th Foot.

Quartermaster Hely, 9th Lancers, Dublin.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—Deputy Inspector Inglis, Africa; Assistant-Surgeon James, Malta.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

The following promotions have lately taken place.

To be Post Captains—Henry Ducie Chads, Frederick Marryatt, Thomas Warrand, John Gore (b), Charles Bowen, George Robert Lambert, Thomas Smith, George Gosling.

To be Commanders—John Milligan Laws, Alexander Tait, William Burdett Dobson, Aug. Henry Kellett, George Mitchener, Nathaniel Martin, William Luckraft, Richard Barton, Michael Dickson, Philip Graham, Thomas Beer, George Tincombe, John Taylor, jun.

To be Lieutenants—William Gray, George Bunbury Isaac, George Lyall, Richard Hamond White, Francis Crockatt, Robert Mann, Francis North Clerk, Croker Barrington, Thomas Gethy George, George Henry Parlby White, George Goldfinch, Alexander Schank Wight, Henry Lister Maw, John Hen Jackson, Lewis David, William Marshall, David Rymer, William Tomlin Griffiths, William Pendock Cowling, Edward Biffin, John Holland, Walter Cross, William Wooldridge, Edward Franklin, James Campbell, jun.

PORTSMOUTH.—The Albion, 74, Capt. Ommaney, was towed out of harbour by the Lightning steam-vessel (foul winds having detained her there) fitted for the Lisbon station. She will sail in a few days, to relieve the Superb, 78, Captain Sir Thomas Staines, K.C.B.

Capt. the Hon. Robert Saunders Dundas (son of Lord Viscount Melville) is appointed to command the Volage, new 28, at this port. Lieut. John Parker, and Mr. A. Frame, Purser, are appointed to her.

Capt. the Hon. Fred. Spencer is appointed to the Talbot, new 28, at Plymouth. Lieut. R. Hay is appointed to her.

Capt. Furneaux is appointed to the Hind, 20, at Woolwich.—Lieut. G. F Dawson is appointed to the Bustard.

It is understood that the Rainbow, 28, Capt. Hon. Henry J. Rous; Talbot, 28, Capt. Hon. Frederick Spencer; and the Volage, 28, Capt. Hon R. S. Dundas, are intended for the East India station.

The Volage, of 28 guns, was commissioned at this port on Wednesday, and the following officers have been appointed to her:—Captain the Hon. Richard Saunders Dundas, Lieutenant John Parker, Lieut. Whitcombe; Royal Marines, Lieut. Francis Hart; and Mr. Arthur Frame to be Purser.

The Mastiff, 10, has been commissioned by Captain Copeland, who is, we understand, to make a particular survey of the Grecian Archipelago. Lieut. J. Grant is appointed to her.

COURTS MARTIAL IN JAMAICA.

A Court Martial was held on board the Isis, in Port Royal, Jamaica, on Monday the 8th of August, for the trial of Lieut. Henry Dundas Trotter, late of the Hussar, agreeably to a request contained in his letter to Captain Harris, dated the 9th of May last. Members, Capt. Thomas Forrest, C. B. (Isis) President, Captains W. Elliott, C. B. (Lively), Hugh Patton, (Rattlesnake), John Leith, (Pylades), and George Russell, (Scylla), William Wynter, Officiating Judge Advocate. The Court having heard the evidence in support of the charge, as well as what the prisoner had to offer in his defence, and the evidence adduced on his behalf, and very maturely and deliberately weighed and considered the same, is unanimously of opinion that the evidence given by Lieutenant H. D. Trotter, at the late Court Martial on Edward Rippington, a seaman of the Hussar, was conscientiously and justly given—that his conduct appears at all times to have been perfectly respectful to his Captain, and that he did not deserve the reprimand which he received from Captain Harris. The Court doth, therefore, adjudge the said Lieutenant H. D. Trotter to be fully acquitted. But the Court has listened with considerable regret to some parts of Lieutenant Trotter's defence, which it considers irrelevant, intemperate, and unnecessary to his own exculpation. A Court Martial was held the next day (August 9) on Lieut. Gossett (first of the Hussar), which was not concluded when the packet sailed.

The Pursers of His Majesty's Navy are about to present a memorial to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, relative to an increase of their half-pay. The half-pay to the Purser is but 3s. per diem, whilst the Lieutenant of the navy (an officer of the same rank with the Purser) has 5s. per diem: in the kindred service of the army, the Assistant-Commissary, whose rank and duty on land are similar to those of the Purser at sea, enjoys a half pay of 4s. 11d. per diem. There can be, they assert, no good reason why the two services should not be placed on a footing of perfect equality.

FROM LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

War-Office, 30th Sept. 1825.

1st Reg. of Dragoon Guards, Cap. G. Quicke, to be captain, vice Ralph E. Babington—4th ditto, Cornet G. Chalonor Ogle to be lieutenant, vice Nash; Hon. W. Vaughan to be cornet, vice Ogle—1st Reg. of Dragoons, Surgeon W. Young, M. D. to be surgeon, vice Steel—4th Reg. of Light Dragoons, B. Ogle to be cornet, vice M'Caffery—6th Reg. of Dragoons, Lieut. W. Armstrong to be adjutant, vice Boyd—13th Reg. of Light Dragoons, A. Brown to be cornet, vice Campbell—3d Reg. of Foot Guards, Col. J. Clitherow to be lieutenant-colonel, vice H. W. Rooke; Lieut.-Col. W. A. Keate to be major, with the rank of colonel, vice Clitherow; Lieut.-Col. C. Hall to be captain of a company—1st Reg. of Foot, Ensign J. Ogilvy to be lieutenant, vice O'Brien; Francis Lucas to be ensign, vice Ogilvy—7th ditto, Lieut. A. Chambre to be lieutenant, vice John Morritt—8th ditto, Lieut. T. P. Lang to be captain, vice Hailes—9th ditto, B. H. Heathcote to be ensign, vice Ogle—10th ditto, Assistant-Surgeon E. S. Graham, M. D. to be surgeon, vice Young—11th ditto, Ensign T. A. Bell to be lieutenant, vice Mitchell; J. Goold to be ensign, vice Bell—17th ditto, Capt. J. W. Bouverie to be captain, vice Grey; S. C. Hilton, to be ensign, vice Deedes—18th ditto, T. R. Auldjo to be ensign, vice Young—19th ditto, Capt. A. Taylor to be captain, vice V. Raymond—20th ditto, Lieut. D. O'Brien to be lieutenant, vice Thatcher—21st Reg. of Foot, Lieut. T. E. Bigge to be lieutenant, vice Hammill—22d ditto, Ensign J. B. Gough to be lieutenant, vice Butler—25th ditto, Ensign R. W. Mansergh to be lieutenant, vice Lynch; W. W. Stanton to be ensign, vice Mansergh—31st ditto, Hospital-Assistant G. Minty to be assistant-surgeon, vice Graham—37th ditto, Lieut. Z. Thatcher to be lieutenant, vice Hartley—40th ditto, Lieut. R. Olpherts to be lieutenant, vice Robertson—44th ditto, Lieut. A. G. Gledstanes to be adjutant, vice Woollard—45th ditto, Lieut. E. H. Foster to be lieutenant, vice Blakeway—53d ditto, Capt. R. F. Hill, to be captain, vice J. Morton Stuart—60th ditto, Lieut. T. C. Hammill to be lieutenant, vice Sweeny—63d ditto, Capt. T. Fairtlough to be major, vice Arbuthnot; Lieut. J. Briggs to be captain, vice Fairtlough—64th ditto, G. Goring to be ensign, vice Hunter—65th ditto, Capt. J. Wood to be captain, vice Seymour; A. H. L. Wyatt to be ensign, vice Dundas—66th ditto, Ensign T. H. Johnston to be lieutenant, vice Murray—75th ditto, Capt. F. Hammond to be captain, vice A. M'Laine—76th ditto, Lieut. G. Beere to be lieutenant, vice H. Cornwall—80th ditto, Ensign J. Thomas to be lieutenant, vice Molony; Cornet T. Cood to be ensign, vice Thomas—82d Reg. of Foot, Lieut. S. Holdsworth to be paymaster, vice Williams—89th ditto, Capt. E. Thorp to be captain, vice E. G. Smith—92d ditto, Lieut. Duncan Macpherson to be captain, vice Donaldson; Lieut. J. A. Robertson to be lieutenant, vice Macpherson—93d ditto, J. R. Johnston to be ensign, vice Delancey—96th ditto, Lieut. P. Mitchell to be captain, vice Borlase—97th ditto, Lieut. T. Lynch to be captain, vice Colthurst. To be Lieutenants, 98th ditto—Lieut. H. S. Maxwell, vice Dutton; Ensign A. C. Gregory, vice Allan. To be Ensign, by purchase—J. H. Armstrong, vice Gregory—99th ditto, Hospital-Assistant W. Dobson to be assistant-surgeon—Rifle Brigade, —— Smith to be second lieutenant, vice Vivian—1st West India Regiment, Lieutenant Richard Earra Walton to be lieutenant, vice Warner—2d ditto, Ensign W. M'Pherson to be lieutenant, vice Olpherts; P. C. Codd to be ensign, vice Macpherson; Lieut. A. Fraser to be paymaster, vice Stopford.—Cape Corps (Cavalry), Lieut. J. Blakeway to be adjutant and lieutenant, vice Foster.—Cape Corps (Infantry), Lieut. Armstrong to be captain, vice Stuart; Ensign H. D. Warden to be lieutenant, vice Armstrong; J. North, to be ensign, vice Warden.—Royal African Colonial Corps, Brevet Lieut.-Col. H. Rainey to be captain, vice C. Dowson. To be Lieutenants, without purchase—Ensign J. M. Calder, vice Dowling; Ensign J. Stapleton, vice Splaine. To be Ensign—Volunteer G. E. Hartley, vice Stapleton. To be Adjutant—Lieut. R. Fitz Gerald Ring, vice Patterson. Hospital Staff—Hospital-Assistant R. Dyce, M. D. to be assistant-surgeon, vice Melin. To be Hospital Assistants—H. Mackesey, vice Dyce; R. Johnstone, M.D. vice Minty.

Unattached.—To be Lieutenant-Colonels of Infantry, by purchase—Major S. Stawell, from the 12th Light Dragoons; Major C. G. J. Arbuthnot, from the 63d Foot. To be Major of Infantry, by purchase—Capt. H. Hailes, from the 8th Foot. To be Captains of Infantry, by purchase—Lieut. H. W. Hartley, from 37th Foot; Lieut. E. Butler, from 22d Foot; Lieut. G. Allan, from 98th Foot; Lieut. N. Nash, from 4th Dragoon Guards; Lieut. W. Murray, from 66th Foot. To be Lieutenant of Infantry, by purchase—Ensign T. Hunter, from 64th Foot. To be Ensigns, by purchase—G. J. Rush, J. E. Wetherall.

BANKRUPTS.

William Massey, Heaton Norriss, Lancaster, cotton-manufacturer. Solicitors, Messrs. Hurd and Johnson, Temple.

Abraham Haworth and John Whitehead, Lever Banks, Bolton, Lancaster, calico-printers. Solicitors, Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and Faulkner, Bedford-row.

Samuel Proctea, Calverley, Yorkshire, clothier. Solicitors, Messrs. Stocker and Dawson, New Boswell-court.

William Lowes, Liverpool, broker. Solicitors, Messrs. Steel and Nicol, Queen-street, Cheapside.

Robert Ford, Bridgewater, Somerset, merchant. Solicitors, Messrs. Holme, Frampton, and Loftus, New-inn.

Theophilus Ward Cooper, Liverpool, manufacturing chemist. Solicitors, Messrs. Ellis, Sons, Walmsley, and Gorton, Chancery-lane.

Charles King, Cranbrook, Kent, banker. Solicitor, Mr. John Pearson, Pump-court, Temple.

John Brown, Shadwell, plumber. Solicitor, Mr. Baddeley, Leman-street, Goodman's-fields.

Daniel Wood, Milk-street, Cheapside, woollen-warehouseman. Solicitors, Messrs. Tomlinson, Bennett, and Cooper, Copthall-court.

William Forn, Broadway, Blackfriars, tea-dealer. Solicitors, Messrs. Tottie, Richardson, and Gannt, Poultry.

Jeremiah Bridgman, Spicer-street, Bethnal-green, tallow-chandler. Solicitor, Mr. Thompson, George-street, Minories.

John Proudfoot, Queen-street, Cheapside, tallow-chandler. Solicitor, Mr. Rushbury, Carthusian-street, Aldersgate-street.

William Lewin Levin, Grove-lane, Camberwell, merchant. Solicitor, Mr. Robinson, Walbrook.

DIVIDENDS.

Oct. 15, H. Hall, Kingsland, broker—Oct. 25, T. Park, Dunbridge, Gloucester, woolstapler—Oct 31, N. Berry, Huddersfield, merchant—Oct. 24, T. Westenholme, Sheffield, hair seating manufacturer—Oct. 8, J. Barlow, Merton, Surrey, millwright—Oct. 24, J. Manlfold, Kendal, Westmorland, skinner.

CERTIFICATES.—Oct. 22.

T. Batten, Great Titchfield-street, tailor—J. Foulkes, Wood-street, Cheapside, tea dealer—T. Waring, St. John-street-road, carpenter—S. Field, Smithfield, wine and spirit merchant.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. Brundrett, J. Spinks, and E. Reddish, Inner Temple, attornies.—H. Geere, jun. and T. Geere, timber-dealers, Stratford.—R. Gray, R. Monro, and W. Campbell, Oporto.—S. Slater and F. Shenton, Derby, slaters.—R. Constantine and R. Holcroft, Warrington, linen drapers.—C. Ratherham and J. Creed, Birmingham, platers.—T. Kittrick and R. Flaxman, Davies-street, Berkeley-square, plumbers.—R. Dennett, W. Greaves, L. S. Baxendale, and M. Tatham, London.—W. Steven, A. Prince, and C. Dawson, Edinburgh.—P. Ewart and J. Ewart, Liverpool and Manchester, cotton spinners.—J. Bentley and H. Bentley, Cow-Cross-street, West Smithfield, smiths.—A. Macnab, G. Bowie, and M. Macintyre, Glasgow and Gibraltar.—B. Dunnington and W. Brabant, Sunderland, butchers.—T. Ledger and T. Wastie, Radford, carriage-manufacturers.—J. M. Garrett and J. Timpson, Lee-Green, builders.—T. Ogden, R. Ogden, S. Marland, and J. Frost, Manchester.—G. Marrison and J. Larkin, Norwich, dyers.—C. S. Taylor and J. Newton, Chippenham, clothiers.—C. Simson and A. Lister, Copthall-buildings, Throgmorton-street, attornies.—J. Wild, J. Dearden, jun. and J. Widdall, Greenacres-Moor, cotton-spinners.—J. Webster and P. Ward, Southcoates, millers.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

Commission in the Royal South Gloucester Militia, signed by the Lord Lieutenant of the County, and County and City of Gloucester, and of the County and City of Bristol—Ensign Robert Bloxham to be Lieutenant.

BANKRUPTS.

John Taistram, Willenhall, Staffordshire, iron-master. Sols. Messrs. Williams and White, Lincoln's-inn.

Thomas Sutcliffe, Langfield, Yorkshire, cotton-spinner. Sols. Messrs. Kaye and Whittaker, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn.

John Kincaid, Spital-square, Norton Falgate, silk-manufacturer. Sol. Mr. Collins, Spital-square.

Henry Frederick Coley, Broad-street, wine-merchant. Sol. Mr. Wadeson, Austin Friars.

James Houghton, Manchester, linen-draper. Sols. Messrs. Sweet, Stokes, and Carr, Basinghall-street.

DIVIDENDS.

Oct. 18, A. Mallinson and J. Mallinson, Huddersfield, woolstaplers—Oct. 21, J. Hill, Carlisle, mercer—Nov. 7, A. Gatenby, Manchester, wholesale grocer—Oct. 24, G. Hart, Cheltenham, stone-mason—Oct. 22, J. Gough, Dursley, Gloucestershire, linen-draper—Oct. 24, A. Little, Bradford, Yorkshire, grocer—Oct. 18, T. Flaherty, Bath, tailor.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

F. Hall, F. Hall, jun. J. Todd, and S. T. Hassell, Hull, merchants, so far as relates to F. Hall, sen.—C. Simpson, E. Simpson, T. Cox, W. Dallison, T. Dallison, and W. Dallison, jun. Derby, bobbin-net and bobbin-net machine manufacturers—C. Everard and E. Hetcher, Cavendish-street, Cavendish-square, milliners—J. Lyon and J. Haskey, Lincoln, drapers—G. Hall and J. Tetlow, Manchester, patent power loom makers—J. Houghton, G. Horbury, C. Walton, C. Stuart, and J. Mitchell, Barnsley, linen-manufacturers, so far as relates to C. Walton—Thos. Dyson and D. Dyson, Lindley, Yorkshire, stone-masons—T. Bailey and W. Corbett, Nottingham, machine builders.

Private letters from Paris, received yesterday, state, that the following were the prices of the French Funds on Wednesday: Five per Cents. 99f. 15c.; Threes, 71f. 80c.

The Olympic Theatre opened last night with considerable eclat, and we shall notice them fully hereafter. They must secure some females of consequence.

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE TAUGHT IN THREE MONTHS. Professor F——, removed from Chancery Lane to 56, High Holborn, continues to give Lessons at home and abroad, with an incomparable success. His system is a fashionable conversation, so dexterously united with theory, and so agreeable, that pupils are warranted to understand it before one month's instruction, and without the trouble of learning by heart.——Furnished apartments, with or without board. Apply at 56, High Holborn, opposite Great Turn-Style.

This day is published, in 12mo. price 7s. boards,

A CENTURY of SURGEONS on GONORRHŒA, and on STRICTURES of the URETHRA.

"Multum in Parvo."

Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY OF GREAT BRITAIN, and most of the Nobility and Gentry, use now PRINCE's celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints; but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even eminent medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Grant has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair.—Also a Gentleman, turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark; it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oils it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children, and if used constantly not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair, will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying—'Tell the truth, and fear nobody.' If persons are bald, and the roots are entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone, by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely, if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil—the Ounce Bottle 5s.; a large bottle containing Five Ounces, 1*l.* which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A Prince, No. 9, Poland-Street, Oxford Street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose.—Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses, with counterfeit Russia Oil, saving it is the genuine.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER, (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture, of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1s. 4d.	1s. 6d.	and	1s. 9d.	per lb.
Best Grey Goose		2s.	and	2s. 6d.
Excellent White Goose		3s.
Real White Dantzic		3s. 3d.	and	3s. 6d.
Hudson Bay, Mecklenbergh, &c.

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell, as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.

	l. s. d.		l. s. d.
Feather Beds, from	2 5 0	to	3 3 0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3 10 0	to	5 10 0
Best White Dantzic Beds	4 10 0	to	6 10 0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only			8 10 0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0 15 0	to	1 4 0

MATTRESSES.

Mattresses	0 10 0	to	1 8 0
Real Horse Hair and Wool Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliass	0 14 0	to	1 4 0

BEDSTEADS.—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES.—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap, and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts.—Brussels, Kidderminster, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions. Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re-made and cured of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's Buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half-mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

 Please to observe the name of SLATER.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.---Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS.---Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor ---Liverpool through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle and Congleton ---Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne and Chippenham ---Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton and Collumpton. --Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford and Dorchester ---Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke and Macclesfield.---Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles).---Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston and Garstang.---Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.---Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.---Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.---Milford Hoven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen ---The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES.--Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock.---Holyhead (the Eclipse in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock.---Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock.---Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning at a quarter before nine ---Liverpool (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock.-- Windsor and Eton coaches daily.---Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport, every day at five ---Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two.---Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock ---Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four ---Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half past five.---Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock.---Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six ---Coventry light 4-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six ---Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon ---Chester and Park-Gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock.---Worcester coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock ---Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five.---Tamworth, Atherstone, and Hinchley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock ---Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four ---Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock ---Dudley and Stourbridge 4-inside post coach, every afternoon at five ---Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening.---Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening ---Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares.---Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse), through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning without additional expence; the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.---Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five ---Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two ---Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.---Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two ---Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)---Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning.---Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock ---Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N. B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom

W. Waterhouse and Co. Proprietors.

††† The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5*l*, unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage, to them or their agents---Goods insured at a moderate rate.

TO Families Travelling, Promenading, and Enjoying Aquatic Excursions, Bathing, &c. the following inestimable requisites are especially recommended:

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for the complexion,

which immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, produces a delightful and pleasing Coolness to the Face, Arms, &c.; removes Freckles, Pimples, Spots, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

Also ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for the Hair,

The Original and Genuine.

This Oil is pre-eminently successful in nourishing the Hair, preserving it while travelling, preventing its falling off in cases of illness, and has the unrivalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; 10s. 6d.; and 21s. per bottle.—Also,

ROWLAND'S ALSANA EXTRACT,

For the Teeth and Gums, and Preventing the Tooth-Ache.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, and Bottles; which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing any of the above to ask for "Rowland's," strictly observing the signature and address in red, "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden."

Sold by appointment, Wholesale, by Mr. R. Hendrie, (Perfumer to His Majesty), Titchbourn street; Mr. Smyth, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, Holmes, Thevenot, and Brewster, New Bond-street; Messrs. Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Messrs. Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Mr. Atkinson, Gerrard-st.; Mr. Butler, chemist, 4, Cheapside; Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet-market; Mr. Rigge. 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 67, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Dunn and Thwaite, Hatton-garden; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; and Retail by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. Bradberry has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 38, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom. Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. Peden, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6s. each. or cases of four bottles for 1*l.* forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.——

BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the Axe Inn, Aldermanbury, every Morning, at a Quarter-past Six, and the Old White Horse Cellar, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the Christopher Inn, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the Rummer Tavern, Bristol, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside . . . . 2*l.* 5*s.* Outside . . . . . . 1*l.* 1*s.*

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1*s.* 6*d.* per Head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3*s.* per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the Axe Inn, Aldermanbury, at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the Old White Horse Cellar, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, &c.

FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l.* 18*s.* Outside . . . . 0*l.* 18*s.*

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2*s.* 6*d.* per Head, including Waiters.

BRIGHTON, IN SIX HOURS.

The Company's Brighton New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the Axe Inn, Aldermanbury, every Day at Half-past One o'Clock, Sundays excepted, (and calls at the Elephant and Castle,) to No. 5, Castle Square, Brighton.

FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l.* 1*s.* Outside . . . . 12*s.*

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

By Order of the Directors,

Axe Inn, Aldermanbury. C. BURTON, Secretary.

TO FAMILIES.

To prevent Baldness and all Complaints incident to the want of the nutriment Nature has provided, there is nothing equal to the

GENUINE MACASSAR OIL, IMPORTED BY PRICE AND GOSNELL,

PERFUMERS TO HIS MAJESTY, No. 12, Three King Court, Lombard Street; who have sold it, pure and unadulterated, for the last thirty years, and who, in fact, first introduced it to the notice of a British Public. Price and Gosnell's Macassar Oil possesses a richness superior to any other Oil, and will retain the moisture much longer, leaving the hair soft and silky, and increasing its thickness and growth. They therefore respectfully beg to caution the Public at large against the pretensions of base impostors, (falsely styling themselves importers,) who imitate every popular article produced; and as some persons have been imposed upon by these miscreants, Price and Gosnell, the sole Proprietors and only importers, (which has been proved by the Import List daily published, and sworn before the Lord Mayor,) of the Genuine Macassar Oil, wishing to protect the Nobility and Gentry from imposition, have, at a very great expense, affixed a label (with an engraving from a design by Sir Wm. Congreve, of extreme difficulty of execution, on the outside of each bottle, with their names and address in full thereon, which purchasers are particularly requested to observe; and as a further security, every genuine bottle is signed in red ink in their own handwriting, to counterfeit which is Felony.—Price 3s. 6d. 10s. 6d. and 21s. each bottle.

Caution to Families.—As many venders sell the "spurious Macassar Oil," the profit on which is much greater than on the Genuine, and as the appearance of the label, at first sight, may deceive the unguarded; in order to prevent such fraud and consequently the destruction (by the use of the deleterious composition) of the greatest ornament Nature has bestowed upon the human race—the hair. Purchasers are requested to ask for "Price and Gosnell's Macassar Oil"

BIRTHS.

On the 14th ult. at Dublin, the lady of Col. Holmes, C. B. 3d Dragoon Guards, of a son.—On the 23d ult. at Bath, the lady of Capt. Elton, R. N. of a son.—On the 24th ult. at Ewell, the lady of Capt. Lempriere, Royal Horse Artillery, of a daughter.—On the 25th ult. the lady of the Rev. John Peel, of a son.—On the 27th ult. at his house in Russell square, the lady of George Darling, M. D. of a daughter.

MARRIED.

A. Fletcher, Esq. of Salton Castle, East Lothian, to Lady Charlotte Charteris, fourth daughter of the Earl of Wemyss and March.—On the 21st ult. the Rev. John Baker, LL.B. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, to Charlotte, youngest daughter of the late Major-General Kersteman, of the Royal Engineers.—On the 23d ult. Henry R. Bullock, Esq. Captain in the 1st Life Guards, to Miss Charlotte Hall, second daughter of John Hall, Esq. of Weston Colville.—On the 24th ult. at Doncaster, Lieut.-General Sharpe, of Hoddam, to Jane, daughter of Godfrey Higgins, Esq. of Shellow Grange, Yorkshire.—Same day, at Greenwich, Wm. Buchanan, Esq. of Finsbury Terrace, to Jane, eldest daughter of Joseph Foskett, Esq. of Riegate, Surrey.—On the 28th ult. Joseph Jacobs, Esq. of Egremont-place, New-road, to Margaret, fourth daughter of the late Lieutenant-General Gammell.—Same day, William E. Hartopp, Esq. to Jane Mary, eldest daughter of Henry B. Keane, Esq.—Same day, Mr. J. Adam, of Liverpool, to Penelope, third daughter of Mr. Alexander Adam, of Kensington.—Mr. J. N. Gardner to Miss Foxall.—Colonel T. Foster to Miss Lamotte, second daughter of John Lagier Lamotte, Esq.—On the 27th ult. H. W. Maceaughey, Esq. of Tottenham, to Lucinda, second daughter of J. Arbouin, Esq. of Brunswick-square.—Same day, John Hornidge, Esq. of Great Ormond-street, to Anna Maria, fifth daughter of John Dickinson, Esq.—Same day, Francis Burton, Esq. M. D. of the 12th regiment of Lancers, to Sarah, eldest daughter of the late Richard Baker, Esq. of Barham House.

DIED.

On the 12th of April last, at Arequipa, in Peru, George Cood, Esq.—On the 14th ult. aged 64, the Rev. Whitehead Dennis, M. A. of Queen's College, Oxford.—On the 19th ult. at Bath, Mrs. Elizabeth Bulcock, only daughter of the late J. Bulcock, Esq.—On the 20th ult. aged 20, Charlotte, wife of Robert Mangles, Esq.—On the 23d ult. Mrs. Ware, wife of Samuel Ware, Esq. of Highgate, in the 81st year of her age.—Same day, at Cheltenham, the infant son of Wm. Ashton, Esq.—On the 25th ult. at Worthing, in the 26th year of her age, Mary Elizabeth Margaret, fourth daughter of Walter Boyd, of Plaistow Lodge, Esq. M. P.—On the 26th ult. Henry Knight, Esq. Vice-Lieutenant of the county of Glamorgan.—On the 28th ult. Diana, the wife of P. M. Latham, of Lower Grosvenor-street, and youngest daughter of the Hon. Major-General Chetwynd Stapylton.—On the 25th ult. at Turnham Green, Mrs. Elizabeth Hector, of Gower-street, Bedford-square, widow, aged 76.—On the 26th ult. at Hornsey, in the 8th year of her age, Mary Ann, youngest daughter of Wm. Moreton, Jun. Esq.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

ALBION CLUB

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 22. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday, the tragic play of Pizarro. Rolla, Mr. Wallack; Elvira, Mrs. Bunn; Cora, Mrs. W. West.—After which will be produced (for the first time at this theatre) the Romantic Melo Drama of Valentine and Orson, with new scenery, dresses, and decorations.

On Tuesday—(74th time at this theatre) Der Freischutz.
On Thursday—The tragedy of King Richard the Third; Duke of Glo'ster, Mr. Booth.
On Saturday—The Comedy of the Road to Ruin.

Old Dornton, Mr. Williams, (his third appearance on this stage); Harry Dornton, Mr. Wallack; Goldfinch, Mr. Harley; Sulky, Mr. W. Bennett; Widow Warren, Mrs. Davison; Sophia, Miss Kelly.

The last new Romantic Drama of Faustus will be repeated next week.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry & Yates, on Monday next, October 10, 1825, when will be presented, for the first time, by way of dramatic introduction, a personal Prelude, or Piece, and no Piece, in one Act, called THE OPENING NIGHT. Principal Characters, by Messrs. Terry, Yates, Wrench, J. Reeve, and Mrs. Fitzwilliam.—After which, for the first time, an entirely new comic historical Burletta, in three Acts, called KILLIGREW; or, King Charles at Tunbridge Wells.—Principal Characters, by Messrs. T. P. Cooke, Yates, J. Reeve, and Terry; Miss F. Brunton, Mrs. Tayleure, Mrs. Fitzwilliam, Miss Bodeu. A grand Ballet, by Mr. W. Kirby.—The Evening's Entertainments to conclude with the favorite Burletta, in one Act, called NO DINNER YET!

Boxes, 4s.—Pit, 2s.—Gal. 1s.—Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.—Half-price, at Half-past Eight.—Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—On Monday, Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Fortune's Frolic.

On Tuesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and a Day after the Wedding.
On Wednesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and the Sleeping Draught.
On Thursday—Paul Pry, with Deaf as a Post, and other Entertainments.
On Friday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry.

ROYAL COBURG THEATRE.—First Night of the celebrated American Tragedian!—Of a new Melo-Dramatic Romance, and Third Week of the Spy of the Neutral Ground.

On Monday next will be performed, for the first time, a new Tragic Melo Drama, in three acts, to be called THE REVOLT OF SURINAM, or, the Slave's Revenge. The part of Oroonoko, by Mr. KEENE, (from the African Theatre, New York, his first appearance); Aboan, first time, Mr. Bengough.—After which will be produced an entirely new serio-comic Melo-Drame, in two acts, called THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER, or the Cave of St. Cataldo. Mysterious Stranger, Mr. Cobham.—The whole to conclude with THE SPY OF THE NEUTRAL GROUND, or the American War in 1780.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—On Monday evening, October 10, and during the week, will be performed, A RACE FOR A WIFE.—After which first time, these two years) the Comic Burletta of the TWO GREGORIES, or, Where does the Money come from? Fanchette, Mrs. Baker, her first appearance this season.—The whole to conclude with the splendid new serious Burletta of OMALA, or Settlers in America, with entirely new scenery, by Mr. Tomkins.

Mr. Vining and Mr. Dobbs will appear in Two new Burlettas on Monday, 31st inst. Mrs. Waylett is also engaged; due notice will be given of her appearance.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—LAST WEEK. Great Novelty.—For the benefit of Mrs. WEST.

On Monday, Oct. 10, M. Ducrow's second representation (and positively for this night only) of his comic scene in the Circle, of the DEATH OF GENERAL JACKO! M. Duerow's wonderful performance of the Indian Hunter, on Two Wild Coursers. Madame Bell, from Franconi's, Paris, will make her first appearance, and go through a variety of elegant feats on a single horse. A new grand Equestrian Scene in the Circle, invented by M. Ducrow, called the KNIGHTS OF PALESTINE. The performance to commence precisely at Six o'clock, with the BURNING OF MOSCOW, and to conclude with the new Melo-drame, in Two Acts, called THE FELON'S HATE, or the Valley of Chamouni.

Tickets and Places for the Boxes to be taken at the Box Office from Ten to Four.
Boxes, 4s.—Pit, 2s.—Gal. 1s.—Doors open at Half-past Five.

DIORAMA, REGENT'S PARK.—The present Views are the RUINS of HOLYROOD CHAPEL, a Moonlight Scene, and the Interior of CHARTRES CATHEDRAL.—Open daily from Ten till Four o'clock.

N. B. Between Eleven and Three o'clock is the best time to view the Diorama.

EXHIBITION (at No. 8, Soho-square, near the Bazaar) OF MODELS OF THE MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN SWITZERLAND, upon a very large scale, by which the Artist has been enabled to combine the most faithful representations of the natural grandeur of Swiss scenery, with the most perfect accuracy of detail. That of Mont Blanc, including the Valley of Chamouni, 14 feet by 8, is eminently calculated to give a correct idea of this magnificent object, with its snowy mantles, its extensive glaciers, and the numerous needles by which it is surrounded. Also a Model, upon a large scale, of that wonderful work of Buonaparte's, the Road over Simplon into Italy. One of Mont Righi, with the Valley Goldau, represented in the state of devastation caused by the falling of the Rosberg, in 1806. One of the Passage of St. Gothard and the Devil's Bridge. Also the interesting Passage of Mont Cenis. Models of the Cities of Geneva and Edinburgh: and various others, all executed with due regard to accuracy and effect.—Admission 1s.—Small Models of the above made for Sale.

A regular Trader.—To succeed the Prince Regent.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine coppered ship, PRINCESS CHARLOTTE, burthen 400 Tons, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander; will load in the London Dock. Has very superior accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to BUCKLES, BAGSTER, and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

FOR OCTOBER.

THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY'S PACKETS start from off the Custom-house or the Tower, for

CALAIS, every Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday;
BOULOGNE, every Tuesday and Friday;
OSTEND, every Saturday;
HAMBURGH, every other Saturday; being 8th and 22d;
YARMOUTH, every Thursday Morning;
RAMSGATE and BROADSTAIRS, every Wednesday and Saturday, at Eight o'clock;
MARGATE, every Tuesday and Thursday, at Nine o'clock;
NEWHAVEN to DIEPPE every Saturday, calling at BRIGHTON PIER when the weather permits;
RAMSGATE to CALAIS, every Friday;
And RAMSGATE to BOULOGNE, every Monday.

For the convenience and safety of the Public, the time of Starting is regulated to secure the entrance of the Packets into the Harbours on arrival.

Full information may be had at the Agents, viz.—Mr. Saunders, Calais and Boulogne, Mr. Chapman, Dieppe; Mr. Crowe, Ostend, Mr. Delaval, Hamburgh; Mr. Galignani, Paris; Messrs. Laws and Son, Yarmouth; Messrs. Squire and Edwards, Norwich; Mr. Carter, Margate; Mr. Black, Lneumbe's Library, Brighton; Mr. Martin, Ramsgate; Bull and Mouth, Western Coach-office, 40, Regent Circus, Piccadilly; Sharpus, 13, Cockspur street; Middleton, 359, Exeter 'Change, Strand; Steven's Hotel, Bond-street; Brown's, corner of Park-street, Oxford-street; Murray, 63, Fleet street, corner of Bouverie-street; Regent Bazaar, New Road; at the Custom-house Quay, and at the Company's Office, 24, Crutched Friars.

CHAS. BESSELL, Secretary.

N. B.—The Half-yearly Dividend at the rate of 16l. per cent. per annum, together with a Bonus of 7s. per Share, may be received by the Proprietors, at the Company's Office, every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 11 to 3 o'clock. The Transfer Books will be open on the 10th of October.

TO CAPITALISTS and BUILDERS.—To be LET, within four miles of the Royal Exchange, and four miles and a half of the West end of the Town, about THREE HUNDRED ACRES OF LAND, for Building Purposes.

The situation of this estate is unrivalled in point of beauty and convenience, and commands finer and more delightfully picturesque prospects than any other situation in the immediate vicinity of town.

The Estate will be let either altogether, or in parcels.

A few affluent individuals would find in the entirety of this property a rare opportunity for certain and substantial investment, the rent required is decidedly moderate, and the terms otherwise advantageous.

Immediate possession can be given of the greater part of the Estate.

For further particulars and terms apply to Messrs. Handley and Wing, solicitors, 6, Gray's-inn-square; and Messrs. Leverton and Moore, surveyors, Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn fields.

MONEY IMMEDIATELY, upon Mortgage and Annuity.—The great inconvenience and trouble incidental to transactions of this kind are too generally known but not explained; the advertiser therefore, from his opulent connections and mode of conducting business, which renders every facility in favour of both parties, flatters himself that he can procure Gentlemen and Ladies loans, however large, either upon property or personal security, provided the property is entailed without restriction upon the party desirous of borrowing.—Apply personally, or by letter, postage free, to Mr. G. at letter A. No. 8, Carlton Chambers, Regent-street, Pall-mall, St. James's.—Attendance from 11 to 5.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street,

By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries	sung by	Mr. Braham, 2s.
What blissful visions		ditto, 2s.
Thus lowly bending		Mr. Atkins, 2s.
Blest light of heaven		Chorus 2s.
Now bid with our joyous		ditto, 2s.
Silly woman		Miss Paton, 2s.
Sire, to me		ditto, 2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision		ditto, 2s.
Where now are flown		Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Whilst here in anguish		ditto, 2s.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet		Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Evening now softly closing, ditto		Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio		Paton, Boden, and Thorne, 2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto		Paton, Hamilton, and Boden, 2s.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also		Miss Paton, 1s. 6d.
Why didst thou leave me	ditto	ditto, 2s.
Oh, turn again on me love	ditto	ditto, 2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow	ditto	ditto, 1s. 6d.
My morning prayer	ditto	ditto, 1s. 6d.
In young life's morning		Mr. Thorne, 2s.
Her I love so dearly		Mr. Broadhurst, 2s.
Though sorrow may come		Miss Stephens, 2s.
In such a bustle		Miss Kelly, 2s.
Oh, I could weep		Mr. Thorne, 2s.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variation, 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
4. Kelvin grove, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
5. Love, good night, variations, 2s. 6d.
6. Green grow the rushes, O! do. 2s. 6d.

A large assortment of single and double action Harps, Square, Cottage, Cabinet, and Grand Piano Fortes, by the most approved makers, at the manufacturers' prices.—Also a variety of second-hand Piano Fortes and Harps for sale.

Piano Fortes and Harps lent on hire.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	1	6
The Lord's Prayer (an Antbem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can he waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6

(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)

The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Serony (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular PIANO-FORTES; also HARPS, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

 Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

NEW PIANO-FORTE MUSIC, published by CLEMENTI and Co. 26, Cheapside.—Aria all' Inglese, variations, Calkin, 3s.—Les Charms de la Waltz, by Kalkbreuner, 3s.—Giovinetto Cavalier, from Il Crociato, by Meyes, 3s.—March from ditto by ditto, 3s.—Soave imagine, from ditto, by ditto, 3s.—Set of Quadrilles, selected from ditto, by Craven, 3s.—Dulce Domum, variations, by Rawlings, 3s.—Beethoven, 3 Waltzes as Duets, by Turle, 3s.—Di tanti palpiti, Rondo, Adams, 3s.—Non piu andrai, variations, Pexis, 4s.—Hargitt's Recreations, books 1 and 2, each 3s.—Clifton's Exercises, books 1 and 2, 3s.—Brown Thorn, variations, Hoffman, 3s.—Rondo, from Abou Hassan, by Hewitt, 2s. 6d.—Holst's Airs, from Ricciardo, Nos. 1 to 4, each 2s.—Holst's 4 Airs, from Zelmira, each 2s.—Potter's Rondo Scherzando, 3s.—Poole's French Air, 2s.—Webbe's German Air, 2s. 6d.

This day is published, in 4 vols. 12mo. price 1l. 2s.

THE BRAZEN MASK, a Romance, by Mrs. Charlotte Putney, Author of Cora, &c.

Printed for A. K. NEWMAN and Co. London,

Where may be had, published this Summer,

Henry, by Richard Cumberland, Esq. 4th edition, 4 vols. 1l. 2s.
Evelina, by the Author of Cecilia, &c. new edition, 2 vols. 8s.
George Barnwell, by T. Surr, 5th edition, 3 vols. 16s. 6d.
Midnight Bell, a Romance, by Francis Lathom, 2d Edition, 3 vols. 15s.
Discarded Son, or Haunt of the Banditti, by Regina M. Roche, Author of the Children of the Abbey, &c. 2d edition, 5 vols. 1l. 10s.
St. Clair of the Isles, by Mrs. Helme, 3d edition, 4 vols. 1l.
Stranger of the Valley, an American Tale, 3 vols. 16s. 6d.

BOOKS printed for W. BENBOW, No. 252, HIGH HOLBORN; and which may be had of all Booksellers in Town and Country.

1. The BEAUTIES of LORD BYRON'S POETICAL WORKS; consisting of the most beautiful striking passages in his Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, the Giaour, Bride of Abydos, and other pieces. With an Index referring to the passages that describe the passions and affections of the mind and heart. With a Dissertation on Byron's Works, by T. Parry, Esq. 18mo. 318 pages, price 3s. 6d. boards.

N. B.—Beware of a counterfeit edition of about half the size of Parry's edition.

2. DON JUAN a Poem, by Lord Byron, Cantos I. to XVI. complete, uniformly printed with the preceding work. A thick volume, price 5s.

3. CAIN, a Mystery, by Lord Byron, uniformly printed with the foregoing. Price 1s. 6d.

The other works of Lord Byron are also reprinting in the same uniform size, and all corrected at the Press by the most careful hands. Among others—1. Hours of Idleness, his Lordship's Juvenile Poems, price 2s. 6d.—2. English Bards, and Scotch Reviewers, a Satire, price 6d.—3. His Miscellaneous Poems; those which appeared singly from time to time, on several occasions, and are unquestionably the most charming Scintillæ of his pen. Finely and correctly printed for the first time. Price 1s 6d.

4. POEMS, by Thomas Little, Esq. uniform with Byron's pieces, and complete as the very first edition, without abridgment or curtailment of any sort whatever. Price 2s. 6d. boards.

5. HARRIETTE WILSON. The memoirs of this too famous courtezan are printed and sold separately in neat pocket volumes, at 4s. each in boards.

Persons treating for quantities treated with on liberal terms.

6. The CONFESSIONS of JULIA JOHNSTONE, long time the bosom friend of Harriette Wilson; in which the reader will find a complete developement of the schemes, the lies, and motives to calumny in La belle Harriette, and her bête of a publisher. One vol. 18mo. price 5s. boards.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed—Lessons at home or abroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 104, High Holbor.

ALBION FIRE and LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,

NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS,

EMPOWERED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

CAPITAL—ONE MILLION.

THE Directors have resolved, that, with certain Exceptions, the Premiums of Fire Insurances effected with this Company, of the three ordinary Classes, shall be reduced as follows:—viz.

Insurances of the first Class, to 1s. 6d. per cent.
Of the second Class - - 2s. 6d.
And of the third Class - 4s. 6d.

Fire Policies, the Renewals of which became due at Michaelmas, will expire, unless renewed on or before the 14th of October instant.

The Company continues to undertake Insurances on Lives, on liberal terms. No charge is made on such Insurances, in the way of Admission Fine, or Entrance Money;—and a large Commission is allowed to Solicitors, and others, by whom such Insurances are effected.

7th Oct. 1825. WARNER PHIPPS, Secretary.

SURREY, SUSSEX, and SOUTHWARK FIRE and LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY,

ST. MARGARET'S HILL, SOUTHWARK,

CAPITAL ONE MILLION, IN SHARES OF 100*l.* EACH.

DIRECTORS.

Chairman—Charles Calvert, Esq. M. P.
Deputy Chairman—Jas. Horne, Esq.

Thomas B. Burbidge, Esq.	Jacob Hagen, Esq.
Thomas Christy, jun. Esq.	Robert Kirby, Esq.
Jesse Curling, Esq.	W. Woodbridge Nash, Esq.
William Curteis, Esq.	Richard Price, Esq.
Joseph Ellis, Esq.	T. Allen Shuter, Esq.
Thomas Farncomb, Esq.	Daniel Watney, Esq.
Charles Francis, Esq.	Benjamin Wood, Esq.

AUDITORS.

Florance Young, Esq.	Emanuel Silva, Esq.
Thomas Bush, Esq.

This Company has been formed upon principles combining the most perfect security, with advantages equal to, if not greater, than those offered by any similar Institution.

The Fire and Life Departments are kept distinct, thus affording the same advantages as if the Assurances were effected at separate Offices.

Persons assured, either against Loss by Fire or upon Lives, will periodically participate in two-thirds of the Profits, without any liability on their part to contribute towards Losses.

REDUCED RATES OF ASSURANCE.

The following Reductions have taken place on the Rates of good Risks in the undermentioned Classes:—

First Class, from 2s. to 1s. 6d. per cent.
Second ditto - 3s. to 2s. 6d. ditto.
Third ditto - 5s. to 4s. 6d. ditto.

But this Reduction will not apply to Assurances, where it would bring the premium to less than 5s.

The premiums on Life Assurance are calculated on the most liberal Terms.

G. W. WILSON, Secretary.

GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.—Fire, Lives, and Annuities.—PALL MALL and CORNHILL.

DIRECTORS.

SIR GEORGE ABERCROMBIE ROBINSON, BART. CHAIRMAN.
JOSEPH DORIN, ESQ. DEPUTY CHAIRMAN.

WILLIAM ABBOTT, Esq.	EDWARD GOLDSMID, Esq.
CHARLES R. BARKER, Esq.	ISAAC L. GOLDSMID, Esq.
THOMAS BARROW, Esq.	MATTHEW ISAACS, Esq.
JONATHAN BIRCH, Esq.	JOHN LATHAM, M. D.
THOMAS BLAIR, Esq.	JOHN NEAVE, Esq.
SIR C. COCKERELL, BART. M. P.	WILLIAM PHILLIMORE, Esq.
THOMAS COLES, Esq.	FREDERICK JOHN PIGOU, Esq.
BOYCE COMBE, Esq.	PHILIP RIPLEY, Esq.
JOHN FAIRLIE, Esq.	SIR WALTER STIRLING, BART.
GEORGE FRASER, Esq.	JAMES TADDY, Esq.
GEORGE CARR GLYN, Esq.	EDWARD VACX, Esq.

Capital ONE MILLION Sterling, the whole paid up and invested, thereby affording to the Proprietors security against further calls, and to the Assured an immediate available fund for the payment of the most extensive losses.

This Company have determined to make a Reduction of Premium on the three ordinary classes of Fire Insurance, not confining it to the Country Risks, and the Villages and Districts in the outskirts of the Metropolis, and to private Dwelling-houses only in the best situations within it, but extending it generally throughout London, as well as through the country, in England and Scotland, so as to include this plain and intelligible proposition, that all Policies of those Classes hitherto charged at—

2s. are reduced to 1s. 6d. per cent per annum.
3s. - - - 2s. 6d
5s. - - - 4s. 6d.

The Company's Agents are instructed to make the same Reductions, but Farming Stock, if insured without specification, will still be charged 2s. per cent. If a sum is specified on Stock in each Building, and in each Stack-yard, or with an average clause, it may be reduced to 1s. 6d. per cent.

No Policy to be entitled to Reduction unless the Premium amounts to 5s.

By Order of the Board,
London, Sept. 20, 1825. JOHN CHARLES DENHAM, Secretary.

ESTABLISHED ANNO 1792.

THE ROYAL GLOUCESTER SCIENTIFIC RIDING and DRIVING ACADEMY, (late Jones's,

NEAR THE MAGDALEN, BLACKFRIARS' ROAD.

C. STEWARD most respectfully solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his Establishment, which, for general comfort, docility of horses, and for acquiring an easy, expeditious, and graceful system, is acknowledged to stand unrivalled in the Kingdom. C. S. begs to observe, that tuition in driving had its origin in his Academy, and one lesson will prove his superior knowledge of the above art. Perfect steady Ponies are kept for the younger branches of Families of both sexes. The School is lighted every Evening from Five to Eight o'clock, during the Winter Season, for teaching, and Subscribers for exercise.—Horses broke for every purpose, and taken in at livery.—Ladies' Horses, Gentlemen's ditto, Tandems and Gigs of the first quality, to be Let, and a Groom to attend them if required.—N. B. Horses taken in at livery.—Advice given in purchasing Horses.

TERMS.—NO ENTRANCE AND NO FINES.

RIDING.	l.	s.	d.
Six Lessons in the School	1	1	0
Single ditto	0	5	0
Per Month, or when convenient, 28 Lessons	3	13	6
Per Quarter's Subscription	5	5	0
Lesson on the Road, when complete in School	0	10	6
Per Annum	15	15	0

Lessons to be paid for on Entrance.

DRIVING.
Four in Hand, to complete	10	10	0
Curricle or Tandem, ditto	5	5	0
Single Horse, ditto	3	3	0
Single Lesson	1	1	0

Hours.—Summer Months, for Gentlemen, 6 to 12 in the Morning, and 4 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 12 to 3 o'clock.—For Gentlemen during the Winter Season, 7 in the Morning to 12, and from 3 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 12 to 3 o'clock.

None but Relatives or Friends admitted during the time of teaching Ladies.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2*l.* 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3*l.* 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s. to 14s. Merchants and Captains who expect the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT'S, TAILOR and DRAPER,
47, Fish street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence, long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, his peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every Operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE, Oct. 4.

BY THE KING.—A PROCLAMATION.

GEORGE, R.

Whereas his Majesty being at peace with all the Powers and States of Europe and of America, has repeatedly declared his royal determination to maintain a strict and impartial neutrality in the different contests in which certain of those Powers and States are engaged:

And whereas the commission of acts of hostility by individual subjects of his Majesty against any Power or State, or against the persons and properties of the subjects of any Power or State, which being at peace with his Majesty is at the same time engaged in a contest, with respect to which, his Majesty has declared his determination to be neutral, is calculated to bring into question the sincerity of his Majesty's declarations:

And whereas if his Majesty's subjects cannot be effectually restrained from such unwarranted commission of acts of hostility, it may be justly apprehended that the Governments aggrieved thereby might be unable, on their part, to restrain their subjects from committing acts of violence upon the persons and property of unoffending subjects of his Majesty:

And whereas the Ottoman Porte, a Power at peace with his Majesty, is and has been for some years past engaged in a contest with the Greeks, in which contest his Majesty has observed a strict and impartial neutrality:

And whereas great numbers of his Majesty's loyal subjects reside and carry on a beneficial commerce, and possess establishments and enjoy privileges within the dominions of the Ottoman Porte, protected by the faith of treaties between his Majesty and that Power:

And whereas his Majesty has received recent and undoubted information, that attempts are now making to induce certain of his Majesty's subjects to fit out ships of war and privateers in the ports of his Majesty's kingdom, and to embark therein, for the purpose of carrying on, under the Greek flag, hostile operations against the Ottoman Government, of capturing and destroying Turkish ships and property, and of committing depredations on the coasts of the Turkish dominions:

And whereas such hostile operations would be directly contrary to the provisions of the Act, passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled "An Act to prevent the enlisting or engagement of his Majesty's subjects to serve in a foreign service, and the fitting out or equipping, in his Majesty's dominions, vessels for warlike purposes, without his Majesty's license," in which it is, amongst other things, enacted, "that if any natural born subject of his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, without the leave or license of his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, for that purpose first had and obtained under the sign manual of his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, or signified by Order in Council, or by Proclamation of his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, shall take or accept, or shall agree to take or accept, any military commission, or shall otherwise enter into the military service as a commissioned or non-commissioned officer, or shall enlist or enter himself to enlist, or shall agree to enlist or to enter himself to serve as a soldier, or to be employed, or shall serve in any warlike or military operation in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any foreign prince, state, potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, the powers of government, in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people, either as an officer or soldier, or in any other military capacity; or if any natural born subject of his Majesty shall, without such leave or licence as aforesaid, accept, or agree to take or accept, any commission, warrant, or appointment as an officer, or shall enlist or enter himself, or shall agree to enlist or enter himself to serve as a sailor or marine, or to be employed or engaged, or shall serve in and on board any ship or vessel of war, or in and on board any ship or vessel used, or fitted out, or equipped, or intended to be used for any warlike purpose in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of any foreign power, prince, state, potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising, or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people; or if any natural born subject of his Majesty shall, without such leave and license as aforesaid, engage, contract, or agree to go, or shall go to any foreign state, country, colony, province, or part of any province, or to any place beyond the seas, with an intent, or in order to enlist or enter himself to serve, or with intent to serve, in any warlike or military operation whatever, whether by land or by sea, in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of, any foreign prince, state, potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or in the service of, or for, or under, or in aid of, any person or persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people, either as an officer or a soldier, or in any other military capacity, or as an officer, or sailor, or marine, in any such ship or vessel as aforesaid, although no enlisting money, or pay, or reward shall have been, or shall be, in any or either of the cases aforesaid, actually paid to, or received by him, or by any person to or for his use or benefit; or if any person whatever within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or in any part of his Majesty's dominions elsewhere, or in any country, colony, settlement, island, or place belonging to or subject to his Majesty, shall hire, retain, engage, or procure, or shall attempt, or endeavour to hire, retain, engage, or procure any person or persons whatever to enlist, or to enter, or engage to enlist, or to serve, or to be employed in any such service or employment as aforesaid, as an officer, soldier, sailor, or marine, either in land or sea service, for, or under, or in aid of, any foreign prince, state, potentate, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or for, or under, or in aid of, any person or persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, any powers of Government as aforesaid, or to go, or to agree to go, or to embark from any part of his Majesty's dominions for the purpose or with the intent to be so enlisted, entered, engaged, or employed as aforesaid, whether any enlisting money, pay, or reward shall have been, or shall be, actually given or received, or not, in any or either of such cases every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon being convicted thereof, upon any information or indictment, shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court before which such offender shall be convicted:"

And it is further enacted, "that if any person within any part of the United Kingdom, or in any part of His Majesty's dominions beyond the seas, shall, without the leave and licence of his Majesty for that purpose first had and obtained, as aforesaid, equip, furnish, fit out, or arm, or attempt or endeavour to equip, furnish, fit out, or arm, or procure to be equipped, furnished, fitted out, or armed, or shall knowingly aid, assist, or be concerned in the equipping, furnishing, fitting out, or arming of any ship or vessel, with intent or in order that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign prince, state, or potentate, or of any foreign colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, any powers of government in or over any foreign state, colony, province, or part of any province or people, as a transport or store ship, or with intent to cruize or commit hostilities against any prince, state, or potentate, or against the subjects or citizens of any prince, state, or potentate, or against the persons exercising, or assuming to exercise, the powers of government in any colony, province, or part of any province or country, or against the inhabitants of any foreign colony, province, or part of any province or country, with whom his Majesty shall not then be at war, or shall, within the United Kingdom, or any of his Majesty's dominions, or in any settlement, colony, territory, island, or place belonging or subject to his Majesty, issue or deliver any commission for any ship or vessel, to the intent that such ship or vessel shall be employed as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and shall, upon conviction thereof, upon any information or indictment, be punished by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court in which such offender shall be convicted, and every such ship or vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to, or be on board of, any such ship or vessel, shall be forfeited; and it shall be lawful for any officer of his Majesty's Customs or Excise, or any officer of his Majesty's Navy, who is by law empowered to make seizures for any forfeiture, incurred under any of the laws of Customs or Excise, or the laws of trade and navigation, to seize such ships and vessels aforesaid, and in such places, and in such manner in which the officers of his Majesty's customs or excise, and the officers of his Majesty's navy, are empowered respectively to make seizures under the laws of customs and excise, or under the laws of trade and navigation; and that every such ship and vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to or be on board of such ship or vessel, may be prosecuted and condemned in the like manner, and in such Courts as ships or vessels may be prosecuted and condemned, for any breach of the laws made for the protection of the revenues of customs and excise, or of the laws of trade and navigation:"

His Majesty, therefore, being desirous of preserving to his subjects the blessings of peace which they now happily enjoy, and being resolved to persevere in that system of neutrality which his Majesty has so repeatedly declared his determination to maintain; in order that none of his Majesty's subjects may unwarily render themselves liable to the penalties imposed by the Statute herein mentioned, has thought fit, by and with the advice of his Privy Council, to issue this his Royal Proclamation:

And his Majesty does hereby strictly command, that no person or persons whatsoever, do presume to take part in any of the said contests, or to commit or attempt any act, matter, or thing whatsoever, contrary to the provisions of the said Statute, upon pain of the several penalties by the said Statute imposed, and of his Majesty's high displeasure:

And his Majesty, by and with the advice aforesaid, doth hereby enjoin all his Majesty's subjects, strictly to observe, as well towards the Ottoman Porte and the Greeks, as towards all other belligerents with whom his Majesty is at peace, the duties of neutrality; and to respect in all, and each of them, the exercise of those belligerent rights, which his Majesty has always claimed to exercise, when his Majesty has himself been unhappily engaged in war.

Given at our Court at Windsor, the 30th day of September, 1825, and in the 6th year of our reign

GOD SAVE THE KING.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

MADRID, SEPT. 20.—There is a great talk here of a loan proposed by some French houses, which is to be guaranteed by the French and English Governments, on condition that a certain part of the loan of the Cortes shall be taken in part, for which, as a security, shall be given a seventh part of the estates of the Clergy, which Pope Pius the Sixth ceded to Charles IV. It is said that if this negociation succeeds, we shall receive 35 for 100. The general conversation here is concerning the Royal Consultative Junta. Every person of information is of opinion that its deliberations will have no advantageous results. It may propose some remedy for the dilapidations, but it will be difficult to put them in force.

The Memorial Bordelaise assures us, that the Ministers are busy at Madrid forming a plan for a Constitution resembling that of the ancient Cortes. It also appears that the Clergy will make great sacrifices to relieve the public credit.

(EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CORUNNA, SEPT. 14.)

The expedition for the Havannah has not yet left Ferrol, and it is not probable it will sail before it is joined by the corvette Descubierta, which is expected laden with muskets. According to all appearance our Government still thinks on America. Besides the troops and transports they have embarked projectiles and cannon of all descriptions, and they will be escorted by the ship Guerrero, two frigates, three corvettes, and three brigs.

Letters from Naples state, that they expect a second decree for an armistice, for all those committed for political offences, which will be published on the 4th October.

Accounts from St. Petersburgh state, that after the Emperor has passed in review the Russian Army on the frontiers of Turkey, it will not be improbable that Moldavia and Wallachia will be taken possession of.

COLOGNE, SEPT. 24.—Our Gazette contains the following article:—

The Vicar-General of the Archbishopric of Cologne has had occasion to address the following circular to the clergy of that part of the Archbishopric which is situated on the left bank of the Rhine, relatively to the celebration of the holidays, which have been suppressed, and which have hitherto continued to take place in different ways in the churches:—

"We have learnt, from several quarters, that the Clergy endeavour to keep up the celebration of the holidays suppressed by the Concordat concluded between the Pope and the French Government of that period, and which is still in force on the left bank of the Rhine. They do this by performing Divine Service on those days, in a more solemn manner than on week days, fixing it at another hour, and announcing this in the church on the preceding Sunday, or next holiday.

"But experience having generally shown that these measures of the Clergy do not contribute to cause these holidays to be religiously kept in the churches, but that they very generally, on the contrary, give occasion to idleness, intemperance, and useless expences, we do, by these presents, recommend the Clergy of the left bank of the Rhine, on the said suppressed holidays, at the same hours usually fixed for work-days, avoiding every thing that may give to those days a particular solemnity, and by their example and good counsel cause the working classes to labour on those days, as on the other days of the week.

"They must the more exert themselves strictly to follow these directions, as a new regulation for the holidays is now preparing, which will be laid before his Holiness for his approbation.

"Cologne, Sept. 18, 1825."

MANILLA.—By the Solitude, which vessel left this port on the 20th of December, it does not appear that any change had taken place since our last notice, worthy of mention; the inhabitants were repairing the damages done by the late earthquake.

PALEMBANG.—A conspiracy against the Dutch authority has been discovered at Palembang, and the country is in a state of serious insurrection. The Susunnan, or nominal Sovereign, who was implicated, has been arrested and sent to Batavia, but his son (the reigning Sultan) effected his escape and joined Syed Hamza, and the other insurgents in the interior. The imposition of an universal capitation tax of three guilders, is reported to have given rise to the plot and insurrection.

BANCA.—The town of Minto has, as we formerly reported, been burnt to the ground, nothing escaping without the fort, save the hospital and a public warehouse. Colonel DE LA FONTANE, the Resident, the next in authority, and the medical officer, had all died within a few days of each other. The whole town, consisting principally of Malay houses, and a Chinese Bazaar, were entirely consumed in the short space of three hours.

SIAM.—We have received accounts from Siam down to the 15th of December. The new KING, since his accession, has declared the trade free in every article except opium and muskets, the first of which is contraband, and the last can only be sold to the Government. Regular duties are to be levied on every thing, the amount of which is not yet determined on such articles as were formerly objects of Royal monopoly. This Edict will greatly facilitate foreign trade, as soon as the people have acquired confidence in, and become accustomed to it, which is not yet the case. Under such a suspicious Government as that of Siam, it is extremely difficult to obtain any political information which can be relied upon. It appears, however, certain that the Siamese have sent an army of observation of eight thousand men across the country towards the Burman provinces on the Bay of Bengal, with the intention, in all probability, of taking advantage of our recent conquests to seize upon such parts of the Burman territory as it may be found easy or convenient to appropriate. With respect to markets, Bangkok was described as being well, if not overstocked with British and Indian goods. The old trade from Surat and Bombay is very nearly done up by the superior cheapness of the goods imported from Singapore, and it is not improbable will henceforth be discontinued. The Caroline and Shannon free traders were loading for this port, and may be expected in a few weeks.

"PRESBURG, SEPT. 21.—This city is very full of company. Besides the Imperial Court and the Members of the Diet, there are many foreigners here, who, as the distance from Vienna is so short, came to witness a ceremony which is doubly interesting, as being the first of the kind since 1811, and therefore since the restoration of political repose in Europe, and yet occurring at a period which bears so little the stamp of moral repose. I do not send you the Emperor's speech from the Throne, as it will be in all the Journals. Its contents, and the manner in which it was delivered by his Majesty, produced an impression which it would be difficult to describe. Four times was the Emperor interrupted by a really stormy burst of applause from the States' Deputies assembled round the Throne. The passages of the speech, in which the Emperor mentioned the faithful efforts of the nation during the war, and where he spoke of its persevering attachment to the Constitution inherited from their ancestors, and of his wish to be able to leave this Constitution, protected by mild laws, to his successors and to future generations, were received with the greatest enthusiasm. After the Sitting, one unanimous feeling prevailed in the Assembly, similar to that which the Hungarians shewed when Maria Theresa presented her son to the Diet. Subsequently, the Royal propositions were opened in both Chambers, and adopted with a unanimous cry of 'Long live the King!' It may appear remarkable to the impartial observer, to see a Prince, in the presence of his people, declare to them that he has nothing to ask of them but that they would take care to promote their own prosperity.

"The Royal propositions refer only to internal legislation, which have been preparing through a series of years, by deputations of estates, in concert with Members of the Government. There is no question of requisition of money for the State, and pecuniary matters are touched upon only in reference to the legislation which the system of finance adopted for the Austrian Monarchy in 1811, 1816, and 1817, has rendered necessary with respect to private debtors and creditors. In 1811 and 1812, the Diet adopted only temporary measures, and as such have legal validity only from one Diet to the next, it was necessary to come to some definitive resolution.

"One of the peculiarities that most strikes a stranger, is the total dissimilarity in manners and customs, even in all outward forms, which prevails between the capital of the empire and the site of the Diet, which is so near it. The traveller has journeyed hardly six leagues, and he finds himself in a new kingdom, where every thing, even language and dress, is entirely different. The Court itself here wears the Hungarian national costume.

"The Coronation is to be on the 25th, but we do not hear of any Court fêtes. The Ambassadors and Ministers of Foreign Powers will be present at the Coronation in a new gallery built on purpose; the Church itself will hardly hold 1,200 or 1,300 persons."

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING, 1825.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 3.

The Trial Stakes, a subscription of 10 sov. each, for three-years-old, 7st. 9lb.; four, 8st. 9lb.; five, 9st. 2lb.; six, and aged, 9st. 6lb. D. M.

Mr. Wyndham's gr. e. Stumps, 3 yrs. old..... 1
Mr. Lambton's h. m. Spermaceti, 5 yrs old..... 2
D. of Grafton's br. m. Zine, 5 yrs. old..... 3
Mr. Pettit's gr. f. Bravura, 4 yrs. old..... 0

3 to 1 against Stumps—5 to 4 against Mr. Pettit's Bravura.—The Judge placed but 3.—Two others started.

Mr. Pettit's Retreat, 8st. 2lb. beat Mr. Lee's Shacaback, 8st. 11lb. T. Y. C. 50, h. ft.—5 to 2 on Retreat.

Third renewal of the Grand Duke Michael Stakes of 50 sov. each, for colts, 8st. 7lb. and fillies, 8st. 3lb. A. F.

D. of Grafton's b. c. Bolero..... 1
Mr. Greville's c. Lionel Lincoln..... 2

4 to 1 agst. Bolero—4 to 1 agst. Lioncl Lincoln.—3 to 1 agst. Duke of Portland's e. by Teasdale—5 to 2 agst. Mr. Wyndham's brother to Black-and-all-Black.—The Judge placed but 2.—Seven others started, and twelve paid.

Gen. Grosvenor's Crockery, 8st. 2lb. beat Mr. Molony's Cinder, 9st. 2lb. D. M. 200, h. ft.

Duke of Grafton's Cramer, 8st. 7lb. rec. ft. from Mr. Thornhill's Surprise, 8st. 2lb. R. M. 200, h. ft.

TUESDAY, OCT. 4.

Sweepstakes of 100 sov. each, h. ft. T. Y. C.

Lord Orford's Orion, 4 yrs. old, 8st. 8lb..... 1
Lord Jersey's Adonis, 5 yrs. old, 8st. 2lb..... 2
Mr. Udny's Tarandus, 4 yrs. old, 8st. 9lb..... pd.

6 to 4 on Orion.

Lord Verulam's Vittellina, 8st. 4lb beat Mr. Pettit's Verbena, 8st. 7lb. T. Y. C. 100.—5 to 2 on Vittellina.

Duke of Grafton's Pucelle, 8st. 7lb. beat Lord Huntingfield's The Lark, 7st. 6lb. T. Y. C. 100 h. ft.—2 to 1 on Pucelle.

Mr. Greville's Don Carlos, 8st. 11lb. beat Mr. Thornhill's Reformer, 8st. 8lb. D. M. 200 h. ft.—2 to 1 on Don Carlos.

Mr. Pettit's f. by Aladdin, 8st. 5lb beat Mr. Lee's f. Madeline, 8st. T. Y. C. 50. h. ft.—2 to 1 on f. by Aladdin.

Fifty Guineas, free for any horse, &c., four yrs. old, carrying 7st. 4lb; five, 8st. 5lb.; six, 8st. 11lb.; and aged, 9st. B. C.

Col. Wilson's bl. m. Black Daphne, 5 yrs. old.....walked over.

Two drawn.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 5.

The St. Leger Stakes. D. I.

D. of Grafton's Rufus..... 1
Mr. Theakston's gr. f. by Walton..... 2

Anson Stakes of 300 sov. each. T. Y. C.

D of Grafton's c. by Partisan..... 1
Mr. Prendergast's ch. f. by Rainbow..... 2
D. of Grafton's f. Lilias..... 3
Mr. Greville's c by Merlin..... 4

Sweepstakes of 50 sov. each. T. Y. C.

Mr. Wyndham's Cricketer, 9st. 5lb..... 1
Mr. Hunter's f. by Comus, 7st. 4lb..... 2
Mr. Greville's sister to Faust, 7st. 2lb..... 3

RESULT OF THE HARVEST.

The harvest being now considered as concluded, we beg to lay before our readers the result of such observations and enquiries as may furnish a tolerable correct idea of the produce of the present season, reserving ourselves to a future Number, for the expression of our opinion on the events of the most momentous importance to the country.

WHEAT.—The weather during the progress of the harvest has been, upon the whole, equal to the best wishes of the farmer, and the grain, taken generally, is well harvested. Wheat—the most important of the different descriptions of pulse—is without doubt a full average crop, in quantity, throughout the three kingdoms. In the home counties, however, the quality of this grain has suffered in comparison with that of last year; in this particular the millers have been disappointed in their expectations. Much, indeed the larger proportion, comes to market in a very cold and damp state, from being, in our opinion, hurried too quickly out of the fields, or perhaps cut prematurely. We have not seen any new wheat from Scotland, but our accounts from that country represent the quality as unusually fine. The new already exported from Ireland, of which we have seen several parcels, is not as good as we anticipated; the samples, like many of our own growth, being cold and damp—but our correspondent there leads us to expect better things presently. In quantity, as we have already stated, we think the present year may fairly equal the last; in quality, we think it decidedly inferior, and we should not hazard too much in saying, that the average weight of the whole growth of the three kingdoms will be found full 2lb. per bushell lighter than that of last year.

BARLEY.—Barley, notwithstanding the gloomy forebodings excited by its appearance on the ground, will yet turn out better than was expected. It is represented to be a fair crop, both in Scotland and Ireland. The quality, however, even from the same district, varies considerably. We have seen three samples, all grown within the circle of two miles, which have varied in value, one with the other, full 5s. per quarter. Whether the produce of this grain will be enough for our consumption, is a problem yet to be solved—for ourselves, we freely confess, we think not.

OATS.—This article is not a good crop in England, either in quantity or in weight. In Scotland it is a fair average growth: and the same may be said of Ireland, or perhaps something over an average in quantity, but in weight considerably lighter than last year. The growth of the three kingdoms will, we are inclined to think, be found sufficient for their consumption; but this must particularly depend upon the result of the potatoe crop in Scotland and Ireland: the late rains may have been serviceable to this root, yet all the accounts we have hitherto received from those countries represent this crop as a decided failure.

Beans are universally a short growth—the quality of the new are, however, good.

Peas are also a short growth: but we think they will turn out to be more productive than beans.—Hull Packet.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

ADULTERATED BREAD.

GUILDHALL.—A baker named Hudson, carrying on business in Church court, near St. Martin's church-yard, Strand, appeared to answer to the information of John Burgess, also a baker, keeping a shop in Queen-street, Seven Dials, for having in his possession a quantity of alum, contrary to the Act of Parliament.

Burgess stated that a friend of his had been in the habit of having his bread from the defendant's shop, and he had shown some of it to him (witness). He tasted and examined it, and suspected it was adulterated. He therefore determined to watch the defendant's shop, and having done so, he several times saw Mr. Hudson fetch a paper bag, which would hold about two pounds, filled with alum, from a neighbouring shop. He had also seen a boy fetch similar papers of the same ingredient.

Addy, a patrol, in consequence of the information of the last witness, went to the house of the defendant with a search warrant, and in a drawer in the shop, he found a paper bag containing about one ounce of ground alum. That was all he could find.

The informer, Burgess, said that the paper bag, produced by the Officer, was of the same kind as those he had seen taken into the defendant's shop filled with alum.

Sir R. Birnie (to Burgess)—What are you?

Burgess—I am a baker.

Sir R. Birnie—O, you are a baker too, are you? And did you never use alum?

Burgess smiled, and said, "Why, Sir—why—" and here he paused.

Sir R. Birnie—Come, my honest friend, answer me fairly, have you never put alum into bread?

Burgess—N—n—no, Sir, I never did.

Sir R. Birnie—Well, as you like; I dare say you are a very honest man.

Hudson, in his defence, accused Burgess of perjury; but acknowledged that he did now and then keep a small quantity of alum in the house.

Sir R. Birnie—For what purpose?

Hudson—Why, Sir, to have it in the way.

Sir R. Birnie—In the way for what?

Hudson did not reply.

Sir R. Birnie, in giving his decision, said that, in his opinion, there was a great deal more fuss made about the bakers putting alum (he spoke not of other adulterations) into bread than the matter deserved. He believed that the quantity of alum put into bread was so small as to be undeserving of notice. The Act of Parliament, however, regarded not the quantity that might or might not be used, but forbade its use, or even the possession of it by the bakers altogether. If the case had rested merely upon the trifling quantity found in the defendant's possession, he should have dismissed it, but after what the informer had sworn, he felt himself bound to convict. He should, however, put the lowest penalty, of 40*s*.

The defendant paid 40*s*. and costs.

RE-EXAMINATION OF DE CLIFFORD.

Mr. Berger, alias De Clifford, was brought up on Tuesday for final examination before Mr. Halls and Sir Richard Birnie, on the charge of forgery, which has undergone so many investigations. He was attended as before by Mr. Humphreys, his Solicitor, and Mr. Freshfield appeared for the prosecution, and informed the Magistrates in the outset that he had no more witnesses to call.

Mr. Halls, who was the sitting Magistrate of the day, observed that this case came originally before Mr. Minshull, and it only now became his duty to hear it, in consequence of the absence of his worthy colleague from London. Before he could form an opinion, therefore, he must hear the whole of the evidence read.

Mr. Richmond, the clerk, read the evidence of Mr. Bennett, the cashier of Messrs. Sansom and Co.; but when Mr. Green, the clerk to Joseph Green and Co., who was examined on the former occasions to prove the forgery of the checks, was called, he did not answer, and it was stated that he was not in attendance, his presence not being considered necessary, as the Solicitor for the prosecution could subpœna him whenever the trial took place.

Mr. Halls—But as the case is new to me, and I may be called upon to commit, the witnesses ought all to be here, and their evidence read to them in my presence. I would therefore prefer remanding the prisoner for another examination, when they can all be summoned to attend.

Mr. Humphreys—Our defence does not rest upon the point whether the checks are forged or not. There is no doubt that they are forged.

Mr. Halls—Well, if you admit that the checks are forged, to be sure the absence of Mr. Green is not of so much importance.

Mr. Humphreys—You know, Sir, as well as I do, that in a criminal case I can admit nothing. I only say that our defence rests on quite another ground, and that we are willing to let the depositions go as they are at once.

Sir R. Birnie—But the Sessions are not very near, and therefore your client will suffer no hardship by a remand. It is not like passing a Sessions over, and depriving him of an opportunity of being brought to trial.

Mr. Humphreys—With great deference, I humbly submit that it may be a very great hardship upon my client. The case, as I contend, depends solely upon the testimony of an accomplice, and (supposing you think you are not warranted in discharging him altogether) if he were fully committed for trial I could apply to a Judge for a writ of Habeas Corpus, and he would, perhaps, under the circumstances, be admitted to bail: but if you remand him he has no remedy. He has now been in custody a month.

Mr. Halls said that before he could judge of the bearings of the evidence he must hear it read.

Mr. Richmond read it, and when he came to a part where the circumstance of the prisoner having changed his name was mentioned,

Mr. Halls made some remark, which we could not distinctly catch; upon which

Sir R. Birnie said he thought it but justice to the prisoner to state, that he had on a former occasion given some explanation upon that point.

Prisoner—Thank you, Sir Richard, I did. I observed that there were two sorts of aliases. Sometimes an alias was adopted for purposes of fraud, but it was also sometimes done for the purpose of honourable concealment until a man could by retrenching his expenses pay his just debts. The latter, I repeat, was my case. I repeat also, that I never from the moment of my birth wronged a human being of a shilling; and I defy the universe to prove, with truth, that I ever did.

When the reading of the evidence was finished,

Mr. Humphreys observed that the worthy Magistrates would perceive that the main, the principal fact, of the forged instrument having ever been in the possession of the prisoner, rested entirely on the statement of an accomplice, and upon the value of the testimony of a man, who, by his own showing, had connived at the robbery of his employers, it were needless to comment.

Mr. Halls—But it is proved by other witnesses that the parties have all been seen together at the times and places mentioned by the accomplice, so that some parts of his statement are shown to be true.

Mr. Humphreys—That may be, Sir. All those meetings may actually have taken place, and have been laid hold of by the accomplice as affording him an opportunity of laying upon others the weight of a crime, of which he alone was guilty, in order to save himself from the consequences.

Sir R. Birnie—But what do you say to the prisoner's acknowledgment of having received 15*l*. for uttering the check?

We could not catch Mr. Humphreys' reply. It will perhaps be recollected, however, that this acknowledgment was spoken of by the accomplice alone.

Mr. Halls said there was one of three courses for the Magistrate to pursue, namely, to discharge him altogether, to remand him for further examination, or to commit him at once for trial. With respect to the credibility of the accomplice, that was the peculiar province of a Jury to decide upon; but it certainly did appear to him to be sufficiently confirmed to take it out of the power of a Magistrate to discharge the accused. To remand him upon a mere experiment, when he had been so long in custody, would be useless and unjust, and he therefore committed him to take his trial.

Mr. Humphreys—Mr. Berger, the Magistrate has determined to commit you for trial.

Prisoner—Very well, Sir, it is the same to me. I may be calumniated, I may be imprisoned, I may be hacked to pieces, nay, I may, by the villainy of others, be consigned to death; but (continued the prisoner, with great energy, and placing his hand to his heart) I am innocent, and nothing can destroy the comfort or shake the firmness with which the consciousness of that inspires me. He was then removed.

A DIAMOND BROOCH.

Tuesday, Mr. Alderman Thompson, on entering the Justice Room, said that he had been just waited on by Mr. Beauchamp, the pawnbroker, of Holborn, who had brought to him a very valuable diamond brooch, which had been offered to him for pledge that morning, by a woman, to whom it evidently did not belong, and who could only account for the possession of it by saying that she had found it. The brooch was supposed to be worth at least 100 guineas. The woman who tendered it for pledge was discharged on giving her name and address. The brooch was detained for the inspection of any person who may have lost such an article.

FORGERY.

Richard Wm. Jasper, a decent looking young man, of about 25 years of age, was charged with forging and uttering four bills of exchange.

The only witness was Mr. Wm. Fox, of the firm of Suttaby, Fox, and Suttaby, the booksellers, of Stationers'-court, who stated that the prisoner was a bookbinder, and had been employed by the firm of Suttaby and Co. in that capacity. He had also purchased books from them, and in consequence there was a running account between them, and the prisoner was frequently in the habit of bringing them bills of exchange, which were placed to his credit, and sometimes were discounted for his accommodation by the firm. The witness produced four bills of exchange for the respective sums of 50*l*., 32*l*., 22*l*. 5*s*., and 25*l*., all drawn by the prisoner. Two of them purported to be accepted by a Mr. Ambrose Cuddon, of 62, Paternoster-row, and the other two by Mr. Charles Taylor, of 160, Fleet-street. These bills had been regularly paid as genuine bills, by the prisoner, to Suttaby and Co. On Saturday last one of them became due, and, upon being presented for payment, it was discovered to be a forgery. Inquiry was then made as to the other three, and all turned out to be forgeries. The prisoner was apprehended on Tuesday morning.

The prisoner did not say any thing in answer to the charge, but asked if he could not be let out at bail?—a request which, it is needless to say, the worthy Alderman could not comply with.

Mr. Fox wished to have time allowed him to procure the attendance of the necessary witnesses, which was granted.

The prisoner was then remanded until Thursday.

Mr. Fox stated that his firm had had dealings with the prisoner for some years, and always looked upon him as a respectable young man. He had a wife and child, and when the firm of Suttaby and Co. took bills from him, and gave him in return cash and goods, they always considered that they were rendering him a service. He universally told them that the bills were given by the parties accepting them in consideration of work he had done for them in the way of his trade.

HATTON-GARDEN.—The driver of the hackney coach, No. 776, appeared upon a summons to answer the complaint of a country gentleman, for a gross overcharge of fare.

The gentleman stated, that a few days ago he took the defendant's coach off the stand in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, and directed him to drive to Bartholomew-terrace, City-road. On setting him down, the coachman demanded 3*s*. 6*d*. The gentleman, not aware of the distance, paid it, but on being subsequently informed that it was but an eighteen-penny fare, he determined, for the protection of strangers from such impositions, to punish the defendant.

The coachman set up a very plausible defence, that he was as ignorant of the direct course to Bartholomew-terrace as the gentleman, and as he had gone a good deal out of his way, he conceived he had a right to charge for distance.

The Magistratce observed that this was a case which imperatively called for punishment, as hackney coachmen make it a constant practice to dupe all persons whom they discover to be strangers in town.

He accordingly fined the coachman 10*s*. and costs, including overcharge.

The coachman, on hearing this decision, became insolent. On being informed, however, that he was likely to be fined 60*s*. for his misbehaviour in the office, be made an apology, and very contentedly paid his fine and costs.

GHOST STORIES.

WORSHIP-STREET.—John Capon, of 15, King-street, Drury-lane; Thomas Jones, occupying a back room of the same tenement; and John Arnold, of No. 7, Monmouth-street, three wandering melodists, were brought before Mr. Twyford, by Gooding, a conductor of Bow-street Patrol, on the complaint of Mr. Wrightson, a gentleman of considerable property, residing in Bethnal-green, to whose especial annoyance they were contributing on Tuesday evening, by their professional exertions, in selling, in his immediate neighbourhood, "a full, true, and particular account of a strange and extraordinary Ghost," which is said to have made his house the scene of its vagaries.

The particulars of the ghost have already appeared in our paper, under the head of "Miss Bailey, of Bethnal-green," which called forth a letter in defence of Mr. Wrightson against the imputation of harbouring such unearthly visitors. His friend proved very satisfactorily, in his letter to us, that though there were noises rather unaccountable in the house, yet it was not to be imagined that they proceeded from a spirit of the vasty deep, and we were satisfied with his reasoning. The matter, however, had caught the attention of the far-famed manufacturer of ballads and wonderful stories in Great St. Andrew's-street, Seven-dials; and the three prisoners were recommending a publication upon the subject to the notice of the public, with the addition, from the stores of their own imaginations, of some interesting particulars about three ladies who were thrown into fits at the appearance of the ghost, and the pence were tumbling into their pockets thick and fast, when they met with a disagreeable customer in the person of Gooding, the officer, who possessed himself of their whole stock in trade, without paying them for it, and procured them a night's lodging in the watch-house, preparatory to their introduction to the Magistrate.

The Magistrate at first felt inclined to view the offence as a trivial occurrence, and was about to dismiss the men on their promising not to renew the annoyance, the place at which they had been apprehended being at a considerable distance from Mr. Wrightson's, who he said might indict them for a libel.

Mr. Wrightson said he had lived all his life at that place, which was his freehold property, and had cost 2,000*l*. but the annoyance to which he and his family had lately been subjected was intolerable. He could not go out of his house without being followed by the boys of the neighbourhood, inquiring after the ghost.

Other inhabitants of the place stated the great annoyance to which the whole neighbourhood was exposed by the proceedings.

Mr. Twyford then finding the affair more serious than he had expected, ordered the three men to find bail to keep the peace, and in default thereof they were committed.

ACCIDENTS, OFFENCES, &c.

FAILURE OF TWO BANKS.—The Plymouth Journal of Thursday last, says:—"It is with great pain we have to record the failure of two respectable banking establishments in our neighbourhood. The Kingsbridge Bank (Messrs. Square, Prideaux, and Co.) stopped payment yesterday se'nnight, and the alarm occasioned by this circumstance spread with rapidity through the country. An immediate and unexampled run took place on every bank without distinction in this town, at Devonport, and in fact throughout the south of Devon. This spirit was further excited on Saturday, when it was known that the firm of Messrs. Shiells and Johns, at Devonport, unable to stand the severe run, had also been obliged to suspend their payments. We have been informed that between fifty and sixty thousand pounds, in sovereigns and bank-notes, arrived here on Tuesday from London, for their use, and a considerable supply is also on the road.

INHUMAN AND BARBAROUS MURDER.—The Coroner's Inques has been held upon the bodies of the aged couple murdered near Rochdale, and a verdict of "Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown," has been recorded. Mr. Cass was a small farmer, living upon his own estate, and he bore an excellent character as an honest and peaceable man. It is a matter of doubt whether the wife interfered in behalf of her husband, and was butchered on the chair beside him, as she was found; or whether the cold-blooded miscreants had placed them both in that situation after the barbarous work was perpetrated. A report reached Leeds late last night, that a man had been apprehended in the act of disposing of Mrs. Cass's spectacles. It is said that he has made a confession of the crime, and has given such information of his three accomplices, as is likely to lead to their discovery.—Leeds Intelligencer.

ATROCIOUS MURDER.—The corner house in Mountjoy square, adjoining Great Charles-street, Dublin, (the family being in the country,) was left in the care of a decent old woman. A female acquaintance, who was in the habit of calling to see her every Sunday, went yesterday morning to pay her usual visit. After knocking in vain at the hall-door, she made her way through the parlour window, which was open, and upon reaching the apartment of the old woman, she found her dead, with evident marks of strangulation. It is not easy to conceive what could have prompted the persons, who must have entered the house by the window, to the perpetration of the deed, as there was nothing of value in the house, or in the possession of the unfortunate woman to excite their cupidity.—Dublin Morning Register.

MELANCHOLY INSTANCE OF SUDDEN DEATH.—Thursday an Inquisition was taken before T. Stirling, Esq. Coroner, on the body of Mr. Rowland Gabe, a highly-respected tradesman, (who died suddenly on Saturday night last, at his residence in Hart-street, Bloomsbury,) at the house of Mr. Steers, the sign of the Crown, Museum-street. The Jury retired to take a view of the body, and on their return found a verdict, that the deceased came by his death in consequence of a fit of apoplexy.

DARING ATTEMPT AT SWINDLING.

On Monday, about three o'clock, a young man having the appearance of a broker's clerk, called at the counting-house of Messrs. Peck, Brothers, and Co. extensive and respectable East India merchants in Coleman-street, and said that he came from Mr. Curwen, the broker, in Eastcheap, with an offer of seven chests of Congou teas from the last March sales, the holder of which being inconvenienced by his advances to the East India Company, and having a payment to make on that day, which rendered cash indispensible, wished to dispose of them for ready money. Messrs. Peck having almost daily transactions with Mr. Curwen, and all the business in the tea trade being managed through the medium of brokers, the names of the owners scarcely ever transpire, and this it was which, on the present occasion, prevented any inquiries being made, and lulled all suspicion. The quality of the article being such as Messrs. Peck were then purchasing, they at once offered a fair value, which the young man accepted of; and as he was going out, said that Mr. Curwen would send the account and the warrant. In elucidation of this nefarious attempt, it may be necessary to observe that all goods sold by the East India Company are described in an official paper called a warrant, which shows the weight, mark, and quality of the article purchased, which is given to the original buyer, and by him transferred to the person to whom he may afterwards dispose of the same. This is considered in the mercantile world the same as a bank note, the holder being always looked upon as the owner of the property.

Teas are generally sold in lots of six or nine chests; and, though the Company are always settled with for the entire at one payment, yet, for the convenience of the trade, and to give greater confidence than would otherwise exist if single chests were removed from the private stores of individuals, they allow the teas to remain in their warehouses, and the owner to permit single chests to different persons as he sells them, or as it may suit his convenience. As the chests are removed from the warehouses, their numbers are what is called written off on the face of the warrant, a form which thus shows the quantity left undisturbed. In the present instance, the whole lot had been permitted, and removed at once, to signify which the word "all" was written, which, with the signature of the East India Company's clerk, sufficed to cancel the warrant. By some means, however, the word "all" was obliterated, and the number of two chests substituted in its stead, thus making it appear as if there were seven chests still remaining in the Company's charge. The alteration was so well effected that it did not at all strike the eye of the Gentlemen to whom it was presented; nor indeed were their suspicions excited, as up to this period every thing appeared fair and regular. After a short interval, however, when the broker's clerk had withdrawn, an errand boy, such as are usually employed about merchants' warehouses, called at Messrs P.'s counting-house with an account of the tea, amounting to 150*l*., and the warrant, such as we described, and asked for a check for the money, saying he had orders to pay 84*l*. of it at a house in Finsbury-square. One of the firm instantly drew a check for the amount on their bankers, Messrs. Masterman and Co.; and knowing that Mr. Curwen's bankers were Messrs. Glynn and Co., crossed the check with their names; previous, however, to delivering it, the boy being asked who they were, replied that he did not know. This struck them as extraordinary, and as they hesitated about delivering the check, the boy immediately departed, saying that he would go and find out their names. Not having returned for a considerable time, they examined the warrant, and made the discovery we before allluded to. It is needless to observe that Mr. Curwen was ignorant of the entire transaction, and that the teas were before delivered up by the East India Company. From the manner in which the fraud was attempted, it is manifest that the planner must have been well acquainted with the routine of the trade.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 6.—The Numa transport, Lieut. Wentworth, R.N., agent, arrived here yesterday, sailed from Quebec on 6th Sept. with detachments of non-commissioned officers for the depots of the 68th, 70th, and 71st regiments, under the command of Capt. Creighton, 70th regiment. The Numa has had a boisterous passage, with a continuation of strong gales from every quarter of the compass. On the 8th ult. spoke his Majesty's ship Niemen, Capt. Wallace, 12 days from Halifax, 150 miles east of Quebec, 10th Sept. was hailed by his Majesty's yacht Herald, having on board his Excellency the Earl of Dalhousie, Countess of Dalhousie, family and suite. A boat was sent on board for Capt. Creighton, who remained some time on board the yacht with his Lordship, Capt. Leake and ship's company were all well. The Herald was beating off Cape Chat, a little to the westward of the Gulph of St. Lawrence. His Excelleney Sir Francis Burton, Lieut.-Governor of Canada, had made arrangements for returning to England in the Herald, and would be accompanied by Lord Arthur Lennox, 71st regiment. His Highness the Duke of Saxe Weimar had visited the falls of Niagara, Montreal, and Quebec, and was received at each post with the honours due to his rank. At Quebec his Highness inspected the works, and reviewed the troops in garrison, on the 5th ult., and then returned to Montreal.

The timber ship Baron Renfrew, which sailed a fortnight before the Numa, was neither seen nor heard of during the passage of the Numa.

Colonel Philott and Capt. King, Royal Artillery; Lieut. Atherly, 70th regiment; Doctors McTernan, Taine, Thompson, and Burnie, Surgeons Royal Navy—came home in the transport.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The different attacks by which we have been lately assailed in several obscure journals answer no other purpose than that of coquetting with the names of some persons with whom we are quite unacquainted, and care not an iota about; but they will never induce us to give them by publicity that notoriety they want. One of the most motiveless of these HIRELING squibs, which we hear has greatly annoyed one or two poor unoffending devils to whom it alludes, is the production, we find, of a son of old MOLLOY, the chimney-sweeper, passing himself off as the bastard of a celebrated artist, which is, of course, a highly creditable distinction: he has lately been shouted out of the COURT OF KING'S BENCH, as a BRANDED LIAR, and if any one would take the trouble to investigate two or three houses he has at various times planed, such as ROBBING a Liverpool artist of a MOULD OF THE LATE JOHN KEMBLE, and STEALING A HORSE in some other provincial town, he might cut an equally respectable figure in the OLD BAILEY. These libelled obscure individuals need not therefore be under any alarm from the animosity of SUCH an assailant.

The lines received from Covent Garden BOX OFFICE have been inserted with much pleasure.

A. L. is informed that CAPTAIN ARBUTHNOT, of the ROYAL NAVY, is very lately to be POSTED by his BETTERS, for his late conduct on the BAY of Doncaster—at all events he will be rewarded by the FLEET.

We cannot inform NAUTILUS whether FORBES, of Covent Garden, is the man who exhibited the SEA CALF some years ago at the Fairs—we, however, think it not at all unlikely.

OBSERVATOR is quite right—the quotation in our last number but one is from TOBIN and not SHERIDAN, which is the consequence of leaving the correction of a proof to a printer.

We are requested to contradict the report of either MR. ROGERS the poet, or MR. POPE the actor, being the "Juvenile Genius" who CUTS FIGURES in the Haymarket.

MEM'S CAPITAL SONG in our next.

We will attend to W. P.'s suggestion, and notice the new series of the EUROPEAN MAGAZINE as soon as possible; in the mean time we have no hesitation in recommending it to our readers, as containing more amusing and instructive matter than almost any of its contemporaries.

We insert MEMNON'S very clever epigram on the inclosure of the Park at the back of Apsley House, which runs thus:—

"What grounds," exclaimed HUGHES, "has this Chief of renown,
The grounds of the public to dare thus invade?"
When a Guardsman replied, "I don't wonder, I own,
WHAT he steals—as he's "Chief of the RIFLE Brigade."

but we beg to differ with the spirit of it, for the fuss made about this, is the height of all impudence, ignorance, and Cockneyism.

THE AGE.

LONDON, OCTOBER 9.

The situation of the Country, as far as respects the present system of COMBINATION, has become so critical, that it is no longer a question as to what line of conduct must be adopted, but in how efficacious a manner and how speedily such conduct can be put into execution; for it is not alone the progress of trade that is suspended, although that step is striking at the very root of all our national importance and internal security; but the very process of business, the very order of the commonest transactions is intercepted, and general negociation in many respects is at a stand-still; nor in the present order of the LAW, under which this state of things is now suffered to exist, does there appear the slightest chance of any favourable alteration. The situation of the masters generally has assumed an alarming appearance, and it seems almost impossible to suggest any alteration for their adoption---the desperate and manly resistance they have already made has hitherto answered a very trifling purpose; for it would be idle to draw any other conclusion, when we reflect for one moment on the late occurrences at Sunderland, the collier combinations in Scotland, the depredations in Ireland, and the consequent total ruin of trade; the actual conspiracies of the ship-wrights on the Thames, so firmly though ineffectually resisted by Mr. YOUNG, together with the utter disorganization of all that discipline under which the commerce of the country has been hitherto so ably regulated. The spirit "for universal knowledge," which the discontent of the WHIGS is encouraging throughout the empire, is only another branch of this policy, which is threatening in its progress the total subversion of the present order of things; the repeated meetings of mechanics for some institutions, seemingly for the purpose of education---of apprentices for the extension of time, with a view to improve the mind---of Bible associations---of infant school assemblies, and other such quackery---till the heart sickens at their very name, conscious that the aim of all these associations is the annihilation of constituted authority, and the destruction of all system; and with this view of the case, (and we are prepared to vouch that no honest mind can take any other view of it,) we would point out to the people the imperious necessity of rising up in one common mass, to protect one common cause, and in the next assembly of Parliament come down to its Bar, prepared with that voice of complaint---that petition of grievance---of absolute ruin---which must be listened to, and redressed. The feature which the various COMBINATIONS now assume, is no longer a matter of doubt; it has resolved itself into an absolute conviction; it is a subject which admits of no argument, no palliation; to discuss its consistency, is only to admit the enormity of its error; to reduce it to a question of right or wrong is quite comprehensible, while all must feel that it is at variance with every principle of reason and equity, and entirely contrary to the spirit of our Constitution. The subject is one of such magnitude that we shall take an early opportunity of entering more fully into its nature and consequences, more particularly while the occurrences of every day go to confirm us of the fatal tendency of all its present operations. For the present we shall content ourselves by submitting to our readers the following extracts, bearing on the point, from this month's number of BLACKWOOD, which for ingenuity, comprehension, and force, may challenge all the controversy that has yet appeared on the subject---the principles they contain cannot be too deeply inculcated, and widely circulated:

"The people---and people too who are very high in intellect, if not very wise in action---still speak of educating something that would keep the working orders from misconduct. Mechanics' Institutes are still to form the nostrum for the combination madness. We doubt that any thing could be conceived more false and absurd. What is the constant language of these people ---of the Political Economists, the Liberal system-men, the Whigs, and the Benthamites? It is, that all men, and bodies of men, will abuse power if they possess the means. They eternally declare that Ministers, Legislators, Judges, Public Companies, and bodies of all descriptions, although the individuals, and those who guide the bodies, may be men who have had the best education, in respect of sentiment as well as science, and who are sensitively alive to the principles of honour, are nevertheless sure to abuse their power for their own profit and gratification, if they are not effectually restrained from it by laws or other things. They never speak of trusting wholly, or in part, to education; but they insist upon having all the restrictions that could be framed if no such thing was known. This is very wise. Yet the very same people, when they speak of the combinations of mechanics---bodies which exist only to promote their own interests---they speak of them as needing only education to keep them from abusing their power. We will waste no comment upon this monstrous absurdity. Education, with regard to this point, will have no better effect upon the mechanic and labourer, than upon the Secretary of State, Member of Parliament, and East India Director. We believe that the Mechanics' Institutes will make no perceptible improvement in the character of the working classes as a whole---we believe that in spite of them, and perhaps in some cases by means of them, these classes are sinking in character, are becoming more vicious and disorderly; but if we knew that they would give a good education to every working man, we should still know likewise that the combinations of working men would as certainly tyrannize and trample upon the rights of others if they could, as bodies of gentlemen. Education will not do; the combiners can no more be placed under sufficient internal restraints than other people; they must be prevented from possessing the power to tyrannize and injure, by laws, or the power of other bodies, or they will use such power as any other description of men would use it. Nothing could be more indisputable, and that must be a most unaccountable delusion which keeps any thinking man in ignorance of it."

And again, speaking of that STULTIFIED MEDDLER, whose officious impudence has been in a great measure the cause of all this vast and imminent danger, and whose presence in the Senate is an actual slur on its respectability, we find these judicious remarks:---"Mr. Hume's bill was the most fatal and ruinous measure that has been sanctioned by Parliament during a very long series of years. It has caused the loss of a large number of lives; it has occasioned the commission of a mass of atrocious crime; it has ruined a multitude of individuals, and grievously injured a multitude more; it has occasioned the loss of millions of property; it has given a tremendous shock to the industry and trade of the empire; it has done the most terrible injury to the character of the working classes; it has arrayed servants against masters through a large part of the country; it has nearly destroyed one of the best supports of good government; it has generated strife, animosity, and turbulence; and it has sown the seeds of almost every ill that can visit a nation. If the parent of such a bill were not insensible to shame, he would never dare to show his face again in the community. Yet this bill was sanctioned by all the wisdom of Parliament! it is still cried up as a just and wise one, in respect of its leading object."---(To be continued.)

We have been highly amused in reading an account, in one of the Morning Papers, of the visit of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER to Poole. It appears that HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS has "condescended," to use the language of our contemporary, to visit Merley House, the seat of J. BETHEL, Esq.; and on signifying HIS ROYAL intention of attending Divine Service, last Sunday, D. O. LANDER, Esq., the Mayor, with the Alderman, Officers of the Borough, Deputy Recorder, and Town-crier, of course not omitting MRS. and MISS BETHEL, went to the church-yard, and formed a double rank for the DUKE to pass through to church, whose arrival was announced by a ROYAL SALUTE, and, as our contemporary again informs us, "by a merry peal issuing from the BELLS," among which of course MISS BETHEL AND HER MAMMA were included. Divine Service then followed, at which HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS was attended by all the Nobility and Gentry of the County, and although FASTING generally follows PRAYING, the people of Poole have a very different idea to this of "men and things", for they invited the ROYAL DUKE to the Guildhall, where, it seems, the Body Corporate most sumptuously entertained their guest, although, after the strictest investigation, we have not been able to learn that HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS returned the compliments, and at all entertained the worthy set whose invitation he accepted. On the DUKE'S arrival at the Guildhall, the DEPUTY RECORDER it seems made a most patriotic speech about respect and duty, and condescension, and the august House of Brunswick, which latter remark, it being the month of October, was the first thing to puzzle HIS ROYAL noddle; but when the worthy Deputy expressed a wish "that the same loyalty and attachment which his predecessor in office had so invariably evinced, might be transmitted undiminished to his successors for many AGES," HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS became quite fuddled, and turning round to his Aid-de-camp, Private Secretary, and *Foster*child, enquired whether the Deputy, in alluding to such a paper as the AGE IS, did not mean to be personal; but, however, after a little explanation, HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS regained the previous placidity of his temper. During the repast several toasts were proposed and duly acknowledged; and after "the Duchess of Gloucester" was drunk, it was HIS ROYAL pleasure to proceed with his *suite to the Quay, (which it appears they have at Poole as well as in London,) and other public and remarkable buildings, and then on his arrival at the boundaries of the town, he entered his carriage, and proceeded to Merley. The account further states, that D. O. LANDER, Esq. had great CREDIT for the repast, which of course means, as is generally the case with these WHIG parties, that NONE of it was PAID FOR; and we further learn, privately, that before the meeting broke up, HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS was called upon for a song, and alluding to the way in which he was bothered during the Deputy's harangue, gave his namesake Billy Lackaday's lament:

"This way, that way, how I'm rated,
Ne'er was youth so sitivated."

* In our private account this is spelt "sweet!"

A SINGULAR FACT.

It is rather A SINGULAR FACT, that in the House List of Performers, engaged for the present season at Covent-garden Theatre, the name of MRS. J. BRADSHAW (late Miss TREE) is inserted as one of the company.—Morning Chronicle, Oct. 6.

It is in our opinion a much more SINGULAR FACT that the Proprietors of this Theatre (of course we do not wish to include the name of KEMBLE in any such disgraceful transaction, for we do not believe he would even countenance it) are going to institute a legal process against MR. BRADSHAW, for his marriage with this lady. We are in possession of CAPT. FORBES'S sentiments, as delivered by him publicly at the table of a NOBLE MARQUIS last summer, and deem them a disgrace to any individual, and such as we should have thought even he could not have dared to utter.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

A short time ago, his Grace, accompanied by the Prince and Princess Rassumoffski, visited Messrs. Brights' Repository, at Buxton, and whilst they were engaged in examining the various curiosities it contains, a poor woman entered, and in a Lancashire dialect asked "which wur Mester Duke?" His Grace was pointed out to her by one of the ladies of the party, and she continued her exclamations in the most emphatic manner---"God bless yo, sur," she said, "oi've bin at Buxton mony a toime, but oi niver see yo befoor, an' oi want for t' say as oid 've shaked hands wi' yo." With this request his Grace complied, and the old lady left the repository highly delighted that she had shaken hands with the Duke of Devonshire.—Morning Herald, Oct. 3.

We are delighted to record this trait of the NOBLE DUKE, as we deem it highly commendable in one, whose gallantry and devotion to the female sex has been so sceptically doubted.

TO ALL HIS MAJESTY'S LIEGE AND WELL-BELOVED SUBJECTS.

The humble Petition of AN ASS,

SHEWETH,

That your Petitioner, representing very nearly one-half of the people of England, begs leave with much respect to address the other half, for the purpose of alleviating some of those distresses with which it pleaseth them to afflict their less powerful brethren, and at a period when their cause has become the theme of universal sympathy, by the intercession of the Father of their Family, their natural Protector, and REPRESENTATIVE IN PARLIAMENT, they venture to uplift their voices, in furtherance of his laudable efforts. In order that you may be thoroughly aware of the historical distinction of our very ancient family, at the same time of the varied uses to which their services have been applied from generation to generation, as well as the present eminence enjoyed by many branches of it, your Petitioner submits to your consideration the following facts:---

From the period of our disembarkation from the vessel under the command (as your poet LORD BYRON expresses himself) of CAPTAIN NOAH,* no event of importance occurred for years to commemorate either our genius, our patience, or our endurance, until the memorable salvation of one BALAAM, by OUR GREAT ANCESTORS, who on that occasion, by the address he made to his master, fully established those claims to oratory, which subsequent ASSES have so forcibly supported---after which our race slumbered in comparative obscurity, until the foundation of the Roman Empire, with the consequence of which we also rose at once into NATIONAL importance. The currency of this realm was the earliest instance of our identity with its fortunes; for the Roman AS, or ASSES, (so called from its manufacture from Æs—anglice—BRASS, which metal, as a corroboration of my assertion, is the prevailing quality of most of our present race) was our first association with those great people, and your Petitioner has always understood that the title of asinus, by which they distinguished us, was originally given from their finding so much of this æs, or as in us, the value of which, was increased by one PAPIRIUS, A. U. C. 563; that is to say, by an auctioneer of that name, in the said year. After which, we became more particularly celebrated by a Mr. Plautus, who wrote a comedy expressly on the subject of our family, called an ASS IN AN AREA, from which circumstance may be deduced the strong intimacy and relationship that has ever since subsisted between the stage, and our kindred. Your Petitioner would next, without profaneness, allude to our immortal visit to Jerusalem, which event, was some years since paraphrased by HER MAJESTY QUEEN CAROLINE, of glorious memory, whose consequent affection for ASSES is too proverbial to need comment from me, as particularly exemplified in her leading our brother GUILDFORD one of his OWN relations to ride round the grounds of the Villa d'Este, and in her subsequent employment of WOOD, old ERSKINE, and PETER MOORE, all our own kin. But this is foreign to the business, and having therefore disposed of the principal cases, wherein we were so particularly signalized in ancient history, your Petitioner

ventures to come down at once to more modern times, and hopes to introduce instances equally confirmatory of the distinguished rank we hold in society. In the POLITICS of the nation, it is impossible for any family to cut a better figure than we do; for in the first place, our FATHER AND PATRON represents Galway; another of our family called PETER, is member for Coventry; another for Gloucestershire; AN OLD Ass for Norfolk; and the GREATEST Ass in the country for Aberdeen: from which alone may be estimated the great *ass*istance we are in the *ass*embly of the State, while in LITERATURE we shine with equal brilliancy, for in each "Seat of Learning" alone our *ass*ay mark of A.S.S. is a literary distinction of considerable value, which thousands are in possession of, who very ably keep up its character; and at the same time some of our brethren are among the learned men of the day, for one of us is EDITOR of A Morning Paper, and others too *ass*ist in several leading periodicals. In the LAW, our brother ADOLPHUS is famous for ass-size, and another brother, a quondam Attorney, has in BUSINESS lately established himself as a resident Director of an *Ass*urance-Office, in Bridge-street, Blackfriars---while in fashionable life we comprise full half of its votaries---for in one instance alone our relation, a *foot*ed animal, called by the French ANE, has greatly distinguished himself, and by the profusion of his expenditure, materially benefited his Country's revenue. Among the supporters of all liberal professions, but the DRAMA particularly, members of our Family will be found---for in the Committee of one Theatre, our cousin NINNY has a voice, and in that of the other as fine AN Ass as any living, called SAWNIE, is at the head.---Amongst the players, too, we have several friends, as well as amongst the dramatists, who have confessed themselves mainly indebted to us very frequently---instance the AUTHOR of X. Y. Z. (who, since the death of the last LICENSER, has become connected with our family), for Neddy Bray is the very soul of the piece, owing to that fellow, LISTON, who, thank Heaven, has nothing to do with us---in spite of his wearing our ears, as our Phrygian Monarch, Mr. Midas.

By this account then it will be at once perceived, that in all the transactions and avocations of life, none bear a more prominent feature than the family and friends of your PETITIONER, and that point being fully established, it becomes obvious that we are entitled to every consideration at your hands; whereas we are not only subject to the whip of every master, to the lash of every writer, and the degradation of mankind, but we are ass-hailed at every turn, caricatured in every window, and ridiculed on the public stage. Flesh and blood can bear this no longer, and patient as we are known to be on all occasions, there is nevertheless a point beyond which it is quite impossible to go, and we can no longer, in justice to our numerous and respectable kindred, assent to the humiliation we are now undergoing; and it is therefore with the utmost respect your PETITIONER craves attention to these various claims. We are most willing at all times to contribute to your wishes, your amusements, or your health, for although the "milk of human kindness" flow not in our veins, we with patience contribute a flow of other milk, as many of your patients must gratefully admit. To deny the truth of every thing we have here laid down, would be a ridiculous *ass*ertion, and to your feelings therefore your PETITIONER, on behalf of himself and *ass*ociates, appears. You may ride us and drive us, and beat us, if necessary; but we must protest against such infliction on the sides or ribs of our person---our ribs cannot endure it---"*ass*ume a virtue, if you have it not"---*ass*ail the head, if you like, for its thickness precludes all fear of danger, as in the cases of either PETER, or NINNY, or SAWNIE; (three distinguished brethren); nothing could break their heads, cracked as you may think them. Do this, and depend on our attachment, our fidelity and our service---of our thankfulness in absence, and our respect in your presence; or (to use the classical language of our cousin EDMUND PETRE) when, "AS in presenti"---and in the fullest conviction that you will take this our petition into due consideration, your PETITIONER,

As in duty bound, will ever pray†, &c. &c.

NEDDY.

Ashill, Somersetshire, Oct. 5, 1825.

* "Where all discoveries jumbled from the flood,
Since first the leaky ark reposed in mud,
By more or less are sung in every book,
From CAPTAIN NOAH down to CAPTAIN COOK."
English Bards and Scotch Reviewers.

† This must be a misprint—the Petitioner surely means bray.—ED.

LORD PORCHESTER.

This nobleman, a poet of celebrity, visited Inverness last week. Monday he visited Culloden Moor, and being informed by his guide that a woman lived in Inverness, who was nine years of age at the time of the Culloden battle, he returned to town for the purpose of having an interview with her. She afforded his Lordship satisfactory information in answer to his numerous enquiries; and finding that she depended chiefly for a subsistence on the small sum of two pounds from one of the charitable funds of the town, he generously ordered that two pounds more should be paid her yearly for life on his account Helen Reid the object of Lord Porchester's bounty on this occasion, was born on the 19th March, 1736, and now occupies a comfortless dwelling near the Old Bridge.—(Edinburgh Observer, Oct. 4)

Without discussing the merits of this "poet of celebrity," on his "celebrated" poem the MOOR, it will be only necessary to point out to the reader that HIS LORDSHIP obtained the most satisfactory information relative to the battle of Culloden, from an old woman, who was at the time only nine years of age, and of course must have a very perfect recollection of the whole business; and the reader must be at once convinced that HIS LORDSHIP's celebrity, is quite as great as this old woman's memory.

It has often been asked who the places now lets,
In the place which poor BRANDON so long used to fill;
And some swear 'tis FORBES every "shilling" who gets,
While others, that ROBERTSON fingers the till.

But it seems it is SAWNIE's the man—and what's more,
In his present appointment all people agree,
That he's fit to control PRIVATE BOXES on shore,
As he used to command Private Tiers when at sea.

Box-office, Covent-Garden Theatre,
Oct. 7, 1825.

THEATRICALS.

We predicted last week, that the performance of the Road to Ruin, at Drury Lane Theatre, would excite public attention; we moreover hinted that the only name wanting in the cast of characters was that of DOWTON---both of which suggestions were fully realized on the evening in question. The Worthing hero, who made the rash attempt of filling up the leading part in this drama, shared the fate of all people making such rash attempts ---that is to say, he totally failed; for out of the many qualifications requisite for a due personation of this arduous part, Mr. WILLIAMS in reality did not bring into the field a single one; and while we are ready to admit that, in a less ambitious walk, he may be rendered highly serviceable, we set down the notion of a man following MUNDEN in Old Dornton, and after missing that, following TERRY, in Peter Simpson, as little short of hydrophobia, and can only wish some of the PREVENTIVE SERVICE had followed him up from the Sussex coast, and prevented him, as a contraband article, from putting into execution his desperate design. WALLACK'S Harry was an excellent performance, and only wanted that buoyancy which characterised his great predecessor, to be perfect: to delight after ELLISTON, is a great triumph---to rival him is beyond all possibility. Mr. BENNETT is a respectable imitator of BLANCHARD, but like all other imitators, wanting the genius of the original; and GATTIE in Silky was beyond description wretched---the very idea of putting such an unwieldy personage as this into the wizened usurer is bad enough; but putting such a miserable actor as GATTIE into KNIGHT'S great part, is the height of all bombast. To make the play really attractive, and equally talented in its leading parts, DOWTON should play Dornton---WILLIAMS, Sulky---and BENNETT, (if KNIGHT is on "the sick list,") Silky, and you would then have something worth seeing. It would be idle to expatiate on so established and amusing a performance as HARLEY'S Goldfinch, and we shall therefore pass on to Mrs. DAVISON, whose personation of the Widow Warren was of the highest order of acting, and the partial regret which arose at seeing her announced for such a part, totally subsided on witnessing her matchless acting in it. Miss KELLY'S Sophia is perfect---to anatomise its various beauties would be a very endless affair, but her chef d œuvre is the discovery of young Dornton's projected marriage with her brother, where she destroys the love-letter he had sent her---but we will not trust ourselves with any description of it, after the following remarks, copied verbatim from Friday's Morning Herald, to which, if the reader is at all sceptical, he really should refer:

"Her puking up EVERY PARTICLE of the broken Valentine, after her expressed resolution to go to grandmamma 'down to Gloucestershire,' and hate Dornton and all mankind 'for his sake,' was another touch which every one felt to be as simple and natural as it was affecting!!!"

upon which we can only observe, that such a TOUCH must have been both natural and affecting; but while we regret to say, it shows that Miss KELLY must have been very SICK of her performance, we can assure this gifted lady THAT was NOT the case with her audience. Ella Rosenberg terminated the evening's amusements, in which this accomplished actress enchained the feelings of the whole house, by a very opposite, but equally high order of acting; and the piece itself would have been pleasing in every respect, if any other person had played Flutterman. Mr. TAYLEURE cuts a very good figure in his own caricature shop, but is six feet and a half of the worst dramatic stuff ever exhibited in public. KENNY, who is in the Cabinet here, when he does get his own pieces acted, should see they are properly represented.

Mr. WARDE'S subsequent personation of Brutus has confirmed the great impression his first appearance created, and his performance of the Duke, in the Honeymoon, on Friday, has finally established him as a first-rate artist; but with this and one or two other exceptions, the cast (to be technical) of this play was positively disgraceful.---Mr. POWER is an admirable actor, and by far the very best Irish comedian now on the Stage; but the exact difference between POWER and JONES, is the difference between Looney M'Twolter and Rolando. Whoever forced him to "this pass," meant to do him an injury, that nothing but his really great abilities saved him from, and against which he should have rebelled---play him in low Irishmen, and he is fit to succeed JOHNSTONE; to say what his high-crowned hat closely resembled, would not be delicate.---BLANCHARD as Lampedo, and KEELY as Lopez, were admirable---Mrs. CHATTERLY acquitted herself as "Volante," to the life, and Mrs. DAVENPORT was delicious---to our taste---while Mrs. CALCRAFT acted the character of the would-be DUTCHESS, with as little effect as she did, when attempting the same part many years ago, with the heir to the noble house of Gordon!---and to say what MEADOWS in Jaquez, was like, excepting every now and then like to get hissed--would be impossible; the worst of this fellow is, (as a Cockney near us remarked,) he is horribly addicted to whining. We cannot, however, omit to notice the inimitable performance of Mr. ATKINS, as Campillo, and Mr. HENRY as Pedro, while Mr. HAYES, as Olmedo, was truly emphatic. Der Frieschutz has lost none of its charm or popularity; nor indeed can it while it retains that enchanting syren, Miss PATON.

THE ENGLISH OPERA HOUSE closed on Wednesday a most prosperous season; and where, as in this instance, such ability, assiduity, and liberality have been so apparent in all its managerial movements, and so highly rewarded, never talk any stuff about the English not being a play-going set of people. As some persons are curious in such matters, we subjoin the "last dying speech," and if it please no one else, we can answer for its delighting, as a sample of GEORGY'S oratory, two fat comfortable people, by a member of whose family it was delivered:

"LADIES AND GENTLEMEN,---According to annual custom, I appear before you, as the performances of this evening terminate our short summer season. I have to express our sense of gratitude for the very liberal patronage which the English Opera House has received. The various exertions which have been made to merit your favour---the engagement of all the first-rate talent within the reach of the Proprietor---the great expence incurred by the production of the opera of 'Tarrare,' and other novelties, have been, I am happy to say, fully repaid by the liberality of the Public, which enables the Proprietor to promise that the preparations for their amusement next season shall be marked by increased energy. The Proprietor trusts that in the production of Salieri's Grand Opera of 'Tarrare,' he has sustained that high musical reputation of the Theatre, which it acquired by the first introduction to the Public, of the celebrated 'Der Frieschutz,' and he begs to state that he has already in preparation, for the next season, more than one Opera, which he believes will be found equally worthy of your approbation. Permit me, Ladies and Gentlemen, to offer you the sincere thanks of the Proprietor, and in my own name and that of all the performers, to bid you respectfully farewell."

THE HAYMARKET is still reaping gold by POOLE'S excellent comedy of Paul Pry; and we perceive A NEW FARCE is forthcoming, founded they say on Les deux Pages, which, under the present management of MADAME VESTRIS, Mrs. and Miss GLOVER, stands a chance of doing little, or, as the wags will have it, of "doing" little---MORRIS.

THE ADELPHI opens to-morrow, as announced by a very fair skit; we allude to BISHOP'S matchless Gipsey Glee and Chorus, and from a variety of feelings we are disposed to render the new Managers every possible countenance, provided they do not break to our hope the promises they have given to our ear; and that they will not we are well convinced. Amongst other novelties we perceive by their play-bills that "Coachmen are to set down with their horses' heads towards Temple Bar," and their tails, of course, towards Charing-Cross.

"It is our opening DAY."

By a paragraph in the Morning Herald, we find that LORD BRUCE and the Honourable HENRY STANHOPE are employed by EBERS to procure artistes for the ensuing season at the Opera House, and we understand that the former has succeeded with MADAME BROCHARD, but we have not yet heard if the latter has been equally successful. MADAME CATALANI has also made an offer of herself for the ensuing season, but we sincerely trust that EBERS will not be duped into an engagement with this "amusing vagabond," as LORD BYRON has termed her, whose voice has most abruptly taken leave of her. The return of TOM WELCH and Miss WILSON is also talked of; we regret to hear the Lady was so unceremoniously treated at her debut in Italy, though the affectation and folly of her Master in not allowing, even during her sojourn there, any person but himself to instruct her, may account for it. The Morning Chronicle of Thursday, says, that at no period have meritorious (which must be a misprint for meretricious) actors and actresses been so amply remunerated as at present, and as a proof of it, states that

"Miss Foote cleared upwards of 800*l.* in Dublin, 760*l.* in Liverpool, and 400*l.* in Whitehaven and Carlisle. She is engaged for twelve nights in Edinburgh, for which she is to be paid the enormous sum of 600 guineas. Her first reception there was prodigiously enthusiastic!" on the last line of which it is only necessary to make the following extracts from the Edinburgh Observer:---

"Miss Foote made her first appearance here on Monday night, in the character of Letitia Hardy. Long before the doors were opened, an immense crowd had collected round the theatre, and the whole area of the pit was filled with gentlemen, principally YOUNG MEN. There were very few LADIES in the pit, but upwards of twenty were seated in the lower boxes at seven o'clock, and a great number entered after the performance had begun. Several ladies, who could not get accommodation in the pit, went to the second boxes. As each party of ladies made their appearance, they were saluted with cheers and hisses. When the curtain drew up, Messrs. Denham and Lee, who first came on the stage, were received with tumultuous applause, mixed with hissing, and cries of 'Off, off,'—'Murray, Murray,'—'Manager,'—'the Manager.' This uproar lasted for a minute or two, and the play then proceeded. All the performers, as they came forward, were received with applause, particularly Mr. Jones and Mr. Mackay. When Mr. Murray, as Flutter, appeared, 'Kean, Kean,'—'What did you make of Kean?' was loudly vociferated from the galleries After an ineffectual attempt to go on with his part, he advanced to the front of the stage, and addressed the audience in nearly the following words:—'Ladies and Gentlemen, with Mr. Kean I have nothing to do; nor can I properly be called on to account for his non-appearance in Edinburgh. When that gentleman was under a late engagement, I felt it my duty to inform him, that a party was forming here against him. He then voluntarily renounced his engagement. Had he adhered to it, I should have felt bound in honour to have brought him forward.' This brief speech was received with three hearty cheers, and the piece went on till Miss Foote came on the stage, when another scene of tumult ensued." but the shameless humbug about this lady is insupportable, particularly when the laughable statement of her movements in one day's Post, and of the appearance in the Isle of Man, of "Mr. George Robins from London," in the next day's, from a Correspondent, pretty well accounts for "the PLACE from whence they came." We have only further to add, that Mrs CALCRAFT, of Covent Garden Theatre, accompanied by a gentleman, got entangled in the wheel of a cabriolet in Fleet-street this week, and overturned it completely, but we are happy to say, that neither the driver nor his fare, or the Gentleman and his fair, sustained the least injury. And farther this deponent sayeth not.

GAIETIES AND GRAVITIES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

Newgate, Oct. 5, 1825.

Sir,—In consequence of an article which was inserted in The Morning Chronicle of this day, headed, "Forgery, and Attempt at Swindling," and finishing, "Strong suspicion attaches to a discharged Banker's Clerk, who has made his appearance at the Bar of the Old Bailey," several persons have called on me to-day, expressing, as their opinion, that the public would suppose that I was the individual alluded to, as my name had so lately and unfortunately been brought before you. I trust you will give some explanation to clear me from this imputation, though I cannot but think it strange, that any one should suppose I could be concerned in such an affair, while I am immured in this prison.

There are several Bankers' Clerks at large who have appeared at the Bar of the Old Bailey, one of whom is now a clerk in the office of an eminent Old Bailey practitioner.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

WM. CHRISTMAS.

(Really this person had much better preserve a decent silence altogether).—Ed.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

Sir,—A crying injustice has been done to Mr. Julius Millingen, by the Greek newspaper, which has stated that this gentleman had deserted to the Egyptians, taking with him the instruments furnished by the English Greek Committee. Mr. Millingen was taken prisoner by Ibrahim Pacha, at Navarino, and forced to accompany him, after he had urgently and vainly entreated the interference of the British Naval Commander in his behalf. I have received letters from him, bewailing his unfortunate fate, and imploring the intervention of the British Government in his favour. I hope that any English newspaper which may have circulated this calumnious accusation against an amiable, intelligent, and high-minded Englishman, will also circulate its refutation.

I am, Sir, your obedient humble servant,

5, Jeffery-square, Oct. 3, 1825. JOHN BOWRING.

IMPROVEMENTS WEST OF THE METROPOLIS.

The New Lodges for the Turnpike Gates, on the great Western-road, are not built of the same durable materials as the old ones, at Hyde Park-corner, nor is their elevation so considerable. The first are of coarse brick, plastered over with Parker's cement; the latter are Portland-stone. The interior of the former excels, being entirely of oak, and the doors and sash-frames are of the same material, with windows of plate glass.

The New Church for Kensington.—There are three sites named. First, the most commanding would certainly be Knightsbridge Green; and to effect this would be easy, namely, by pulling down the miserable hovels which now occupy the whole space. Second, the south side of Brompton-square, and directly in the rear of the gardens of Kingston House. Third, the Nursery Ground, opposite Brompton Park.

Men were at work on Saturday preparing the ground for the turning of the road in Hyde Park, next the Piccadilly Gate.

The Conduit.—Around it is a terrace composed of flag stones, and a handsome iron railing; the roof is a solid body of stone.

Lord Grosvenor's Quay.—At Chelsea, notwithstanding the predictions, that it would never pay, there is already a considerable bustle in the way of business. The wharfs will be magnificent—so will the warehouses. In their rear, on the north side, are rows of small neat houses. The once celebrated approach to Ranelagh House, called Ranelagh-walk, which a quarter of a century ago was thickly planted with lofty elms, is become a street.

CORONERS' INQUESTS.

Wednesday afternoon an inquest was held (which is the second only since the re-opening of the establishment) at the General Penitentiary, Millbank, before Mr. Gell, the Coroner, and a respectable Jury, touching the death of a convict, John Lamb, aged 19 years, who died on Monday last of cholera morbus.

The Coroner said, he could not but express the approbation of himself and the Jury of the appearance the prison now presented.

The Jury then returned a verdict of—"Died by the visitation of God."

The Coroner observed, that this was only the second death in the Penitentiary since the re-opening of the establishment, which is twenty months.

On Thursday evening an inquest was held by T. Stirling, Esq. Coroner, at the King's Head, Lower-street, Islington, on the body of Anthony Searle, a respectable young man, about 23 years of age, residing in that parish, who was drowned whilst bathing in the Regent's Canal. Verdict—"Accidentally Drowned."

At the above house, on the same evening, before the same Coroner and Jury, an inquest was taken on view of the body of Wm. Wilmot, 2 years of age, a drover in Smithfield Market, who was found drowned near the Sluice-house at Hornsey, on Sunday morning. The Jury returned a verdict—"That the deceased drowned himself, being in a state of delirium at the time."

DREADFUL MURDER.

A murder, unequalled for atrocity by any that has taken place in this neighbourhood, since the one at Pendleton, in April, 1817, was committed in the vicinity of Bury, on Saturday night last, and has created universal horror and consternation in that neighbourhood. It appears, from the accounts we have heard of this dreadful affair, that an old man, whose name we have not been able to learn, and his wife, who was also advanced in years, lived at Birtles-cum-Bamford, on the road between Bury and Rochdale. On Saturday night last a neighbour, who had been reading to the aged couple, left them about half-past ten o'clock, at which time the woman was preparing to retire to rest, and had changed part of her dress for that purpose. Of what occurred afterwards, nothing is known, except from the consequences which presented themselves on the Sunday morning, when it was discovered that they were both savagely murdered. The man was found sitting in his chair with his skull dreadfully fractured, and it appeared, from the state in which he and his wife were discovered, that whilst the murderers had been doing their bloody work upon him, she had endeavoured to save his life, for she was found with her arms clasped round his neck, and her head beaten almost to pieces. The murder is said to have been effected by means of an old shovel and a poker, which the murderers had met with on the premises, and which they left in the house. Of the exact time at which this dreadful deed was committed, nothing is known; but there is strong reason to suppose that it was very soon after the neighbour quitted the house, as the woman's dress in the morning was in the same state in which at that time; and it is not at all unlikely that the murderers watched the neighbour leave the house, and then rushed in, and effected their purpose. If the object of the villains was plunder as there is every reason to suppose, they were completely disappointed; for as far as can be ascertained, no property whatever was missing from the house. The old man was the owner of several cottages, the rents of which, it is conjectured, the murderers calculated on finding in the house, supposing, probably, that he would have received them on the Monday. It happened, however, we learn, that he had not received any of them; and it is believed that no money, or, at the utmost, only a small sum, fell into their hands. From the mode in which the deed was committed, it is highly probable that the parties who perpetrated it carry away with them some marks of the bloody work in which they had been engaged; and we have been informed that three persons, who are known, were seen, on Sunday morning, passing through Haywood, sprinkled with blood, and were traced from thence to this town, where, no doubt, a very active look-out will be kept for them.—Manchester Advertiser.

Just in Time.—On Wednesday morning last, Mr. Hewitt, the trunk-maker, whose shop is situated under the warehouse which was burnt down in Lord-street, Liverpool, applied at the Manchester Insurance Office, in that town, for a fireman, to ascertain from whence the smell of burning which prevailed in his premises proceeded. The man, after making the examination, and finding, as he supposed, all safe, advised Mr. H. to insure his property. This advice he was not slow to take, and repairing to the Fire-office, said that he wished to insure his property to the amount of a hundred pounds! "A hundred pounds," said the active agent, "you had better insure two hundred." "Very well," said Mr. Hewitt, "two hundred be it." The instructions were accordingly received for that sum, and before the ink was well dry upon the paper, the premises were burnt down.—Morning Paper.

A bold Thief.—A gentleman, residing at Peckham, has made it his practice, for some time past, to go with his family every Sunday to church, including the servant. Soon after the service had begun, some three Sundays back, a gig was observed to drive up to the door, containing a gentleman and his servant. The gentleman alighted, and knocked at the door in grand style; it opened, and the gentleman entered, the gig being left standing at the door with the servant in it. After having remained in the house about half an hour the stranger came out, got into his gig, and drove off. The family shortly returned from church, and soon became acquainted with the consequences of the stranger's visit. One hundred sovereigns had been taken from a bureau in which they were deposited, two gold watches, three dozen silver spoons, a silver tea-pot, and every other article of value in the house that could be carried about the person. It is supposed that the pretended gentleman must have picked the lock whilst he was knocking at the door, and thus effected his purpose.

Naval Charitable Society.—At the Quarterly Meeting, held on Monday the 3d of this month, at the Thatched House Tavern, St. James's-street, sixty-five Petitions were relieved with 635*l.* 5*s.*, making 261 Petitions to which relief has been extended since the 3d of January last; and the sum so granted by the Society to the several applicants, during the present year, amounting to 2,701*l.* 13*s.*

The Price of an Ear.—At the New Bailey Court Room, Manchester, John Vaughan was brought up, charged with having, in a fight, bitten off a man's ear. An officer of the Court stated that he had seen the man whose ear had been bitten off that morning, and that he refused to appear against Vaughan; he had been paid thirty shillings for his ear, and was quite satisfied. The man was of course discharged.

The Ipswich Blues.—Upwards of fifty Gentlemen, friends of the True Blue Cause, sat down to an excellent dinner at the White Horse, on Thursday, Edward Bacon, Esq. in the Chair.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

Prince Leopold has been on a visit to Earl Darnley, at his seat, Cobham Hall, Kent.

The Duke of York and the Hon. George Forrester, left town on Sunday, for Chevely, near Newmarket, the seat of his Grace the Duke of Rutland.

Sir Walter Scott is expected in Paris in a few days. The illustrious traveller will be at the Hotel of the Marshal Duke of Tarentum.

Expeditious Travelling.—A new coach, the Emperor, started on Thursday morning, for the first time, from Edinburgh, at nine o'clock, and reached Glasgow at half-past twelve o'clock precisely, being a distance of 44 miles in three hours and a half.

In the York festival week, a gentleman lost a parcel of bills and notes, to the amount of 700*l.* and upwards. On Monday last, as the groom of a gentleman of this city was coming up the passage which leads from Coney-street to the river side, opposite New-street, he found, thrust into a cavity in the wall, a bundle of papers, rolled up and enclosed in brown paper. These, upon inspection, proved to be a portion of the identical notes lost by the gentleman; and the next day, upon a more close examination of the place, several more were found, amounting, in their whole value to 273*l.* How they came into this situation is, of course, a mystery.—York Herald.

A singular circumstance occurred at Silsden, Yorkshire, last week. A person got up in his sleep, and wrenching the stancheons out of the window, leaped into the street, and was proceeding along, when two females (inmates of the house) aroused from their sleep by the noise he had made in getting out of the window, pursued him, and ou overtaking him, found him still asleep, and utterly unconscious of his situation. On awaking him, he assigned as a reason for his singular conduct, that he had been dreaming he had a rattle-snake in bed with him, and was escaping from it. What appears the most remarkable is, that he escaped without any injury, save a few scratches on the skin.

Last week terminated the life of Anne Moore, of this town, the pretended fasting woman, in the 76th year of her age. About the beginning of the year 1807, this extraordinary impostor lived at Tuthury, a village in Staffordshire, when she first excited public attention by declaring that she lived without food, and having offered to prove the truth of her assertion by submitting to be watched for a considerable time, she was at last detected in her imposture by a professional gentleman of the name of Fox, who discovered that her daughter was in the habit of conveying her food daily, and concealing it under the bedclothes.—(Macclesfield Courier.)

Robbery of the Bolton Bank.—We understand that the Bolton bankers have not, as yet, heard any thing of the property which was stolen from the bank last week. It appears probable that something occurred to alarm the robbers whilst they were engaged in their nefarious design; for they did not penetrate into the interior part of the safe, where was deposited a sum considerably larger than the one they obtained; and they not only left the safe door open, with the key they had used in the lock; but they also left behind them an instrument of new invention, and of an ingenious and expensive construction. It was apparently intended to force open doors by the power of a screw, and was in power something like the screw-jack used for taking off the wheels of heavy carriages; but the screw was much finer and more powerful. It was inclosed in a neat leather case, and then looked not unlike a telescope.—Macclesfield Herald.

Peerage of Ireland.—Since the extinction of the peerages which enabled the Crown to cause the promotion of Lord Bloomfield to the dignity of a Baron of Ireland, four more peerages have become extinct. The coronet vacant, in consequence of these extinctions, will, it is understood, be immediately conferred on a Gallant Admiral, now on the continent for the recovery of his health. The claims of the Church, Army, and Law, have been heretofore attended to, in the promotion of an Archbishop, two Generals, and a Chief Justice. The Navy, on the present occasion, bears away the palm. The four extinct Peerages alluded to above are:—

Hanger, Lord Coleraine	1824
Eardeley, Lord Eardeley	1824
Newcomen, Viscount Newcomen	1824
Whitworth, Lord Whitworth, (Earl of Whitworth, in England)	1825

The entire number of Irish Peerages extinct since the Union in January, 1801, is now twenty-eight, which exceeds the ratio of an extinct Peerage annually. The following Gallant Officers have been mentioned as candidates for the Peerage now vacant by the extinction of the Lords Coleraine, Eardeley, and Newcomen, viz.—The Hon. Sir Henry Blackwood, Knight, Rear-Admiral of the Red; Sir John Poer Beresford, Bart., Rear-Admiral of the Red; and Sir James Hawkins Whitshed, K.C.B., Admiral of the Red.

The statue of Louis XIV., destined for the city of Lyons, set out on Monday, at half-past ten o'clock, from the Faubourg du Roule. It was placed in a carriage, drawn by 22 horses. The wood-work which surrounded the great King's statue was ornamented with green branches and surmounted with white flags. Notwithstanding the vast weight it had to carry, the conveyance proceeded with tolerable rapidity; it ought to have reached the Barrier du Trone at half-past one. Detachments of the Royal gendarmes of Paris escorted it to the gate. An immense crowd flocked to the boulevards to see this monument.

All vessels coming from Alexandria (Egypt) with cotton, although they may be furnished with clean bills of health, must perform quarantine at Milford.

The paragraph copied from the Southampton Herald, mentioning the departure of General Mina and family, for Jersey, is incorrect. It was General Milans who embarked.

Amongst the papers of Dr. Baillie is a note to William Hunter from his brother John. The following is a copy:

"Dear Brother—The bearer is very desirous of having your opinion. I do not know his case. He has no money, and you don't want any, so that you are well met. Ever yours,

"Jermyn-street, Saturday. "JOHN HUNTER."

A Memoir of Dr. Parr is preparing by his friend, Dr. John Johnstone, of Birmingham, founded on materials left by Dr. Parr himself for that purpose; and illustrated by letters and papers of various kinds, exclusively in possession of the executors (of whom Dr. Johnstone is one), and by communications from Dr. Parr's most intimate friends, Dr. Davy, Master of Caius, Dr. Routh, President of Magdalen, Dr. Maltby, Archdeacon Butler, and other learned men. This memoir of Dr. Johnstone's is intended to be prefixed to a collection of the works published by Dr. Parr himself, and a selection of the Sermons, Criticisms, Inscriptions, and Miscellaneous matter, which he has left to a very considerable extent."—Literary Gazette.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Worcester, Oct. 3.—On Thursday, John Dent, Esq. our highly respected Mayor Elect, gave a most sumptuous banquet in the large room at the Guildhall to a party, exceeding three hundred in number.

It is reported that Lieut.-Colonel Torrens is likely to offer himself as a Candidate for the Borough of Evesham.

A valuable horse for which nearly 50*l.* had been offered, was stolen on Tuesday evening last, from the farm of Mr. Lowick, of Crowie.

The regular Militia of this County, commanded by Colonel Charlette, assembled in this city, on Friday, for twenty-eight days' training and exercise.

The Yeomanry cavalry on Wednesday completed their six days' training and exercise, and were dismissed to their homes.

On the election of a Bailiff at Kidderminster, which occurs at this season of the year, the inhabitants assemble in the principal street to throw cabbage stalks at each other. The Town House bell gives signal for the affray. This is called lawless hour. This done, for it lasts an hour, the Bailiff-elect and Corporation in their robes, preceded by drums and fifes, for they have no waits, visit the old and new bailiffs, constables, &c. attended by the mob. In the mean time the most respectable families in the neighbourhood are invited to meet and fling apples at them on their entrance. More than forty pots of apples have been expended at one house.

Summary Punishment.—On the Tewkesbury race-course on Thursday last, a genteel dressed man, booted and spurred, was detected in the act of picking a gentleman's pocket; on a hue and cry being raised, the culprit was seized by the multitude, and dragged down to the Severn, into which, head foremost, he was soused, without any ceremony, and which he swam across, very little aided, we presume, by his boots and spurs; his confederates, in the mean time, having conducted his rosinante to the opposite side, he mounted her, and got clear off. The following day another of the light-fingered gentry was detected in picking a pocket, when he was served in a similar manner; but whether owing to the want of boots and spurs, or rather, as some imagine, not being so expert a swimmer, he was nearly drowned, and was with difficulty extricated from his perilous situation by having a rope thrown out to him, with which he was safely dragged on shore, though apparently much exhausted. We hope that this lesson, of having once been saved by a rope, will have a salutary effect upon his future conduct, which, if persisted in, will perhaps have a contrary tendency.—Cheltenham Journal.

Bristol, Oct. 1.—On Thursday last, according to Charter usage, the ceremony of swearing in the new Mayor and Sheriffs was, we will venture to say, performed in our Guildhall, in the presence of a greater number of Burgesses and Commonalty than have for many years past been present to witness it. The new Mayor, Mr. Alderman Haythornes, was about to be sworn, when Mr. Henry Ball, solicitor, who attended professionally for several of the Burgesses and Commonalty of the city, attempted to address the Mayor, and the following conversation ensued:—

Mr. Ball—Mr. Mayor——

Mr. Town Clerk—We cannot hear any speeches—this is a meeting for swearing in the Mayor—no address can be allowed.

Mr. Ball—As a free Burgess of the City, I submit, Sir, that I have a right to address the Bench.

Mr. Town Clerk—No, certainly not.

Mr. Ball—Then, Sir, I protest against the election of the Mayor and Sheriffs.

Mr. Town Clerk—Very well, you may protest.—(Considerable applause.)

After this novel and unusual interruption, the customary oath was administered to the Mayor elect.—Bristol Journal.

While a large and fashionable party in a town in this county were some time since regaling themselves with tea and coffee, a young lady (who was seated next to a Dowager of immense property, but extremely penurious habits) started from her seat, exclaiming, in terror, that there was a viper under the chair! On examination, however, it proved to be an eel. The appearance of an eel, however, was as extraordinary in a tea-room as a viper. After considerable confusion; the stingy Dowager above alluded to, exclaimed, "an eel; and pray who is frightened at an eel? Poor harmless thing, it has crawled from my pocket, where I have plenty more. As I was coming up the street to tea, a woman passed me with eels, and as they looked very nice, I thought I would buy a few for supper; as it was late I did not like to return home with them; and, as I thought, if I left them with the woman, she would cheat me in the weight, I put them into my pocket: so pray give me that poor thing again, that I may put it to its companions." The parsimonious Dowager forthwith pocketed her slippery treasure.—Shrewsbury Chronicle.

Liverpool, Oct. 1.—Mr. Owen left Liverpool this morning, in the New York, for the United States. He goes to visit his own colony of New Harmony, in the State of Indiana, and two others now in progress—one in the State of Ohio, near the Yellow Springs; the other in the neighbourhood of Pittsburgh. More are in contemplation, particularly one near to Philadelphia.

Dublin, Oct. 3.—The intended fashionable bathing town, to be called "New Brighton," in the vicinity of this city, is about to be commenced, and, it is said, will be proceeded on with spirit. The Secretary to the Company, Mr. St. George Gregg, who went to England some time back, accompanied by an architect of eminence, is expected home daily. They have visited all the fashionable bathing spots in that country, and the feasibility of the undertaking has appeared so manifest, that several builders of capital have applied to the Company for plots of ground on building leases.

Oxford, Oct. 6.—Mr. Mulock, who has for some time been preaching in the Potteries, lately opened a chapel here, and held forth novel and extraordinary doctrines, which, it is stated, have had remarkable effects in several families. His principal followers are the son of a most opulent and respectable baker; a chymist, in very extensive business in the High-street; and the son of one of the managers of the Clarendon Printing-office (not Mr. Collingwood.) This afternoon, two of these gentlemen were furiously attacked by a mob in St. Thomas's parish; they gained admission into a house and locked the doors; but they were forced open, and the two gentlemen then became exposed to the fury of the assembled crowd, who drove them out of St. Thomas's through the wharfs, and into St. Giles's, in which place they took refuge in a house, and remained there for some time. About seven in the evening, in returning home, they were again attacked upon Carfax; they ran into the Town-hall Yard, and the doors were locked. Some time after they ventured out, and appeared in a strange pickle, being covered with mud and filth of every description; their hats were knocked off and lost. With some difficulty they reached the house of the chymist (opposite to St. Mary's church); several windows in the house have already been broken, and we are apprehensive that a great riot will ensue. Mr. Mulock (who was a member of Magdalen Hall, Oxford) is well known as a friend of Mr. Canning. He has published several religious pamphlets, some of which contain severe animadversions on Bible Societies.

BRADFORD, OCT. 5.—Matters remain here as they were last week, with the exception, that instead of the Committee at the Roebuck reducing the allowance from 7s. to 5s. weekly, as was reported, they have raised it to men having families, to 8s. weekly. The Masters are, evidently, out-generaled by the men; every step taken by the former, tends to place the latter on higher ground as to resources. It is very confidently reported, that preparations are making in concurrence with the Union Committee, to commence manufacturing in opposition to the Masters, on a large scale.

KEIGHLEY, OCT. 4.—There is at present no combination amongst the master manufacturers at Keighley, and the resolution proposed to them by the Bradford manufacturers, viz.:—That of turning from their employ all who would not sign a written disavowal of the 'Union' has been rejected. A number, however, of combers have this week been thrown out of work, it is supposed, from the depressed state of the markets; one manufacturer has turned from his employ about twenty combers.

Our correspondent at Huddersfield, under the same date, writes, that "at the adjourned meeting of the manufacturers of that town, held on Tuesday week, Mr. Norton, of Clayton, near Barnsley, was called to the Chair, when, after some conversation, it was determined not to support the Bradford manufacturers."

The masters at Bingley have resolved to adopt the resolutions of the Bradford and Halifax Association, relative to requiring their workpeople to sign a written disavowal of any connexion with the Union.

LEEDS.—The statement which we made last week, respecting the Wool-combers, has been contradicted by an anonymous correspondent of Saturday's papers. In reply, we must first assure our readers that we do not hazard assertions on any subject without having good authority for them, and that we are fully aware a strict adherence to truth is the best mode of supporting the cause we espouse. A mere denial, therefore, without authority, cannot avail to shake public confidence in what we advisedly and carefully advance. We now repeat every thing which we affirmed last week, with the exception of the actual number of combers thrown out of employment by the strike in Leeds, which was some half dozen less than we stated. With respect to the other points, let the following facts, vouched to us by a highly respectable house who generally employed above 900 men in this town, speak for themselves. We pledge ourselves for their accuracy:—On the 21st of April, 1824, they advanced their combers' wages 10 per cent., and on the 12th of April, 1825, they, unsolicited, advanced them another 10 per cent. The reduction now proposed, in consequence of the depression of trade, is of the latter advance of 10 per cent., and the prices would then be as high as the house ever gave, even when provisions were at the dearest rate, except during one month, about 11 or 12 years back. The letter of a wool-comber affirms, that they have worked from 12 to 16 hours a-day, and could not earn more than from 12 to 14s. per week. The answer is this—the comb-shops open at five in the morning, and close at eight at night; but about an hour elapses before the men commence work, and an hour each day is allowed for meals. The combers beside, deliver in on Fridays before 5 o'clock, and are paid on Saturdays at 4, so that the loss upon these two days is 7 hours, and the average time of working for the week 12 hours per diem. So much for the time: now for wages. The average earnings of three men who at present are begging, or if they please collecting, are:—One, a standing wages of 18s.; a second, for seventeen weeks before the strike, 18s. 10½d.; and a third, at the reduced wages now offered, earned for fourteen weeks of the latter end of 1824, 23s. 11d; out of which period if two weeks be taken, the first at 15s. 10d., the other 16s., the average will be 25s. 3d. per week; and for fifteen weeks previous to the late strike, his wages were from 21s. 3d. to 30s. 3d. It is besides to be observed, that the time spent by the men in drinking and other dissipation, is included in the foregoing account; and yet it is said, that for the last twelve months the combers could not earn more than from 10s. to 12s. each per week! We are at the trouble of mentioning these particulars, that the public may know exactly how matters have stood between the masters and the operatives. We have further to say, that the trade continues to decline, that the last letters from Norwich declare the yarn market cannot be much worse, and that advices from New York, dated the 7th of September, and received here yesterday, state a declension in the demand for, and a fall in, the price of English stuffs in America, owing to the depression of the cotton trade in England. The pay to the Leeds combers, who have turned out, was last week, for a man and his wife, 5s. 6d., although they say it will be next week 8s. Tester's earning's, when combing in Leeds, in 1823, at the rates to which it is now proposed to reduce the wages of the men, were as subjoined:—

	£.	s.	d.		£.	s.	d.
April 9	0	19	10	June 12	1	0	9½
—— 23	1	8	9	—— 19	1	8	7½
May 1	1	1	3	July 3	1	0	6
—— 8	1	1	6	—— 10	1	0	3
—— 15	1	0	9	—— 17	0	18	2¼
—— 22	1	2	0	—— 24	1	7	6
—— 29	0	19	0	—— 31	1	6	6

Three weeks that he was mostly employed in drinking are omitted.

CUMBERLAND TEA GARDENS.

This pleasant place of amusement on the Banks of the Thames, near Vauxhall, will no longer receive the Public. The late occupier, after the destruction of his premises by fire, committed some breach of the covenants in his lease, and the lessors have taken possession. The property on the premises was sold a few days since by the Sheriff under an execution. An engine is to be erected on the spot by the South Lambeth Water Works.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS.---OCT. 4.

The Court was occupied to-day with a great number of assault cases, most of them of a very trivial description.

BRUTAL ASSAULT ON A WOMAN.

Thomas George Lord Townshend was indicted for assaulting Mary Ann Thornhill.

Mr Barry, in detailing the facts to the Jury, observed, that the conduct of the defendant was outrageous and unmanly in the extreme; and the more so, because the victim of his brutality was one of those unhappy females who, having been once led away from a life of virtue and respectability, were no longer received within the pale of society, and could look to man alone for that protection and support under their misfortunes which were denied to them by the members of their own sex. On the night of the 4th of July, having been at the theatre, she went to Mrs. B's oyster-rooms, and there met the defendant, who invited her to sup and drink wine with him. He then called a coach for the purpose of accompanying her home, and they drove towards the New-road; but when passing Grub's oyster-rooms, off Bow-street, the defendant pulled the check-string, and went up stairs, where he called for a pint of wine and sat down to cards. The prosecutrix feeling some suspicion respecting the characters of the persons with whom he was playing, endeavoured to persuade him to go home. This he refused, and to force her to wait for him, he seized her shawl and put it into his hat. She then ordered another coach, and got into it, upon which he followed her, and they again proceeded towards the New-road. The defendant then asked her how she dared to go away without him? and, striking her a violent blow on the side of the head, he commenced beating her most brutally, which he continued to do, notwithstanding her screams, until she had the good fortune to force open the carriage-door and leap out, in Thornhaugh-street, where she took refuge in the house of a milkwoman, behind whom she fell upon her knees, imploring her to protect her from the fury of her persecutor, who pursued her into the house. Such was the injury she sustained from the defendant's unprovoked violence, that she was confined to her room for a whole fortnight. The Learned Counsel then called the prosecutrix, who confirmed this statement, and he was about producing other witnesses, when

Mr. Adolphus, the defendant's Counsel, privately communicated with the prosecutrix, who consented to receive five sovereigns from the defendant, and to forego proceeding any farther with the prosecution.

A Juror was then withdrawn by consent.

The cases not having been all disposed of to-day, the Court was again adjourned to Thursday the 13th inst.

WINES AT REDUCED PRICES FOR CASH ONLY.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

	per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s. to 30s.
Ditto, Crusted	36s. to 42s.
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s. to 56s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s. to 36s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s. to 48s.
Madeira, West India	36s. to 42s
Ditto, East India	48s. to 60s.
Bucellas	36s. to 42s.
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s. to 36s.
Claret, St. Julien	48s.
Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s. to 96s.
Sparkling Champagne	72s. to 84s.
Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s.
St. Peray, dry and spark	72s.
Chablis	63s.
Hermitage, Red and White	96s.
Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s.

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s.; Jamaica Rum, 15s.; Brandy, 25s. per gallon—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder, Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House, (Manufactory, 54, Crutched Friars,) respectfully return their best thanks to the Public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit their future favours, by CONTINUING TO SELL SUPERIOR MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assemblage of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, after the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage; likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, wind-up, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.

☞The LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, stair-case, and gallery railing, balconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and bookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and no abatement.—Stoves and Ranges set, in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in Exchange.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY OF GREAT BRITAIN and most of the Nobility and Gentry, use now PRINCE'S celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints; but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even eminent medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Graut has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair.—Also a Gentleman, turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark; it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oils it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children, and if used constantly not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair, will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying—'Tell the truth, and fear nobody.' If persons are bald, and the roots are entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone, by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely, if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil—the Ounce Bottle 5s.; a large bottle containing Five Ounces, 1l. which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A Prince, No. 9, Poland-Street, Oxford Street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose.—Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses, with counterfeit Russia Oil, saying it is the genuine.

A CHALLENGE FOR 1000 GUINEAS.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER, and PERFUMER, No. 181, FLEET-STREET, Two Doors from Fetter lane, claims the honour of announcing that by the urgent request of many distinguished friends, who so highly patronised him while conducting Mr. Money's business, he has opened an Establishment, and respectfully solicits the attention of the connoisseurs in the scientific Art of Hair-cutting. By many years application to this particular department of his profession in London and Paris, he is enabled to introduce a new and peculiar system, never contemplated by the vulgar empirics who presume to call themselves Hair cutters, but who in fact only destroy the head of hair. Moss's style rigidly adhering to fashion, always adapts itself to each particular countenance (the grand desideratum), and his intercourse with the Courts of Europe furnishes him with a never failing variety. Moss begs to state that his personal attention, and that of his Chief Artist (late with Money), are devoted to Hair-cutting, as he never trusts so important an operation to inexperienced apprentice boys.

The beautiful system of fabricating perukes, scalps, and heads of hair, Secundum Naturam has claimed Moss's particular attention, and he submits to the Beau Monde an exquisite specimen of talent in his new system of Wig making, every hair is singly inserted, the superfices of the skin and complexional colours of the head are astonishingly imitated—the whole forming a conundrum, the most brilliant and natural, calculated to embellish the charms of youth or cover the deficiencies of age.

Moss has prepared a superlative choice of Ladies' Fronts, on a new system, that always retain their curl. Platts and Curls, in all the variegated Tints and shades of nature, which, with an assortment of French Perfumery, he invites his best friends—the public—to examine. Patent Hair Brushes on Moss's new plan, are ready for the taste of the curious; and for One Thousand Guineas he challenges competition with all Europe in every branch of his Profession.—Vivat Rex et industria omnia vincit.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l. forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

BURGESS' ESSENCE OF ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, Corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above;—the general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection, J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;"—others "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.—Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes, having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce—will keep good in all climates.—Warehouse, No. 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish Sauce Warehouse.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. STIRLING, Chemist, &c. No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel, and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.—Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling," on the Stamp Label, with his own writing.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a physician and botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet Market.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are peculiarly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopgate Without; Sequeira 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street, and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Hollis-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, No. 1, and Yarde, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom, Mr. Renard, No. 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others.—By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS; they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, for a Superior Beverage is produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared, that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

Sold Retail by all Grocers and Druggists in the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co. No. 64, Red Rion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words Robinson's Patent, the Royal Arms, and the signature of Matts. Robinson, are affixed to each Package, as none others are genuine.

A REAL BLESSING TO MOTHERS.—There is not, perhaps, in the whole Materia Medica any one remedy which so effectually relieves the pain of a suffering patient as the AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP. Who can watch the writhing tortures into which a lovely infant is often convulsed during the period of dentition, without feeling sympathy for its sufferings? and who would hesitate to procure a remedy, when a remedy can be found, which is obvious by the effectual relief afforded in so many distressing cases which are daily coming to the notice of Mrs. JOHNSON? Therefore, mothers ought never to be without the American Soothing Syrup in the Nursery; for if a child awakes in the night with pain, by only rubbing the gums with a few drops of the Syrup, it will immediately open the pores, heal the gums, and thereby prevent fevers and convulsions; for should it come in competition with any other disorder, it often destroys the mother's brightest hopes.—To be had wholesail and retail, of Johnson and Co. 28, York-place, City-road; and by their appointment, of all principal Medicine Venders in town and country, at 2s. 9d. per bottle.—None are genuine, unless signed on the stamp with Mrs. Johnson's own hand-writing, as there are several spurious sorts.

TO Families Travelling, Promenading, and Enjoying Aquatic Excursions, Bathing, &c. the following inestimable requisites are especially recommended:

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for the complexion, which immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, produces a delightful and pleasing Coolness to the Face, Arms, &c., removes Freckles, Pimples, Spots, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

Also ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for the Hair,

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE.

This Oil is pre-eminently successful in nourishing the Hair, preserving it while travelling, preventing its falling off in cases of illness, and has the unrivalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair. Price 3s. 6d; 7s.; 10s. 6d.; and 21s. per bottle.—Also,

ROWLAND'S ALSANA EXTRACT,

For the TEETH and GUMS, and PREVENTING the TOOTH-ACHE.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, and Bottles; which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing any of the above to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing the signature and address in red, "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden."

Sold by appointment, Wholesale, by Mr. R. Heudrie, (Perfumer to His Majesty), Titchbourn street; Mr. Smyth, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, Holmes, Thevenot, and Brewster, New Bond-street; Messrs. Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Messrs. Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Mr. Atkinson, Gerrard-st.; Mr. Butler, chemist, 4, Cheapside; Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet-market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 6, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Dunn and Thwaite, Hatton-garden; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; and Retail by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 38, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom. Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

MOURNING.

DR. WINN'S TRUE ANTICARDIUM PARIS BLACK or BLUE REVIVER, which is so much esteemed for its excellent qualities and superiority over all other Compositions that have been offered to the public. It has the wonderful effect of restoring, in a few minutes, every description of Ladies and Gentlemen's faded Mourning, Black Hats and Coats, Silk Stockings, Crape, Lace, Silks, Muslins, Cotton, Jean Boots, &c. without injuring the texture of the most delicate article; it removes dirt and grease, will retain its virtues in all climates, and for any length of time.

T. PRICE, Oilman, near the Bricklayer's Arms, Kent-road, London, begs leave to assure persons who constantly use the above Article for restoring Gentlemen's faded Suits, that he is the sole possessor of the Receipt for preparing the inimitable and justly celebrated Mourning Reviver; and, as a proof of its rare and excellent qualities, begs to state, that he has had the most unprecedented demand for it during the last 20 years.

May be had at the Proprietor's Oil and Colour Warehouse; and, Wholesale, of Messrs. T. and C. Butler, 4, Cheapside, and 220, Regent-street, London; 20, Waterloo-place, Edinburgh; and 34, Sackville-street, Dublin; at Messrs. Barclay and Son's Medicine Warehouse, Fleet-market; Mr. Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Messrs. Sutton and Co. Bow Church-yard; and, Retail, by all the principal Oilmen, Druggists, &c. in Town and Country.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

Advices from Rome, of the 22d ult., represent the state of the POPE's health as giving cause of alarm. His Holiness was considered to be in the most danger on the 19th; his weakness was then very great, and affected all parts of his body. On the 22d he was better; "but those," it is remarked, "who knew the danger that impended over him, think that it has not yet passed away." His Holiness is in his sixty-fifth year.

We understand that the African votary of Thespis, whose delineation of Hamlet, Richard, &c. at New York, was so humourously imitated by Mr. MATTHEWS, in his exquisite Entertainment of a Trip to America, is engaged at the Coburg Theatre, and makes his first appearance in the character of Oronoko, in the play of that name, on Monday evening next. So novel an exhibition can scarcely fail to pique the curiosity of all theatrical amateurs.

MADAME VESTRIS is nightly encored in PAUL PRY, in those pleasing songs, "The Lover's Mistake" and "Cherry Ripe;" and from the prettiness of the music, and the delightful manner in which they are sung, they have already passed a second edition, and must have amply renumerated their enterprising publisher.

We are informed that MR. HAWES is on his way to Dublin, to get up the Opera of Tarrare. Mr. Braham is to sustain his original character.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—This pretty little Theatre has been well attended during the week, and the proprietor deserves much praise for the handsome style in which the house is fitted up. The scenery and decorations of a new Indian Melo-drame called Omela, are very effective; and we have no doubt, when the company has attained its full strength, of the success of the season.

In July last, the Three Grand Prizes were sold to the Public at the fortunate Office of RICHARDSON & Co. Charing Cross; one of the above, a Prize of 20,000 Guineas, was gained, (we understand from the friends of that gentleman,) by Mr. Holmes the Member. The present Lottery will all be decided in One Day, Tuesday the 18th of this Month. It contains Prize Money to the amount of upwards of a Quarter of a Million Sterling, including Six Prizes of £20,000, the largest sum ever submitted to the public in one day. Tickets and Shares for the above Scheme are selling in great variety of Numbers, at the old established Office of RICHARDSON & Co. 60, Charing Cross, where upwards of a Million of Prize Money has been distributed to the public.—Schemes to be had gratis, and Country Orders executed postage free.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. shut.	Bank Stock, shut.
Cons. Three per Cents. $88\frac{1}{4}$	Long Annuities, shut.
Three and a half per Cents. shut.	India Stock,
$3\frac{1}{2}$ per Cents. Reduced shut.	India Bonds,
Four per Cents. $103\frac{1}{8}$	Exch. Bills ($1\frac{1}{2}d.$) 3
Consols for Acc $88\frac{1}{4}$ $\frac{3}{8}$ $\frac{1}{4}$

PRICE OF FOREIGN STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Austrian 5 per Cents.	Mexican Bonds, $71\frac{1}{4}$
Brazilian Bonds,	Mexican Scrip, 9 dis.
Brazilian Scrip, dis.	Neapolitan 5 per Cents.
Ditto Ditto (1825) dis.	Neapolitan Scrip, dis.
Buenos Ayres Bonds, 83	Peruvian Bonds, $67\frac{1}{4}$
Chilian 6 per Cents.	Peruvian Scrip, dis.
Colombian 6 per Cents.	Portuguese Bonds,
Ditto Ditto (1824) $75\frac{1}{8}$	Prussian 5 per Cents.
Danish 5 per Cents.	New ditto,
French 5 per Cents.	Russian 5 per Cents. $93\frac{1}{2}$
French Rents,	Spanish 5 per Cents. (1818) $17\frac{1}{2}$
Greek Bonds, $30\frac{1}{2}$	Spanish ditto (1823) $13\frac{1}{2}$
Greek Scrip., $23\frac{3}{4}$ dis.	Guatimala, $4\frac{1}{4}$ dis.

FROM LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

War-Office, 7th Oct. 1825.

4th Regt. of Light Dragoons, I. Elton, to be cornet, vice Ramsbottom—6th Regt. of Dragoons, Lieut. R. Down to be captain, vice Hassard—7th Regt. of Light Dragoons, R. Doyne to be cornet, vice Lord Hopetoun—8th ditto, Regimental Serjeant-Major —— Mawdsley to be quartermaster, vice T. Donahoo—9th ditto, Cornet R. Rumley to be lieutenant, vice Markham; H. S. Trower to be cornet, vice Shawe—10th ditto, Lieut. W. Osborne to be lieutenant, vice R. Dent—12th ditto, Capt. J. Vandeleur to be major, vice Stawell; Lieut. R. Harington to be captain, vice Vandeleur—11th Regt. of Foot, Ensign R. Gardiner to be lieutenant, vice Haldenby—17th ditto, Assistant-Surgeon J. W. Martindale to be surgeon, vice Heriot—32d Regt. of Foot, Lieut. J. R. Colthurst to he captain, vice Lord S. Kerr; Lieut. T. White to be lieutenant, vice Colthurst—33d ditto, J. S. Greene to be ensign, vice Moore—37th ditto, Cornet J. Ralston to be ensign, vice Gardiner—40th ditto, Fitz Herbert Coddington to he ensign, vice Hotham—44th ditto, G. M. Dalway to be ensign, vice M'Crea—45th ditto, Lieut. F. Kearney to be Lieut. vice E. H. Foster—54th ditto, Capt. E. G. Smith to be Paymaster, vice Pillon—66th ditto, G. Douglas to be Ensign, vice Johnston—71st ditto, Staff Assistant-Surgeon J. M. Bartley, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon—73d ditto, Lieut. A. Duke Hamilton to be Captain, vice Macmahon; Ensign H. Seymour to be Lieutenant, vice Hamilton. To be Ensigns, by purchase—M. C. O'Connell, vice Seymour; R. Baillie, vice Howard—74th ditto, Ensign C. A. Vallancey to be Lieutenant, vice Black; H. C. Pocock to be Ensign, vice Vallancey—77th ditto, J. Powell to be Ensign, vice Irvine—80th ditto, Lieut. J. Ellis to be Captain, vice Phelps. To be Lieutenants, by purchase, 88th ditto—Ensign Hon. C. Monckton, vice Jardine; Ensign W. P. Gallway, vice Michell. To be Ensigns—Ensign J. P. Cumming, vice Monckton; S. I. Sutton, vice Gallway. 91st Regt. of Foot, Lieut. J. E. Barney to be Lieutenant, vice R. Duke—Royal Staff Corps, Capt. B. Jackson to be Captain, vice W. Staveley—Ceylon Regiment, Lieut. F. Dempsey to be Lieutenant, vice Woolhouse—Royal African Colonial Corps Lieut. J. Rogers to be Captain, vice de Barrallier; Ensign D. Turner to be Lieutenant, vice Rogers; J. P. Hardy to he Ensign, vice Turner—Brevet, Major-Gen. Sir H. Lowe, K. C. B. to have the local rank of Lieutenant General upon the continent of Europe—Staff, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Staveley, of the Royal Staff Corps, to be Deputy Quarter-Master-General to the troops in the Mauritius, vice Nesbitt, who resigns—Unattached—Major Thos. Valiant to be Lieutenant Colonel of Infantry. To be Captains of Infantry, by purchase—Lieut. Hon. H. D. Shore, from the 4th Dragoon Guards; Lieut. R. Markham, from the 9th Light Dragoons; Lieut. F. V. Smith, from the 2d Life Guards. To be Lieutenant of Infantry, by purchase—Ensign Hon. R. Howard, from the 73d Foot. To be Ensigns, by purchase—F. Deacon, H. Reynolds, and S. D. Clarke.

DECLARATION OF BANKRUPTCY.

J. COULTHARD, Old City-Chambers, Bishopsgate-street, cable and anchor-merchant, declares that he is in insolvent circumstances and is unable to meet his engagements with his creditors; as also J. POWELL, Southampton-buildings, Holborn, tailor.

BANKRUPTS.

W. HALL, Gutter-lane, warehouseman. Sols. Messrs. Birkett, Taylor, and Cox, Cloake-lane.

J. PRINGLE, London-road, victualler. Sols. Messrs. Gates and Hardwick, Lawrence-lane.

C. H. WITHERINGTON, Borough-road, apothecary. Sol. Mr. Cooper, 10, New-inn.

R. FAIRCLOUGH, Liverpool, painter. Sols. Messrs. Taylor and Roscoe, King's-Bench-walk, Temple.

DIVIDENDS.

Nov. 1, J. Cox, Wells, Somerset, miller—Oct. 29, P. Cella, Modeford-court, Fenchurch-street, wine-merchant—Oct. 29, R. Crosby, Stationer's-court, bookseller—Nov. 1, J. Roberts, High Holborn, corn-dealer—Nov. 1, E. Mitchell, Norwich, wine-merchant—Nov. 1, S. Mitchell, wine merchant—Nov. 1, Jas. Worth and John Worth, Trump-street, warehousemen—Oct. 29, H. Shanly, Little Argyle-street, wine-merchant—Nov. 3, J. Noad, Beckington, Somerset, fuller—Nov. 1, G. Wells, Oxford-street, trunk maker—Oct. 29, J. Davison, Gutter lane, warehouseman—Oct. 29, M. W. Persent, Clerkenwell, table-cloth manufacturer—Oct. 29, J. Hammon, Great Portland-street, plumber—Oct. 29, H. Bell, Bourn, Lincolnshire, corn merchant—Oct. 29, J. Knight, Mile-end-road, builder—Oct. 29, G. Dalmaine, Chandos-street, Covent-garden, embroiderer—Oct. 29, J. Batters, Southampton, grocer—Nov. 5, J. Hawkes, Old Jewry, hardwareman—Oct 29, W. Aves, Watton, Norfolk, grocer—Oct. 29, C. Douthwaite, Pancras-lane, wine-merchant—Oct. 29, E. Mather, Oxford, grocer—Oct. 29, W. G. Rolfes, Fenchurch street, broker—Nov. 5, E. L. Rowland, Ruabon, Denbigh, iron-master.

CERTIFICATES.—OCT. 29.

W. W. Dennis, Billericay, Essex, butcher—S. Jones, King's-arms-buildings, Cheapside, lace-manufacturer—J. Brander, Size-lane, merchant—J. Barclay, Size-lane, merchant—T. Loveday, Newgate-market, poulterer—J. Rangeley, Stone, Staffordshire, iron-monger.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

R. Beaumont Child, T. Wright, and M. Radford, Melbourn, lace manufacturers—T. G. Beedle and J. Salter, Exeter, chymists—M. Wrefore and T. Graham, Token house Yard and New Bond street, wine, spirit, and coal-merchants—J. Howard Kyan, Brunswick-place, and J. M'Carty, Thames-street, distillers—J. Beck and S. Dalzell, Sheffield, tea dealers—G. Barnsley and W. Reynolds, Liverpool, cotton brokers—F. Hoffham Pedder and T. Carter, Broad-street—T. Parker and G. Dobson, Preston, cotton-spinners—T. Ball and W. Powell, Old-street, St. Luke, coach-makers—J. Knill and J. Blashfield, Pudding lane, fruit and insurance-brokers—J. Jafferson and A. W. Bahnanno, Marshall-street, Golden-square, alebrewers—G. Liddiard and T. Glass, Stepney—R. Greenwood and J. Hamerton, Dewsbury and Wakefield, silk-mercers—W. W. Ridley and W. B. Cock, Plymouth, coal-factors—W. Sewell, jun. and J. Geldart, Upper Thames street, wholesale grocers—W. Horsley, G. Handy, and W. Horsley, jun. Worcester, linen-merchants—J. Cowley and T. Platt, Preston, butchers—N. Wright and D. Kirk, New Sneinton, lace machine builders—T. Cope and J. Cope, Ross, Herefordshire, grocers—T. Henson, C. Day, and E. Peat, Nottingham, machine-builders—J. Slight, W. Hebb, and J. Shipley, Mansfield, bobbin and carriage-makers—J. M'Callan and J. Maund, Leicester-square, tailors—B. Robinson and R. Stabler, Beverley, chymists—J. Burnley, J. Burnley, J. Green, and W. Green, Wetherby and Boston, timber-merchants—T. Davis and J. Snape, New Broad-street, Bishopsgate, brush-manufacturers—W. Craven Thornthwaite, W. Ryland, and J. Wills, Fleet street, ironmongers—C. Stewart and R. Jackson, Blackman-street, Borough, wine and spirit dealers—W. Fairbrother and R. Fairbrother, Abingdon, ironmongers.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTS.

W. COWDROY, Gorton, Lancashire, glue-maker. Sol. Mr. Chester, Staple-inn.

J. and P. NICHOL, Cornhill, merchants. Sols. Messrs. Smith and Weir, Basinghall-street.

W. HILL, Arundel-street, Panton-square, tailor. Sol. Mr. Tanner, New Basinghall-street.

J. SMITH, Broad-street, broker. Sol. Mr. Mahony, Chancery-lane.

E. SANDWELL, Strand, tavern keeper. Sols. Messrs. Mitchell and Owen, New London-street, Crutched-friars.

DIVIDENDS

Oct. 27, W. Pitcher, Salisbury-square, carpenter—Oct. 27, H. Levy, Rathbone-place, glass-dealer—Oct. 29, J. Cutmore, Birchin-lane and Commercial-road, jeweller—Oct 29, W. Hall, Layton's-buildings, Southwark, merchant—Oct. 27, H. Ford, London, hardwareman—Oct. 26, R. Richmond, Leicester, woollen-draper—Oct 29, C. Cotterell, Southampton, victualler—Oct. 26, J. Lewis, Bristol, merchant—Oct. 27, J. Simpson, Holbeck, Yorkshire, merchant—Oct. 31, C. Dinmore, Norwich, merchant—Nov. 12, M. J. Gray, Cannon street-road, wine-merchant—Oct. 25, J. J. Thompson, Bermondsey-wall, boat-builder—Oct. 11, N. Gillbee, Denton, Kent, coal-merchant—Nov. 5, H. Searle, Strand, boot-maker—Nov. 1, F. Stabler, York, linen merchant—Oct. 27, T. Lingham, Worcester, mealman—Oct. 27, J. Smith, Bradnich, Devonshire, paper-maker—Oct. 26, T. Parkinson, sen. Scawby, Lincolnshire, raff-merchant.

CERTIFICATES.—Oct. 25.

R. Gascoyne, Richmond, tailor—J. Wells, Aldbourn, Wiltshire, corn-dealer—R. Rossi, Harp-lane, Tower-street, wine-merchant—T. M'Kinnon, Wapping High street, Middlesex, oilman—W. Pearce, Orcston, Devonshire, flour-merchant.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. Radcliffe, N. Brownbill, T. Livesey, and H. Livesey, Oldham, Lancashire, cotton-spinners—N. Brownbill, T. Livesey, and H. Livesey, Manchester, cotton-spinners—J. Young, jun. and J. W. Young, Reading, Berkshire, chemists—F. Downing, sen. J. Roebuck, and F. Downing, jun. Huddersfield, hop-merchants—J. Parrowclough and E. Wilson, Nottingham, bolt-manufacturers—R. Holmes and J. Cockshott, Leeds, joiners—J. N. Varley, Sowerby Bridge, Yorkshire, and G. Holt, Rochdale, Lancashire, carriers by water—B. and B. Arlett, Old Bond-street, livery-stable keepers—F. and E. Holborow, Clare-street, cheesemongers—J. Marshall and J. E. Marshall, Manchester—H. J. and R. T. Parnell, Minories, hatters—W. Copley and W. Baldock, jun. Nottingham, grocers—J. Pearce and J. Perry, Nottingham, cotton-dealers—T. Mason, G. Burrow, and R. Farrer, Lancaster, cotton-spinners—R. Smith and C. Rogers, Gainsborough, mercers and drapers—E. Harris, A. Morris, and G. Morris, Shrewsbury, dress-makers—J. Cotterell, P. Cotterell, and E. Roberts, Birmingham, linen drapers—W. Griffin and T. Fisher, Worcester, whitesmiths—W. Smith, W. Massey, and W. Langham, Nottingham, machine-builders—A. Follett and W. Yeatherd—J. Wilson and D. Milligan, Gloucester, mercers and drapers—H. Gaskell and S. Gaskell, Warrington, Lancashire.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. HOSE, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

HERRING'S PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED.—The long existing prejudice against Silk Hats is now entirely removed by the above discovery. The PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT, having an extra quantity of Napping on the square, will bear the most rough usage, is calculated for all weathers, and, unlike the common-made Silk Hat, will wear equally all over, retaining their shape and beauty to the last. Time, the only fair test, has brought these inimitable Hats into universal repute. The Economical may now purchase with perfect safety a Hat, possessing every necessary good quality, in any shape, at 17s.

An extensive assortment of Ladies' fine Beaver Bonnets, of the newest shapes, elegantly trimmed, from One to Two Sovereigns.

Gentlemen's warranted Water-Proof Beaver Hats, made as they should he, combining all the various fashions, 20s. 23s. 26s.

J. P. in presenting his Hats to public inspection, is zealously determined to unite principle with economy. All Hats will be offered at such prices as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the discerning.

Warehouses, 413, Strand, two doors from the Adelphi Theatre, and 8, Angel-terrace, Hammersmith.

Gentlemen residing in the country may meet with the earliest attention to their orders by a remittance, or an order for payment in London. For the size, apply a piece of string round the outside of the Hat, where the band goes, and send the exact length.

FEATHERS, FEATHER-BEDS, and MATTRASSES.—W. TIBBATTS, Feather-bed, Mattrass, Bedstead, and Sea Bedding Manufacturer, No. 330, HIGH HOLBORN, near Chancery-lane, begs leave to return thanks to his Friends and the Public in general, for the very liberal support he has met with, and assures them that no pains shall be spared on his part, to supply them good clean Bedding at fair and moderate prices, not pretending to sell cheaper than other tradesmen; but to sell such goods as will always be a credit to himself, and really serviceable to his customers. W. T. trusts by assiduity and perseverance, and an honourable mode of conducting business, still to merit the favours of a generous and discerning public.—Families Furnishing and Tavern Keepers, will find their advantage.

		l.	s.	d.		l.	s.
Superior stoved best White Goose Feathers		0	3	6				per lb.
Best White Goose	from	0	2	9	to	0	3	do.
Best Grey Goose Feathers	from	0	1	6	to	0	2	do.
Best Poultry	from	0	1	0
White Goose bordered Beds, Bolsters, & Pillows	from	3	10	0	to	7	10	do.
Plain White Goose Beds	from	1	15	0	to	4	0	do.
Flock Beds and Bolsters	from	0	18	0	to	1	5	do.
Good common Mattrasses, with borders	from	0	10	0	to	1	2	do.
Superior White Wool bordered Mattrasses	from	1	15	0	to	3	0	do.
Very best Horse-hair Mattrasses	from	1	15	0	to	3	15	do.

Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.—Feathers and Bed Ticking sold to any quantity.—Old Feather Beds dressed, and Mattrasses re-made, or taken in exchange.

, Bedsteads made to order, but no fixed price, as the Proprietor is determined not to sell trash of any description, and knows, as a man of business, that it is impossible to make Bedsteads at the price some tradesmen advertise.—Schools liberally supplied.

It is the Proprietor's particular request that those families who honour him with their commands, will send their servants, or some trusty friend, to see the Feathers put into the Ticks, and by that means prevent any possibility of being deceived, and have the great advantage of buying their Feathers by weight, so that it will remain entirely with themselves what price they give for Beds.—Persons fearful of not having their Feathers quite dry, may see them put into their Ticks hot from the stove.

INVENTION of JEAN JACQUES SAINTMARC, of Belmont Distillery, Wandsworth Road, Vauxhall, in the Parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, in the County of Surrey, Distiller, "of Improvements in the Process of, and Apparatus for, Distilling," by means of which improvements, Spirit is distilled from Potatoes.

Notice is hereby given, that application will be made to Parliament, in the ensuing Session, for an Act to enable the said JEAN JACQUES SAINTMARC, and WILLIAM DORSET FELLOWES, and STAMP BROOKSBANK, Esqrs., (who are the Assignees of certain parts or shares of, and in the rights, privileges, advantages, profits, and interest accruing and arising from, and in, the several Patents herein after mentioned,) to assign to, or otherwise vest in certain Trustees for the use and benefit of the Members of, or Proprietors in, a certain Joint Stock Company, called the Patent Distillery and Rectifying Company, and their Successors and Assigns during the remainder of the term of the said several Letters Patent, all and every the rights, privileges, advantages, profits, and interest accruing and arising, or which may hereafter accrue and arise, from or in such Letters Patent; the First of which Letters Patent (having endurance for the term of Fourteen Years from the date of such Letters Patent,) bears date the 20th day of March, 1824, for that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, the dominion of Wales, and the Town of Berwick upon-Tweed, and was granted to the said JEAN JACQUES SAINTMARC, for his "Invention of Improvements in the Process of, and Apparatus for Distilling," by means of which improvements, Spirit is distilled from Potatoes. The second of which said Letters Patent, (having endurance for the term of Fourteen Years, from the date of such last mentioned Letters Patent,) bears date the 26th day of February, 1824, for that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Scotland, and was granted to the said JEAN JACQUES SAINTMARC, for his said Invention; and the Third of which said Letters Patent, (having endurance for the term of Fourteen Years, from the date of such last mentioned Letters Patent,) bears date the 10th day of July, 1824, for that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Ireland, and was granted to the said JEAN JACQUES SAINTMARC, for his said Invention. Dated this 7th day of October, 1825.

GATTY, HADDAN, GATTY, and HADDAN, Solicitors.

ELEGANT LADIES' RIDING HABITS & PELISSES made in the first style of Fashion; also Gentlemen's Fashionable Clothing of every description, made on most reasonable terms, at S. PEARSON's, 70, Chancery-lane.

J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT solicit attention to the present Brilliant Scheme, which not only retains all the late popular attractions, but embraces for the first time since the establishment of Lotteries, and before their final conclusion, SIX OF TWENTY THOUSAND POUNDS, &c. &c., exceeding One Fourth of a Million of Money, ALL IN ONE DAY, 18th of this Month (October;)—Tickets and Shares are now on Sale at J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT's fortunate Offices, No. 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 38, Haymarket, London; where they sold in One Lottery, 12,478, a Prize of 30,000*l.* and several other Capitals; in the Lottery drawn 15th July last, 3,613, a Prize of 21,055*l.* besides other Capitals.

RICHARDSON, GOODLUCK, and Co. respectfully acquaint their Friends and the Public, that the Lottery will be decided in one day, 18th of this Month. The Scheme contains
SIX Prizes of £20,000,
Besides numerous other Capitals. There are no Blanks, as every number will have 5*l.*—Tickets and Shares, chances for the above prizes, all to be decided the 18th of October, are selling by Richardson, Goodluck, and Co. at their Office, 104, corner of Bank Buildings, Cornhill.

EXTENSIVE NURSERY STOCK; comprising a choice Collection of Fruit and Forest Trees, Shrubs, Herbaceous Plants, &c.
TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION,
BY MR. JOHN KING,
On the Premises, near the Goat in Boots, Little Chelsea,
On MONDAY, the 17th of OCTOBER, and FOLLOWING DAYS, at 10 o'clock,
By order of Mr. Pamplin, the Ground being let for Building.
The Property consists of a rare and choice collection of Fruit Trees; comprising standard and dwarf trained Peaches, Nectarines, Apricots, Pears, Apples, Plums, Cherries, Vines in pots, fine Lancashire Gooseberries, Currants, and Raspberries; Evergreens in the ground and in pots, consisting of variegated and green Hollies, Rhododendrons, Arbutus, Aucubas, Portugal and common Laurels, Arborvitæs, Fan Yews, Laurustinus, Box, &c.; a quantity of Geraniums; 2000 English, Scotch, and French Roses; Passiflora's Cistus, Clematis, and a variety of Deciduous Shrubs; Forest Trees, privet Hedges, herbaceous Plants, &c.
To be viewed three days preceding the Sale. Catalogues (One Shilling each, to be returned to Purchasers) to be had of Mr. Pamplin, King's Road, Chelsea; Messrs. Minier and Co. Seedsmen, Strand; at the Auction Mart, and of the Auctioneer, Hackney Road.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.
GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—
BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.
The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Morning, at a Quarter-past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, BATH, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, BRISTOL, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.
Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.
FARES.—Inside . . . . 2*l.* 5*s.* Outside . . . . 1*l.* 1*s.*
Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1*s.* 6*d.* per Head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3*s.* per Head, also including Waiters.
Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through DEVIZES, &c.
FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l.* 18*s.* Outside . . . . 0*l.* 18*s.*
Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2*s.* 6*d.* per Head, including Waiters.
BRIGHTON, IN SIX HOURS.
The Company's Brighton New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Day at Half-past One o'Clock, Sundays excepted, (and calls at the ELEPHANT and CASTLE,) to No. 5, CASTLE SQUARE, BRIGHTON.
FARES.—Inside . . . . 1*l.* 1*s.* Outside . . . . 12*s.*
In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.
, A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.
By Order of the Directors,
Axe Inn, Aldermanbury. C. BURTON, Secretary.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.
ROYAL MAILS.—Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—Liverpool through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle and Congleton.—Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne and Chippenham—Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton and Collumpton.—Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford and Dorchester—Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke and Macclesfield—Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles).—Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston and Garstang.—Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.—Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.—Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.—Milford Haven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen.—The above Mails leave every evening at half past seven, Sundays excepted.
POST COACHES.—Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock.—Holyhead (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock.—Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock.—Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning at a quarter before nine.—Liverpool (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock.—Windsor and Eton coaches daily.—Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five.—Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two.—Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock.—Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four.—Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half past five.—Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock.—Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six.—Coventry light 4-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six.—Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon.—Chester and Park-Gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock.—Worcester coaches through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock.—Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five.—Tamworth, Atherstone, and Hinckley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock.—Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four.—Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock.—Dudley and Stourbridge 4-inside post coach, every afternoon at five.—Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening.—Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening.—Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares.—Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse), through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence; the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five.—Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two.—Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two.—Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours.)—Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning.—Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narberth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock.—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.—N. B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.
W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.
††† The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5*l*, unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly, at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage, to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 2d inst. at Ensemere Hill, Ulswater, the lady of John Charles Bristow, Esq. of a daughter.—On the 3d inst. in Stratton-street, the lady of George Carr Glyn, Esq. of a son.—On the 5th inst. Mrs. Krűger, 30, Alfred-place, Bedford-square, of a daughter.

MARRIED.

On the 27th ult. Alexander Miller, Esq. of Liverpool, to Jane, daughter of Alexander M'Neill, Esq. of Ballycastle.—On the 29th ult. at Hornsey Church, the Rev. W. Presgrave, A.M. Trinity College, Cambridge, to Sarah Isabella [illegible], of Highgate.—On the 3d inst. at Prestwich Church, near Manchester, [illegible] Pilkingsworth, Esq. of Pendlebury, to Hester Emily, fourth daughter of Robert [illegible], Esq. of the Park.—Same day, Richard Hodges, Esq. of Maidstone, to Elizabeth [illegible], only daughter of John Allsopp, Esq. of Wester Hill.—On the 4th inst. [illegible] James Cholmondeley, Esq. to the Hon. Mary Elizabeth Townshend, daughter of Lord Viscount Sydney.

DIED.

On the 14th of July last, at the Cape of Good Hope, universally respected and regretted, J. H. De Wit, Esq.—On the 24th ult. at Highfield Cottage, near [illegible], Devon, in the 76th year of his age, Francis Bateman Dashwood, Esq.—On the 30th ult. Samuel Williams, Esq. aged 71 years.—On the 1st inst. John [illegible], Esq. formerly Major of the 62d Regiment of Foot.—Same day, after a short illness, at his seat, Baggrave Hall, Leicestershire, Edw. Andrew Burnaby, Esq.—On the 2d inst. at Ramsgate, Mrs. John Udny, of Portugal-street, Grosvenor-square, [illegible].

London: Printed and Published by S. D. RICHARDS, 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

ALBION CLUB

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 23. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—On Monday, the 17th of October, the tragedy of Othello. Othello, Mr. Booth (being positively the last night of his engagement); Iago, Mr. Wallack; Desdemona, Mrs. W. West; Emilia, Mrs. Bunn. To conclude with the revived grand Melo Drama, called Valentine and Orson.

On Tuesday (27th time) the Romantic Drama of Fanstus, with (first time these three years) the Innkeeper's Daughter. Mary, Miss Kelly.

On Thursday will be revived (not acted these nine years) Congreve's Comedy of Love for Love. Sir Sampson Legend, Mr. Dowton; Valentine, Mr. Wallack; Foresight, Mr. Williams; Scandal, Mr. Penley; Ben, Mr. Harley; Tattle, Mr. Browne; Jeremy, Mr J. Russell; Angelica, Mrs. Davison; Mrs. Foresight, Mrs. Orger; Mrs. Frail, Mrs. Yates; Miss Prue, Miss Kelly. With Valentine and Orson.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—On Monday, Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Fortune's Frolic.

On Tuesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and the Deaf Lover.

On Wednesday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and the Sleeping Draught.

On Thursday—The Marriage of Figaro, with Deaf as a Post, and Paul and Virginia, being for the benefit of Mr. Vining and Miss George.

On Friday—Quite Correct, with Paul Pry, and Frighten'd to Death.

On Saturday—The Mountaineers; Octavian, Mr. James Vining, (his first appearance in London); with, never acted, the Epaulette.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—First Night of the Quadrupeds this season, with Two Imitators.

On Monday, October 17, and during the week, will be presented an entirely new Comic Historical Burletta, in Three Acts, called KILLIGREW, or King Charles at Tunbridge Wells. Principal Characters, Messrs. T. P. Cooke, Yates, J. Reeve, and Terry; Miss F. Brunton, Mrs. Tayleure, Mrs. Fitzwilliam, and Miss Boden. A grand Ballet, by Mr. W. Kirby.—After which the favourite Burletta, in One Act, called MARRIED BACHELOR.—To conclude with (by the kind permission of S. J. Arnold, Esq. of the Theatre Royal, English Opera) the much admired Burlesque, entitled QUADRUPEDS! in which the Unique Stud of Horse and Ass will appear. Principal characters, Messrs. Yates and J. Reeve, who will introduce their admired imitations of different London performers.

Boxes, 4s.—Pit, 2s.—Gal. 1s.—Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.—Half-price, at Half-past Eight.—Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

EXHIBITION (at No. 8, Soho-square, near the Bazaar) OF MODELS OF THE MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN SWITZERLAND, upon a very large scale, by which the Artist has been enabled to combine the most faithful representations of the natural grandeur of Swiss scenery, with the most perfect accuracy of detail. That of Mont Blanc, including the Valley of Chamouni, 14 feet by 8, is eminently calculated to give a correct idea of this magnificent object, with its snowy mantles, its extensive glaciers, and the numerous needles by which it is surrounded. Also a Model, upon a large scale, of that wonderful work of Buonaparte's, the Road over Simplon into Italy. One of Mont Righi, with the Valley Goldau, represented in the state of devastation caused by the falling of the Rosberg, in 1806. One of the Passage of St. Gothard and the Devil's Bridge. Also the interesting Passage of Mont Cenis. Models of the Cities of Geneva and Edinburgh; and various others, all executed with due regard to accuracy and effect.—Admission 1s.—Small Models of the above made for Sale.

A regular Trader.—To succeed the Prince Regent.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine coppered ship, PRINCESS CHARLOTTE, burthen 400 Tons, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander; will load in the London Dock. Has very superior accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to BUCKLES, BAGSTER, and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

FOR OCTOBER.

THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY'S PACKETS start from off the Custom-house or the Tower, for

CALAIS, every Monday, Wednesday, and Saturday;
BOULOGNE, every Tuesday and Friday;
OSTEND, every Saturday;
HAMBURGH, every other Saturday; being 8th and 22d;
YARMOUTH, every Thursday Morning;
RAMSGATE and BROADSTAIRS, every Wednesday and Saturday, at Eight o'clock;
MARGATE, every Tuesday and Thursday, at Nine o'clock;
NEWHAVEN to DIEPPE every Saturday, calling at BRIGHTON PIER when the weather permits;
RAMSGATE to CALAIS, every Friday;
And RAMSGATE to BOULOGNE, every Monday.

For the convenience and safety of the Public, the time of Starting is regulated to secure the entrance of the Packets into the Harbours on arrival.

Full information may be had at the Agents, viz.—Mr. Saunders, Calais and Boulogne, Mr. Chapman, Dieppe; Mr. Crowe, Ostend; Mr. Delaval, Hamburgh; Mr. Galignani, Paris; Messrs. Laws and Son, Yarmouth; Messrs. Squire and Edwards, Norwich; Mr. Carter, Margate; Mr. Black, Lucumbe's Library, Brighton; Mr. Martin, Ramsgate; Bull and Mouth, Western Coach-office, 40, Regent Circus, Piccadilly; Sharpus, 13, Cockspur street; Middleton, 359, Exeter 'Change, Strand; Steven's Hotel, Bond-street; Brown's, corner of Park-street, Oxford-street; Murray, 63, Fleet-street, corner of Bouverie-street; Regent Bazaar, New Road; at the Custom-house Quay, and at the Company's Office, 24, Cruteched Friars.

CHAS. BESSELL, Secretary.

N. B.—The Half-yearly Dividend at the rate of 16l. per cent. per annum, together with a Bonus of 7s. per Share, may be received by the Proprietors, at the Company's Office, every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 11 to 3 o'clock. The Transfer Books will be open on the 10th of October.

PATENT DISTILLERY AND RECTIFYING COMPANY.

THE DIRECTORS of the PATENT DISTILLERY and RECTIFYING COMPANY beg to announce that all the Shares are appropriated, and that upon the expiration of the period assigned by law, the Company having previously redeemed the pledge given in the Prospectus) will commence business.

The Directors have also the satisfaction of informing the Shareholders, that in consequence of the arrangements between the Directors and the Patentees and Proprietors of the DISTILLERY and RECTIFYING ESTABLISHMENT having been favourably varied, the Directors are enabled to delay the further calls mentioned in the Prospectus. The second call to be paid on the 1st of December, and the amount thereof to be 5l. instead of 10l. per Share.

Thirty Days previous notice of any future Call will be given.

Dated this 13th day of October, 1825.

GATTY, HADDAN, GATTY, and HADDAN, SOLICITORS.

This day is published, in 4 vols. 12mo. price 1l. 2s.

THE BRAZEN MASK, a Romance, by Mrs. Charlotte Putney, Author of Cora, &c.

Printed for A. K. NEWMAN and Co. London,
Where may be had, published this Summer,

Henry, by Richard Cumberland, Esq. 4th edition, 4 vols. 1l. 2s.
Evelina, by the Author of Cecilia, &c. new edition, 2 vols. 8s.
George Barnwell, by T. Surr, 5th edition, 3 vols. 16s. 6d.
Midnight Bell, a Romance, by Francis Lathom, 2d Edition, 3 vols. 15s.
Discarded Son, or Haunt of the Banditti, by Regina M. Roche, Author of the Children of the Abbey, &c. 2d edition, 5 vols. 1l. 10s.
St. Clair of the Isles, by Mrs. Helme, 3d edition, 4 vols. 1l.
Stranger of the Valley, an American Tale, 3 vols. 16s 6d.

FRENCH & BRITISH SILK MANUFACTURERS.—P. and E. CARDEN and Co. having just received from their Agents at Lyons large and splendid selection of the most fashionable and prevailing Autumn and Winter Colours, in Gros de Naples, Ducapes, Levantines, &c. &c. at Paris, beg to submit the same for the inspection of the Public, at their Warehouse, 118, Oxford-street, (late Riley) at such prices that cannot fail to give them a decided preference over every other house. Gros de Naples, French width, 2s. 9d.; rich ditto, 3s. 4d.; ros de Tours, 3s. 11d.; 5000 ells of rich Ducapes, from 3s. 10d. to 4s. 4d. usually d at 6s 6d.; Plain Sarcenettes, 2s.; Taffetas, 2s. 7d.; and every other description silk goods equally low in price. Rich Silk Promenade and Opera Cloaks made Carden and Co. are generally considered to be superior to any other house, as ey receive the newest Parisian Fashions from their agent monthly. They have w on view a superb collection, from 30s. to 4l.; those at 50s. and 3l. are very superior to any thing ever yet offered to the fashionable world.

All letters to be post-paid, and country orders punctually attended to.

18, Oxford-street, late Riley.

SODA WATER.—WM. CLARK, No. 21, MAIDEN-LANE, Covent Garden, Soda Water Manufacturer to the Royal Family, most respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and the public in general, that he manufactures the above article, of a very superior quality; it is warranted to be free from all metallic impregnations, in consequence of its being prepared in glass machinery.—N.B. Superior Jamaica Ginger Beer and Fine Sparkling Lemonade, in glass bottles). They are warranted to keep good for twelve months.

MONEY IMMEDIATELY, upon Mortgage and Annuity.—The great inconvenience and trouble incidental to transactions of this kind too generally known but not explained; the advertizer therefore, from his opulent connexions and mode of conducting business, which renders every facility in favor of both parties, flatters himself that he can procure Gentlemen and Ladies loans, however large, either upon property or personal security, provided the property is entailed, without restriction, upon the party desirous of borrowing.—Apply personally, or by letter, postage free, to Mr. G at letter A. No. 8, Charlton Chambers, Regent-street, Pall-mall, St. James's.—Attendance from 11 to 5.

ELEGANT LADIES' RIDING HABITS & PELISSES made in the first style of Fashion; also Gentlemen's Fashionable Clothing of every description, made on most reasonable terms, at S. PEARSON's, 70, Chancery-lane.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	1	6
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6
(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)
The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stepheus	J. C. Cliftou	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. Bayly, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmoreland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular PIANO-FORTES; also HARPS, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

 Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street,

By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries	sung by Mr. Braham,	2s.
What blissful visions	ditto,	2s.
Thus lowly bending	Mr. Atkins,	2s.
Blest light of heaven	Chorus	2s.
Now bid with our joyous	ditto,	2s.
Silly woman	Miss Paton,	2s.
Sire, to me	ditto,	2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision	ditto,	2s.
Where now are flown	Miss Hamilton,	2s.
Whilst here in anguish	ditto,	2s.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet	Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton,	2s.
Eveuing now softly closing, ditto	Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton,	2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio	Paton, Boden, and Thorne,	2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto	Paton, Hamilton, and Boden,	2

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also			Miss Paton, 1s. 6d.
Why didst thou leave me	ditto		ditto, 2s.
Oh, turn again on me love	ditto		ditto, 2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow	ditto		ditto, 1s. 6d.
My morning prayer	ditto		ditto, 1s. 6d.
In young life's morning			Mr. Thorne, 2s.
Her I love so dearly			Mr. Broadhurst, 2s.
Though sorrow may come			Miss Stephens, 2s.
In such a bustle			Miss Kelly, 2s.
Oh, I could weep			Mr. Thorne, 2s.

Ducts for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variation, 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
4. Kelvin grove, divertisement, 2s. 6d.
5. Love, good night, variations, 2s. 6d.
6. Green grow the rushes, O! do. 2s. 6d.

A large assortment of single and double action Harps, Square, Cottage, Cabinet, and Grand Piano Fortes, by the most approved makers, at the manufacturers' prices.—Also a variety of second-hand Piano Fortes and Harps for sale.

Piano Fortes and Harps lent on hire.

NEW MUSIC, published by CLEMENTI & Co. 26, Cheapside.—BLEWITT'S ORGAN SERVICE of the United Church of England and Ireland, comprising a first and last Voluntary, with a choice selection of the most approved Chants and Psalms, with appropriate Preludes and Interludes, No. 1, price 3s. to be continued Monthly.

N. B. This work will also be found highly useful to the Piano-forte Student.

Also, by the same composer, FAREWELL! written by T. BLAKE, sung by Mr. Pearman, 2s.—Adelgitha, sung by Mr. Braham, 2s. 6d.—Who'll buy my heart? sung by Madame Vestris, 2s.—Irish Joiucr, 1s. 6d.—Beauty's Wiles, written by W. F. Collard, 1s. 6d.—Rondo, from Abou Hassan, for the Piano-forte, 2s. 6d.—Jessamine Cottage, Rondo for ditto, 2s.

Just published,

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemep anthors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangement of anthors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chorusses, from the celebrated opera, "Der Freischntz," 5s.—Home! sweet Home, with variations, 2s.—Isahel, ditto, 2s.—Anrora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.—Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s.—Gipsy March, from Preciosa, ditto, 2s.—As a Duet for two Violoncellos, The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, Ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed.—Lessons at home orabroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 104, High Holborn.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s. to 14s. Merchants and Captains who expect the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT'S, TAILOR and DRAPER,
47, Fish street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

RICHARDSON, GOODLUCK, and Co. respectfully acquaint their Friends and the Public, that the Lottery will all be decided NEXT TUESDAY, when SIX PRIZES OF 20,000l. MUST BE DRAWN, besides numerous other Capitals. There are no Blanks, as every number will have 5l.—Tickets and Shares, chances for the above Prizes, all to be decided are selling by Richardson, Goodluck, and Co. at their office, 104, corner of Bank Buildings, Cornhill.

NEXT TUESDAY,

NEXT TUESDAY.

J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT solicit attention to the present Brilliant Scheme, which not only retains all the late popular attractions, but embraces for the first time since the establishment of Lotteries, and before their final conclusion, SIX OF TWENTY THOUSAND POUNDS, &c. &c., exceeding One Fourth of a Million of Money, ALL IN ONE DAY, 18th of this Month (October)—Tickets and Shares are now on Sale at J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT'S fortunate Offices, No. 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 38, Haymarket, London; where they sold in One Lottery, 12,478, a Prize of 30,000l. and several other Capitals! in the Lottery drawn 15th July last, 3,613, a Prize of 21,055l. besides other Capitals.

EXTENSIVE NURSERY STOCK; comprising a choice Collection of Fruit and Forest Trees, Shrubs, Herbaceous Plants, &c.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION,

BY MR. JOHN KING,

On the Premises, near the Goat in Boots, Little Chelsea,

On MONDAY NEXT, the 17th of OCTOBER, and FOLLOWING DAYS, at 10 o'clock,

By order of Mr. Pamplin, the Ground being let for Building.

The Property consists of a rare and choice collection of Fruit Trees; comprising standard and dwarf trained Peaches, Nectarines, Apricots, Pears, Apples, Plums, Cherries, Vines in pots, fine Lancashire Gooseberries, Currants, and Raspberries; Evergreens in the ground and in pots, consisting of variegated and green Hollies, Rhododendrons, Arbutus, Aucubas, Portugal and common Laurels, Arborvitæ, Fan Yews, Laurustinus, Box, &c.; a quantity of Geraniums; 2000 English, Scotch, and French Roses; Passiflora's Cistus, Clematis, and a variety of Deciduous Shrubs; Forest Trees, privet Hedges, herbaceous Plants, &c.

Catalogues (One Shilling each, to be returned to Purchasers) to be had of Mr. Pamplin, King's Road, Chelsea; Messrs. Minier and Co. Seedsmen, Strand; at the Auction Mart, and of the Auctioneer, Hackney Road.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House, (Manufactory, 54, Crutched Friars,) respectfully return their best thanks to the Public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit their future favours, by CONTINUING TO SELL SUPERIOR MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assemblage of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, after the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage; likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, wind-up, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.

The LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, stair-case, and gallery railing, balconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and bookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and no abatement.—Stoves and Ranges set, in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in Exchange.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—

BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Morning, at a Quarter-past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, BATH, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, BRISTOL, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside ..... 2l. 5s. Outside ..... 1l. 1s.

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3s. per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through DEVIZES, &c.

FARES.—Inside .... 1l. 18s. Outside .... 0l. 18s.

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters.

BRIGHTON, IN SIX HOURS.

The Company's Brighton New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, ALDERMANBURY, every Day at Half-past One o'Clock, Sundays excepted, (and calls at the ELEPHANT and CASTLE,) to No. 5, CASTLE SQUARE, BRIGHTON.

FARES.—Inside .... 1l. 1s. Outside .... 12s.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

By Order of the Directors,

Axe Inn, Aldermanbury. C. BURTON, Secretary.

BISH respectfully reminds the Public that NEXT TUESDAY Six Twenty Thousands, with all the other Capitals and Prizes, exceeding a Quarter of a Million in Sterling Money, must be decided; and, by Act of Parliament, there can be no more Lotteries after the present Drawings.

The success that has attended BISH's Offices since their first establishment is well known; but in the last Nine Months it has been eminently conspicuous—the following CAPITAL PRIZES having in that short period been all Shared and SOLD BY BISH.

1,804 } 3 PRIZES OF 30,000l.
2,458 }
15,756 }
3,613 } 2 PRIZES OF 21,000l.
9,776 }
6,039 }
7,034 } 4 PRIZES OF 20,000l.
15,301 }
15,556 } &c. &c. &c.

Tickets and Shares for the above Scheme are selling at BISH's Offices, 4, Cornhill, and 9, Charing-Cross, London.

Every NUMBER will be a PRIZE, and every Ticket decided NEXT TUESDAY, 18th Inst.

FOREIGN WINES.

CHARLES WRIGHT, WINE MERCHANT, next to the KING'S, and opposite to the HAYMARKET THEATRE, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, has made a still greater and the greatest possible reduction in price of the following Wines, which he warrants genuine as imported.

FINE OLD PORTS, Vintages 1819, 1820, and 1821, high-flavoured, fruity, full-bodied Wine, 60 Guineas per Pipe.

SHERRY, pale and brown, shipped by the first houses in Spain, same price per Butt, permitted from the London Docks to the purchaser direct.

FINE OLD PORT, excellent SHERRY, and good and superior direct MADEIRA, all at 24s. 6d. per dozen, by way of sample. Fourteen dozen of any of the above Wine, full-sized bottles, package, &c. well packed in a good Port Pipe, all included for a remittance of 20l. or half the quantity in a Sherry Hogshead, at 10l.

CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.

OLD COGNIAC BRANDY, (Otard and Martell) 23s. 6d. per gallon. Fine Old PINE-APPLE RUM, 15s. 6d. per gallon.

C. W. begs to announce that he has just returned from CHAMPAIGNE, where he selected a large quantity of the very best Wines from the Vignerons of AI, AVIZE, and PIERRY, so long celebrated for their richness, body, and flavour. This importation is confidently warranted as of the finest quality; Mousseaux non Mousseaux, rouge et blanc, 63s. to 72s. per dozen; Claret, Sauterne, Vin de Grave Chabli, and all that character of French Wines, 36s. per dozen; the finest imported, 63s. to 72s. per dozen. Lisbon, Mountain, Madeira, (W. I.) Teneriffe, 27s. per dozen. Fine old crusted Port, 30s. per dozen.

All other Wines, Spirits, &c. in proportion. Remittances must be sent with orders, and postage paid, (or not attended to), and if the greatest satisfaction is not given, the whole of the money will be returned.

P.S. Portugal Grapes, now landing in Jars in the finest condition, at 25s. per Jar, and retail at C. Wright's Depot, Regent-street, at 10d. per lb.

A REAL BLESSING TO MOTHERS. There is not, perhaps, in the whole Materia Medica any one remedy which so effectually relieves the pain of a suffering patient as the AMERICAN SOOTHING SYRUP. Who can watch the writhing tortures into which a lovely infant is often convulsed during the period of dentition, without feeling sympathy for its sufferings? and who would hesitate to procure a remedy, when a remedy can be found, which is obvious by the effectual relief afforded in so many distressing cases which are daily coming to the notice of Mrs. JOHNSON? Therefore, mothers ought never to be without the American Soothing Syrup in the Nursery; for if a child awakes in the night with pain, by only rubbing the gums with a few drops of the Syrup, it will immediately open the pores, heal the gums, and thereby prevent fevers and convulsions; for should it come in competition with any other disorder, it often destroys the mother's brightest hopes.—To be had wholesale and retail, of Johnson and Co. 28, York-place, City-road; and by the appointment, of all principal Medicine Venders in town and country, at 2s. 9d. per bottle.—None are genuine, unless signed on the stamp with Mrs. Johnson's own hand-writing, as there are several spurious sorts.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, AUG. 20.—His Excellency the President returned yesterday morning from a tour to the northern part of the land, where he had been to quell some threatened disturbances in that quarter. It would appear that the ci-devant nobles of Christophe were dissatisfied at having been deprived of their late high-sounding titles, as well as jealous of the late arrangements with France, and had planned a separation of the northern from the southern part of the Republic; but fortunately the discovery was made in time to have the whole of them arrested, and sent on to different towns in the old Republic, where they now are under the surveillance of the Police, and will most probably be disposed of otherwise, now that the Chief of the State will have time to turn his attention to the investigation of the matter. As regards the internal tranquillity of the country, every thing is just as it could be wished.

ROTTERDAM, OCT. 7.—Sugars are high in this market, and there is some prospect of their going higher, as our refiners are in great want of the raw article, although it must be owned that the approach of the winter season may operate the other way. For 700 hoxes yellow Havannah, 12 dollars have been bid and refused, and the limited parcels of Surinams which are brought forward have commanded 11½ dollars, being ½ higher than we were quoting, and yielding a net sterling return of 40s. 3d. Our consumers and refiners anxiously hope for arrivals, but not much can be expected to come in; from the United States 2000 bags Bourbon have just arrived, and will of course command ready sales at high rates. Coffee is steady at 8 stivers the East India, 7¾ stivers the West India, but the declining appearance of the article with you has the effect of rendering our buyers very reserved. The bonds of our Trading Company are declining, and the 4½ per cent. interest guaranteed them is the only thing likely to keep them at par.—Exchange on London, two months, 39 7, short 39 9; Exchange on Paris, two months, 56½, short 57; Exchange on Hamburgh, two months, 34 15 16, short 35 3 16.

BANGOR, (MAINE), SEPT. 8.—Fire! Fire!—The fires in the woods continue to rage, destroying every thing with which they come in contact. We are told by credible persons, that the whole country from Passadunkeag to Matnawcook, on both sides of the Penobscot river, is one general conflagration; that it appears like "a sea of fire." The islands in the river do not escape; the Matnawcook islands have been completely burnt over. The distance of the range of the fire on the river is about 30 miles: the width cannot be ascertained.

We are told by a number of persons of veracity, that in the vicinity of the heaviest fire the ground actually trembled; that the roaring of fire, which sounded like thunder, was heard at the distance of 12 or 15 miles.

In other parts of the country the fire has got in among the settlements. We have it from authority which leaves us but too little room to doubt the fact, that it is raging in Williamsburg, Brownville, Sebec, Atkinson, Blakesburg, Milo, Kilmarnock, Seboois, and in most of the unsettled lands in the vicinity—and from reports, it is also doing the work of destruction in a variety of other places. It is impossible to compute the damage already done. What will be most immediately and severely felt, is the destruction of houses, barns, fences, cattle, &c.

Among the latter we have to state the burning of the house and barn of James Campbell, jun. in Kilmarnock, with most of their contents. In Maxfield the house and barn of Joseph M'Intosh; a school-house; a house and barn owned by Thomas Dewitt; a house owned by John Lunt; and one owned by J. Morse, with its contents, excepting a small quantity of clothing. The crops and fences of the above farms are almost entirely destroyed, and the soil itself much injured. A saw and grist mill owned by T. M'Intosh, and the mill-house, occupied by Wm. Sweat, and a barn of Mr. Lindsey, in Seboois, were also burnt.

A son of Winbourn A. Sweat, Esq. of Milo, returning from school, through the woods, was so badly burnt, that his life is despaired of.

Hawks and other birds were found dead, killed by the fire; and even the fish in the river did not escape. Mr. M'Intosh states, that twenty bass, weighing from 20 to 40 pounds, and numerous young salmon, shad, trout, and other small fish, were taken out of the shoal water, and found dead on the shores of the Piscataquis.

The fire is running in this town within a mile and a half of where we now write: it has done much damage to the wood lands, and occasioned considerable alarm for several houses and barns.

RIGA, SEPT. 23.—An Imperial Ukase has been prepared at St. Petersburgh for Alexander's signature, announcing his intention to appoint alternately Russians and natives to fill the civil offices in Finland; but Baron Rehbinder, Secretary of State, and head of the department for the affairs of Finland, residing at St. Petersburgh, has, it is said, refused his sanction to the measure. The Baron, it is understood, feels no reluctance on the subject, during the continuance of the present reign, being well aware of the conscientious manner in which the duties of a monarch are fulfilled by the Emperor Alexander, but he feels that at some future time his attempt to unite natives of both countries in the civil administration of Finland may produce dangerous consequences. The Emperor is said to have fallen so far into the views entertained by Baron Rehbinder, as to have suspended the promulgation of the Ukase in question.

"GUANAXUATO, AUG. 5.—I have just returned from paying a visit to the mine of Valenciana, and whether it be from my not being accustomed to see mines, or from what cause I cannot say, but I never was so struck with the sight of any work of human labour before. It is on the most stupendous scale imaginable. I went down 370 yards, which was as far as we could get for the water. The whole depth of the mine is 600 yards. They are draining it now at the rate of about four yards a-week, as I learnt from the superintendent of the mine, a Cornish miner, in the service of the Anglo Mexican Company. The mine is yielding now about 900 to 1,200 cargoes of ore a-week, each cargo 300lbs. weight. It would yield more if they had more hands. Fifteen hundred Indians are at present at work in this mine, and the Company are looking out for more. The Indians are now flocking fast to this neighbourhood. Guanaxuato formerly contained a population of 80 to 90,000 souls. It is now not more than 41,000, and of this number, one half has been added to it since the establishment of the Anglo Mexican Company here. The climate is heavenly. Thermometer, 70 to 72 deg. in the summer; in the winter, cold enough for English stoves. The resources of Mexico are just coming into activity, and they will be found enormous when they come into full play. The change in this town from what I am told it was a year ago, is most agreeable to contemplate. Shall I be ashamed to own the satisfaction I feel at seeing all this done by Englishmen, though some, I see, on your side the water, affecting to be wise in their generation,' talk of these undertakings, noble and useful as they seem to me to be, as mere bubbles and delusions?"

MADEIRA, SEPT. 17.—"Our vintage is gathering in. In the South part of the island, where the finer wines are produced, there is a great diminution in quantity, owing to a large proportion of the grape having rotted, in consequence of the unusual rains we have had throughout the summer; and the quality of what has been spared is very bad, at least it must be supposed so, as the fruit has not been sufficiently seasoned for want of heat; much of this wine will be made into brandy, I apprehend. In some parishes on the North side, the vintage has been nearly as bad, though there are two parishes, Porto de Cruz and Fayal, where the grapes look very well, and the wine will turn out well. Prices have risen three to four pound per pipe as it stands; but I expect, when the wine becomes ready to be examined in December next, that what may prove good will rise much more."

DOMINICA, AUG. 29.—This island experienced one of those awful visitations, a hurricane, on the 26th ult. Nine vessels, apparently all at anchor, were in a few moments driven on shore, and (except one) irrecoverably wrecked. The buildings immediately in this neighbourhood (seat of Government) suffered but little—at Prince Rupert very much, and the Proprietors of some estates in that neighbourhood are almost ruined: only one life lost. At Guadaloupe the storm was still more severe, and upwards of 500 persons perished."

MONTREAL, SEPT. 8.—Yesterday morning, between one and two o'clock, a fire broke out in the Quebec suburbs. When the alarm was given, and a few of the neighbours had assembled round the house where the fire burst forth, it has been reported to us that a few buckets of water, judiciously applied, would have completely extinguished it: but such is the confusion incidental to occasions of this nature, at least such is the apathy of the good people of this city connected with fires, that neither buckets nor water could be brought to stop the spreading flames. This unfortunate circumstance, in connection with the combustible nature of the surrounding premises, most of the houses and out-houses being composed of wood, may be set down as the secondary cause of the dreadful conflagration which followed. It must not, however, be forgotten that at this time not a breath of wind was stirring, but scarcely had the fire extended to the adjacent house, when a very high wind arose in the south, and drove the flames with the most appalling force and rapidity in its own direction. The fearful consequence was, that the flames spread with the rapidity of lightning from house to house, and from street to street, until four sections of the Quebec suburbs became almost at the same moment one scene of devastation and ruin; presenting from the fields in the rear a spectacle at once so awful and sublime that no pen can do justice to the sensations and feelings of those who beheld it. It was not long, however, before the ringing of the fire-bells, and other instruments of alarm, collected almost all the inhabitants of the city round this scene of woe. But what could individuals do without organization, system or plan, destitute—disgracefully destitute, as this town is of every institution calculated for preventing and extinguishing fires? Nor was it until the arrival of the 70th Regiment, and some of the Magistrates with a party of policemen, that any degree of order was adopted in arresting the progress of the flames, and rescuing the lives and property of the unfortunate objects of their destruction from inevitable ruin. As to engines, it was long before any could be brought to act; and of the miserable two that had been brought up, one was perfectly useless for want of repair. However, by the judicious interference of the Magistrates and the Officers of the 70th Regiment, among whom Colonel M'Gregor, Captains Tredenick, Mackay, and Kelsal, and Lieutenant Jelf, were very conspicuous, much property was saved, and every possible exertion made to stop the desolation of the flames. But great as these exertions had been they did not prove successful until forty-nine dwelling-houses, with a considerable part of their furniture, and about an equal number of out-houses of various descriptions, had become an entire prey to the merciless and devouring element; leaving scarcely "a wreck behind," except the skeletons of some stone-houses and the chimneys of others, which looked and still look like the trunks of so many withered and blasted trees.

Houses demolished	4
Houses burnt	42
Houses injured	3
Barn burnt	1

The number of persons burnt out amounts to 338, and the ground which the flames ravaged extends to three acres in length by two in breadth.

It was a providential circumstance that the wind blew from the south, otherwise there is no doubt that the southern side of St. Marie-street, which, as it was, could only be prevented from taking fire by the great and unremitting exertions of the 70th, must have become a prey to the flames. The same observations are applicable to the western side of Campeau-street, many of the houses of which, as well as on the opposite side of St. Mary-street, were severely scorched, and were only preserved by a continual application of water to the parts most exposed to the flames. Many of the inhabitants of the houses burnt down were not aware of the danger which surrounded them until the flames had actually taken possession of their apartments, and some of them escaped to the neighbouring houses with only the blankets in which they slept, as a covering. The number of poor families thrown destitute on the world is prodigious; but in reference to the circumstance in general, it is one consolation that the fire did not break out in a part of the town where the houses and inhabitants are more numerous, and the property more valuable.

We have not been able to ascertain the extent of the loss sustained on the present occasion, nor how much of the property destroyed had been insured. The total number of houses burnt is given in the foregoing abstract—they belonged to 38 proprietors, of whom three on y were insured.—Montreal Herald.

ADDRESS TO HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

(From the Cambridge Chronicle of October 14.)

At a grand common day of this Corporation, held on the fifth of September last, the Freedom of the Borough, accompanied by a loyal and respectful address, was voted to his Royal Highness the Duke of York, for his firm and patriotic declaration against granting any further concessions to the Roman Catholics; and his Royal Highness having appointed Friday last (during his annual visit at Cheveley Park, the seat of his Grace the Duke of Rutland,) to receive the same, the Mayor, (John Purchas, Esq.) with several Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and a number of respectable Burgesses, occupying thirteen carriages, arrived at Cheveley about half-past eleven o'clock, where they were kindly welcomed by his Grace the Duke of Rutland, High Steward of the Corporation, and the Marquess Graham, and Colonel Trench, Members of Parliament for the town. The procession, consisting of the High Steward, the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. preceded by the mace bearers carrying the maces and other insignia of office, was then introduced into the audience chamber, where his Royal Highness, with her Grace the Duchess of Rutland, and a number of noble visitors, were assembled. The Duke of Rutland then addressed his Royal Highness as follows:—

"Sir—The Corporation of the loyal and ancient Borough of Cambridge, deeply sensible of the many private virtues which adorn the character of your Royal Highness, and cordially admiring the principles which have invariably actuated your public conduct, more especially upon that great question which, in their estimation, involves the best interests of that key-stone of our glorious Constitution—the Protestant Ascendancy in Church and State, have unanimously resolved to tender to your Royal Highness an humble and respectful tribute of their attachment, devotion, and gratitude, by soliciting you to accept the freedom of their ancient borough. Concurring most fully in the feeling and sentiments which have brought the Corporation of Cambridge into the presence of your Royal Highness, I cannot help expressing my satisfaction that the present ceremony should occur at a time when your Royal Highness is permitting me the honour, and pride, and gratification, of exercising towards you the duties and attentions of hospitality at this place. And it is also particularly gratifying to me, that in virtue of the honourable office which I hold as High Steward of the Borough of Cambridge, it should be my province to read to your Royal Highness the following Address, which I can assure you has been voted by acclamation:

"To his Royal Highness Prince Frederick, Duke of York and Albany, Earl of Ulster, and Bishop of Osnaburgh, &c. &c.

"The loyal and respectful Address of the Mayor, Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and Burgesses, of the Town of Cambridge, in Common Hall assembled.

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"We, his Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, the Mayor, Aldermen, Common Councilmen, and Burgesses, of the town of Cambridge, beg leave most respectfully to offer to your Royal Highness the tribute of our sincerest thanks for your firm, patriotic, and constitutional resistance to Catholic Emancipation, evinced by your Royal Highness's speech upon that subject in the House of Lords.

"We, the Corporation of Cambridge, cannot refrain from embracing this opportunity of expressing our unalterable attachment towards your Royal Highness's family, as likewise to the principles of our happy and glorious Constitution as now established in Church and State, and we feel a pride in asserting that this attachment has never ceased to characterise our ancient and loyal Borough.

"We have viewed with increasing alarm the reiterated efforts of the Roman Catholics (and their adherents) to demolish those barriers which have been erected by the wisdom of our ancestors against the encroachments of Papal power; we deprecate the admission of Roman Catholics into the Legislature, because they are the advocates of principles which, if carried into full effect, would certainly endanger, and probably subvert, the civil and religious institutions of our country. We therefore again offer our most grateful acknowledgments to your Royal Highness for your firm and patriotic support of our Protestant Constitution, and we earnestly implore a continuance of the same watchful care, the same zealous exertions, as the only means, under Divine Providence, whereby the blessings which this highly favoured land has hitherto enjoyed, can be transmitted unimpaired to future generations.

"We beg to renew the assurance of our most cordial and respectful attachment towards your Royal Highness, and in testimony thereof to present you with the freedom of our Borough, your Royal Highness's acceptance of which we most earnestly and humbly solicit.

"Given under our Common Seal at Cambridge, this fifth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-five.

"BENJAMIN COTTON, Mayor."

His Grace having read the Address, the Mayor then said:—

"May it please your Royal Highness,

"I have the honour as Mayor, and in the name of the Aldermen, the Common Councilmen, and the Burgesses of the Borough of Cambridge, most respectfully to present, and humbly to solicit that your Highness will graciously condescend to accept a Burgess letter under the Common Seal, containing the freedom of the Corporation, which, in a Hall very numerously attended during the year of my worthy predecessor in office, was unanimously voted to your Royal Highness. And I earnestly request, Sir, that your Royal Highness will be graciously pleased to allow your illustrious name to be registered as a Burgess of our ancient and loyal Borough. Permit me, Sir, in conclusion, to say, that proudly as this day must stand distinguished amongst the records of our ancient Borough, still prouder will it be to myself who have now the high honour of addressing and of offering to your Royal Highness this token of our esteem, gratitude, and veneration."

To which his Royal Highness was most graciously pleased to return the following answer:

"Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen,—I beg to return you my most cordial thanks for the very flattering proof which you have given me of your personal regard as well as of your approbation of my conduct during the last Session of Parliament, when the Catholic Question was brought into discussion, by wishing to enroll my name upon your book as a Burgess of your very ancient and loyal Borough.

"Brought up as I have ever been from my earliest youth, with the most sincere attachment and veneration for our glorious Constitution in Church and State as by law established, and in support of which his Majesty's Family was seated upon the throne of these kingdoms, I considered it as my duty, when the attempt was made to strike, in my opinion, at the very root of that Constitution, to come forward, and as a Peer of this Realm, to avow openly and honestly my sentiments.

"Truly happy am I that those of the great majority of this kingdom are in unison with mine, and especially that of this ancient Borough; and I beg to assure you, Mr Mayor and Gentlemen, that it is with the greatest satisfaction and gratitude that I accept your offer."

The Corporation then withdrew into the spacious Hall, where an elegant and sumptuous cold collation was provided. During the repast his Royal Highness the Duke of York, with his Noble host and visitors, entered the Hall, in the following order:

His Royal Highness the Duke of York, accompanied by her Grace the Dutchess of Rutland.
His Grace the Duke of Rutland, leading the Marquis of Granby.
The Earl of Westmorland, with Lady C. Manners.
The Earl of Chatham, Manners.
The Marquis Graham, E. Manners.
The Lord Chancellor of Ireland, A. Manners.
Mr. Forester Miss Golding.
General Upton, Mr. Douglas, and Colonel Trench.

On passing round the tables, his Royal Highness again expressed the gratification he experienced at receiving this testimony of attachment from the very respectable Corporation of Cambridge.

His Royal Highness and Noble friends having retired, the Mayor rose, and gave the following toasts:—

"His Royal Highness the Duke of York."
"His Grace the Duke of Rutland."
"Her Grace the Dutchess of Rutland."
"The Marquis of Granby, and prosperity to the House of Manners."

The Dutchess of Rutland, (who was standing at the door of the hall,) on hearing the health of the Marquis of Granby given, came forward to the end of the table, leading the noble youth in her hand, and said, "I am very sensible of the honour done myself, but feel so deeply affected by the emotions inspired by your kindness to my dear boy, that I cannot resist the impulse of returning my best acknowledgements for this honourable mark of your esteem; and in his name, a delighted mother entreats your acceptance of those grateful thanks, which, as yet, her son is unable to offer on his own behalf."

The Corporation were then gratified with a promenade through the extensive gardens and walks at Cheveley Park, and returned to Cambridge in the afternoon, highly pleased with the kindness and urbanity which they had experienced.

The Members, with J. Douglas, Esq. M. P. the Aldermen, and a few select friends, afterwards dined with the Mayor, whose good cheer was accompanied with his customary friendly and polite attention.

On Saturday the same gentlemen dined with Mr. Alderman Abbott; in the evening they visited the theatre, where a play and farce (at the desire of the Mayor) were performed, concluding with the national anthem of "God save the King," which was sung by the whole company, the audience joining in chorus.

VARIETIES.

SILK.—The following is an Account of the Total Quantity of Silk, in Pounds Weight, exported from the Port of London, for the three first Quarters of 1825:—

1825.	Italian.	Turkey, Raw.	East India.	Italian Thrown.
	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.	lbs.
Qr. ending 5th April	172
Qr. ending 5th July	4024	176	618	999
Qr. ending 10th October	23327	11743	983	20510
Total	27529	11919	1601	21509

LORD GIFFORD.

The freedom of the city having been unanimously voted by the Town Council to Lord Gifford, the Lord Provost gave an elegant entertainment to that distinguished Nobleman, at his house in Abercromby-place, on Friday.

The burgess ticket, which contains the following passage—"In testimony of their respect for a person who, in his distinguished professional career, has been selected by his Sovereign, successively, to fill some of the most important legal and judicial situations in the empire"—was presented by the Lord Provost to Lord Gifford, before dinner, in nearly the following terms:—

"I have now, my Lord Gifford, to perform a very pleasant duty, which, to myself personally, I feel most gratifying, and in my public character I feel myself particularly honoured by being the medium of transmitting, to a character so distinguished as yourself, the freedom of the ancient metropolis of Scotland. It is, my Lord, one of the most beautiful features of the British constitution, that merit is the surest road to preferment, and of this we have a noble instance in your Lordship. Long may you enjoy the honours your Sovereign has bestowed on you, and may you yet be raised to a situation still more exalted, and so be enabled to benefit in a still higher degree the great interests of the public."

To which his Lordship made a very elegant and impressive reply, stating,

"That he felt very sensibly the honour paid to him by the Corporation of Edinburgh, in conferring on him the Freedom of the City; and he begged to return also his sincere acknowledgments to the Lord Provost, for the polite and friendly terms in which he had communicated to him the vote of the Town Council conferring that honour—that the highest reward, as well as the most powerful stimulus, which any individual filling an official situation could receive, was the approbation of the public; and it was peculiarly gratifying to him, if any of the official duties it had fallen to him to discharge, as connected with Scotland in particular, had given satisfaction—that the kind reception he had met with, and the hospitality he had experienced on his visit to this country, had made a deep impression on his mind, and that it was impossible that he should not in future take a lively interest in all that concerned its affairs, or tended to promote its prosperity, either in his official or private character. In his visit to this country he had been equally delighted with the romantic magnificence of its wild scenery, and with the splendour of the buildings of its metropolis. These, and every thing that he had met with during his residence among us, should ever afford the most pleasing subjects of recollection to his mind, and upon his return to London to resume his official labours, he should have a special pride in exhibiting his title as a citizen of such a distinguished city as Edinburgh."

Amongst the company on the occasiou were the Lord Chief Baron, the Lord Register and his Lady, Sir Peter Murray, Sir George Leith and his Lady, the Solicitor-General, General Sir John Hope, Mr. Wood, Sir William Arbuthnot, and several Members of the Magistracy and Council. The band of the 17th regiment played appropriate airs during dinner, and the whole company appeared much gratified by this testimony of respect to an individual whose character and talents are so highly appreciated.—Caledonian Mercury.

GALE AT LIVERPOOL.—On Friday morning, soon after 9 o'clock, we experienced a sudden gale from the north-west, which continued with great violence about half an hour. During the night there had been a heavy fall of rain, but as the early part of the morning was calm, and the wind south-east, a number of sail-boats were occupied in attending vessels in the river, going to sea, when the storm came on; four of the boats, we regret to state, were upset, and five persons belonging to them perished. One of the boats belonged to Mr. Daney, with four men, three of whom were lost; the other was washed on shore in a most exhausted state, but through the humane attentions of Mrs. Boode, of Mockbeggar-hall, to which he had been conveyed, he fortunately recovered. In Oldfield's boat two men were drowned, Oldfield and the other man being at the time on board the vessel, alongside of which the boat was lying at the time. The crews of the other two boats were happily saved—the men belonging to Storer's, by ropes thrown to their assistance from the floating light, by which they were enabled to reach that place in safety, and the crew of the other was picked up by a fishing-boat. A pleasure-boat, with a fishing party of sixteen persons on board, who had gone out about six o'clock, was driven on shore near Hoylake, but the whole of them succeeded in reaching the land, though not without being completely drenched. The boat soon afterwards filled with water. Several of the small craft in the river received damage in the gale. The names of the men lost in Daney's boat are —Thomas Day, who has left a wife and one child; John M'Guire, leaviug a wife and one child; and W. Crowder, a single man. The sufferers in Oldfield's boat are—W. Copple and W. Lyon, both single men. None of the bodies have yet been found. We understand it is intended to raise a subscription for the relief of the families of Daney's men, and we shall gladly receive any donations for that beuevolent purpose.—Billinge's Liverpool Advertiser.

COMBINATION IN SCOTLAND.

(From the Glasgow Chronicle.)

The operations of the only combination in the west of Scotland that has gained any temporary benefit by their exclusive measures, have at length reached a climax. We have more than once expressed an opinion that the operations of the combined colliers would soon bring the house about their ears. The central government that sits at Westminr having deemed it proper to issue a decree to the various colliers within their jurisdiction to make a fresh demand of an additional sixpence per cart of coals, the operative colliers of the pits on the banks of the Monkland canal, immediately set about fulfilling the instructions of the grand committee. Emboldened by success against Mr. Dunlop, the leaders seemed never to have dreamed of any other opposition to their legislative mandates. Fortunately, however, they had to encounter men of decided energy and public spirit, the Messrs. Dixons of Calder Iron Works. These gentlemen set the arrogant orders of the mock committee at defiance, and when the unreasonable demand was made upon them, they warned every collier in their employ who was dissatisfied with their present terms, to quit the works instanter. The colliers belonging to three of the coal-works were so prudent as to withdraw their demands; but the colliers who work at the coal pits at the village of Faskine having been so infatuated as to persevere in endeavouring to carry into effect the injunctions issued from head-quarters, their employers proceeded to eject every one of them and their families from the houses they occupied in the village; and followiug the example of the Duke of Hamilton, they wisely resolved to replace them by new workmen.

Last week presented a singular scene at the village. There was a complete rooting out of the combined, and nothing was to be seen but the packing up of furniture and the removal of families. This beautiful and romantic spot truly represented the picture of the deserted village; and many were the regrets of the poor wives and children at leaving so pleasaut a residence, and so good employers. The scene was however soon changed. The labourers on the banks of the Monkland Canal and at the Iron Works, seized the opportunity of breaking in upon the combination, and this deserving and excluded class immediately volunteered to occupy the places of the refractory colliers. For their protection, a strong body of men were procured from Glasgow and the neighbourhood. They are principally men who have been in the army, and have served in the Peninsular campaigns, and are of the most determined bravery and courage. They went up on Saturday, and have since been judiciously stationed round the country in the neighbourhood of the coal-works. They patrole night and day, and on the least alarm, they can all bear upon one point. They have got one of the houses in the village converted into a guard-room. They have a fine assortment of fire-arms; and it was a novel sight to meet with heroes who had fought at Waterloo, Vittoria, or scaled the walls of San Sebastian and Badajoz, quite busy preparing ball cartridges and all the necessary preparations of war for the protection of the peaceful workmen. As the coal pits are situated close to the Canal, it is apprehended that the colliers might attempt to cut the banks, and thus deluge the pits with water, and drown the new workmeu. These places are therefore particularly well guarded, and, if necessary, arrangements are made for bringing the dragoons in a few minutes from Hamiltou. The new workmen and their families are fast pouring into the village; and far more than are wanted can be procured. There are about 90 families from the parish of Campsie alone. There will be about 300 new miners required for the three pits. Early yesterday morning the new workmen made a successful commencement. They were accompanied by several regular bred colliers, who put things in order for them, and are to instruct them in their new profession. Fortunately, although the pits had been closed, the Messrs. Dixons had such a stock of coal and iron-stone, as placed them beyond the power of the combination. These gentlemen deserve the greatest praise for their meritorious efforts to break down a confederacy which is doing infinite mischef to the best interests of the country. The men employed at the iron works are quite enthusiastic in speaking of the kiudness of their employers. The discharged colliers were only allowed by the committee to work four days in the week—they durst not put out more coal than what amounted to five shillings a day, which they generally accomplished in a few hours. The iron-works are very brisk at present; about a hundred tons of pig-iron are manufactured in a week. From the number of labourers that passed through Camlachie yesterday morning, there is no doubt that all the hands wanted at Faskine have been already procured. We hear that a modern coal proprietor, whose name is known to the public, immediately engaged part of the combined colliers, and sent his carts to Faskine for their furniture.

At Manchester, there have been three failures of cotton speculators within the last few days; one owing about 10,000*l.*; another about 25,000*l.*; and the third nearly 50,000*l.* At present, we understand, the parties are all trying to effect a compromise with their creditors; the best composition proposed, we believe, is 5*s.* in the pound, and the lowest 1*s.* or 1*s.* 3*d.* Two of the parties have failed before under circumstances pretty similar.—Bolton Express.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

SALISBURY, OCT. 10.—A well known character named John Brown, but commonly called Old Sabbath, who had frequented the neighbourhood of Melksham for the last 70 years, died at Broughton Gifford, near that town, a few days since. This eccentric man's appearance constantly bespoke the most abject poverty; he regularly visited the adjoining villages as an object for the compassion of the charitable, and for many years before his death received parochial relief. There have been found secreted in the miserable hut which he inhabited 144*l.* in money, 120 shirts, 130 handkerchiefs, 32 pairs of new shoes, a quantity of old ones, and an immense collection of other articles of wearing apparel, kitchen utensils, old silver coin, forty table and tea-spoons, a silver watch, four large bags full of meat in a state of putrefaction, more than two bushels full of pieces of cheese, &c. The property was divided among ten nephews and nieces.

BALLYMENA, OCT. 6.—For a series of years no event has occurred in this neighbourhood that excited a sensation so awfully alarming as the instantaneous death of Francis Dickson, Esq. At noon-day on Tuesday the 4th inst. he rode out apparently in excellent health, left his horse at the inn of Graechill, and walked on a fowling excursion, about half-a-mile on the way to Ahoghill. His dogs made a set in a bog on the road-side; he took his piece from a lad who accompanied him—a teal sprung up—be fired, and brought it fluttering to the ground. He proceeded a few paces towards the bird, and before be had half-way reached the spot where it lay, stopped, staggered, fell, and expired! Surgical assistance was shortly afforded, but without effect, the vital spark had been finally extinguished by the relentless hand of death. He was in his 36th year, a Lieutenant on the staff of the Antrim regiment, was highly esteemed, and is regretted by an extensive circle of most respectable acquaintauces.

MAIDSTONE, OCT. 11.—At our market on Tuesday, there was but very little business doing in hops, the growers not beiug inclined to part with their stock, a further rise being expected.

At Ludlow Hops Fair, on Wednesday last, hops were in request, and above 400 pockets were weighed; 1825's sold for 16*l.* 10*s.* and 18 guineas; 1824's, from 14*l.* to 16*l.*; 1823's, from 9*l.* to 11*l.*; old ones, 5*l.* 10*s.* to 8*l.*

CHELMSFORD, OCT. 11.—The Bench of Magistrates assembled at the Shire Hall, on Friday last, had a case before them of a lamentable description, as interesting as it was extraordinary, and which occupied their attention for several hours. The circumstances related, as far as we could collect them, were as follow:—

Mr. John Hurrell, who resides at a farm called Oulverts, in Boreham, had occasion to use some arsenic for the destruction of rats, which he carefully put into a cup and locked in his bureau. On the 1st inst. Mr. Hurrell used a part of this arsenic, in the presence of a girl named Eliza Philbrook, about 15 years of age, who, it was noticed, read the word "Poison," which was legibly printed upon the packet, after which Mr. Hurrell replaced it in his bureau, locked it, and put the key in his pocket. On the day following, Sunday, Mrs. Hurrell, who is in a very forward state of pregnancy, and in a very poor state of health, on her return from meeting, spoke in the presence of the girl, of the woman who recently destroyed herself at Witham, by taking oxalic acid. On Monday morning, Mr. Hurrell put some tea into the pot, and desired the girl to add a sufficient quantity of water, and carry it to her mistress, who, with a little girl, were up stairs, which she did, and the tea-pot was again brought down for the use of Mr. Hurrell, who, on attempting to put in water, observed something white upon the leaves; it excited his attention, and induced him to taste, which being so extraordinary, he became very much alarmed. About this time Mrs. Hurrell had begun to feel the effects of that which afterwards proved to be poison, and which providentially caused a violent sickness. It then struck Mr. Hurrell to look for the poison, and on going to the bureau, it was missing; this confirmed him in his suspicions, and he instantly dispatched a little boy, about nine years of age, named Charles Choat, for some castor oil, as the best antidote he could at the instant suggest; but this little urchin, not understanding the importance of his mission, remained so long, that Mr. Hurrell himself ran to the shop, and there found the boy, apparently unconcerned, fitting on a smock-frock, a delay which was afterwards not unfairly construed, other circumstances connected, as a proof that he was au accessary to the attempt to poison. Mrs. Hurrell, as soon as her state would allow, taxed the girl with putting the arsenic into the tea-pot, promising her, that if she confessed, she would forgive her, when she related, that although she knew the powder would poison rats, she did not know that it would poison her mistress; that she put into the tea-pot two pinches taken between her finger and thumb (supposed about a tea-spoon full.) How she got the poison out of the bureau was not clearly shown. After this confession Mr. Hurrell desired one of his men to take her to her parents, (very industrious people who reside at Latchingdon,) directing the man to call upon Mr. Barnes, and deliver a note explaining the circumstance. At this time Mrs. Hurrell continued in a very alarming state, and the little girl was also much affected. Mrs. Hurrell as had every medical assistance, but some fears are entertained, under all circumstances, of her doing well. John Perkins, a labourer, who from his apparent stupidity or unwilling manner, gave the Honourable Chairman strong reasons for expressing his doubts whether he dare "turn round and look an honest man in the face," but Perkins proved the contrary, and as though enlightened by that circumstance, related with less ambiguity than heretofore, that which, had it been true, would have criminated the boy Choat, who the girl declared was worse than herself, as he put her in mind of poisouing her master and mistress, having said that "he wished he could get at the stuff (meaning the poison) and he would give bis master and mistress a d—d good dose." Charles Choat, who appeared a very interesting child, and spoke in a tone and manner which had more the appearance of truth than falsehood, denied what the girl had said; and related that Eliza Philbrook asked him what would be the consequence if either master or mistress died; that she showed him the powder in the pot, but he was not aware that it was poison; that after she had put the water in the pot on the Monday morning, she made an attempt to go to the kitchen door to empty it, but on observing her master, she exclaimed, "Lord, there is my master!" that he did not know but what it was whitening in the pot scraped from the wall by setting the tea-pot against it, and as to his not making haste from the shop, he did not understand that it was necessary.—Mr. W. Baker, chemist, of Chelmsford, and his assistant, Mr. Smith, proved that there was a quantity of arsenic in the water poured from the tea-leaves, but the leaves had not undergone the same test, which the Court requested might be made. Eliza Philbrook had upon her examination made a confession, that she had been guilty of putting the poison into the pot, and persisted in the boy Choat being accessary before the fact, that she showed the little girl the powder in the pot, (who upon being called acknowledged that circumstance,) but she appeared so ignorant of the tribunal before which she has yet to appear, not even understanding what was meant by her trial, that it was thought best not to allow her to sign what she had confessed. On her way to the Shire-hall she asked the matron of the gaol whether she thought she should be hung. The boy Choat was released, and the girl committed for the felony, to take her trial at the next assizes. The court was crowded to excess.

STAFFORD.—Thomas Jones, of Walsall, who, according to modern phraseology, is an Operative, had, on Thursday morning, reached this town, on his return from Stone, where he had been to see his friends and the races, when he called at the Waggon and Horses public-house, for the simple purpose of obtaining a little refreshment. Here, unfortunate Thomas fell in with a host of sharpers, who were on a professional tour, and not suspecting their unfair designs, he ventured a bet at their solicitation on a prick-and-garter trick—it was simply that he would risk his watch and 30 shillings against five pounds laid down by one of the party, on the clear and indubitable fact, that a pin which he saw inserted in a twisted garter was really sticking in it! While Thomas, who was determined he would not be juggled, had his head bent towards the table, and his eyes intently fixed on the pin and garter, he received a violent bump on the back of his pate, and while his face was pinned to the table, by one of his newly formed acquaintances, by another the whole stakes were swept off the dresser, where they had been previously laid; and in a moment, the party, consisting of seven, bolted, and left the astounded Operative to apply vinegar and brown paper to his bruised nose, and to meditate on his loss. Without delay, however, Jones applied to the constables, who, in a short time, discovered two of the party, viz. Henry Fawcett, a native of Portsea and Neal Mullin, an Irishman, who had lingered in the town. Fawcett had a note of the Stourbridge bank, which had formed part of the prize, in his possession; and Mullin had in his fob a watch (not Jones's), which we shall describe, as there is little room to doubt its having been obtained unlawfully. On the face of the watch, which was of silver and capped, in lieu of the usual figures to denote the hours, were the letters THOMAS CHARNEL—and on the back of a watch-paper in the interior were, barely legible, the words "Thomas Charnel, Polesworth." At the head of the watch-ribbon were appended five gold seals, one of which bore this sentimental inscription: "The hope of return takes the sting from adieu!" If justice takes its course on this fellow, and he should have to spend seven years at Botany Bay, we are humane enough to hope he may be permitted to carry this with him, to enable him to bear his fate philosophically. Both of the men are safely lodged in the county gaol.

FASHIONABLE INTELLIGENCE.

DUKE OF YORK'S LEVEE.—The Duke of York had a levee, on Tuesday, at his office in the Horse Guards. The following General, and about thirty other Officers, purposed paying their respects to his Royal Highness, viz.:—Lieut.-General Sir H. Campbell, Major-General Mainwaring, Major-General Bourke, Major-Gen. Morris, Gen. Fitzroy, and Gen. Milner

Mr. Secretary Canning has been some days on a visit to his friend Mr. Ellis, at Seaford. The Brighton people flatter themselves with the hope that the illustrious statesman will honour them with his presence for a short time before he returns to the fatigues of office.

Colonel the Hon. Edward Lygon is shortly expected to lead to the Hymeneal Altar, Lady M. Cathcart, daughter of Earl Cathcart.

The Speaker has returned to his residence attached to the House of Commons, from the country excursion, with his two sons, to Brighton.

Married, on Tuesday, at St. Swithen's Church, Winchester, the Lord Bishop of Barbadoes (Dr. Coleridge), to Miss Rennell, eldest daughter of the Very Rev. the Dean of Winchester.

The Honourable John Bloomfield, only son and heir of our distinguished countryman, Lord Bloomfield, his Majesty's Representative at the Court of Stockholm, arrived on Wednesday at his beautiful shooting-lodge, Knockfune, county Tipperary, accompanied by his uncle, T. Ryder Pepper, Esq. On this occasion—his first visit to the country—the numerous tenantry of his noble father collected from Oakhampton, to receive him with every demonstration of joy and attachment, and preceded his carriage for several miles with a display of rustic banners and music. This accomplished young gentleman felt highly pleased at the gratitude and affection evinced by the happy tenantry.

MISCELLANEOUS INTELLIGENCE.

CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE DERBY FESTIVAL.

	£	s.	d.
Madame Caradori - - -	52	10	0
Miss Stephens - - -	52	10	0
Miss Wilkinson - - -	52	10	0
Sir George Sitwell, Bart. - -	21	0	0
Sir Roger Gresley, Bart. - -	21	0	0

BETHLEM HOSPITAL.—A commodious chapel is about to be opened in this hospital. It has been found, after some years of strict probation, that in every large community of lunatics, a considerable number will always be found susceptible of religious consolation, as well as competent to discharge the duties of social worship.

A farmer in Moravia has just invented a new plough, which, although drawn by only one horse, produces four furrows. The Agricultural Society of that country have presented him with a gold medal.

The Society of Arts has rewarded an ingenious carpenter, named Gladwin, for the invention of a plane, which he has constructed so as to answer all the purposes of the jack plane, the panel plane, the smoothing plane, and the moulding plane.

NON-ATTENDANCE OF ALDERMEN.—On Tuesday a Court of Aldermen could not be made until half-past two o'clock, although it was appointed for one, in consequence of the absence of the aldermen, to compel whose attendance there is unfortunately no fine.—In consequence of the great inconvenience arising from the non-attendance of the aldermen some years ago, it was agreed amongst them that the fine of a guinea should be inflicted for every breach of punctuality on occasions of the kind; and this regulation had for a time the effect of doing away the very frequent neglect or abandonment of duty.

HOAX ON THE BATH HERALD.—We have this week received a letter from the well-known Harriette Wilson, in which we are requested to obtain for her "some funny anecdotes" relating to a most respectable gentleman of this neighbourhood, with whom she acknowledges herself to be unacquainted, for the purpose (to use her own words) of obliging him "to buy out of the book." Feeling such an application as an insult to ourselves, we have thought it right thus publicly to notice it; and to add, that the letter to which we allude, will, if necessary, be always at the service of the friends of that gentleman.—Bath Herald.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Belzoni is at present in a situation of great embarrassment, and that the valuable collections made by her late husband, now exhibiting in Leicester-square, will in all probability be lost to her for ever, if some assistance is not immediately afforded to her, to enable her to discharge a claim of comparatively trifling magnitude.

Mr. Balcomb, so frequently mentioned in Mr. O'Meara's "Account of Bonaparte at St. Helena," and who was compelled to leave that Island while Sir H. Lowe was Governor there, has been appointed by Government to the profitable situation of Treasurer of New South Wales.

Mr. Crosdill, the celebrated violoncello player, who is just dead, came over from Paris, in July, 1821, to be present, as an instrumental performer, at the Coronation, he having also been engaged at that of George III. He was the only person present (professionally engaged) who had survived the long lapse of sixty-one years.

BOLIVAR.—The Memorial Bourdelais contains the following. It is only another version of a story which has already reached us through the American Papers.—"The American frigate Persia has arrived in this Port (Cadiz), with 150 officers of different descriptions of the Royal Army of Peru. Letters by the said frigate state, that a Negro, who was condemned to death for a murder, demanded an interview with Bolivar, to disclose to him some important information. Bolivar proceeded to the culprit, who said to him, "Should I save your life, will you save mine?" Bolivar was astonished, and, after a pause, said, "I will obtain your pardon provided you furnish me with proofs of what you have stated before the hour your sentence is to be carried into execution." "Well," replied the Negro, "proceed immediately to the room of your valet, and there you will find a poignard perfectly resembling that with which I killed Monteagudo." Bolivar proceeded to his valet's room, and there found the same poignard amongst his effects. The Negro was immediately set at liberty. It is added, that 500 persons have been arrested at Lima, accused of being concerned in the conspiracy."

General Bertrand, so well known for his attachment to Napoleon, is now building a very large cotton-spinning factory in the suburb Madelaine, at Lisle. It will cost 1,200,000 francs (about 48,000*l.*).

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We have received a very angry epistle, with the Maidenhead Post-mark, signed the "Vicar of Bray," accusing us of illiberality in a remark we made in our last paper towards Mrs. CALCRAFT, (late Miss CHESTER,) of Covent Garden Theatre, and threatening us with a legal process, and every species of persecution—at all of which we laugh. But as we have very good grounds for supposing the letter in question to be written by a Maidenhead Attorney, dictated by Mrs. CALCRAFT's mother, who resides at Hollyport, near Bray, we venture to offer a few remarks. We assure our Correspondent, that we feel inclined to give every publicity to the "virtuous conduct of the Lady in question," and on HIS authority state, that her acquaintance with the MARQUESS OF HUNTLY, FRED. HODGSON, cum multis aliis, was purely platonic; so would have been her acquaintance with UXBRIDGE, if "Johnny from Wareham" had not called on GLENGALL to stop it. So was her acquaintance with "light horse and with heavy"—during her campaign at Windsor, that the youth eclipsed "brother" IS a brother—not a Son—as it has been ill-naturedly asserted; and that in the year 182— she gave her virtuous hand to J. CALCRAFT, Esq. M. P.

REASON's letter from Birmingham has been received; and we beg to assure him he is quite wrong, if he supposes that by the expressions we found it necessary to make on the establishment of a PAP *School there, we are at all inimical to the general interests of the town—TOUT AU CONTRAIRE—we shall at all times be the foremost to advance its* REAL welfare, knowing well the loyalty, talent, and industry of thousands of its inhabitants; and in the next session we will SHEW our feeling towards them.—The attack on their demagogue was called for; nor will the late motion in the NEW News Rooms, at all prevent us from speaking our mind, when, as in this instance, it was producing a permanent good, at the risk of a moment's unpleasantry. We shall not, be assured, either forget REASON or Birmingham.

BROMPTON begs us to inform the Theatrical Critic of the MORNING HERALD, that there is a VERY GOOD REASON for MISS LACY being put in Helen Macgregor, (bad as she played it) instead of MRS. FAUCIT.

In our Review of the Road to Ruin, *last week, read "mother" for "brother."*

We have received the following letter from LORD DEERHURST, and have written for the necessary documents on the subject; and if their contents invalidate the charge alluded to, which, after all, is an ELECTIONEERING SQUIB, we shall immediately publish them, as a matter of the strictest justice due to HIS LORDSHIP.

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

Worcester, Oct. 9. half-past three o'clock, P. M.

Sir,—This moment only am I put in possession of a paragraph in your Paper of Oct. 2, of a most cruel and infamous nature, as alluding to me—containing FALSEHOOD of the most HELLISH CHARACTER. I call upon you to give me up the Writer of the letter from Worcester, whom you quote from, in that disgusting sentence, which I particularly refer to; and I shall remain here to confront the parties forthwith. I have but an instant to save Post, and beg an answer directed here.

I am, Sir, your obedient Serrant,
DEERHURST."

THE AGE.

LONDON, OCTOBER 16.

It is with feelings of great satisfaction we call the attention of our readers to the returns of the Revenue for the present quarter, the particulars of which are herewith submitted; from an examination of which it appears, that there is an excess in the Customs for this quarter, over the same branch of income in the corresponding quarter for 1824, of 2,038,183*l.* while at the same time the Excise presents an apparent deficiency of 1,958,159*l.*; but it will be remembered that, in the observations we made on the returns for the July quarter, we pointed out the necessity, in consequence of the alterations which had been made in the collection of those duties, to take both together, when bringing into comparison the revenue of the present, with that of the former year; on doing which, and deducting the decrease on the Excise from the increase on the Customs, an excess over the same quarter last year will be found, which, in addition to the increase in the Stamp and Post Office, make a total increase in this quarter's return, beyond that of October 10, 1824, to the amount of 137,594*l.*; but in that, as in the last quarter, must be taken into consideration the repayments made on account of the wine duties repealed, which, when properly brought forward, will make the increase far beyond the sum we have herein set down. It will be observed that the AUSTRIAN REPAYMENT is not mentioned in the official document we now publish, which, it must be borne in mind, comprised TWO MILLIONS and a HALF in aid of the Ways and Means of 1824; but our established income has already so considerably increased, as nearly to cover four-fifths of that amount in the calculation to be formed, when recurring to the absence of that essential item, in the present year. To those cavilling numskulls (and in case our words should be at all mistaken, we beg to say we mean the Whigs,) who are ready at every turn to question the conduct of the Ministry, it will be quite sufficient to say, that the total excess of Income in the year July 1825, over the year terminating July 1824, amounts to the sum of 1,863,695*l.*, the whole of which is of course attributable to the efforts of these beauties. The following comprises the lists of Taxes repealed since 1820:—

1821—Agricultural Horse Duty	£480,000
1822—On Malt	1,500,000
On Salt	1,300,000
On Leather	300,000
On Tonnage	180,000
1823—Assessed Taxes	2,300,000
On Spirits	720,000
1824—On Foreign Wool	350,000
On Silk	460,000
On Coals	200,000
On Rum	150,000
On Law Stamps	200,000
1825—On Wine	450,000
On Spirits	750,000
On Hemp	100,000
On Coffee	150,000
Assessed Taxes	276,000
Sugar, Iron, &c.	150,000
	£10,016,009

Out of which sum about 6,760,000*l.* comes under the heads of Customs and Excise; and on referring to the produce of these two branches of Revenue in the year ending October, 1820, we find the amount to be 35,234,805*l.*—while their produce in the October Quarter of 1825 is 35,926,866*l.*, being an increase in the five years, to the sum of 692,061*l.*, notwithstanding a repeal in them to the said amount of 6,760,000*l.* We further perceive, that the Stamp Duties, which amounted in 1820 to the sum of 8,115,482*l.*, produced last year, (although a reduction in Law Stamps took place to the sum of 200,000*l.*) above ONE MILLION; while it will be seen by this abstract, that nearly the same increase has taken place in the POST-OFFICE DUTIES:

In 1821 the Post-Office yielded	-	-	£1,331,000
1822	-	-	1,343,000
1823	-	-	1,350,000
1824	-	-	1,439,000
1825	-	-	1,501,000

All this advantage is of course the result of Whiggery, and has very little to do with HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTERS: they, poor fellows, to be sure are unusually popular, and they can't help it—but they owe it all to the Whigs. Only read the accounts of the Cheshire, Yarmouth, and Reading Dinners, and no one will be hardy enough after that to doubt what we are saying for a moment—they state it themselves, and they are infallible—and after this, who would not be A WHIG!

No. I.—ABSTRACT of the NET PRODUCE of the REVENUE of GREAT BRITAIN, in the Years ended 10th Oct. 1824, and 10th Oct. 1825, distinguishing the Quarters.

	Quarters ended 5th Jan. 1824.	5th April, 1824.	5th July, 1824.	10th Oct. 1824.	Year ended Oct. 10, 1824.	5th Jan. 1825.	5th April, 1825.	5th July, 1825.	10th Oct. 1825.	Year ended Oct. 10, 1825.
	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£	£
Customs	2,853,345	2,187,556	1,997,070	3,240,272	10,278,243	2,814,841	2,277,215	3,935,641	5,278,455	14,306,152
Excise	5,847,132	5,396,365	5,963,338	7,113,017	24,319,852	6,640,563	5,575,448	4,239,845	5,154,858	21,620,714
Stamps	1,556,810	1,663,796	1,691,588	1,759,680	6,673,874	1,536,032	1,714,819	1,822,616	1,823,519	6,997,016
Taxes under the Management of the Commissioners of Taxes, including Arrears of Property Tax	1,946,084	533,382	1,918,672	481,968	4,880,106	1,988,048	477,396	2,055,463	474,433	4,975,340
Post Office	361,000	356,000	347,000	375,000	1,439,000	366,000	367,000	369,000	379,000	1,501,000
1s. 6d. and 4s. in the Pound on Pensions	13,646	14,450	21,014	11,271	60,381	14,639	17,576	12,658	13,503	58,376
Hackney Coaches, and Hawkers and Pedlars	27,380	3,700	5,800	18,900	56,362	28,734	3,700	8,221	17,700	58,355
Crown Lands		480		486	966
Small branches of the King's Hereditary Revenue
Surplus Fees, Regulated Public Offices	1,295 / 15,649	5,121	2,877 / 161	500 / 17,000	3,490 / 40,931	2,411 / 17,605	22 / 8,363	5,006 / 2,133	7,439 / 28,101
Total Ordinary Revenue	12,623,341	10,162,850	11,946,920	13,018,094	47,753,205	13,508,573	10,461,539	12,440,613	13,141,468	49,552,493
Repayment by Austria	766,667	1,733,333	-	-	2,500,000	-	-	-	-	-
Imprest and other Monies	35,047	40,324	42,560	30,956	146,887	62,189	51,028	52,908	45,176	211,294
Total Revenue	13,425,055	11,936,507	11,989,480	13,049,050	50,400,092	13,571,055	10,512,567	12,493,521	13,186,644	49,763,787
Applied as Consolidated Fund	13,131,970	11,735,670	11,917,485	11,201,692	47,096,217	13,571,013	10,404,673	11,488,988	13,634,958	47,099,632
To pay off Exchequer Bills charged on the Annual Duties	290,085	192,427	970,138	1,843,395	3,296,035	42	104,894	1,004,533	1,543,686	2,653,155
Applied as part of the Ways and Means of the Year	13,900	9,000	1,857	3,963	17,820	-	3,000	-	8,000	11,000
Total	13,425,055	11,936,507	11,989,480	13,049,050	50,400,092	13,571,055	10,512,567	12,493,521	13,186,644	49,763,787

(For Abstracts II. and III. see page 6.)

CHESHIRE WHIG DINNER.

AIR—The Nightingale Club.

THE NORTHERN WHIG CLUB late in Chester was held,
At the sign of the Royal Hotel,
And to show you whereiu every speaker excell'd,
Is my present intention to tell.
For the cloth off the table, the Chairman got on,
And thus he address'd every own mother's son:

(Spoken.)—Gentlemen of the NORTHERN WHIG CLUB—you all know the rules and regulations of this here society, and if any gentleman present is not "up" to them, he'll find 'em chalked up over the chimney-piece. Every gentleman must make a volunteer speech or song, whether he can or no, or pay for a bottle, and not drink a drop of it; therefore, to make a beginning of the evening's harmony, as we have toasted the King, the Royal Family, and the people, and Mr. Fox, and so on, beg to give you LORD CREWE, (here some fellow at the end of the room very indelicately hallooed out, "we had him long enough," but he was instantly silenced,) the original founder of the Club' (loud applause.) My LORD CREWE, we beg to call on you for something.—"Certainly, Mr. President; give me leave just to blow my nose, and I'll begin directly:

I founded this feast, and by way of a rub,
Its shufflers all call me the KNAVE of the Club;
I sat in the House twenty-eight years about,
And just the same number of years have been out!
Down derry down.

I need'nt now tell what I managed to do,
As you al. know the good which thereby did accrue;
I'm extremely obliged for whatever you've said,
And shall go, in about half an hour, to bed.
Down derry down.

Bravo, bravo, very well sung, jolly companions every one!
Thus the NORTHERN WHIG CLUB all night kept up the clamour,
While knocked up by the wine, and knocked down by the hammer

The PRESIDENT, as soon as His LORDSHIP had done,
Immediately got on his legs;
As he thought Mr. WILLIAMS, his VICE, up to fun,
Said, "A toast or a song Sir, I begs."
He was chosen for VICE, to the Bar being bred,
And so in a bar or two instantly said:

(Spoken.)—My luds and gem'men of the jury—I mean of the Club—from the accident of my belonging to a particular profession, (vide all the papers,) it devolves on me to propose the health of a nobleman lately deceased—beg pardon, meant to say, memory, who, in 1795, when the TREMENDOUS principle of CONSTRUCTIVE treason was attempted to be carried into effect, completely brushed away the cobweb of the lawyers, like the Broom they now have is doing, and acted in the teeth of the judges; and, moreover, defied them to muzzle twelve men (cries of "explain"—judges or jury?)—and prevent them from giving a verdict! (Bravo, bravo.) If that nobleman had done all this, his memory stood as a bright example to all lawyers, and I therefore give, "The memory of Lord ERSKINE," which was drunk in solemn silence, and His Lordship not being present to return thanks, Mr. WILLIAMS sang, as his representative, the following:

In the late Lord ERSKINE's name, I rise to thank you all, sirs,
And feel the greatest happiness to answer to the call, sirs;
And wish to say to all those men my sentiments who catch, sirs,
That though by you an old WHIG called, some christened him old SCRATCH, sirs.

Bow, wow, wow.

I'm but his LORDSHIP's ghost, and I've merely come to thank you,
And as you drank him, were he here I'm sure he would have drank you;
So having of his memory before you made the most, Sirs,
For fear OLD SCRATCH should take his namesake, I'll "give up his GHOST," SIRS.

Bow, wow, wow.

Bravo, bravo, very well sung, jolly companions every one.
&c. &c. &c.

Then TAYLOR, the Manchester GUARDIAN, rose next,
And told them, almost out of breath,
About FARREN the Coroner's monstrous pretext,
To prevent him reporting a death.
And after he'd talked, about freedom and wealth,
They all said, "Mr. TAYLOR, your very good health."

(Spoken.)—Mr. President and Gentlemen, and my Lords—I'm particularly obliged to you, and drink all your very good healths in return, and your families. Mr. VICE-PRESIDENT, be good enough to give us a toast.—"You're very good Sir, but as tea 's not ready yet, I'd rather give you a bottle of wine."—"Well," said TAYLOR, "as this is LIBERTY HALL, one must excuse all the liberty they take with one, particularly as I represent the Liberty of the Press—so, a sentiment, or health, if you please, Mr. VICE-PRESIDENT."—"Certainly, certainly, Sir; I beg to propose the health of Mr. PHILLIPS, our worthy President." (Cheering.)—Whereon Mr. PHILLIPS rose, and thus delivered himself:

I'm PHILLIPS, the Member for Steyning,
Whom most of you present well know;
And, I'm proud I've the honour of gaining
The smiles which I see you bestow.
But though I'm returned for that Borough,
No stain in my conduct you'll see,
For I don't think you'll meet a more thorough
Good sort of a fellow than me.

Never talk of your ADMINISTRATION—
Of CANNING's and ROBINSON's rigs,
What lately they've done for the nation
Was done long ago by the Whigs.
We can boast every species of zealot
In Church or in State to be got,
For a REVEREND DIGNIFIED PRELATE
An arch BISHOP's one of the lot.

"BRAVE YORK"'s not the least fit for reigning—
His BROTHER's no more to my mind;
In short, it is only at STEYNING,
That any thing decent you'll find.
But though I'm returned for that Borough,
No stain in my conduct you'll see,
For I don't think you'll meet a more thorough
Good sort of a fellow than me.

Bravo, bravo, very well sung, jolly companions every one!
&c. &c. &c.

Mr. PRESIDENT, then having finished his speech,
And his nose and his breath being blown,
Said—The health I now give will be sure to please each,
As if I was giving my own;
I therefore propose, in all fullness of heart—
The health of Lord GROSVENOR, the patron of art.

(Spoken.)—Gentlemen of the NORTHERN WHIG CLUB, it is with particular satisfaction I give the health of this distinguished nobleman, (bravo, bravo.) He is, like a true Whig, a real lover of liberty—or rather a lover of real liberty, a supporter of the arts, and of the intellectual and moral improvements now going on at Chelsea, (cheers); but all that I can say cannot enhance his Lordship in your eyes, and therefore, as the old proverb goes, "the least said, soonest mended." My Lord Grosvenor's very good health, (drank with great enthusiasm.) "Really, gentlemen," said His LORDSHIP, "unaccustomed as I am to public speaking, still if ever I wanted words to express myself, it is on the present occasion, but you must take the will for the deed—so here goes:

I'm GROSVENOR the EARL of,
Who married a girl of Old THOMAS, the VISCOUNT DE WILTON;
I'm a classical scholar,
And beat them all hollow
At quoting from SHAKSPEARE or MILTON.
But I flatter myself what is rather
More use—I am LORD BELGRAVE's father.
And put us together
I really doubt whether
You'll find two such, if you go farther:

About seven and twenty Years since I had plenty
Of influence, rank, and of pay too;

And why not in power
To this very hour,
The luck of LORD BANHAM I lay too.
For the office, I car'd not a fig, Sirs,
Though its pleasant to talk and look big, Sirs;
But when he was granted
The place which I wanted,
I then turned a regular Whig, Sirs;

In an excellent station
Till PITT's ministration,
Both FOX and his party I rated,
But out—I turned stories,
And rated the Tories—
As you would, if so situated.
Then, here's to the GRANN REVOLUTION,
And, above all, the grand institution
Of Whig Clubs in Cheshire,
And every measure
They take for one FREE CONSTITUTION!!;
Bravo, bravo, very well sung, jolly compauions every one!
&c. &c. &c.

His Lordship no sooner had finished his song,
Than he ventured to give them a toast,
For of all Courts to which a reform could belong,
That of Chancery wanted it most.
His Lordship then gave Mr. WILLIAMS a look,
And drank to his health, and his Chancery book.

(Spoken) "Although, Gentlemen," said His LORDSHIP, "my eldest Son somewhat unceremoniously withdrew himself from your Club in a very clever letter to Mr. SWANICK, this time twelvemonth, yet I have no doubt you will be glad to hear that the accouchement of LADY ELIZABETH is expected every day; in addition to which, that you may form some conception of the conception of our family, I beg to inform you, my second Son's wife, LADY WILTON, has just given birth to an heir to that noble House, at the seat of her father, and my old crony, the EARL OF DERBY, (immense applause); I therefore drink success to MR. WILLIAM's efforts to reform the COURT OF CHANCERY; (cheering.)
Whereupon MR. WILLIAMS, very nearly fuddled, produced this song:

A master I have, and I am her man,
Galloping dreary dull,
A master I have and I am her man,
And I've married—from whom I wish I had ran,
With a haily, gaily,
Wretched really,
Riggling,
Niggling,
Galloping galloway, draggle-tail dreary dull.

Considering WHAT I've to do now AT HOME,
Galloping dreary dull;
Considering WHAT I've to do now AT HOME,
I'm a pretty bold fellow I think thus to roam,
From my galloping dreary dull,
With a haily, gaily, &c. &c.

They may talk about CANNING and others in life,
Galloping dreary dull;
They may talk about CANNING and others in life,
But their talk is nothing to that of my wife,
With her galloping galloway, &c. &c.

In spite of your fun which I easily twig,
At our galloping dreary dull,
In spite of your fun which I easily twig,
Though she has no heir, she at least has a whig,
With his haily, gaily,
Liberty daily,
Giggling,
Riggling,
Galloping, galloway, draggle-tail dreary dull.

And as I before said, relative to the representation of Steyning,—

That though I'm return'd for that borough,
No stain in my conduct you'll see;
For I don't think you'll meet a more thorough
Good sort of a fellow than me.

Bravo, bravo, very well sung, jolly companions every one!
Thus the Northern Whig Club all night kept up their clamour,
Till knock'd up by wine, they knock'd under the hammer.

We understand that a subscription, towards the close of the evening, was entered into to defray the expences of LADY ELIZABETH's confinement, but our reporter was obliged to start for London, before he could ascertain either the names or amount.

HONOUR.

MRS. COUTTS and suite! accompanied by his Grace the DUKE OF ST. ALBANS, arrived at the George Inn in Leek, about five o'clock on Saturday evening. During their stay, they *honoured RICHARD GAUNT, ESQ. with a visit, and took their departure about seven o'clock the same evening for Eaton Hall, the seat of SIR EDMUND ANTROBUS, where they will remain a few days, and then proceed on their way to Scotland.---Morn. Herald.

* "There's honour for you!"
1*st Part of Henry* IV. Act 5, Scene 3.

It was our intention to have noticed very fully MOORE's Life of SHERIDAN in this day's publication, but several local events have arisen to prevent it; although we might cite a still greater reason, which is, that the book not having yet gone the round of the reading part of the community, our opinions might not receive that attention and deliberation we should wish. But it is our intention on Sunday next, to introduce the subject in as full and comprehensive a manner as the limits of an hebdomadal journal will admit, and crave until then our reader's indulgence.

The different meetings of the Whigs within these few days, constitute a certain sort of feature in the occurrences of the times, and furnish an especial cause for an apparent neglect of the life of one of their late leaders, edited by one of their HIRELING SCRIBES. In another part of our Paper will be found a very odd account of a congregation of the GREAT NORTHERN WHIG CLUB; in addition to which we have to record the inauguration dinners of the Mayors at Yarmouth and Reading, the former of which took place, as usual, on Michaelmas-day, in pursuance of the old custom of the 29th of September being set aside for the general assemblage, at dinner, of most of the GEESE in the kingdom; and when we mention that Mr. WODEHOUSE, M. P., the Honourable Mr. ANSON, and Mr. RUMBOLD, M. P.'s for the borough, with sundry others, were present, we shall be readily believed when we say that the charter was fully kept up. If it were necessary to give any particular proof of the feeling which even the parties themselves now feel, on the consequences of their late suffrages on the CATHOLIC QUESTION, the following part of one of the Member's harangues, will afford a very ample one:

The Hon. GEORGE ANSON stated, that it was most probable this was the last time he should have the houour of addressing the town as its representative, but whenever a dissolution took place, he should offer himself to their notice, and solicit their votes; that he had always voted conscientiously, and that he should be ready to lay before the tribunal of public opinion his conduct in the House of Commons; that he felt gratitude to the town for having first called him into public life; and that he would lose no opportunity of executing the trust they had reposed in him; and he concluded by proposing a toast, which he declared he gave with much sincerity—"Prosperity to the Town of Yarmouth, and a good Fishing."

Whether Mr. ANSON, by the concluding passage of his speech, was "fishing" for votes in support of the contest he anticipates, we do not pretend to determine, but it appears very certain his audience, from all that we hear, did not at all bite; in consequence of which he sat down to make way for his Colleague, who said very little, and as little to the purpose; after which the healths of the MAYOR and Mr. BARCLAY were given, which called from the latter gentleman the only rational part of the evening's entertainment. "LORD WODEHOUSE and the House of Kimberley" of course was given, for the purpose of affording the hopeful nephew of that family an opportunity of returning thanks; a circumstance which, some say, so offended OLD COKE last year, that he did not make his appearance at all on this occasion; while others assert that it was owing to a visit from that imported piece of German effrontery, PRINCE LEOPOLD of SAXE COBURG---and beyond this there was not a feature in the whole affair worth recording.

The affair at Reading is no less remarkable for the tergiversation of these political hypocrites; for it would be a difficult thing to make a soul believe that any thing short of the fear of being kicked out at the next ELECTION, could have induced the sitting members to have committed themselves in the manner they did to their own party, on this important occasion; but the fact is, that finding even the borough of Reading becoming a little respectable, they were compelled to say something that bordered on that character, and accordingly we find the following sentiments delivered by Mr. FYSHE PALMER, one of the most shameless of modern Whigs, in which he appears to have been backed by his precious COADJUTOR:

"Mr. C. F. PALMER said, during the twenty years he had been acquainted with the borough of Reading, there had been periods when war or angry feelings were so universal, that it was a difficult task to address a public meeting without touching on some points which went to arouse jealousy and discontent; but in the present times the case was altered; as happiness and prosperity were every where to be met. (Hear, hear.) From what cause the difference had arisen he could not pretend to say; but as His Majesty's Ministers had been charged with giving rise to the angry feeling, it was but just that they should enjoy the merit of producing the change!! Mr. PALMER then passed a high and extraordinary eulogium on His Majesty's Ministers FOR THE LIBERAL AND ENLIGHTENED POLICY THEY HAD PURSUED!

"Mr. J. B. MONCK remarked, that great good had been effected during the last Sessions of Parliament, by a judicious reduction of taxes, and many other useful measures; but above all, by that great and important feature of the Sessions, which regulated the summoning of the Juries, and secured to them more firmly the inestimable right of Trial by Jury. (Applause.) Here Mr. MONCK spoke in the highest terms of praise of the conduct of his Majesty's Ministers, and proceeded to notice the Corn Laws. He said, that that important subject had been broached during the last Sessions, but had been postponed at the request of Government. He was a landlord, but although he depended mainly on the dirty acres, he thought the present code too stiff, and that it required some material alteration. The restrictions, if imposed, were of doubtful benefit to the landlord, and decidedly injurious to the community at large. 'I promise,' said Mr. MONCK, 'that whatever measure his Majesty's Ministers may introduce into the House of Commons in the ensuing Session, shall have my support; I will not then be found among their opponents.'"

There will hardly be found a soul to believe that these two persons are the notorious partizans of CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION, the friends (as the humbug goes) of Religious Liberty, and the advocates of PARLIAMENTARY REFORM—yet such is the case: and the next time the trumpery cry of Popery is raised, it will excite no small curiosity, after these harangues, but particularly the concluding part of MR. MONCK's, to know how they will get out of the difficulty in which they are thus become entangled.

HARD TIMES.

The harvest is in, and the quarter's accounts
Shew a balance "in favor," in many amounts;
Our jails are all empty, diminished our crimes,
Still they keep up the cry of "such very HANN TIMES,"
Fol de rol lol.

PRINCE COBOURG, through want, was at last reconcil'd
To part with the clothes of his own ROYAL CHILD;
But as Paradise held her almost from her birth,
You must ask of that *Eden which held her on earth.
Fol de rol lol.

LORD DANLINGTON cannot afford to pay more
Than three thousand pounds for a horse, he's so poor;
But His LORNSHIP may yet perhaps better his lay,
As he spends amongst bettors the best of his day.
Fol de rol lol.

There's CHESTERFIELD too, though they titter and scoff,
Beyond any doubt is so wretchedly off,
That two thousand a year he can only bestow
For learning his dancing of MANAME LE GROS.
Fol de rol lol.

As his dear is so chaste, HUGHES was heard to remark
That no other deer should be chosed in his Park;
And unable his hunters to keep, we are told,
For ten pounds a piece has the best of them sold.†
Fol de rol lol.

LORD LONSDALE in his eye had some film, or some gnat,
(Not his "mind's eye," because there is nothing in THAT,)
But was so much distressed, he could get but about
"Five thousand" to give, for the getting it out.
Fol de rol lol.

There's CROCKFORD's so poor, having just had to pay
"Ten thousand" he lost on the Doncaster "Bay,"
That he vows for the future he cannot afford,
Either "hic, hæc, or hoc," for his next season's board.
Fol de rol lol.

ARBUTHNOT, unable to live on half pay,
To Doncaster went down, poor fellow, to lay
TEN TIMES his full pay against Memnon the Colt,
And because he was distanced, he managed to bolt.
Fol de rol lol.

One HUNT's so distress'd too, he's run off as well,
Having neither commission nor half pay to sell;
But being a BLACK LEG, pray don't understand,
'Tis the HUNT who sells BLACKING half way down the Strand.
Fol de rol lol.

Those epicures, who have so frequently wished
To see how GEORGE WARRENDER's table was dished,
Will grieve to hear GEORGE was so near dished, he took
A YOUNGER SON's income to pay a FRENCH COOK!
Fol de rol lol.

That GULLY, who late on the St. Leger won
More "Prize" than in all his prize battles was done!
Still so wants, it is feared, upon very good grounds,
He can't join, in his CARRIAGE, the BERKELEY Stag hounds.
Fol de rol lol.

The managers now are such paupers, they say,
Twenty pounds is the utmost per week they can pay;
But YOUNG and MISS FOOTE are so poor, they've thought right
To try and get elsewhere the SAME SUM per night!
Fol de rol lol.

All the talk of prosperity's humbug and cant,
When Actors can only get five pounds per rant,
Or when Singers can't get, so distressed are they grown,
But Fire NOTES of the BANK, for each note of their own.
Fol de rol lol.

At Derby, both SITMELL and GRESLY, whengybed,
To the Festival each TWENTY GUINEAS subscribed;
While poor STEPHENS, CARADORI, MISS WILKINSON too,
Gave but FIFTY POUNDS each, as the MOST they could do!
Fol de rol lol.

Your workmen, because they're in want as they say,
Have presented JOE HUME with a large silver tray,
That, though neither his talent nor fame are increas'd,
They may see one GOOD trait in their MEMBER at least.
Fol de rol lol.

When the poor dine each day, and can barely contrive
To get drunk every night, just to keep them alive—
When misfortunes so great as these visit our climes,
It's no wonder at all we've "such very HARD TIMES."
Fol de rol lol.

* MRS. EDEN, nurse to the late Princess Charlotte.
† See Martin's Letter to BALL HUGHES in the Morning Herald.

THEATRICALS.

NOTWITHSTANDING the success which has attended Mr. WARDE's appearance in London, we are compelled to say it is not judiciously followed up by the managers, and the object for which he was engaged is becoming a little more manifest; for if he is to be considered as Mr. YOUNG's substitute, what in the name of Heaven has Mr. KEMBLE to do with Hamlet, or Leon?—this is either bad policy, or injustice perhaps both. WARDE, from what we remember at the Haymarket, is the best Leon going.

The piece of Lilla, announced for representation, is by Mr. PLANCHE, the coronation chargé d'affaires, which has hitherto been delayed, owing to Messrs. COLNAGHI refusing to lend the artists of the Theatre any prints for the purpose of aiding their scenic attempts; and those who know any thing of that most respectable and obliging house, may be assured that nothing short of some violent insult could have induced them to withhold an assistance of such utmost importance. From the great aid they have at all times rendered the two theatres, Messrs. COLNAGHI have always possessed the privilege, trumpery as it is, of the entrée to both houses; but CAPTAIN FORBES went into the treasury the other morning, and without inquiring particularly about them, ordered their names to be struck off the privilege list; and though few will hardly believe it possible that the interests of a National Theatre are to be thus at the mercy of a large SEA CALF like this---yet so it is: the consequence was, they were all obliged to apologize for the insult, and so the affair ended.

A theatre, on the footing of the Variétés, Gaieté, or Vaudeoville of Paris, has long been a desideratum in this country, as affording a different species of entertainment to the amusements of the larger houses, and at the same time a great relief to all their pomp and pageantry; and we are glad to say that the opening of the Adelphi, under the direction of Messrs. TERRY and YATES, is likely to effect this very desirable object. We know no persons more qualified to render such a place of amusement prosperous, in the fullest sense of the word: they are both---scholars, gentlemen, and highly gifted artists; and while the literary and dramatic attainments of the former eminently capacitate him for the fulfilment of the important duties of its Stage manager, the other offices of the establishment will be with equal ability supported by the latter; in addition to which, the accession of such histrionic talents as they possess in their own persons, at once elevates the theatre quite beyond any character it was before entitled to. We are much delighted to record, that a success almost unparalleled has attended their first exertions, the receipts having netted something like 1,000*l.* for the six nights. The company is well selected, (we mean the dramatic one,) and the house really beautiful, although the dress circle, in spite of a Sunday contemporary's remark, is very little more like that of the Bath theatre, than it is like the Five's Court---except being both places for boxes. The little saloon is a perfect specimen of elegance and chastity, in its decorations---we will say nothing, in either point of view, of its inmates.

REVENUE.

Abstract 2 of the Income and Charge on the Consolidated Fund in the Quarters ended 10th October, 1824 and 1825.

INCOME.	Quarters ended Oct. 10. 1824.	1825.
	£	£
Customs	1,665,034	3,730,769
Excise	6,841,860	5,150,858
Stamps	1,759,680	1,823,519
Post Office	375,000	379,000
Taxes	481,005	474,433
Miscellaneous	79,113	76,379
	11,201,692	11,634,958
Surplus Third Class, Civil List	7,827
To Cash brought to this Account, to replace the like Sum issued out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, in Ireland, for Public Services	538,918	239,040
	11,748,437	11,873,998

CHARGE.	Quarters ended Oct. 10. 1824.	1825.
	£	£
Exchequer Annuities	21,256	21,256
South Sea Company	86,900	86,900
Bank on their Capital	179,125	179,125
Dividends	4,469,992	4,231,769
National Debt	1,212,000	1,212,000
Trustees for the payment of Naval and Military Pensions	1,400,000	1,400,000
Civil List	212,500	212,500
Pensions	93,799	96,530
Other Charges	383,624	419,920
	8,059,196	7,860,000
Surplus	3,689,241	4,013,998
	11,748,437	11,873,998
Exchequer Bills issued for the Consolidated Fund, at 5th July, 1825, and paid off out of the Growing Produce of that Fund in the Quarter ended Oct. 10, 1825		5,040,637
Surplus 10th Oct. 1825	4,013,998
Deduct
Issued out of the Consolidated Fund, on account of the Supplies granted for the service of the years 1824 and 1825	2,984,617
Total at 10th Oct. 1825, to be provided for by an issue of Exchequer Bills charged on the Growing Produce of the Consolidated Fund for the Quarter ending 5th January, 1826		1,029,381
		4,011,256

Abstract 3 of the Net Produce of the Revenue of Great Britain, in the Years and Quarters ended 10th October, 1824 and 1825, shewing the Increase or Decrease on each head thereof.

	Years ended 10th Oct. 1824.	1825.	Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£
Customs	10,278,243	14,306,152	4,027,909
Excise	24,319,852	21,620,714		2,699,138
Stamps	6,673,874	6,997,016	323,142
Post Office	1,439,000	1,501,000	62,000
Taxes	4,880,106	4,975,340	95,234
Miscellaneous	309,017	363,565	54,548
	47,900,092	49,763,787	4,562,832	2,699,138
Deduct Decrease			2,699,138
Increase on the Year			1,863,695

	Quarters ended Oct. 10. 1824.	1825.	Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£
Customs	3,240,272	5,278,455	2,038,183
Excise	7,113,017	5,154,858		1,958,159
Stamps	1,759,680	1,823,519	63,839
Post Office	375,000	379,000	4,000
Taxes	481,968	474,433		7,535
Miscellaneous	79,113	76,379		2,734
	13,049,050	13,186,644	2,106,022	1,968,428
Deduct Decrease			1,968,428
Increase on the Quart.			137,594

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Bow-street.—Information was on Wednesday lodged upon oath at this office, of the following extraordinary affair. Mr. R. S., a commercial Gentleman, (we are requested not to give his name at length for the present,) living in the vicinity of Cheapside, was travelling in Berkshire, and stopped on Saturday evening at Hungerford, and took up his abode pro. tem. at an inn called the Swans. In the travellers' room he found, solus, a gentleman of very imposing exterior, having much the appearance of a military man, and with him he got into conversation, and found him, in manners and conversation, a perfect gentleman, and altogether one of the most entertaining companions he had ever had the good fortune to meet with. He stated in the course of conversation that he had his horse there, and that being on a pleasureable tour, and liking the country thereabouts very much, he should stay for some days. They supped and spent the whole evening together, and retired to rest at the same time, occupying adjoining bedrooms. The following morning they breakfasted, and afterwards walked out together. They took the road towards Marlborough, and had gone some distance when they turned up a lane, into which they had not proceeded far, when the stranger suddenly drew a pistol from his pocket, and presenting it at the head of Mr. S. said "deliver!" Astonishment rivetted Mr. S. to the spot for a moment, but recovering himself a little he took to his heels and ran off with all his speed, followed by the stranger, who still kept the pistol levelled at him, and repeated several times the word "deliver." As Mr. S. was fast approaching some houses, he thought he no longer heard the footsteps of his pursuer, and venturing to look round, saw him making off in another direction.

When he returned to the Inn, he sent people off in different directions in pursuit of the stranger, but they could not overtake him. On Tuesday morning, two commercial travellers arriving at the Swans, at Hungerford, and hearing of what had occurred, and a description of the man, said the same person dined, supped, and slept at the Bear Inn, at Wantage, on Sunday, (the day the attack was made,) and that they spent the evening with him at that house. He left Wantage on Monday, having before he went out ordered dinner at the Bear, but he did not return, nor had he settled for his previous day's entertainment. Wantage is 15 miles from Hungerford, in a cross country direction. When the stranger left Wantage, he took the road to Newbury, but has not since been heard of. The following description of him may perhaps be serviceable:—He is about six feet high, has a light complexion, and a "singularly remarkable" (Mr. S.'s own words) Roman nose, thin, large, and very aquiline. His features are sharp and manly, and he is about 35 years of age. He had on a blue surtout, trowsers, and Wellington boots, and a black stock, and wore a watch chain suspended from his waistcoat pocket. He had altogether (Mr. S. says) the appearance, language, and manner of a military man. He came to Hungerford on horseback, and the horse (which is suspected to have been either stolen or borrowed) remains at the Swans in that town. A sharp look-out will be kept for him in various quarters.

ACADEMIC HONOURS.

One Mr. L. G. W. K. C. Klattorski, teacher of the French and German languages in Dr. Mosley's academy, at Little Ealing, complained to the Magistrates that he had been violently assaulted by two of the Doctor's pupils, Messieurs the Hon. A. Curzon, and Frederick Mansell; they having beat him on the bare head with the butt end of a heavy horsewhip, merely because he urged them to restore a valuable brooch of his, which, some time before, they had prevailed upon him to pawn, to raise money for their own use. He added, that upon his expressing his determination to seek redress for the outrage, by applying to the Magistrates at this office, Dr. Mosely endeavoured to dissuade him from so doing; and upon his persisting in his determination, the Doctor not only discharged him from his service, but said to him—"You will do no good by applying at Bow-street, for Sir Richard Birnie is my particular friend, and I shall write to him so as to stop your proceeding."

Sir R. Birnie heard this part of Mr. Klattorski's statement with no little surprise. "Sir Richard Birnie is the friend of no man who presumes to make use of his friendship as a bar to public justice," said the worthy Magistrate with much warmth; and a warrant was instantly granted against Messieurs the Hon. A. Curzon and Frederick Mansell.

They were accordingly brought before Sir Richard Birnie on Thursday night in custody of an officer; and they came attended by Dr. Mosely and a solicitor.

Mr. Klattorski had requested that a nephew of the late General Riego and a son of Mr. Hurtado, who are also pupils of Dr. Mosely's, might be requested to attend as witnesses on his behalf; but they did not come forward.

Mr. Klattorski having detailed his complaint, much in the same way as we have already stated it, Sir Richard Birnie asked Messieurs the Hon. A. Curzon and Frederick Mansell (a couple of strapping youths of seventeen, or thereabout) what they had to say in their defence; but, like prudent young gentlemen, they declined saying any thing at all—referring their defence entirely to the solicitor and Dr. Mosely. Sir Richard Birnie, however, declined to listen to the solicitor, as he knew nothing at all about the matter, and therefore the defence devolved upon Dr. Mosely, who seemed to be almost as much in the dark as the solicitor—inasmuch as he had not witnessed the origin of the affray. He said, that upon hearing a great noise in Mr. Klattorski's room, he went up, and found Mr. Klattorski holding the Hon. A. Curzon by the hair of his head with one hand, and Mr. Frederick Mansell by the hair of his head with the other—"in this manner," said the worthy Doctor, illustrating his description by seizing the young gentlemen, each by the poll, whilst they courteously stooped a little, so as to allow the worthy Doctor to give his illustration more conveniently—for they were something too tall for him. The illustration having been duly noted by the Magistrate, the worthy Doctor relinquished his hold, and proceeded to state that he immediately separated the young gentlemen from the enraged tutor, and they went down stairs; and that, though they afterwards went up again, with a horsewhip, for the purpose of demanding an apology, they carried the horsewhip concealed behind the back of one of them, and did not make use of it until Mr. Klattorski had struck one of them.

"How do you know that?" asked Sir Richard Birnie.

"They told me so," replied Dr. Mosely.

"Then, in fact you do not know it of your own knowledge," rejoined Sir Richard, "and I hardly every knew a person accused of assaulting another, who did not declare that the accuser was the aggressor."

Mr. Klattorski protested that he did not strike either of them.

Dr. Mosely affirmed that he did strike Mr. Mansell on the head with a poker, and that Mr. Mansell lost nearly a pint of blood in consequence.

Mr. Klattorski solemnly affirmed that he did not strike. "Whilst they were beating me," said he, "somebody put the poker in my hand, but I did not strike any body with it."

The Solicitor now ventured to join Dr. Mosely in commenting on the well-known irritability of Mr. Klattorski's temperament, and a rather stormy altercation was just beginning, when Sir Richard "nipp'd it in the bud" as it were, by declaring he would not listen to anything which was not immediately connected with the assault complained of.

This brought the parties to a "dead stand," and Sir Richard taking advantage of it, said to Mr. Klattorski: "It is the custom in this country for the accuser to repeat the whole of his complaint in the presence of the accused, and I am willing to make you every allowance as a foreigner unacquainted with our customs, but you have not stated quite so much as you did when you applied for a warrant against these young men. You then said that Dr. Mosely had threatened to write to me to stay your proceeding."

"Yes, Sir, he did," cried Mr. Klattorski; "he said Richard Birnie was his particular friend, and that he would write to him, so that it should cost me 5*l.* at Bow-street, without producing me any advantage."

"I beg your pardon," said Dr. Mosely, "that is not true—I told you, if you were determined to go to Bow-street, it would be very disadvantageous to you, as I should certainly discharge you from my house, and should also write to Sir Richard Birnie to inform him of all the circumstances."

"Which you did not do," said Sir Richard Birnie.

Dr. Mosely bowed assent.

"And if you had," continued Sir Richard, "it would have been highly improper, (Dr. Mosely bowed again,) and, what is worse, it would have been extremely impertinent—(Dr. Mosely bowed again, but not so low as before.) I will have no intervention between me and common justice," continued the worthy magistrate, "be the parties whom they may. It is not because this person is a foreigner that justice is to be denied him—the laws are as open to him as to a native of this country, however high the rank of his aggressors; and as it is evident that he has been assaulted by these young men, for no satisfactory defence whatever has been set up, I shall require them to put in bail to answer his indictment at the ensuing sessions."

They were accordingly held to bail in the ordinary sums for common assault, to wit, 20*l.* and two housekeepers in 10*l.* each; Sir Richard observing that he would not honour them by requiring extraordinary sureties. It is but right we should add that the friends of the gentlemanly youths avowed their intention of preferring a cross indictment; so the gentlemen of the long black robe may expect something to do.

Hatton-Garden.—A dame of quality, whose family name of Creed has long since been sunk in the assumed titles of Duchess of Wellington and Lady Castlereagh, &c. and who, previous to the date of her patent of nobility, was generally known in the Courts about Gray's-inn-lane by the name of the Hon. Mrs. Peel, came voluntarily to the outer office for the purpose of making a very interesting inquiry, viz.- whether a certain gentleman (or rather three parts of one, the remaining fourth being composed of wood) had been applying for a warrant against her. From her statement, it appeared that she and her wooden-legged friend had been solacing themselves in converse sweet, over a pot of stout at a symposium in the neighbourhood, and all went on smoothly, till unfortunately in their recurrence to days of "auld lang syne," the "gentleman" asked after the health of her son, who some few years since had received a license from his Majesty's Secretary of State for the Home Department to "travel for his country's good." Kindly as this interest in the fate of her progeny might be intended, the worthy matron it seems thought otherwise, and considered the question concerning the voyageur as a piece of great impertinence, and a personal reflection. This her "honour could not brook;" so declaring that she would rather die on a scaffold than be "twitted" with the nature of "young Master Launcelot's" mission to Sidney Cove, she seized the "fancy stirring bowl" from which they had been mutually quaffing, and, with a well-directed smeller, brought her Crowdero to the ground. Having him at this advantage, she used it "not wisely, but too well;" for bestriding him like another Trulla, to unbuckle his wooden leg was but the work of a moment, and to break its owner's head with his own piece of timber, that of another. Her conquest was complete, but even at the heels of victory trod remorse, and the bitter reflection of what might follow now damped her triumph, and made her laurels sit uneasily. In the first moment of elation, she had thrown the leg, at once the instrument and the spolia opima of the fight, in the face of her frightened thrall, and quitted the field, leaving him "alone in his glory;" but soon she recollected, that it is only to a retreating enemy that a bridge of gold or a wooden leg should be afforded, and fearing lest the first use her battered beau would make of his recovered limb would be to hop on it to Hatton-Garden, she, with that celerity of decision which is the characteristic of great minds, resolved to anticipate him, and by a forced march certainly succeeded in reaching the point proposed before him. He had not yet arrived, and after waiting for some time in vain for his appearance, her Grace retired, expressing the strong dislike she felt to litigation, and commissioned Lee to make overtures of peace, on the basis of statu quo ante bellum, viz. a plaister and a pot of Perkins, to be furnished at the expense of her, the said high contracting party, with indemnity for the past, and security for the future. A subsidy to the mediator was, however, we understand, forgotten to be inserted in the treaty, and there is, of course, no speculating on the event of the negociation.

A curious instance of a temporizing conscience took place afterwards before the Magistrate. A respectably dressed female had applied to make some affidavit, necessary for the purpose of receiving a pension. The oath was read over to her, when she returned the book, without kissing it, saying, that on second thoughts she would rather not take the oath just now, as she was in the family way.

Guildhall.—This office was crowded with respectable tradesmen on Thursday to hear the re-examination of three individuals who had been in custody a few days on the charge of swindling divers persons out of parcels of goods. The names given by the prisoners were, Henry Yates, Jonathan Thomas Johnson, and James Hunter Gray. The inquiry was pursued by Mr. Alderman Birch, as to three out of a number of cases with great diligence, and occupied upwards of three hours. Mr. P. Hurd attended on the part of Yates, some of whose relatives move in the first circles, and Mr. Butler, Mr. Harmer's clerk, for Johnson.

The circumstances, as detailed in evidence, were these:—Some time in July last, Yates hired a counting-house at No. 205, Upper Thames-street, and towards the end of the following month, another at No. 7, Sherbourne-lane. At each of these Johnson and Gray were almost daily attendants—Gray, who is a gentlemanly-looking old man, in the capacity of clerk, and Johnson appearing to take part in the business, without having any particular line of duty marked out.

On the 23d of September Yates favoured Mr. Dorman, an extensive glass-dealer, in Rathbone-place, with a call. He selected an elegant suite of decanters, tumblers, &c. talked about leaving town in his carriage, and ordered the articles to be sent by three o'clock to Sherbourne-lane, when they would be paid for. The lad who was sent with the goods was directed not to leave them unless he was paid according to Mr. Yates's promise. At the counting-house he found Gray and Johnson, and presented the bill and receipt to the latter, who returned them, saying he had no orders to pay. Gray said he supposed the articles were for Mr. Yates's use in the country; that they might be left, and that it was quite uncertain when he would be there. The lad, however, seemed so determined to take away the goods, that Mr. Yates found it convenient to make his appearance almost instantly. He inquired about the packing, &c. and observed, as to the money, he was going to Bedford-square on the following day (Saturday), and would leave a check at Mr. Dorman's by twelve o'clock. The lad thrice refused to part with the goods upon any such assurances; but upon Mr. Yates becoming extremely angry, and speaking of having dealt with Mr. Dorman a great number of years, the young man became alarmed lest he should seriously offend one of his master's good old customers, and Mr. Dorman being at some distance from London, he did not see how he could ascertain the truth of Mr. Yates's assertions in convenient time. He therefore left the articles, with which, it appears, Johnson was immediately despatched to the pawnbroker's, in London-wall, where he pledged them for 6*l.* being less than half their value. In his way, however, Johnson encountered Acott and Grouett, two of the city police, who being perfectly acquainted with him, stopped and insisted on knowing how he came by the property, followed him to the pawnbroker's, and did not quit him till by his explanations, and by inquiry in Sherbourne-lane, they obtained such information from Gray as satisfied them that it would be impolitic to offer any further obstruction. But hearing of Johnson's apprehension, they resumed the inquiry, stopped the glass at the pawnbroker's, and discovered the owner. Mr. Dorman's lad was, in the mean time, a pretty constant visitor at the counting-house in quest of Mr. Yates, until on Wednesday last he found the place entirely deserted.

The second case was that of Mr. Dunnett, the toyman, at the corner of Paternoster-row, whose shop Yates visited on Tuesday the 6th inst., and looked out a backgammon-board, a set of chess and draughtsmen, and two dice-boxes, altogether of the value of about 10 guineas. Here he represented himself to be Mr. Craigs, of the firm of Craigs and Co., 205, Upper Thames-street, and ordered the goods to be taken to his counting-house there. Mr. Dunnett was determined not to part with the goods without having payment for them, and very cautiously accompanied his porter. Upon reaching the house, he found Johnson and Gray, who expressed their astonishment that he did not meet Mr. Craigs, who had just quitted the place, but said he might leave the articles if he chose. He, however, took the prudent resolution to carry them home again, and call in the morning. On Wednesday morning, Mr. Dunnett went down to the counting-house again himself; Mr. Craigs, however, had not arrived, and he left the least valuable parcel, containing the backgammon board, returned home, and sent the porter with the rest of the articles, giving him a strict injunction to bring away the goods if he could not get the money. The porter, however, disobeyed this order, for being told by Gray that Mr. Craigs was not yet arrived, and was probably detained on 'Change, where he might be found on the Hambro' Walk, or at the Hambro' Coffee-house, he left his parcel also, saying he would return at two o'clock, at which hour he was assured he would receive either the goods or the money. Upon hearing this result, Mr. Dunnett hastened to the spot himself, and with his porter spent several hours in watching in and about the premises.

A fresh case of fraud came to Mr. Dunnett's knowledge on the next (Thursday) morning, and he had for a companion for some time the porter to Mr. Wyer, of 341, Oxford-street, trunk-maker, who had left a Russia-leather dressing-case; and a writing-desk of the value of 16*l.* 10s., on the previous night.

Eleven witnesses were examined to substantiate the ordering of the abovenamed goods by Yates, the receiving of them by Gray, and the participation in keeping up the delusion by Johnson; and upon the owners of the property respectively swearing that they had never contemplated parting with it, except in exchange for cash, the Alderman made up his mind to commit all the prisoners for felony, as for stealing the articles.

The solicitors for Johnson and Yates said, they would reserve their defence, but Gray addressed the Alderman, stating, that he had only acted as a servant to Yates, whom he believed to be a respectable man, and this belief was grounded on his being sent by him to Messrs. Smith, Payne and Co.'s, twice to beg a frank, when Mr. Smith inquired after Yates, as if he was an intimate acquaintance. He was also sent to Sir William Curtis on a similar errand, and was attended to very politely by Mr. Robarts. With his pittance of 1*l.* a-week, as a clerk, and his own little property, he was above the temptation to do wrong.

Mr. Alderman Birch finally remanded the prisoners till Saturday with a full determination to commit them, and not to enter into any further charges..

ACCIDENTS, OFFENCES, &c.

DREADFUL FIRE.—Tuesday morning, about half-past twelve o'clock, an alarming fire broke out on the premises of Mr. Field, carpenter and cabinet-maker, Charles-street, Hoxton-square, which soon communicated to the whole of the work-shops, with the carver and gilder's adjoining, and threatened destruction to the neighbourhood. Several engines, which were returning from a fire in Worship-street, Norton-folgate, were promptly on the spot, and after a short time got a plentiful supply of water, and succeeded in confining the flames to the premises above-mentioned, which were reduced to a heap of ruins.

ALARMING FIRE.—On Sunday evening, between ten and eleven o'clock, an alarming fire was discovered in the house of Mr. Macleod, of Upper Barlow-street, Westminster, by some of the passengers in the street; the family were at a friend's house in the neighbourhood, and before they had arrived an entrance-was obtained by the watchman, and the lower part of the house was in flames, which were rapidly ascending. Every exertion was made as the family were not insured, and a considerable portion of property was saved. The flames burst through the first floor, and were rapidly gutting the house, when their progress was checked by a great body of water being thrown upon them, and in less than an hour the fire was totally subdued without doing further damage. A man, in endeavouring to rescue some of the property, was dreadfully scorched.

On Thursday morning, about one o'clock, a fire broke out in the upper room of Messrs. Creighton's machine manufactory, Lower Mosley-street, Manchester. In a short time the flames burst through the roof, and illuminated all the neighbourhood with their glare.—The engines arrived very soon after the fire was discovered, but none of them were able to project a stream of water with any effect so high as the upper story. Little apprehension, however, of the lower rooms were entertained, for the building was fire-proof, and there was no probability that the flames would be communicated to them, unless the weight of the slates and the beams of the roof broke down the arches which supported the tiled floor. This fortunately did not happen, and the damage was confined to the room in which the fire originated. It was filled, we understand, with fustian looms, belonging to Messrs. Collins and Co. whose loss may probably amount to 1,000*l.* or 1,500*l.*

On Saturday, Alfred Flowers, who was committed from the Police-office, Mary-la-bonne, to the New Prison, Clerkenwell, for an assault on Mary Sullivan, by kicking her, in Oxford-street, and detained on the Coroner's warrant for causing the death of her infant, with whom she was pregnant, was brought from prison by virtue of a Judge's warrant and writ of Habeas Corpus, before the Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, at his residence, at Hendon, Middlesex, where he was admitted to bail for his appearance to take his trial at the next Session for the manslaughter, himself in 500*l.* and four sureties in 100*l.* each, and for the assault, himself in 80*l.* and two sureties in 20*l.* each.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—About four o'clock, on Tuesday afternoon, one of the labourers employed in the repairs and improvements on the front of the house of Mr. Blades, glass manufacturer, of Ludgate-hill, fell from the scaffolding, the height of the second floor, by which his skull was so dreadfully fractured, as to cause his death on the way to the Hospital.

SUDDEN DEATH.—Tuesday afternoon, a porter, in the employ of Mr. Gilmore, tea-dealer, in St. Swithin's-lane, Cannon-street, passing the end of Finch-lane, Threadneedle street, carrying a chest of tea, fell down, and expired.

LAMENTABLE DEATH OF MR. HAYWARD, OF PECKHAM.—On Monday afternoon a Coroner's Inquest was held at the Lord Wellington, in the Kent-road, before Richard Carter, Esq., on the body of Mr. Robert Hayward, late proprietor of the Blue Anchor Tavern, at Peckham. Many of the Jury, who had known the deceased several years, were deeply affected, even to tears, on beholding his lifeless corpse. They all declared him to have been in a feeble state, and his mind particularly nervous. Verdict—"That the deceased was found drowned in the canal; but whether by accident or otherwise, does not appear to the Jurors."

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE BY OXALIC ACID.—On Monday evening an inquisition was held before Richard Carter, Esq., the Surrey Coroner, at the Albany Arms Tavern, Albany-road, Camberwell, on the body of Sarab Crutchfield, aged 26, who destroyed herself by taking oxalic acid. The Jury, after viewing the body, returned a verdict, "Died by taking poison while in a fit of temporary derangement."

FATAL ACCIDENT.—On Friday night, between ten and eleven o'clock, as Mr. W. Haddersich, son of a gentleman of large fortune, residing at Rickerscote, near Stafford, was returning from Rugeley Races, and had arrived at Silkmore-lane, about a mile from his father's house, the horse on which he rode became restive, and in his endeavours to manage him he was carried with great violence against a tree, by which he received so severe a blow upon his head that he was thrown from the saddle, and killed on the spot. The horse galloping home, alarmed the family, some of whom immediately proceeded to the place, and one of the first to discover the lifeless body was his agonized father, who is thus bereaved of an only child. The unfortunate young man was about 25 years of age. A few minutes only before the melancholy catastrophe he had parted with some friends, who had accompanied him from the races.

Thursday, about 12 o'clock, as Mr. Boycott, one of the partners of the house of Messrs. Rogers, Towgood, and Co. of St. Clement's-lane, Lombard-street, was passing through the Strand, near the Adelphi Theatre, with a great amount of property in his possession, he was suddenly seized with an epileptic fit, and dropped senseless amidst the crowd. Fortunately, a Mr Vaughan had the presence of mind to have him conveyed to the wine-vaults adjoining, where every attention was paid the gentleman; Mr. Vaughan then saw him safe to his friends, and had the pleasure of receiving their thanks for his attentions.

Miss Morgan, one of the most dashing courtezans in the lobbies of Drury-lane Theatre, and the pride of a young city banker, poisoned herself on Wednesday at her lodging in Queen-street, Hampstead New Road. She was much addicted to drinking, and was in the most abject poverty. She had taken a dose of oxalic acid, part of which was found in her wretched apartments. The deceased was a native of Warwinster, Wiltshire, of respectable parents, in trade, and she left there about two years since at eighteen years of age. She died a victim to disappointment and disease, as well as poverty.

We grieve to record a melancholy accident, which occurred at Portpatrick on the morning of Tuesday the 4th current. To enable the steam packets to get out more speedily, they have the benefit of a rope from the north side of the harbour, and, by some unaccountable accident, after H. M. packet Dasher had let the rope go, it got foul of her wheels, and coiled round them so closely, as to cause the vessel to graze, as it were, and lean against the north rocks. The mistake admitted of a speedy remedy, but though there was no real danger, a scene of confusion took place on deck. One poor woman who leapt on the rocks got her leg dreadfully shattered, and though it was skilfully amputated the same night, we regret to state that she did not long survive the operation. A male passenger, who also leaped out, had his arm broken; and these were the whole casualties that ensued—casualties that arose entirely from fear, for had the individuals mentioned remained on board, not a hair of their heads would have been harmed.—Dumfries Courier.

FIRE AT SCARISBRICK HALL.—On Wednesday evening a fire broke out at Scarisbriek Hall, which, for some time, threatened destruction to the whole of that ancient pile of building. The alterations and improvements, which have been going on for several years, were nearly completed; and the workmen had on that day made preparations for nailing down the floor of a large room, in the western wing of the mansion, by burning the shavings, &c. in a chimney, the construction of which seems not to have been properly attended to, for the blaze set fire to the end of a beam let into the chimney, and so communicated to the roof, which in that part was totally destroyed. The family and visiters were retiring to rest about half-past ten o'clock, when the fire was discovered. The tenantry in the immediate vicinity quickly assembled at the sound of the great Hall bell, and a messenger was despatched to Ormskirk (a distance of about three miles) for the fire engine, which arrived, and was got into play as soon as possible. Mr. Scarisbrick, with his brother, Mr. Dicconson, and the two Messrs. Fitzherbert, who happened to be staying in the house, used great personal exertions, and directed the labours of the servants and tenants with judgment, until the engine arrived, and the progress of the flames was finally arrested about three o'clock on Thursday morning. The fire was prevented from reaching the main part of the house, but the danger was considered so threatening, that the furniture and valuables were removed from every room in the mansion. Mrs. Scarisbrick, and the females of the establishment, were greatly alarmed, but we do not hear that any personal accident has occurred. The house is insured.—Liverpool Advertiser.

SUDDEN DEATH.—A few days ago, an elderly man named Stevens, who was a watchman in North-street, near the Lunatic Asylum, Lambeth, was discovered by his wife lying dead on his beat. The poor woman had arisen about five o'clock in the morning, and on her husband not having returned, it being past the usual time that he came home, she set out in search of him, and found him a corpse on the road. It is believed that the deceased fell down in an apoplectic fit, of which he died in a few minutes. His body was quite cold when discovered.

On Thursday last, as a gardener of the name of Clarkson, nearly 70 years of age, was gathering walnuts, at Upminster Hill, in this county, he fell a considerable height, and was so dreadfully injured as to survive the accident but a few minutes. He had a very short time before missed his hold, and was then only saved by his foot catching in one of the branches, from which he was with difficulty extricated; but although requested not to ascend again, he obstinately persisted.—Chelmsford Chronicle.

MOST MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.—During a heavy squall of wind at Lytham, Lancashire, on Friday last, a small boat, in which were two men, upset; one of whom, Jonathan Brakell, clung some time to the hull, in which dreadful situation he was seen by two of his daughters, who endeavoured in vain to save him. The crew of another boat also attempted to rescue him, but were unable to reach before he sunk to rise no more. They, however, succeeded in bringing off the opposite bank about thirty individuals who were gathering cockels, and who were thus saved from impending ruin. Brakell has left a wife and family to mourn his loss. The other man who was with Brakell, is named Richard Crookall, and being very lame was utterly unable to assist himself, and consequently perished immediately after the boat upset.—Bradford Courier.

A distressing accident occurred on Tuesday afternoon. As a poor fellow named Wm. Partis, was assisting others to unload porter at the Castle Inn, in this city, a butt, which he was alone getting to the edge of the waggon towards the pully, was, by a sudden pull, flung from off its balance, and throwing the man on the pully, came in contact with his leg, as it hung on the cross-iron, and crushed it in a manner too shocking to describe. Partis received every assistance it was possible to render him in his situation. Mr. Scudamore, surgeon, came to his immediate aid, and after his leg had been bound up, he was conveyed to the Kent and Canterbury Hospital; and although the poor fellow is suffering the most excruciating agony, we are happy to state that a hope exists he will not be obliged to suffer amputation.—Kent Gazette.

COMBINATIONS.

An incorrect account of the proceedings at the Associated Masters' Meeting, on Friday last, having appeared, we think it right to observe, that they met on that morning, at ten o'clock, in the Court House, M. Thompson, Esq. in the Chair. It was the time appointed for every manufacturer to deliver in a list of his workmen, who had turned out and joined the Union, and also a list of those men who had since turned in and left it. It appeared from their statements, that the number of men who had turned out was (exclusive of those of Mr. Fawcett, Messrs. Garnett, and Mr. Firth, who are now in employ) 2714; and the number of those who have returned to their work, and left the Union, only 32. After a conversation of some length, two Resolutions were passed—the one nominating a Committee of four Gentlemen, Messrs. Thompson, Lister, Rand, and another, to prepare information on the subject of "turn outs" for publication, and to publish statements accordingly, as circumstances should suggest. It is apparent that the nature of the contest now begins to assume a new aspect, and that the "molestation" suffered by some of the men, is the commencement of the catastrophe. We received the following letters last night:—

"Bradford, Oct. 12, 1825.

"The contest between the masters and workmen has existed so long, and acquired so much an appearance of permanency, that it has almost ceased to be considered any other than as a matter of course. Besides what you are acquainted with already, I have to mention, that three men were apprehended here, by a warrant from Mr. Stocks, on a charge of molesting a man who had left the Union, and returned to his employment, on Tuesday last; but, on the appearance of the parties before the magistrates, the complaint was discharged."

"Halifax, Oct. 12, 1825.

"It is stated that a number of Operatives in this neighbourhood are coming to their senses, some having signed the engagement required by the masters, not to contribute to the Union, and consequently been admitted to work again. Others, however, appear to be making a grand push for a lengthened stand out, having scoured this town in endeavouring to obtain the necessary funds; but with what success I am not able to state."

"Keighley, Oct. 12, 1825.

"Nothing worthy of notice has, this week, transpired concerning the Combers and Weavers' Union, in this town. Should the trade continue in its present depressed state a few weeks longer, the general opinion is, that hundreds of the above class will be out of employ in this neighbourhood."

"Huddersfield, Oct. 12, 1825.

"There have been no meetings either of Masters or Men since I last wrote to you. The opinions of the people here (both in and out of trade,) upon the Union, are various, according as the respective parties are interested and affected by Combination. The radicals speak in just terms of indignation against it,"

N. B. At the meeting of Operatives held yestesday week at Barstow Hill, near Halifax, it will be seen from our report, that a person of the name of Benjamin Robins made a speech, abusing the clergy. We have the best authority for saying, that this very Robins receives three shillings per week from St. James's parish, London, and has done so since February 7, 1824. The officers of that parish will doubtless be pleased to learn how their paupers employ themselves in this part of the country.

REBUILDING OF ST. PAUL'S AT ROME.—This Church (one of the oldest Christian temples in Rome) was burnt down not many months back. Cardinal Somaglia, the Dean of the Sacred College, President of the Commission for rebuilding this Church, has lately sent a begging letter to all the Ambassadors and other Diplomatic Agents at Rome, telling them that his Holiness will receive with pleasure all the gifts from the faithful of different parts of the globe for the rebuilding of the Church; but that no alteration is to be made in the plan, except such as the Academy of St. Luc shall find necessary.

THE ARMY.

The second division of the 39th Regiment of Infantry, sailed on board the Duchess of York transport, on the 4th instant, from Cork for Chatham.

The Depot of the 89th Regiment of Foot, has marched from Canterbury for Dover.

Detachments belonging to the 3d Regiment of Guards, and the 97th Regiment of Infantry, embarked on the 29th ult. under the command of Staff Serjeant Beardmore, from Dublin, for England.

Detachments belonging to the 12th, 13th, 18th, 21st, 27th, 30th, 31st, 36th, 38th, 39th, 41st, 43d, 44th, 45th, 47th, 48th, 53d, 57th, 59th, 70th, 83d, 87th, 89th, 96th, and 99th Regiments of Foot, the Royal Staff Corps, and the Royal African Colonial Corps, embarked on the 30th ult. under the command of Staff Serjeant O'Doherty, at Dublin, for England.

Detachments belonging to the 5th, 15th, 16th, 18th, 28th, 30th, 36th, 41st, 46th, 47th, 48th, 60th, 83d, 85th, 95th, and 97th Regiments of Foot, embarked on the 4th instant, under the command of Staff Serjeant Hallinan, at Cork, for England.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 150, Strand.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence, long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, his peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every Operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY OF GREAT BRITAIN, and most of the Nobility and Gentry use now PRINCE'S celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints: but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even many medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Grant has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair.—Also a Gentleman, turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark: it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oils it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children, and if used constantly not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair, will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying—'Tell the truth, and fear nobody.' If persons are bald, and the roots are entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone, by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely, if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil—the Ounce Bottle 5s.; a large bottle containing Five Ounces, 1*l.* which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-Street, Oxford Street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose.—Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses, with counterfeit Russia Oil, saying it is the genuine.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH OF HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if grey, radically to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PERRY, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1*l.* forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a physician and botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet Market.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are peculiarly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½*d* and 2s. 9*d.* each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street, and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Holles street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, No. 1, and Yarde, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom, Mr. Renard, No. 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. STIRLING, Chemist, &c. No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel, and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each.—Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling," on the Stamp Label, with his own writing.

BURGESS' ESSENCE OF ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, Corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above;—the general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection, J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies:"—others "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.—Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes, having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce—will keep good in all climates.—Warehouse, No. 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish Sauce Warehouse.

MOURNING.

DR. WINN'S TRUE ANTICARDIUM PARIS BLACK or BLUE REVIVER, which is so much esteemed for its excellent qualities and superiority over all other Compositions that have been offered to the Public. It has the wonderful effect of restoring, in a few minutes, every description of Ladies and Gentlemen's faded Mourning, Black Hats and Coats, Silk Stockings, Crape, Lace, Silks, Muslins, Cotton, Jean Boots, &c. without injuring the texture of the most delicate article; it removes dirt and grease, will retain its virtues in all climates, and for any length of time.

T. PRICE, Oilman, near the Bricklayer's Arms, Kent-road, London, begs leave to assure persons who constantly use the above Article for restoring Gentlemen's faded Suits, that he is the sole possessor of the Receipt for preparing the invaluable and justly celebrated Mourning Reviver: and, as a proof of its rare and excellent qualities, begs to state, that he has had the most unprecedented demand for it during the last 20 years.

May be had at the Proprietor's Oil and Colour Warehouse; and, Wholesale, of Messrs. T. and C. Butler, 4, Cheapside, and 220, Regent-street, London: 20, Waterloo-place, Edinburgh; and 34, Sackville-street, Dublin; at Messrs. Barclay and Son's Medicine Warehouse, Fleet-market; Mr. Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Messrs. Sutton and Co. Bow Church-yard; and, Retail, by all the principal Oilmen, Druggists, &c. in Town and Country.

BRADBERRY'S PATENT SPECTACLES, upon unerring principles, to preserve the sight to extreme old age. It is necessary to caution the public against the use of improper Spectacles, as their effects prove injurious, instead of beneficial to the eye. The unremitted and anxious study Mr. BRADBERRY has paid to his glasses for upwards of 30 years, has called forth the most distinguished approbation of their merit from the medical profession, and from many thousands of persons of the highest rank and respectability.—To be had only at 38, Holles-street, the first door out of Oxford-street, next to the large Fruiterer's at the corner, facing Hanover-square, and at no other place in the United Kingdom. Orders from the country immediately attended to. Removed from 332, Oxford-street.

BLOW UP
WEEN THE MARQUIS OF HERTFORD AND LORD DARLINGTON.

The annals of borough electioneering in this county e seldom produced an instance of more violent party ing than now exists in the borough of Camelford.--- e EARL OF DARLINGTON possesses the fee-simple of t of the lands in the borough, and is, of course, the ron. He has been for several years opposed by the RQUIS OF HERTFORD, who has got possession of ne houses in the place, which are held by his friends: ongst these houses is one of which a partisan of the RQUIS has a lease for three lives, and to which a garden ttached. In this garden a house was erected for the rpose of accommodating certain of the Hertfordians, o are electors, and who, there was reason to believe, uld be ejected from their present residences by the BLE EARL. The progress of this building was care- ly watched, and as soon as it was covered in, a party miners entered the gardens and commenced sinking a ft in search of ore near the newly-erected house. Af- they had sunk the shaft to some depth, they found it pedient to commence an adit, which they drove under building, and where they experienced any difficulty their progress, they resorted to the usual mode of blast- . This last measure was fatal to the project of the rtfordians; a few explosions of GUNPOWDER in the terranean passage underneath, shook the house to the ndation, and it is now a heap of ruins!---West Briton.

 It appears in Moore's Life of Sheridan ,that it was a matter of at surprise to his friends by what means he raised the money to chase the eighth share of Drury Lane; various surmises have n raised: it was supposed by some Dr. Ford advanced the money, it has been thought Garrick had assisted him; it appears, from rring to the books of RICHARDSON and Co. Charing Cross, that he year 1779 they sold to him the Ticket 15,175, a Prize of 10,000*l.* cret which, from his usual habits, he carefully concealed from his nds: this money was therefore ready before the purchase was ef- ed, and may solve the problem how Sheridan, who at that time had visible means, completed the purchase.

FROM LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

War-Office, 14th Oct. 1825.

th Regt. of Foot, Brevet Lieut.-Col. W. Dunbar to be major, vice Valiant—80th , F. H. Graham to be ensign, vice Cood—96th ditto, Ensign C B. Cumberland e lieutenant, vice Ouseley—Royal African Colonial Corps, E. Cooke to be gn, vice Calder, promoted—Unattached—Lieut. T. Stevenson to be captain of ntry: Ensign T. Cood to be lieutenant of Infantry.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY.

YORSTON, Tottenham-court-road, cheesemonger.

BANKRUPTS.

HOBBS and W. S. HELLYER, Redbridge, Southampton, ship-builders. Sol. Dyne, 61, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

. I. JOHNS, Devonport, banker. Sol. Mr. H. W. Sole, 7, Gray's-inn-square.

G. PAIN, Lloyd's Coffee-house, underwriter. Sols. Messrs. Sandys and Sons, e-court, Fleet-street.

DOBSON, Hesketh-with-Becconsall, Lancaster, grocer. Sols. Messrs. Blake- and Plowman, Sergeant's-inn.

JACOBS, Windsor, jeweller. Sol. Messrs. E. Isaacs, Bury-street, St. Mary-axe.

S. BRINLEY, Birchin-lane, ship and insurance-broker. Sols. Messrs. Freeman Heathcote, Coleman-street.

COLLENS, Pall-mall, man-milliner. Sol. Mr. Wm. a Beckett, Golden-square.

DICKINSON, Church-passage, Guildhall, warehouseman Sols. Messrs. Free- and Heathcote, Coleman-street.

KING, Bermondsey New road, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. D. Jones, Size-lane.

MILLIN, Berkeley-square, shoemaker. Sol. Mr. Hill, Welbeck-street, Cavendish-square.

DIVIDENDS.

ov. 5, R. Doushery, Bell-lane, Spitalfields, mustard-manufacturer—Nov. 5, P. Compton, Beckenham, Kent, farmer—Nov. 10, R. Bowman, Liverpool, sail- er—Nov. 5, W. Oldacres, Lea-Grange, Twycross, farmer and maltster—Nov. 5, hompson and W. Walker, Wolverhampton, drapers and tea-dealers—Nov. 5, J. mpson and W. Walker, Wolverhampton, drapers and tea dealers—Nov. 5, N. inger, Liverpool, haberdasher—Nov. 5, G. Kenning, Church-street, Spitalfields, nao—Nov. 5, J. Laughton, Arbour-square, Commercial-square, master-mariner ov. 5, W. Williams, Amen-corner. bookseller—E. C. Fyffe, Cavendish-street, land-place, grocer—Nov. 5, A. Sinclair, Castle-court, Birchin lane, merchant— 8, J. Hyde, Winchester, grocer—Nov. 9, W. Quirk, Liverpool, ale aod beer er—Nov. 7, J. Clark, Trowbridge, linen-draper.

CERTIFICATES.—Nov. 5.

Forsyth, Eden-court, Carlisle, draper—J. R. Seager, Palmer-street, Stepney, ther and glazier—W. Marsh, J. H. Stracey, G. E. Graham, Berner's-street, ers—W. Marsh, J. H. Stracey, G. E. Graham, Berner's-street, bankers—J. ford, Egham, baker—J. Ashby and W. Tobitt, Lewes, millers.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

Newman and W. Steel, Cumberland-mews, Mary-le-bone, stable keepers— eame and W. D. Wildish, Canterbury, wine and spirit merchants—N. V. Lee, ve, W. B. Vye, and E. Gaydon, Ilfracombe, Devon, bankers—J. H. Teulon and richta, merchants—V. F. Rivaz, C. R. Harford, and A. H. Rivaz, Lloyd's Coffee- e, insurance brokers—T. Parker, S. Stocks, jun. and W. Wilson, Manchester, o-spinners—W. Jackson and W. Lay, jun. Colchester, auctioneers—J. Crowe W. Downey, Liverpool, sail-makers—J. Holman and W. R. Dunnett, Friday- e, silk warehousemen—G. Hubbard and W. Keys, Staffordshire, attorneys— Marston, J. Shepherd, and J. Baker, comb-manufacturers—J. Burrell, I. ell, and G. Stephenson, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, iron-founders—W. M'Murdie V. C. Pout, Epping, stationers—T. Clark and J. Hetherington, Nottingham, ge-manufacturers—W. Watts and J. Watts, Hinckley, Leicester, druggists— ee, H. Clarke, and T. Gee, Boston, bankers—J. Andrews and C. Lane, Albe- e-street, Clerkenwell, manufacturers—W. Conway and F. Joyce, Drury-lane, -manufacturers—E. Wells, C. A. Allnatt, J. Wells, and J. Hedges, Walling- bankers—J. Harker and G. C. Wiltshire, Old Bond street, silversmiths—J. tmarc, W. D. Fellowes, and S. Brooksbank, Vauxhall, distillers—H. Short, hinfield, W. R. Pope, London, general agents—J. Jones and C. Clark, Bridg- , wine-merchants.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

Whitehall, Oct 10, 1825.

King has been pleased to present the Rev. Robert Allan to the Church and of Little Dunkeld, in the Presbytery of Dunkeld and County of Pertb, vacant resignation of the Rev. Thomas Nelson, late Minister there.

Office of Ordnance, Oct. 11, 1825.

s of Royal Engineers—First Lieutenant Hale Young Wortham to be Second n, vice Birch, retired on half-pay; Second Lieutenant John Walpole to be ieutenant, vice Wortham.

DECLARATIONS OF INSOLVENCY.

OUNG, John's-place, Camberwell, carpenter.

ITTON, Gerrard-street, Soho, grocer.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

. HARRISON, Liverpool, haberdasher.

BANKRUPTS.

LLETT, Bath, innkeeper. Sol. Mr. Makinson, Middle Temple.

CARE, W. PRIDEAUX, jnn. and W. W. PRIDEAUX, Kingsbridge, Devonshire, . Sols. Messrs. Alexander and Son, Carey-street.

SH, Bristol, wharfinger. Sols. Messrs. Holmes, Frampton, and Loftus, n.

GGS, Thornbury, Gloucestershire, spirit-dealer. Sols. Messrs. Williams ite, Lincoln's-inn Old Buildings.

ALBRAB, jun. Old Brentford, gardener. Sol. Mr. Hartley, New Bridge-st.

DIVIDENDS.

8, W. Atkinson, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street, merchant—Nov. 5, G. George-yard, Lombard-street, merchant—Nov. 5, R. Wilson, Birming- a-dealer—Nov. 4, B. N. Tate, Wakefield, Yorkshire, printer—Nov. 1, W. London, merchant—Nov. 3, J. Squire, Kendal, Westmorland, watch-maker , T. Harding, sen. and J. R. Harding, Bristol, brush-makers—Nov. 10, G. nd, Maunby, Yorkshire, tallow-chandler—Nov. 2, J. Outram and W. Liverpool, common-brewers.

CERTIFICATES.—Nov. 1.

, Regent street, linen-draper—J. Davenport, Altrincham, Cheshire, shop- G. Peake, Milton, Kent, shipwright—G. B. Clark, New Shoreham, Sussex, J. Born, Manchester, commission-dealer—F. Dent and J. Mannett, South- linen-drapers—W. Mayston, Friday-street, warehouseman—G. E. Graham, street, banker—E. Wright, Oxford-street, linen-draper.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

ott and J. J. Hunt, Leicester, lace-machine-manufacturers—C. Kearney rinnet, Quadrant, Regent-street, wine merchants—J. Cradock and W. K. arey-street, silversmiths—J. Cottrell and T. Voce, Birmingham, brass- —J. Tompson and W. H. Paviour, Birmingham, brass founders—N. Mar- nd L. Kerridge, Fore-street, Cripplegate—D. Hitchin and J. Cockcroft, Yorkshire, woollen cor manufacturers—J. Whipp and Co. Burnley, Lan machine-makers—J. Chapman and J. Goodchild, Bucklersbury, umbrella- nufacturers—J. Sprigg and T. Swaine, Drury-lane, carriers—P. Brooks and S. ity-road, coach-makers—G. Roach and Co. London, merchants.

In consequence of our animadversions in last Sunday's Paper, on the conduct of a son of "Old MOLLOY the chimney-sweeper," we received the following letter:—

To the Publisher of The Age.

SIR—We are requested by Mr. C. M. Westmacott to obtain from you the name of the writer of that most unprovoked attack upon his character, contained in your Paper of yesterday; and we have only to add, that if you refuse to give his name and address, our instructions are to proceed against you, to recover compensation by action at law.

And we are, Sir, your most obedient servants,

Covent Garden, 10th Oct. 1825. HAMILTON & ULLITHORNE.

To which we returned the following reply:—

To Messrs. Hamilton & Ullithorne.

Age Office, Oct. 11, 1825.

SIRS—In consequence of your letter of yesterday, addressed to the Publisher of The Age, I have referred to that Paper, and not finding the name of WESTMACOTT mentioned therein, I consider you have made a mistake in the name of the Paper.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant, R. D. RICHARDS.

In addition to which we have only to observe, that as Mr. WESTMACOTT himself, as well as all the world, must surely be convinced he could never have committed the acts alluded to, there needs no further comment.

WINES AT REDUCED PRICES FOR CASH ONLY.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

	per Dozen.
Port, Vintage 1820	27s. to 30s.
Ditto, Crusted	36s. to 42s.
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s. to 56s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s. to 36s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s. to 48s.
Madeira, West India	36s. to 42s
Ditto, East India	48s. to 60s.
Bucellas	36s. to 42s.
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s. to 36s
Claret, St. Julien	48s.
Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s. to 96s.
Sparkling Champagne	72s. to 84s.
Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s.
St. Peray, dry and spark	72s.
Chablis	63s.
Hermitage, Red and White	96s.
Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s.

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s.; Jamaica Rum, 15s.; Brandy, 25s. per gallon—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis —Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder, Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

A CHALLENGE FOR 1000 GUINEAS.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER, and PERFUMER, No. 181, FLEET-STREET, (Two Doors from Fetter-lane, claims the honour of announcing that by the urgent request of many distinguished friends, who so highly patronised him while conducting Mr. Money's business, he has opened an Establishment, and respectfully solicits the attention of the connoisseurs in the scientific Art of Hair-cutting. By many years application to this particular department of his profession in London and Paris, he is enabled to introduce a new and peculiar system, never contemplated by the vulgar empirics who presume to call themselves Hair cutters, but who in fact only destroy the head of hair. Moss's style rigidly adhering to fashion, always adapts itself to each particular countenance (the grand desideratum), and his intercourse with the Courts of Europe furnishes him with a never failing variety. Moss begs to state that his personal attention, and that of his Chief Artist (late with Money), are devoted to Hair-cutting, as he never trusts so important an operation to inexperienced apprentice boys.

The beautiful system of fabricating perukes, scalps, and beads of hair, (Secundum Naturam) has claimed Moss's particular attention, and he submits to the Beau Monde an exquisite specimen of talent in his new system of Wig making, every hair is singly inserted, the superfices of the skin and complexional colours of the head are astonishingly imitated—the whole forming a coup dœil, the most brilliant and natural, calculated to embellish the charms of youth or cover the deficiencies of age.

Moss has prepared a superlative choice of Ladies' Fronts, on a new system, that always retain their curl. Platts and Curls, in all the variegated Tints and shades of nature, which, with an assortment of French Perfumery, he invites his best friends—the public—to examine. Patent Hair Brushes on Moss's new plan, are ready for the taste of the curious; and for One Thousand Guineas he challenges competition with all Europe in every branch of his Profession.—Vivat Rex et industria omnia vincit.

PERRING'S PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED.—The long existing prejudice against Silk Hats is now entirely removed by the above discovery. The PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT, having an extra quantity of Napping on the square, will bear the most rough usage, is calculated for all weathers, and, unlike the common-made Silk Hat, will wear equally all over, retaining their shape and beauty to the last. Time, the only fair test, has brought these inimitable Hats into universal repute. The Economical may now purchase with perfect safety a Hat, possessing every necessary good quality, in any shape, at 17s.

An extensive assortment of Ladies' fine Beaver Bonnets, of the newest shapes, elegantly trimmed, from One to Two Sovereigns.

Gentlemen's warranted Water-Proof Beaver Hats, made as they should be, combining all the various fashions, 20s. 28s. 26s.

J. P. in presenting his Hats to public inspection, is zealously determined to unite principle with economy. All Hats will be offered at such prices as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the discerning.

Warehouses, 413, Strand, two doors from the Adelphi Theatre, and 8, Angel-terrace, Hammersmith.

Gentlemen residing in the country may meet with the earliest attention to their orders by a remittance, or an order for payment in London. For the size, apply a piece of string round the outside of the Hat, where the band goes, and send the exact length.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others.—By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS;

they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, for a Superior Beverage is produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared, that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

Sold Retail by all Grocers and Druggists in the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co. No. 64, Red Rion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words Robinson's Patent, the Royal Arms, and the signature of Matts. Robinson, are affixed to each Package, as none others are genuine.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER, (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture, of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1s. 4d.	1s. 6d.	and	1s. 9d. per lb.
Best Grey Goose		2s.	and	2s. 6d.
Excellent White Goose		3s.
Real White Dantzic		3s. 3d.	and	3s. 6d.

Hudson Bay, Mecklenbergh, &c.

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell, as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.	l.	s.	d.		l.	s.	d.
Feather Beds, from	2	5	0	to	3	3	0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3	10	0	to	5	10	0
Best White Dantzic Beds	4	10	0	to	6	10	0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only					8	10	0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0	15	0	to	1	4	0
MATTRESSES.
Mattresses	0	10	0	to	1	8	0
Real Horse Hair and Wool Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliass	0	14	0	to	1	4	0

BEDSTEADS.—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES.—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap, and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts.—Brussels, Kidderminster, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions. Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re made and cured of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's Buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

 Please to observe the name of SLATER.

ESTABLISHED ANNO 1792.

THE ROYAL GLOUCESTER SCIENTIFIC RIDING and DRIVING ACADEMY, (late Jones's),

NEAR THE MAGDALEN, BLACKFRIARS' ROAD.

C. STEWARD most respectfully solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his Establishment, which, for general comfort, docility of horses, and for acquiring an easy, expeditious, and graceful system, is acknowledged to stand unrivalled in the Kingdom. C. S. begs to observe, that tuition in driving had its origin in his Academy, and one lesson will prove his superior knowledge of the above art. Perfect steady Ponies are kept for the younger branches of Families of both sexes. The School is lighted every Evening from Five to Eight o'clock, during the Winter Season, for teaching, and Subscribers for exercise.—Horses broke for every purpose, and taken in at livery.—Ladies' Horses, Gentlemen's ditto, Tandems and Gigs of the first quality, to be Let, and a Groom to attend them if required.—N.B. Horses taken in at livery.—Advice given in purchasing Horses.

TERMS.—No ENTRANCE AND NO FINES.

RIDING.	l.	s.	d.
Six Lessons in the School	1	1	0
Single ditto	0	5	0
Per Month, or when convenient, 28 Lessons	3	13	6
Per Quarter's Subscription	5	5	0
Lesson on the Road, when complete in School	0	10	6
Per Annum	15	15	0

Lessons to be paid for on Entrance.

DRIVING.
Four in Hand, to complete	10	10	0
Curricle or Tandem, ditto	5	5	0
Single Horse, ditto	3	3	0
Single Lesson	1	1	0

Hours.—Summer Months, for Gentlemen, 6 to 12 in the Morning, and 4 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 12 to 3 o'clock.—For Gentlemen during the Winter Season, 7 in the Morning to 12, and from 3 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 12 to 3 o'clock.

None but Relatives or Friends admitted during the time of teaching Ladies.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. HOSE, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

TO Families Travelling, Promenading, and Enjoying Aquatic Excursions, Bathing, &c. the following inestimable requisites are especially recommended:

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for the complexion,

which immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, produces a delightful and pleasing Coolness to the Face, Arms, &c.; removes Freckles, Pimples, Spots, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

Also ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for the Hair,

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE.

This Oil is pre-eminently successful in nourishing the Hair, preserving it while travelling, preventing its falling off in cases of illness, and has the unrivalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; 10s. 6d.; and 21s. per bottle.—Also,

ROWLAND'S ALSANA EXTRACT,

For the TEETH and GUMS, and PREVENTING the TOOTH-ACHE.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, and Bottles; which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing any of the above to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing the signature and address in red, "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden."

Sold by appointment, Wholesale, by Mr. R. Hendrie, (Perfumer to His Majesty), Titchbourn street; Mr. Smyth, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, Holmes, Thevenot, and Brewster, New Bond-street; Messrs. Bayley and Blew, Cockspur-street; Messrs. Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Mr. Atkinson, Gerrard-st.; Mr. Butler, chemist, 4, Cheapside; Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet-market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 67, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Dunn and Thwaite, Hatton-garden; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; and Retail by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine Venders in the United Kingdom.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.---Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS.---Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor---Liverpool through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle and Congleton---Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne and Chippenham---Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Tauntou and Collumpton---Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford and Dorchester---Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke and Macclesfield.---Birmingham (in 13 hours), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles).---Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston and Garstang.---Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham.---Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge.---Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich.---Milford Haven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen---The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES.---Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock---Holyhead (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock.---Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock.---Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning at a quarter before nine---Liverpool (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock---Windsor and Eton coaches daily.---Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five---Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Audover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two.---Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock---Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four---Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half past five---Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock.---Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six---Coventry light 4-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six.---Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon---Chester and Park-Gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock.---Worcester coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock.---Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five.---Tamworth, Atherstone, and Hinckley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock.---Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four.---Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock---Dudley and Stourbridge 4-inside post coach, every afternoon at five.---Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening.---Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening---Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares.---Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse), through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence; the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.---Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five---Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two---Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.---Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two.---Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours.)---Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning.---Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narberth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock ---Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.---N B Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5*l.*, unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.---Goods insured at a moderate rate

BIRTHS.

On the 7th inst. at Edinburgh, the lady of Julian Warrender, of a son.—On the 8th, the Hon. Mrs. Milles, of a daughter.—On the 11th, the lady of Joseph Salomons, Esq. of a daughter.

MARRIED.

On the 12th inst. L. B. Hesketh, Esq. to Lady Emily Lygon.

DIED.

On the 1st inst. at Baggrave Hall, Leicestershire, E. A. Burnaby, Esq. son of the late Archdeacon of Leicester.—On the 5th, at Stratford Lodge, Suffolk, in the 28th year of her age, Frances, wife of Harcourt Firmin, Esq.—On the 8th, at Staverton, near Cheltenham, the lady of Lieut. Amiell, R. N. of an fit of apoplexy.—On the 9th, at Harrogate, Elizabeth, wife of Henry Payne, Esq. of the Newark, Leicester.—Same day, at Oundle, Mrs. Sarah Hunt, relict of Thomas Hunt, Esq.—On the 10th, Mr. David Lewis, of New Inn, St. Clement Danes, solicitor.—Same day, in the 75th year of her age, Jane, the wife of Robert Sadlier Moody, Esq.

London: Printed by R. D. RICHARDS, in Benufort Buildings, and Published by him at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 25. SUNDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW, October 31, the tradegy of Pizarro. Rolla, Mr. Wallack; Cora, Mrs. Yates; Elvira, Mrs. W. West. After which (tenth time) a new Military Divertisement, called The Camp. To conclude with (third time) a New Comic Opera, in 2 Acts, called the Wedding Present.

On Tuesday (76th time) Weber's Romantic Opera of Der Freischutz. Caspar, Mr. Horn; Adolph, Mr. T. Cooke. With (4th time) the New Comic Opera of the Wedding Present.

On Wednesday, will be revived, Vanburgh's Comedy of the Confederacy. Moneytrap, Mr. Dowton; Brass, Mr. Harley.

On Thursday, the Merry Wives of Windsor.

On Friday, (29th time) the Romantic Drama of Faustus. Faustus, Mr. Wallack; Wagner, Mr. Harley; Rosolia, Miss I. Paton.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—TO-MORROW, Intrigue, with the Merchant of Venice, and the Epanlette.

On Tuesday, Murphy's Comedy of Know your own Mind, with Love Laughs at Locksmiths, and the Epaulette.

On Wednesday, A Roland for an Oliver, with the Epaulette, and other Entertainments.

On Thursday, The Castle of Andalusia, with the Epaulette, and other Entertainments.

On Friday, (for the last time this Season) The Beggar's Opera, with the Epaulette, and other Entertainments.

On Saturday, a favourite Comedy, with the Epaulette, being the Last Night of Madame Vestris's Engagement.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

TO-MORROW, October 31, and during the week, will be produced, for the first time, a new Nautical Melo-dramatic Burletta called THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. Founded on the Popular Novel of that title. Principal Characters, Messrs. T. P. Cooke, Yates, J. Reeve, and Terry; Mrs. Fitzwilliam, and Miss Boden. After which, the favourite Burletta, in One Act, called MARRIED BACHELOR. To conclude with (by the kind permission of J. S. Arnold, Esq. of the Theatre Royal English Opera) the much-admired Burlesque entitled QUADRUPEDS! in which the Unique Stud of Horse and Ass will appear. Principal Characters, Messrs. Yates and J. Reeve, who will introduce their admired imitations of different London performers.

Due Notice will be given of the next representation of Killigrew.

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal. 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

EXHIBITION (at No. 8, Soho-square, near the Bazaar) of MODELS of the MOST INTERESTING OBJECTS IN SWITZERLAND, upon a very large scale, by which the Artist has been enabled to combine the most faithful representations of the natural grandeur of Swiss scenery, with the most perfect accuracy of detail. That of Mont Blanc, including the Valley of Chamouni, 14 feet by 8, is eminently calculated to give a correct idea of this magnificent object, with its snowy mantles, its extensive glaciers, and the numerous needles by which it is surrounded. Also a Model, upon a large scale, of that wonderful work of Buonaparte's, the Road over Simplon into Italy. One of Mont Righi, with the Valley Goldau, represented in the state of devastation caused by the falling of the Rosberg, in 1806. One of the Passage of St. Gotbard and the Devil's Bridge. Also the interesting Passage of Mont Cenis. Models of the Cities of Geneva and Edinburgh; and various others, all executed with due regard to accuracy and effect.—Admission 1s.—Small Models of the above made for Sale.

A regular Trader.—To sail in December.

FOR VAN DIEMEN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine coppered ship, PRINCESS CHARLOTTE, burden 400 Tons, JOSEPH BLYTH, Commander; will load in the London Dock. Has very superior accommodations for Cabin and Steerage Passengers. For Freight or Passage apply to BUCKLES, BAGSTER, and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the AXE INN, Aldermanbury, every Morning, at a Quarter past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, Bristol, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside....21. 5s. Outside..... 11. 1s.

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1s. 6d per head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3s. per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the AXE INN, Aldermanbury, at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, &c.

FARES.—Inside....11. 18s. Outside.... 18s.

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever. By Order of the Directors, Axe Inn, Aldermanbury. C. BURTON, Secretary.

The Directors will not be answerable for the safety of any parcel exceeding 5l. in value, unless the amount be stated when booked.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St, Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hog-shead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder, Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

ESTABLISHED ANNO 1792.

THE ROYAL GLOUCESTER SCIENTIFIC RIDING and DRIVING ACADEMY (late Jones's), NEAR THE MAGDALEN, BLACKFRIARS-ROAD.

C. STEWARD most respectfully solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his Establishment, which, for general comfort, docility of horses, and for acquiring an easy, expeditious, and graceful system, is acknowledged to stand unrivalled in the Kingdom. C. S. begs to observe, that tuition in driving had its origin in his Academy; and one lesson will prove his superior knowledge of the above art. Perfect steady Ponies are kept for the younger branches of families of both sexes. The School is lighted every evening from five to eight o'clock, during the winter season, for teaching, and Subscribers for exercise. Horses broke for every purpose, and taken in at livery. Ladies' Horses, Gentlemen's ditto, Tandems and Gigs of the first quality, to be Let, and a groom to attend them if required.---N.B. Horses taken in at livery. Advice given in purchasing Horses.

TERMS.---NO ENTRANCE AND NO FINES.

RIDING.	£.	s.	d.
Six Lessons in the School	1	1	0
Single ditto	0	5	0
Per Month, or when convenient, 28 Lessons	3	13	6
Per Quarter's Subscription	5	5	0
Lesson on the Road, when complete in School	0	10	6
Per Annum	15	15	0

Lessons to be paid for on Entrance.

DRIVING.
Four in Hand, to complete	10	0	0
Curricle or Tandem, ditto	5	5	0
Single Horse, ditto	3	3	0
Single Lesson	1	1	0

Hours.---Summer Months, for Gentlemen, 6 to 12 in the Morning, and 4 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 12 to 3 o'clock.---For Gentlemen during the Winter Season, 7 in the Morning to 12, and from 3 to 8 in the Evening; Ladies, 1 to 3 o'clock.

None but Relatives or Friends admitted during the time of teaching Ladies.

Just published, in foolscap 8vo. price 5s.

MEMOIRS OF MONKEYS, &c. &c.

Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 9s.

THE PLAYS OF CLARA GAZUL, a Spanish Comedian; with Memoirs of her Life.

Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. price 21s.

THE CAMISARD; or, the Protestants of Languedoc. A Tale.

Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

SECOND EDITION.

ENGLAND AND PRISON TORTURE.---To be published in November,

A FREE EXAMINATION of LORD REDESDALE'S BILL, on the Principle of the 'Cessio Bonorum,' as a Permanent Act for the Relief of INSOLVENT DEBTORS: with some additional Clauses introduced. Addressed to the then Home Minister.

By J. CLAYTON JENNYNS, Esq. Barrister-at-law.

"Interest reipublicæ cognosci nualos."

Sold by Sherwood, Neely, and Jones, Paternoster-row.

In the press, and speedily will be published,

MEMOIRES, LETTRES, et PIECES DIVERSES PUBLIEES,

Par Sir JAMES CRAUFURD.

Contre M. Le Duc de GRAMMONT, Capitaine des Gardes du Corps: M. Le Due de GUICHE, son fils, Premier Ecuyer de Son Altesse Royale Monseigneur Le Duc d'ANGOULEME; Le Sieur GRIMOD (dit Comte d'Orsay) General aux Gardes; Madame CRAUFURD, rœuve de feu M. Quintin Craufurd, La Femme GRIMOD (dite Comtesse d'Orsay); et Madame La Marquisse de SOURDIS, fille du Barbier de Theatre de Milan; avec quelque lettres de Monsieur Le Duc de GUICHE et du Sieur GRIMOD.

These writings are certainly little worthy of the attention of the British public; but as Sir James Craufurd intends, at the commencement of the ensuing Session of Parliament, to appeal to his country respecting the treatment which he has experienced from the French Government, during a period of seven years, and which he still experiences, he deems it to be his duty to lay before that country all the particulars of his conduct during this extraordinary affair---all that he has written, as well as all that he has done.

TO THE WORTHY AND INDEPENDENT ELECTORS OF THE BOROUGH OF SUDBURY.

GENTLEMEN,

IT would be in vain for me to attempt to express the gratitude with which your conduct has inspired me—my reception in your ancient and respectaale Borough has not merely been kind, but splendid; and by your promises of support my Election is not merely rendered certain, but triumphant. In the course of my canvass I met with only six refusals of support, and I believe I may assert with truth that Nineteen out of Twenty Electors have favoured me with distinct promises. It is, therefore, quite unnecessary for me to add, that when the period shall arrive that you are again called on to exercise your Elective Franchise, I shall fearlessly proceed to the Poll, and continue a Candidate for the honour of your Suffrages to the last hour.

Prior, however, to that time, I shall again see you, according to the promise I made at Sudbury, and in the interim I also hope to have the pleasure of paying my personal respects to every non-resident, as well as of every resident, Freeman.

If, in the course of my Canvass, I have omitted to call on any resident Freeman, they will kindly attribute it to mistake or want of time, and of course not to any feeling of disrespect, or wilful inattention.

My principles and opinions are fully and fairly before you—your promises and warm reception will be ever present to my recollection and my gratitude—and of the issue, I again repeat, I entertain no doubt; and, wishing health, happiness and prosperity, to you—your wives, your daughters—your Trade, your Borough.

I remain, Gentlemen,

Your much obliged and grateful Servant,

JOHN WILKS, Jun.

Littleshury, Mill-hill, Oct. 17, 1825.

SODA WATER.—WM. CLARK, No. 21, MAIDEN-LANE, Covent Garden, Soda Water Manufacturer to the Royal Family, most respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and the public in general, that he manufactures the above article of a very superior quality; it is warranted to be from all metallic impregnations, in consequence of its being prepared in glass machinery.—N.B. Superior Jamaica Ginger Beer and Fine Sparkling Lemonade (in glass bottles). They are warranted to keep good for twelve months.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 14s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT'S, Tailor and Draper,

47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

WINES AT REDUCED PRICES FOR CASH ONLY.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House (Manufactory, 54, Crutched Friars), respectfully return their best thanks to the public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit their future favours, by CONTINUING TO SELL SUPERIOR MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assemblage of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, after the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage; likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, wind-up, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.

The LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, staircase, and gallery railing, balconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and bookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and no abatement.—Stoves and Ranges set, in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in exchange.

HOME-BREWED BEER in OCTOBER.—At the suggestion of H. Brougham, Esq., M.P. Ladies and Gentlemen desirous of making this important article of family consumption at home, are respectfully informed that they will not only save 50 per cent., but procure themselves a good and wholesome Beer, which can always be brewed in temperate or cold weather. For this purpose THOMAS JARVIS, Wine Cooper and Cooper in General, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, has constantly on sale a large assortment of New and Second-hand well seasoned CASKS and BREWING UTENSILS of every description, at the following low cash prices: that is, a One Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 2s.; a Two Bushel Set, 3l. 3s.; a Three Bushel Set, 4l. 4s.; a Four Bushel Set, 5l. 15s. Families waited upon to brew their own beer, to fine and bottle wines with the patent bottling machine, &c. in town or country.—Water butts seasoned, of all sizes; bathing and turtle tubs lent on hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of packing casks and cases at the trade prices; casks, pipes, utensils, and wine bottles bought or exchanged; pickling tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of utensils sent to any part of the country, by an order for payment in London.—T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand. Good workmen wanted.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr. Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stepheus	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener.	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6
(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)
The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	6
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0

R. W. EVANS, 146, STRAND, (near Somerset House) LONDON.

PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices.

Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

SIX ORIGINAL SPANISH MELODIES, with Symphonies and Accompaniments for the Pianoforte and Harp—Composed by W. West—The Poetry by Lord Nugent.—This Work is embellished with appropriate Drawings, &c. from the Designs of eminent Artists.

CONTENTS OF No. 1.

	s.	d.
1 Love, Music, and Wine	12	0
2 Tho' I have sworn by that Frown
3 Good Night Love (a Boat Glee)
4 Hope and Memory
5 Oh, for that Strain
Ditto, as a Duet
6 Hail to thee Fairest

The Second Number is preparing, and will shortly be Published—This Work is also arranging for the Guitar.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violin and Flute			17	6
Or, in Parts	Evans	each	3	6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib)	R. W. Evans
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha			5	0
No. II.—Introduction—Romance—Danza de Village—Fandango			5	0
DUETS.
All Idea, Duet	Moss		3	0
Santo Oh Diol	ditto		2	0
OVERTURES.
Cherry and Fair Star	Ware		2	6
Cinderella	ditto		2	0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments	Evans		3	6
Gil Blas	Moss		2	0
Mother Bunch	Ware		2	6
FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove	ditto		2	6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz	ditto		2	0
This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.
*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of "Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo	ditto		3	6
* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.
Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars.	ditto		2	6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1	6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
Away, those Doubts	Mr. Foster	Torri	1	6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2	0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr. Bellamy	Evans	2	0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1	6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1	6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1	6
Deserted Cottage	Mr. Broadhurst	ditto	1	6
My Lady hath a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1	6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1	6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1	6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1	6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1	6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr. Pearman	Evans	2	6
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2	0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1	6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1	6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Miss Kelly	Moss	1	6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1	6
The Moon will flake the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1	6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1	6
This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.
Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet)	Miss Povey and Mr. Broadhurst	Moss	2	0
QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.
The Cadets		Ware	3	0
The Freischutz		Moss	3	0
The Royal York		Ware	3	0
The Midlothian		Evans	3	0
Les Moissonieurs			3	0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star			1	6

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

ELEGANT LADIES' RIDING HABITS and PELISSES made in the first style of Fashion: also Gentlemen's Fashionable Clothing of every description, made on most reasonable terms, at S. PEARSON'S, 70, Chancery-lane.

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. BAYLY, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (Second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. HORN, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Cirenlar Piano-Fortes: also Harps, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

☞ Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

Just published,

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangement of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chorusses, from the celebrated opera, "Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home, with variations, 2s.---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, ditto, 2s.---As a Duet for two Violoncellos. The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

BAYONNE, Oct. 15.—We expected that this day we should have seen our Camp struck, but the only change that has taken place is, that instead of the troops being in tents, they are to be quartered in various buildings round the town. It appears that this change was owing to a telegraphic despatch received yesterday; and it is generally thought that the troops and the Etat Major will pass the winter under our walls.

We have received Quebec Papers to the 23d ult. They contain an Address from the Magistrates and Inhabitants of Quebec to the Earl of Dalhousie. The following Answer was returned by his Lordship:—

"GENTLEMEN—I beg you to accept my grateful thanks for this Address upon my return amongst you. Be assured that in resuming the Government which his Majesty has been pleased to intrust to me, it is my anxious desire to promote the welfare and happiness of all classes of the people in this province; and that nothing can gratify me more than to find my endeavours supported by the Magistrates and respectable Inhabitants of this City.

"DALHOUSIE."

GENEVA, Oct. 10.—We have just been witnesses of an example of that gloomy delirium which religious fanaticism produces on weak minds, and the examples of which become so numerous as to excite the serious attention of the Government. A young woman, infatuated by the preaching of the Methodists, and whose imagination was filled with the superstitious terrors with which her spiritual guides had filled her, under the pretext of operating her conversion, threw hereelf, in the night of the 8th, from a window in the fourth story into the street, where she was found dead on the pavement. This is the sixth known instance of suicide occasioned at Geneva by this species of insanity, since the introduction of Methodism. A much greater number of persons of both sexes might be mentioned, whose reason has been troubled by frequenting the religious assemblies, as they are called, of our Momiers. It is to Mad. de Krudener, and to the two Englishmen, Mr. Haldane and Mr. H. Drummond, that we are chiefly indebted for this scourge, which has been imported by strangers since the restoration, and was formerly unknown in Geneva.

LOAN OF HAYTI,—30,000,000 FRANCS, REDEEMABLE IN 25 YEARS.

PARIS, Oct. 10.—His Majesty King Charles X. having solemnly recognised the independence of Hayti, and the Government of that country having agreed to an indemnity of 150,000,000 of francs for the benefit of the ancient Planters, payable in five years, his Excellency the President has resolved that a loan of thirty millions of francs, redeemable in five years, shall be opened to cover the first instalment of this indemnity.

The mode of a loan, redeemable in 25 years, has been proposed by his Excellency, because it has the advantage that the present resources of the country being more than sufficient to meet the payment of the annual interest, as well as the extinction of the capital of the loan, by yearly redemption of a 25th, it will not be necessary to have recourse to new laws, and as there is reason to hope that the increasing prosperity of the State, of which every thing now favours the developement, will permit the same mode of loan to be adopted in future.

In consequence, by order of the President, represented here by Messrs. the Senators, Daumee and Ronanez, and by Colonel Fremont, his Aid-de-Camp, the following articles have been resolved upon:—

Art. 1. There shall be created 30,000 Annuity Bonds (Annuites a Sonchi) of 1000 francs each, payable to bearer. Each annuity shall be accompanied with 50 coupons of interest, each of 50 francs.

Art. 2. These 30,000 Annuities shall be redeemable in the proportion of one twenty-fifth every year, commencing 1st of Jan., 1827; they shall bear interest at 6 per cent. per annum, payable half yearly: the first payment will be due 1st July, 1826.

Art. 3. On the 1st of October every year lots shall be drawn to determine the series to be redeemed on the 1st January following. The drawing shall be made in the presence of persons delegated for that purpose by the Government of Hayti, and by the care of Messrs. C. Ternaux, J. Gandolphe, and Co, who shall he commissioned to pay the Annuities drawn, as well as the interest of the loan.

The Annuities redeemed shall be annulled, cancelled, and marked with a black stamp in the presence of the bearers, as soon as they shall receive the amount.

Art. 4. The sale of the 30,000 Annuities shall take place on the 26th of October instant, at two o'clock in the afternoon, in the house of M. Ternaux, sen., Place des Victoires. It shall be in one lot, publicly, and on sealed tenders, to the house or company which shall make the highest offer, with the following conditions:—

1. On the day fixed for receiving the tenders, the Commissioners of the Government of Hayti shall open the proceedings by placing on the table a sealed packet containing a declaration signed by them, of the lowest price at which they consent to the sale of the 30,000 Annuities. This declaration shall not be opened, except in the case that none of the tenders come up to the minimum fixed by the Commissioners.

2. The tenders shall be received, sealed, from the persons who offer them, numbered, or laid on the table to be opened in their presence, before the meeting breaks up. The tenders, when once laid on the table, cannot be withdrawn.

3. Every tender to be valid, must be conformable to the annexed model, and preceded by the depositing of a security which shall be proved by the production of a receipt of M. Ternaux, sen.

The price must be positively expressed in the tenders in francs and centimes, without any reservation on the part of the bidders.

4. The sum to be deposited as security for such tender shall be three millions of francs, in ready money, or in inscriptipns of Rente of 5 per cent. at par, or of 3 per cent. at 75 francs. It shall be accompanied by an engagement to make an immediate transfer of the stock, in case the person making the deposit should become the purchaser.

The deposits made as security for tenders not accepted, shall be returned, free of all expences, the day after the sale.

5. The purchase money shall be paid into the Caisse des Depots et Consignations at the rate of six millions per month, from month to month, beginning on the 1st of Novemher next, till the payment is completed.

6. All the tenders having been received, the Commissioners shall proceed to open them, in the order they are numbered, and shall read them aloud.

7. The thirty thousand Annuities shall be adjudged to the House or Company which have offered the highest price; or should the tender not be valid, to the bidders who shall be the next highest; the Commissioners shall decide publicly, before the Meeting breaks up; they shall be the sole judges of the validity of the tenders.

8. In case two or more tenders should be at the same price, if the Houses or Companies do not immediately declare that they will join together, the biddings shall be renewed between them on the spot, either verbally, or by sealed tenders, if one of them desires it.

9. The three millions deposited, or transferred as security for the tenders, shall remain in the hands of M. Ternaux, sen. till the first payment has been made into the Caisse des Depots et Consignations. This first payment shall remain as a security for the subsequent payments.

If the first instalment is not completed in the course of the day, 1st November, at the latest, the purchasers will incur the annulling of the contract, with the loss of the sums deposited as security, which shall accrue to the Government of Hayti, under the title of damages.

10. The first six thousand Annuities No. 1 to 6,000 shall not be delivered to the purchasers till they shall have made the second payment of six millions, and so on in such manner that the payment into the Caisse des Depots et Consignations, shall always precede by one instalment the delivery of the Annuities.

11. In default of payment of an instalment due, the total amount of the purchase money shall become demandable, and the Commissioners may have the Annuities remaining in their hands sold for the benefit of the Government of Hayti.

12. A proces verbal of the proceedings at the sale of the loan shall be drawn up; it shall be made out in triplicate, and signed by the Haytian Commissioners, as well as by the purchasers and M. Ternaux, sen., and a copy shall be given to each of the parties.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 19.—A Mexican Agent, who came from Dunkirk, arrived on the 16th at Bruges, and set out on the 17th for Brussels, on his way to Rome. He has a mission from the Mexican Government to the Pope, relative to the ecclesiastical affairs of that part of South America.

Oct. 21.—Mr. Stratford Canning, Ambassador from His Britannic Majesty to the Ottoman Porte, has arrived at Calais from London, on his way to Constantinople.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FORGERY.—STIRLING, Oct 20.—It is painful for us to state, that a crime of this serious nature has been committed by a young man of the name of Finlayson, belonging to the west of Perthshire. On Thursday last he presented at the Stirling Bank a bill for 50l. made payable at Dunblane. The acceptor's name being well known, no suspicions were entertained of its being a forgery. The bank, however, refused to cash the bill, from its being made payable at a place where the Company had no agent. On being told this, the young man expressed regret, adding, that he was about to set off for the West Indies, and delay would put him to considerable inconvenience. An attempt to discount a bill under such circumstances, instead of lulling suspicion, awakened it; and his presenting two days after a new bill for the same sum, made payable at Stirling, confirmed them in the opinion that all was not right. The result was, that a minute inspection of the signatures soon satisfied the clerks that the document was a forgery; and having charged the wretched man with the offence, he at first denied it; but ultimately acknowledged the truth of the charge, and his readiness to proceed to prison. He was allowed to depart, but instead of acting the part of a sane person, by looking after his personal safety, he instantly went to a Magistrate, and from him to the Procurator Fiscal, to whom he confessed his offence, and insisted on being committed. That gentleman having no alternative, the unhappy man was accordingly duly apprehended and lodged in prison.

HEREFORD, Oct. 22.—At our fair on Thursday, there was a greater display of the better sort of cattle than has been witnessed for many years; the prices were rather on the decline, many realized 6½d. per lb. although, generally speaking, we may quote the reduction at about 10 per cent. Of butter, there was a short supply, the average price for the best was from 13s. to 13s. 9d. per stone. Cheese, best making, from 7½d. to 8½d. per lb. There were few good horses in the fair—those either for draught or the saddle, sold freely, at high prices; for inferior descriptions there was little or no demand. Onions 12s. per bushel. There was a large supply of Hops, but they were but little sought after at the prices asked; a few fine samples, we are informed, realized 17l. 17s. per cwt. Yesterday a considerable reduction took place, the average price being from 14 to 16 guineas, at which the deliveries were very considerable. In all, 330 pockets were weighed. The prices, late in the evening, began to look up.

At Kingsland Fair, cattle and sheep of every description met with a ready sale at rather advanced prices; good horses were in general request, and colts, for the purchase of which this fair is much frequented, sold on very high terms, particularly those from good breeds.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 19.—It appears that our highly-respected townsman, Mr. Bolton, has had the offer of a Baronetcy. The offer was conveyed to him in terms the most handsome and flattering, by his Majesty's Premier, the Right Hon. the Earl of Liverpool, and the Foreign Secretary, the Right Hon. George Canning. That such a proposition should have been made does not in the least surprise us; on the contrary, we know not a gentleman more deserving of the honourable notice of a discriminating and enlightened Government than Mr. Bolton.

It will be recollected that Mr. Bolton, at a period of public alarm, in consequence of Buonaparte's threatened invasion of England, stepped forward, and at his own individual expense, raised a fine body of men, denominated the Royal Liverpool Volunteers, who, in discipline and appointment, were a credit and an honour not only to the town, but to the country. He has uniformly, on all occasions, warmly supported such public measures as he conceived were best calculated to promote the true interests of the State, and disregarding minor considerations and expense, has constantly manifested a steady adherence to sound constitutional principles. The example and influence of such men as Mr. Bolton, in the elevated rank of society in which they move, are highly to be valued; and the Government have shown their judgment in proposing the intended honour; an honour which is not the less valuable, although Mr. Bolton has, in the exercise of his good toste, thought proper respectfully to decline it.

COLCHESTER, Oct. 25.—At our Fair, on the 20th instant, there was a large supply of lean stock, for which prices were asked from 20 to 30 per cent. higher than last year; four sovereigns and a half was demanded for calves, which in former years would not have produced but little more than half that sum. Two-year old Welch Heifers, 6l. 10s. to 7l. 10s.; Gulioway ditto, 8l. 8s.; three and four-year old Bullock, 9l. to 13l. 13s., and large beasts in proportion; 11l. 10s. was asked for some Welch Cows, forward in calf. A large number of Lambs and Sheep were penned, the greater part of which sold, the former at 21s. to 28s., and a lot of Ewes at 38s. The supply of cart Colts was beyond what had been anticipated, but they met a ready sale at high prices; 45 to 50 guineas were given for two-year olds, they were remarkably fine; good nag Horses were exceedingly scarce. Some handsome foreign cart Horses and Colts were offered, but they did not go off well. The fair was well attended; in consequence of the high prices but little lean stock was sold till the latter part of the first day, and the following morning; but upon the whole, we believe, that a great deal of business was transacted.

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 25.—The officers of his Majesty's ship Victory entertained a large party of their friends on the 21st inst. to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the great and triumphant battle of Trafalgar, in which their proud ship bore so distinguished a part, under the flag of the immortal Nelson. Among the guests, we noticed Major-General Sir E. Blakeney, K.C.B.; Colonel Turrins, Royal Marines; Captains John Symonds, Dickenson, and William Symonds, Royal Navy; Captains Murton, Harrison, and Lagan, Royal Marine Artillery; Dr. G. H. Jones, R.N.; Dr. Foggo, Royal Artillery, &c. The toasts and sentiments given upon this glorious occasion were admirably selected, and the evening was passed with the greatest harmony and delight; the Victory's band, with the wild minstrelsy of her harper, gave a zest to the banquet, the entire arrangement of which did great credit to the taste and abilities of Mr. Abram Tutil Mitchell, the ward-room butler.

SALISBURY, Oct. 25.—On Saturday, a deplorable and fatal accident took place at Mr. Webber's factory, at Trowbridge. Two young women were carrying broad cloth to the fulling mill and were induced to go through a part of the factory which was somewhat nearer (but which we understand was a trespass); when, by some unaccountable means, the cloth became entangled in the cogs of one of the shafts of the machinery. The girl who was before, perceiving her dangerous situation, threw off the cloths, but the one behind, apparently more concerned to save the cloth than herself, was carried round with amazing velocity, and jammed between the shafts and the wall. The consequence was, one of her arms was in an instant torn off just about the wrist. The sudden concussion stopped the machinery; and after cutting the cloth to pieces, the poor sufferer was extricated, but survived only about twenty minutes. She was a fine girl, eighteen years of age; her name was Rolfe.

STAFFORD, Oct. 25—Subscriptions have been entered into at Wolverhampton towards the erection of an additional church in that town, for the accommodation of the poor; and the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean has handsomely consented to waive his right in the patronage, in order more effectually to promote the undertaking.

An Inquest was held in Wolverhampton on Friday, upon Hannah Stoyd, who, being in a state of pregnancy, died from wounds inflicted by herself on the throat and other parts of her body: She was a person of weak intellect, and a few days previous to the commission of the horrid act which terminated her life, had suffered much depression of spirits; the Jury, therefore, returned a verdict of Lunacy.

VARIETIES.

COURT MARTIAL ON CAPT. HOPPNER.

SHEERNESS, Oct. 24.—A Court Martial was held this day on board his Majesty's ship Gloucester, for the trial of Captain Hoppner, who commanded the Fury, in the late Arctic Expedition.

The Court assembled soon after nine o'clock—President, Vice-Admiral Sir R. Moorsom, the Commander in Chief at this port. It is usual to try all Officers who may happen to be in command of any of his Majesty's ships when they are lost, from whatever cause, or under whatsoever circumstances. Captain Henry P. Hoppner was therefore put upon his trial for the loss of the Fury discovery ship.

A long and very interesting narrative of the sufferings of both ships was first read, by the intrepid and distinguished Navigator, Captain Parry, of the Heela, which occupied several hours—the fearful accounts of the numerous icebergs with which they were surrounded, frequently jambed in between them, and every moment expecting to be crushed to pieces, and the great exertions of the crews, under such trying circumstances, called forth feelings of deep sympathy and admiration.

Captain Hoppner also read a very affecting narrative of the disaster.

Several witnesses were called, who corroborated the affecting statement of Captain Parry. The principal witness was Lieutenant Joseph Sherer, of the Hecla.

By the COURT.—Could the accident of the Fury getting on shore have been possibly avoided?—I should think not, but I was on board my own ship the Hecla, which was also a-ground.

Was there any thing, in your opinion, left undone by the Captain and crew of the Fury by which his Majesty's ship might have been saved?—I do not think that there was.

Were the utmost exertions used?—Yes.

Lieutenant Sherer further deposed, that the greater part of the ship's keel was knocked off, and she had several holes lower down in her bottom, by which she was exceedingly leaky, four pumps being constantly going; the men worked from five in the morning to eight at night to keep her free from water. The shocks the ship received after she struck, for several days, were so violent as to lead those on board to suppose that her bottom was on the point of being rent off. The ship's stores were landed with the view to lighten her for the purpose of examination, but the Captain and Officers lost most of their own luggage and clothes, &c. The Fury was abandoned on the 26th of August, at which time there were nine feet water in the hold. The Hecla stayed as close to her as possible for several days, but at length she was obliged to stand off to prevent being closed in by the drifting ice.

Other witnesses corroborated the evidence of Lieutenant Sherer in every leading part.

Captain Parry was then examined by Captain Hoppner.

Is it your opinion, that the accident in the first instance could have been, by any possibility, avoided?—Certainly not.

Were the exertions of myself, Officers and crew, to save her equal to what you had a right to expect?—They were.

Captain Hoppner, in conclusion, said, that even after the saving of the ship was hopeless, it was inconceivable with how much ardour and indefatigable exertion, and at the same time with how much cheerfulness, the Officers and men performed their duty.

The severity of the cold was such, during the exertions of the people to save the ship, that it was in a few instances difficult to make the men comprehend the orders given, their intellects seemed as it were frozen.

Capt. Hoppner was most honourably acquitted of any blame whatever, and the Court broke up at half-past three o'clock.

DREADFUL AND FATAL ACCIDENT TO A STEAM BOAT.

SEVENTY PERSONS DROWNED.

The Comet steam-boat, on her passage from Inverness to Greenock, had reached the point of Kempoch at nearly two o'clock, when she was met by the steam-boat Ayr, M'Clelland, of Ayr, which was on her way to that port from Greenock. The two boats going with considerable velocity, were very near each other before mutually observed. As soon as perceived, the person on the look-out on board the Comet, cried to the pilot to put the helm a-starboard, which order the pilot of the Ayr understood to be meant as instructions to him; both vessels were in consequence directed towards each other, and before the unfortunate mistake could be remedied, they came in contact with such violence, as to stave in the starboard bow of the Comet, which vessel in a few minutes went down, and, melancholy to relate, the whole of the passengers, with the exception of nine, and the master and pilot of the vessel, were drowned! Two of the latter, a lady and child, have since died. The total number of passengers on board are estimated to have been between 60 and 70, but we are unable to obtain any certain account. The most prompt and humane assistance was afforded to the few survivers, by Mr. Andrew Ranken and Mr. Glen, of Gourock, and Mr. Robert Maitland of this town, who are still actively engaged in securing the property, which, together with the bodies of the sufferers, is hourly coming ashore. We are unable as yet to furnish any account of the names of those drowned on this melancholy occasion, but from a gold watch with the name "Archd. Grahame," engraved on it, and several bills drawn in favour of Archd. Grahame, Corpach, being found on the person of a young gentleman washed ashore, we have little doubt of his being the person of that name; also Mrs. Wright of Glasgow, whose body has likewise been got. A Captain Sutherland and his lady from Inverness, were on board, whose bodies are not yet found. There have also been washed ashore, besides the two above named, the bodies of four men, four women, and two children, whose names we have not hitherto been able to learn. Too much praise cannot be bestowed on the people of Gourock, generally, for the readiness with which they gave their assistance, and the honesty which has been shewn in delivering up the property picked up along the beach, one instance of which deserves to be mentioned. A young girl, daughter of James Mains, of Gourock, found a 50l. Bank of England note, which was instantly, in the most praiseworthy manner, delivered to Mr. Rankin. Great blame is attached to the Captain of the Ayr, for not attempting to afford assistance; he almost instantly, on the catastrophe occurring, put about and made for Greenock: had he, on the contrary, stopped to pick up those who were able to struggle for a short time on the surface of the water, the chance is, that many might have been saved who have now met a watery grave, and his vessel might have been run ashore at Gourock, had he found her so leaky as to be unfit to proceed back to our port. Those saved were chiefly rescued by wherries belonging to Gourock, which instantly put off when the alarm was given.

We could have wished that no cause had existed to suspect depredation of the property cast ashore, but from the circumstance of a trunk being carried up to an adjoining field by two men, who have since absconded, leaving the trunk open, which was found by a person who brought it to Mr. Rankin, containing some wearing apparel, it is strongly suspected that money had been abstracted.

The information of the accident was speedily made known here by the arrival of the Ayr, and, both before and since morning dawned, the most active assistance has been supplied from hence, for the purpose of recovering the bodies, collecting the property cast ashore, &c. Of the latter a great quantity has been safely stored in the cellars of Mr. Rankin's house. The money found is likewise in safe custody. C. Marshall, Esq. Sheriff-Substitute of the Lower Ward, went down early this morning, as likewise several gentlemen in the commission of the peace, to render every assistance. Shells have been ordered to be prepared for the bodies, as also the customary appareling of the dead, and the hapless victims have been conveyed to Gourock Church, to await being claimed by their relatives. In short, whatever sympathy, humanity, and the most honourable and judicious feelings could devise, has been resorted to, on all hands, to pay respect to the remains of those who have so suddenly been called from this scene of transitory existence.

This melancholy event will at once revive the recollection of the loss of the Catherine, of Iona, from being run down by the Hercules, steam-boat, on the night of Saturday, the 10th Aug., 1822. A strong coincidence prevails in the two cases. In both the calamity was occasioned by steam-vessels, in the very outset of their career. The time was nearly the same: the accidents occurred almost at the same place, and had similar causes assigned them. In the case of the Catherine, forty-two persons perished out of forty-six; in the present instance, it is to be feared, however, a much larger number has been lost.

An investigation into the whole matter is now going on, and may be expected to continne until the causes and consequences are fully developed. We shall leave no effort untried to collect whatever information is attainable regarding it, which, as far as we may then have acquired, shall be reported in our next.—Meanwhile, we trust, the imperfections and irregularities of the present narrative will be ascribed to their proper source—the impossibility of procuring and arranging, within so short a time, any thing like a complete detail of so great a calamity.

THREE O'CLOCK.

We have just learned that the Captain of the Comet, corroborated by one of the other survivors, states it as his opinion, that there were not more than sixty individuals on board, when she went down. Four English gentlemen had been landed at Rothsay last night. There were twenty-six cabin passengers. At two o'clock only twelve bodies had yet been recovered.

Besides those lost whose names have already been mentioned, are the following:—Mr. M'Allister, writer, Edinburgh; Mr. M'Allister, said to be a relation of the above; Capt. Campbell. Mr. Cameron, jun. Fort William, saved.

DR. SPRY.

We are much gratified in recording an instance of liberality and good feeling on the part of the congregation of Christ Church, Birmingham, towards their late Minister, the Rev. Dr. Spry (the present Rector of Mary-le-bone), alike honourable to both parties. A deputation, consisting of some of the leading members of that congregation, waited on the Rev Gentleman on Friday last, with a very elegant and costly Piece of Plate, which was presented to him by Charles Cope, Esq. with the following Address. It should not be omitted stating, that the congregation, which has thus gratefully evinced its deep sense of the advantages derived from Dr. Spry's ministry among them, is principally composed of the occupiers of free sittings:—

"Dr. Spry,—We are deputed by the Congregation of Christ Church, in Birmingham (a congregation raised and united by your zeal and talents), to present to you this Piece of Plate, the spontaneous and unaminous tribute of their gratitude, for the invaluable services which you have rendered them, since the first consecration of that Church in the year 1813, in the character of a faithful and affectionate Pastor.

"Permit us to assure you, that in the performances of these services, they duly appreciated your plain and unadorned, but manly, perspicuous, and impressive eloquence as a preacher; nor could they fail to admire the inflexible firmness with which you maintained the ascendancy, and enforced the genuine orthodox doctrines of our National Church; while, at the same time, with a truly Christian and tolerant spirit, you said and did nothing which was justly calculated to offend the prejudices of conscientious dissent. We have equal pleasure in acknowledging, that in all the relative duties of society, you exhibited a pattern of integrity and honourable principle, adorning and illustrating the doctrines and precepts of our holy religion, by the example of your private life.

"As representing that Congregation, and for ourselves individually, we sincerely congratulate you on the attainment of the important station to which you have been called by our Gracious Sovereign; and we ardently hope, that your enjoyment of its advantages may be equal to the ability with which, we are fully persuaded, you will discharge its arduous duties."

DR. SPRY'S ANSWER.

"Gentlemen,—Permit me to assure you, that I receive with the most lively sentiments of gratitude, this magnificent Piece of Plate from the Congregation of Christ Church.

"During the whole of my professional engagements in Birmingham, the orderly, attentive, and devout behaviour of that Congregation, was to me a constant source of comfort; and it will always be a subject of my humble thankfulness to Him, whose unworthy Minister I am, that the harmony which should ever subsist between a Clergyman and his Flock was not for one monent interrupted, and that my earnest endeavours to set before them the doctrines and duties of our Holy Faith, with plainness and sincerity, were ever willingly and gratefully received.

"Splendid and costly as is the proof you have now afforded me of the affectionate remembrance of that Congregation—and especially interesting to me, as a beautiful specimen of the skill and taste of the artists of Birmingham—it will be far more precious in my estimation, if I may regard it, not only as a testimony of the good opinion of those, to whom so large a portion of my professional life has been devoted, but as an evidence, that those pastoral labours have not been unprofitable, which are thus kindly appreciated; for, believe me, one great object of my constant wishes and fervent prayers will be accomplished, if it may appear that, while I have been so fortunate as to obtain the approbation of my flock, it has also been permitted me to be the instrument of advancing their eternal interests:

"And allow me to say, that the value of this liberal present has been in no small degree enhanced, by the determination which has entrusted to my personal and valued friends the office of delivering it into my hands; and by the very gratifying Address with which they have been pleased to accompany the gift.

"They will not fail to interpret, with the same kindness which has ever marked their conduct, this very inadequate attempt to express the feelings of my heart; and they will convey, in far better terms than I can devise, my sincere and grateful acknowledgments to the Congregation of Christ Church."

The Plate is a large, richly chased and embossed Silver Waiter, weighing nearly 250 ounces, and has the following Inscription engraven on it:—

To the Rev. John Hume Spry, M.A.
The Congregation of Christ Church, Birmingham,
In grateful recollection
Of his zealous and faithful Ministry
During a period of eleven years,
Present this tribute
Of their sincere and affectionate regard.

Monday the remains of the Duchess of Grammont, which have lain in the Royal vault of the Chapel of Holyrood, since the year 1803, were transported in a hearse from the Palace to Newhaven, to be embarked on board the French corvette at anchor in the Roads. The Lord Provost and Magistrates, the Lord Advocate, the Lord Chief Baron, Sir Patrick Walker, Sir Henry Jardine, Mr. Dickie, Baillie of the Palace, Mr. Young, Mr. Ayton, &c. attended, and followed the hearse in mourning coaches to the place of embarkation, as a testimony of respect for the memory of the illustrious Lady, who died while sharing the exile of the Royal Family of France. The original shell had previously been enclosed in a new coffin of a very superb description, covered with crimson velvet, and gorgeously ornamented. The plate bore the following inscription:—

"Louise Francoise Gabrielle Aglae De Polignac, Duchess de Grammont. Nee a Paris le 7 Mai, 1763; morte le 30 Mars, 1803."

On arriving at Newhaven, the coffin was removed from the hearse, and carried without a pall to the boat, escorted by the crew of the corvette. It was then placed in an outer shell, and covered with the white flag, over which was spread the British Union. The French flag was also hoisted at the same time on board the ship and the boat, which immediately pushed off. It had been arranged that the fort should fire minute guns, but this order was countermanded, at the request of the Commissioner appointed to receive the body, M. Madal Dugas. A great concourse of spectators assembled to witness the ceremony, both at Holyrood and Newhaven.

TAUNTON ELECTION.

On Thursday a hand-bill was issued by Mr. Baylay, impeaching the conduct of the Committee, and promising that that gentleman would make his appearance in the town at half-past one o'clock, on Friday. Conformably with this notification, Mr. Baylay entered Taunton in a carriage and four, and drove to the London Inn. Mr. B. stood erect in his carriage, with a brace of pistols under his arm. A crowd having assembled in front of the London Inn, in the hope of hearing him address the public, it was intimated to them that he would satisfy their expectations from the market-house. After a quarter of an hour had elapsed, Mr. Baylay made his appearance at one of the windows of the ball-room. In order, however, to obtain a good position, he seated himself on the ledge of the window, which is very broad, after the manner of a tailor, whose mode of working with his needle the worthy Candidate imitated to the diversion of the electors. He then proceeded, with the assistance of a written paper, to deliver a speech, which contained the same general impeachment of the conduct of his Committee, and the assertion that his resignation was forced upon him, which had appeared in his hand-bills. He also pledged himself that he would stand the poll; and if chosen as the representative of Taunton in Parliament, that he would discharge his duty to the King, his country, and to the electors, with honesty, zeal, and fidelity. He again repeated his general challenge to all those who, being of the rank of gentlemen, should asperse his character, and his threats to prosecute all inferior persons, if they should be detected in propagating unfavourable reports respecting him. At the conclusion of his speech, he intimated that he should on the morrow proceed on his public canvass.

When that gentleman had concluded,

Mr. J. Turle appeared on the stage, which had been erected for the use of the Committee, in the front of the hall; and, on the part of himself and his brother electors, begged to put a few plain questions to Mr. Baylay, and in return he hoped that gentleman would give simple answers. The first, and, indeed, only question put by Mr. Turle was, "Why did Mr. Baylay quit the South Devon Militia?"—Mr. B. answered, "That was matter for private explanation," and refused to answer Mr. T.'s inquiry.

Shortly afterwards the Committee made their appearance on the platform, when Mr. Winter, their professional agent, addressed Mr. Baylay nearly to the following effect:—"Sir, I am not to be intimidated by your pistols or your threat"—(Mr. B. "Nor am I by your presence"), "and I beg leave to put one question to you—For what reason did you quit the South Devon Militia?"

Mr. Baylay answered merely by looks and gestures, which were subsequently alluded to by gentlemen who delivered their sentiments on this occasion. Several questions were put at various times by different persons; but from the tumult that prevailed it was difficult to gather their exact import. It happened, in the course of their proceedings, that the stage on which the Committee stood gave way, so as to compel them to quit it in great trepidation, to the great merriment of the multitude.

The following dialogne then passed between the Rev. Mr. Cresswell and Mr. Baylay:—

Mr. C.—By whom were you introduced into this town? Mr. B.—By Sir Thomas Lethbridge.

Was your resignation a compulsary one?—It was.

Mr. C. then asked "Was that resignation conditional?"—To this no answer was given.

Mr. W. Cox, Mr. Bunter, and Mr. G. Stone, severally addressed the Meeting.

The electors then quietly dispersed, to drink the healths of their respective candidates.—(Taunton Courier.)

FASHIONABLE MISCELLANY.

On Thursday his Majesty's travelling carriage was ordered to be in readiness at twelve o'clock, and at half-past his Majesty left the Royal Lodge with outriders for the metropolis.

THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY'S MARRIAGE.

(FROM THE DUBLIN FREEMAN'S JOURNAL OF TUESDAY.)

On Saturday his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant removed from Malahide Castle to his permanent residence at the Vice-Regal Lodge, Phœnix Park. The day for the celebration of his Excellency's approaching nuptials, which have excited so much interest amongst all classes in Dublin, is not yet appointed, as it will depend upon the arrival of his Excellency's noble brothers the Duke of Wellington and Lord Maryborough, who are expected about Wednesday; but at all events it is understood that the ceremooy will not be deferred beyond Saturday next. It will be performed by the Protestant Archbishop, and afterwards by the Catholic Archbishop of Dublin.

A King's messenger arrived at Malahide Sastle on Wednesday, last, bearing an autograph letter addressed by his Majesty to the Lord Lieutenant, highly complimentary to his Excellency on the approaching ausptcious event. In our Paper of yesterday, we stated that Mrs. Patterson had in ready money one hundred and thirty thousand gounds. We have been since informed that we under-rated the sum, and that one hundred and eighty-six thousand pounds in 3½ per cents. is nearer the truth. This lady, in addition to her property in the British funds, has claims upon the British and American Governments to an equal amount, besides considerable landed property in America. She is niece to the Catholic Bishop of Maryland, and is herself, of course, a member of that communion. She will not be, however, the first Catholic consort of a Protestant Viceroy of Ireland. When the late Marquis of Buckingham administered the government of this country, the Marchioness, who was the only daughter and heiress of the great Earl of Clare, and a strict Catholic, went regularly to mass.

The apartments at the Vice-Regal Lodge, in the Park, are undergoing considerable improvement and alterations. The Castle has been for some time under repair.

On Thursday morning, at St. James's Church, Lord Charles Fitzroy, second son of the Duke of Grafton, to the Hon. Miss Cavendish, eldest daughter of Lord G. H. Cavendish. There were present—

The Dukes of Grafton and Devonshire, Lord and Lady G. H. Cavendish, the Ladies Fitzroy, Lady Elizabeth Smith, Lords W. and George Bentinck, Mr. Charles and Lady Catherine Cavendish, and Mr. Henry Cavendish.

Sir Robert Ker Porter, who had long been a resident in Russia, as an honorary attache to our Embassy there, has recently been sent by the British Government on a diplomatic trust to South America.

General Bourke has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor at the Cape of Good Hope. The residence of the Lieutenant-Governor is to be Graham's Town, in the heart of the English settlements. General Bourke will sail by the Rainbow frigate, if another vessel engaged for his conveyance shall not be ready by the middle of next month.

On Wednesday was married, at St. Luke's Church, Chelsea, by the Lord Bishop of London, Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., of Shuckburgh Park, Warwickshire, to Miss Denys, only daughter of the late Peter Denys, Esq. of the Pavilion, Hans-place, and of Lady Charlotte Denys; and niece to the Earl of Pomfret, who gave away the bride. After the ceremony the bridal party, consisting of his Lordship and his brother, the Hon. General Fermor, Sir George and Lady Denys, Sir John and Lady Lillie, together with the bride's-maids, Miss Lillie and Miss Thompson, returned to the Pavilion, to partake of a splendid dejeune, from whence the happy couple left town in a chaise and four for Euston Park.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Wreck of the Columbus.—This wreck, which has been so long a time drifting on the ocean, has been driven into Ringabella Bay, on this coast. It was descried from the land yesterday, and drifted on shore, we understand, this morning.—Cork Southern Reporter.

Sir Charles Forbes, Sir Charles Flower, Sir Peter Laurie, and Mr. Alderman Birch, have been appointed Magistrates for the county of Middlesex, and the City and Liberties of Westminster.

Walter Fawkes, Esq. of Farnley Hall, Yorkshire, who died on Wednesday, had been twice High Sheriff of that county, and for a short time represented it in Parliament. He was a descendant of the celebrated conspirator of that name, and prided himself not a little on his pedigree.

Mrs. Christmas, the wife of the unfortunate man who has been sentenced to transportation, has published an appeal to the benevolent, in which she states that in consequence of the intimacy of her husband with "a certain female of well known celebrity at Covent-Garden theatre," she has been left without the means of existence.—Morning Herald.

THE MOMUMENT AT WATERLOO.

A fine monument is now erecting at Waterloo by the Netherlands Government to commemorate the unparalleled victory gained by our arms on those ever memorable plains of glory.

The momunent has a very imposing effect, even in its unfinished state. It is an earthen mound or hill, of a conical form, and of immense size, being upwards of 700 feet diameter at the base, or 2,160 feet circumference. It is 200 feet high, and 100 feet in diameter at the top; there is a double carriage road winding round it, in a spiral form, and supplying an easy means of ascent for carriages to the very top; and by this road the materials have been, and are conveyed to complete the work. In the centre is a shaft of brick work, which has been carried up from the bottom, and is still going on. It is to be sixty feet higher than the top of the mound, making the whole height 260 feet. It is intended for a pedestal, to receive a lion 21 feet long and 12 feet high, which is ready to be put up, when the work is finished. The mound has been eighteen months in hand, and is to be completed in six more, and from what has been already done, little doubt remains that it will be so. For the last twelve months 2,000 men, 600 horses, and as many carts as could be kept at work were employed on it, and the number has only been reduced as the termination of this great undertaking approaches. At present, as the works are going on, at the top it has a pleasing appearance from the great number of horses, carts, and people ascending and descending by the winding road.

The brig Jubilee was sunk off Margate Sands, in 11 fathoms water, in November last, laden with 185 pieces of brandy, and 14 cases of very old and curious ditto. The Margate boatmen have made several ineffectual attempts to raise her, and have been at a very considerable expence in so doing.

In August last, the Messrs. Cramp, of Margate; and the Messrs. Bell, of Whitstable, undertook the arduous task of raising this vessel upon an entire new principle, acting by a mechanical power of screws and levers through the centre of a large vessel, built of deal for the purpose of admitting the apparatus. By this means the Jubilee was raised out of the bowels of the deep, and screwed up under the keel of the other vessel. They brought her away with the tide six miles up the Channel, when it came on to blow a gale, and it was considered most prudent to let her down again, under a sand called the Tongue, where she now remains in safety till the weather moderates.

The parties have been able to secure about 100 pieces of the brandy, which is in excellent condition, and is safely landed at Whitstable.

The principle invented by Messrs. Cramp and Bell, it appears, is of no small importance to the commercial interest; and, no doubt, they will have their due encouragement.

A gentleman in the Bath Herald, with his name and residence, very public-spiritedly advertises the treatment he met with from the landlord of the Swan Inn, at Wells, who first denied that he had any horses in his stable, and afterwards refused to let him have a pair a stage of twelve miles only; though he discovered afterwards there were three pairs in the stable. A few such exposures as these, where monopoly exists, would soon cure the evil.

Mr. Frederick Schmidt, of Stutgard, has discovered an oil for chronometers, and such like fine work, which will not freeze at minus 17 of Fahrenheit's thermometer, does not dry at 212, and boils at 512. As it is not affected by cold at upwards of 50 degrees below the freezing point, Mr. Schmidt is of opinion, in which he is confirmed by experiments, that this oil would not be affected under the Poles.

The back of the great timber ship, the Baron of Renfrew, was, we understand, so completely broken during her voyage, that previous to her grounding, she drew 25 feet water in the midships, and 34 at each extremity.

It is confidently believed, that when the Duke of Wellington's eldest son, the Marquis of Douro, is of age, he will become a candidate for the representation of Winchester in Parliament.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

William Blizard, of Petersham, Surrey, butcher.
George Parminter, of Earl-street, Blackfriars, coal-merchant.
Robert Perkins, of Egham, Surrey, carpenter.
Thomas Marten, of Upper Thames-street, corn-dealer.

BANKRUPTS.

John Woods and Henry Williams, of Hastings, Grocers. Sols. Messrs. Spence and Desborough, Size-lane.

Edward Davies, of Walnut-tree-walk, Lambeth, engineer. Sol. Mr. Meymott, Great Surrey-street, Blackfriars-road.

William Dunham, of Coleman-street, victualler. Sol. Mr. Blachford, Fenchurch-buildings, Fenchurch-street.

Thomas Bartram, of the Borough of Warwick, Warwickshire, slater. Sol. Mr. Platt, New Boswell-court, Lincoln's Inn.

Thomas Trott, of New Gloucester-street, Hoxton, builder. Sols. Messrs. Pope and Brewer, Bloomfield-street, London-wall.

John Knowles and John Wilkinson Knowles, of Bent-mills, Yorkshire, cotton-spinners. Sols. Messrs. Ellis and Co., Chancery-lane.

Timothy Lawson, of Manchester, cotton-spinner. Sols. Messrs. Milne and Parry, Temple.

Marian Pierpoint, of the Strand, victualler. Sols. Messrs. Jessop and Jordan, Thavies Inn.

Thomas Roby, of Tamworth, Staffordshire, tanner. Sols. Messrs. Burfoot, King's Bench-walk, Temple.

Charles Sandoe Gilbert, of Devonport chemist. Sols. Mr. Sole, Gray's Inn-square.

William Reynolds, of Liverpool, cotton-broker. Sol. Mr. Chester, Staple Inn.

William Masters, of Duke-street, Aldgate, woollen-draper. Sols. Messrs. Watson and Broughton, Falcon-square.

William Pearman, of Euston-street, Euston-square, music-seller. Sol. Mr. Farris, Surrey-street, Strand.

John Wilson, of Leeds, Yorkshire, frizer. Sol. Mr. King, Hatton-garden, Holborn.

James Stevens, of Regent-street, Pall-mall, boot-maker. Sol. Mr. Bedford-street, Covent-garden.

William M'Murdie and William Charles Pout, of Epping, stationers. Sol. Mr. Richardson, Walbrook.

Thomas Tatton, of Gerrard-street, Soho, grocer. Sol. Mr. Drake, Old Fish-street, Doctors' Commons.

John Humphreys, of Harlow, Essex, builder. Sol. Mr. Baddeley, Leman street, Goodman's-fields.

James Jackson, of Dorvill's-row, Hammersmith, shopkeeper. Sol. Mr. Coleman, Tyson-street, Wilmington-square.

Samuel Williams, of Finsbury-square, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Barrow, and Vincent, Basinghall-street.

John Overstow Smith, of High-street, Southwark, draper. Sol. Mr. Parton, Bow-church-yard, Cheapside.

William Samuel Windsor Harris Baker, Kennington-lane, Newington, silk-hat-manufacturer. Sol. Mr. Howorth, Warwick-street, Golden-square.

David Lewis, of Lampeter Pontstephen, Cardiganshire, innkeeper. Sol. Mr. Williams, Bond-court, Walbrook.

Edward Kirk, of Manchester, cotton-merchant. Sol. Mr. Edge, Manchester.

DIVIDENDS.

Nov. 19, W. Crawford, sen., Cheapside, bookseller.—Nov. 22, A. Slater Cuddington, Cheshire, corn dealer.—Nov. 19, J. Bidden, Cheapside, button-merchant.—Nov. 19, H. Jay, Kilburn, carpenter.—Nov. 19, W. MacGregor, Lower Fore-street, Lambeth, brewer.—Nov. 19, J. Bray, London-Wall, Livery, stable-keeper, job-master.—Nov. 19, T. Byrne, King-street, Bryanstone-square tailor.—Nov. 19, J. Carter, Downing-street, Westminster, victualler.—Nov. 19, W. Shephard, Sloane-Terrace, Chelsea, plumber.—Nov. 19, J. Welch, Princess-street, Lambeth, japanned-leather-manufacturer.—Nov. 19, J. Sherwin and J. Drane, Gould-square, Crutched Friarss, combe-makers.—Nov. 19, J. Marshall, Black Horse-Yard, Gray's-inn-lane, box-maker.—Nov. 25, J. Griffiths, Liverpool, grocer and provision-dealer.—Nov. 21, J. Manifold, Kendal, Westmorland, skinner.—Nov. 19, G. B. Clarke, New Shoreham, Sussex, brewer.—Nov. 23, D. Darby, Olive-Hill, Halesowen, Salop, miller.—Nov. 19, T. Pine and E. Davis, Maidstone, miller.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The disgusting details from Brussels we cannot yet submit, or we should have done so long ago, as they have been in our possession nearly a month. We are not idle respecting them, and when we can fully detail their gross enormities, Civis may be assured it shall be done. We do not know if Henry Grey Bennett is now in Italy.

Margaret may send the verses. How could she doubt their welcome? none can be so pleased with flights of Peg-as-us.

We cannot insert the letter of Modestus to Mrs. Calcraft, relative to her appearance in Estifania; but will in a friendly way convey his hint to her.—"The view of Brest," as Nugent said, is better at the Diorama than on the stage.

The paragraph to which H. alludes will be found in another corner of our Paper, but we refrain from making any comment thereon until we ascertain whether Mrs. Christmas has made any appeal to the public, by stating that Mrs. Chatterley's acquaintance with Mr. Christmas has not only ruined him, but her. We have nothing to do with any performer's private affairs, unless they thrust them on the public; but if the appeal has been made, and Mrs. Chatterley permits it to remain unanswered, we shall certainly notice it in a subsequent Number.

L. M. is totally inadmissible.

We are immovable relative to Lord Deerhurst; and Elector is informed, that the conduct of the grocer near the Townhall will be communicated to the proper quarter.

Amicus informs us, that His Royal Highness Prince Leopold subscribed 10l. to the relief of the families of those who were drowned in witnessing the late launch of the Princess Charlotte; and considering what he gained by the lamented Princess of that name, we think it truly liberal.

The account of the Reporter's visit to the Coroner's son, and the result of his Journey to Portsmouth, has come to hand.

THE AGE.

LONDON, October 30.

The particulars of the capture of Donabew and Prome have been published in a Supplement to a Gazette of Friday last, only a part of which our limits admit of inserting. The former place was taken on the 2d of April, without much loss on our side: although, during the siege, the enemy made several bold and desperate sorties on the British lines, in one of which the Burmese, with a view to create alarm amongst our troops, attacked them with a charge of elephants; but they failed to create the dismay which was anticipated, and were completely put to the rout; and having lost their Commander, Bundoolah, the garrison dispersed, and the place immediately surrendered. Prome was taken on the 25th of April, and with the place, one hundred and one pieces of cannon fell into our hands, although nearly one-quarter of the town was destroyed by fire.—Prince Sarrawuddy, with the remnant of his people, was retiring direct upon the capital, destroying the villages, grain, boats, &c. of every description, which lay in the line of his retreat.—A reinforcement of troops, and thirty pieces of cannon, were within a short distance of Prome, when Sir Archibald Campbell took possession of it. The troops had dispersed, and the greater part of the guns, together with the war boats, had fallen into the hands of the flotilla, under the command of Captain Alexander, R.N.—The position of Prome is described as extremely formidable, the hills by which it is surrounded being fortified to their summits. The place, indeed, is by nature, so strong, that, in the opinion of Sir A. Campbell, ten thousand steady soldiers would have defended it against any attack of ten times that force.—It affords us much satisfaction to add, that the whole of these services were performed without a single casualty.

We had occasion, some time since, to dilate on the projected formation of sundry Pap schools in the populous towns of Birmingham and Liverpool, and both upon their construction, and the Mechanics' Institutes, a very able article appears in the Quarterly Review, just published. Our limits will not admit of our entertaining the subject as fully as we could wish; but we cannot refrain from giving insertion to the following admirably drawn character of Mr. Brougham, who is first fiddle to all these trumpery projects:—

"Much, undoubtedly, of the alarm which these institutions have occasioned, and of the opposition they have experienced, is to be attributed to the patronage and advocacy of the gentleman whose Practical Observations are at the head of our paper. It is his singular infelicity to prejudice every cause which he undertakes to advance:—with all the zeal, industry, and pertinacity—all the power of labour, endurance, and privation, mental and bodily all the self-confidence and versatility which Sallust attributes to his hero, and far more than all his talent, information, and eloquence, he is yet confessedly the most unfit of all distinguished public men of the present age to lead a party, or to conduct the struggle for any great and opposed measure. By some remarkable ingredient in his character, he is morally sure to cool the ardour of friends, and to import division into their counsels; to invigorate and concentrate the opposition of enemies, and to fill their ranks with determined recruits from all who were at first only timid, suspicious, or neutral. And no wonder—to conciliate by unimportant concession, to re-assure by patient explanation, to reason with his adversary as an honest and sensible, though mistaken man; these are methods of advancing his cause which he either disdains, or knows not how to use; the weapons of his argumentation, so familiar in use as to seem almost natural to the user, are commiseration of besotted ignorance, sarcasm on interested motives, assumption of measureless superiority. It would be strange indeed in the infirmity of our nature if this did not make cold followers out of zealous co-operators, and turn opponents in argument into personal enemies. Mr. Brougham, has been so long, and so frequently, a public speaker, and is gifted with such real power both of reasoning and eloquence, that it would be wrong to suppose him actuated by the pitiful desire of pointing periods for the momentary applause, without the real approbation of his hearers. But it is extraordinary, that in fact every thing, which in his sober judgment he must think most important, is sacrificed to the effect of an instant. No matter how deep the wound in others, or how bitter and lasting the regret to himself; all private feelings, all public considerations, the force of his argument, the success of the cause for which he pleads, and the interest of his party, seem to weigh but as a feather against the indulgence of this unhappy vein. Looking, as we do, with much interest upon some of the schemes to which Mr. Brougham is devoted, we see, with no unfriendly exultation, but with great regret, this capital defect in his composition as a public man."

In another part of our Paper will be found the particulars of the Court Martial held on Captain Hoppner, for the loss of His Majesty's ship Fury; and, after a perusal of the distresses and hardships to which the officers and men engaged in this expedition were subject, we think our readers will give us credit for having, in our Number of August 28th, in the following verse of a Song, foretold the probable result of such an undertaking:—

"There's Captain Parry, trying hard to pass the Northern Zone.—Fol de rol, &c. &c.
But the chances are, I rather fancy, pretty plainly shown,
That before he turns the Northern Pole, he's like to turn his own.—Fol de rol, &c. &c."

We have much pleasure in recording an instance of respect and personal feeling lately evinced to the Reverend Dr. Spry, the new Rector of Marylebone, in the presentation to him of a superb piece of plate, by a part of the congregation of his late Ministry at Christ Church, Birmingham, in consideration of undeviating attention to their worldly and spiritual happiness, and a strict yet unassuming fulfilment of the sacred duties entrusted to his charge, during a period of eleven years, involving times of considerable turbulence and circumstances of singular event. In the capacity of a Magistrate, for the County of Warwick, Dr. Spry maintained, against all the malevolence of low party spleen, the fulminations of republicanism, and the outrages committed through those obvious privations and distresses which the sudden transitions from war to peace produced among the lower orders of society—that determination of conduct, that performance of public trust, and that impartiality in its administration, which tended so entirely to tranquillize the insubordination of this populous part of the country, and to establish its inhabitants in that state of internal comfort, and manufacturing prosperity they now enjoy—while, in the situation of a Minister, he dispersed, with fervency and piety, the sacred lessons of His Divine Master, and, in a more trying scene, when the daring spirits of Radicalism had insulted every statute of order and system, and still unsated, dared to enter the sanctuary he guarded, and violate the Altar of God, Dr. Spry, with a firmness never to be forgotten, addressed these runagates from the pulpit over which he presided, triumphed over their attempts, and finally dispersed them from the hallowed spot into which they had thus intruded. Services of such importance, both in point of effect and precedent, were never lost sight of by the Government, and on the building of Langham Chapel Dr. Spry was immediately selected as its Minister; and shortly afterwards, this incipient step was followed up by His Most Gracious Majesty appointing him to the more important trust—the Rectory of the opulent and extensive Parish of Marylebone. The presentation in question, an account of which is given in another part of our Paper, was undertaken by a Mr. Charles Cope and some other members of Doctor Spry's late community, and exhibits in its detail, a very delicate but full appreciation of public service on the one side, and a very modest but proper acceptation of it on the other. Mr. Cope, who has been represented to us as a gentleman of considerable intellectual attainments, and at the same time loyalty of principle, has been elected, we hear, to the seat on the Bench, vacated by Dr. Spry.

A Little MORE

Of the Life of Sheridan. 2 vol. Foolio.—Longman and Co. 6 Guineas.

We have been favoured with the sight of a manuscript now preparing for publication, under this title, in which will be traced many more of the peculiarities of that extraordinary man who is the hero of its pages, than have been introduced in its predecessor, which we commented upon at some length in our last number; and we feel peculiar satisfaction in being enabled to add another mite to the vast fund of intellect, amusement, and political ascendancy, embodied in this wonderful individual, the particulars of which are now the theme of every circle we go into, and every mouth that speaks in them. As it is not our intention to forestall the contents of this seemingly fine work, we have only availed ourselves of the author's kind permission to the extent of a few extracts, herewith subjoined, which are quite sufficient to convince the reader of the great treat he has in petto, in the perusal of this forthcoming biography:

. . . . . "His turn for epigram was, like the Pyramids of Egypt, truly wonderful; for I remember sitting by his side in the house, when he was delivering one of those glorious speeches which signalised his fame, that P—tt and D—d—s came staggering in, like men who sleep alone, rather beside themselves; and Sheridan availing himself of the circumstance, observed, "This sort of indecision of character, or, I should probably say, this difference of opinion on a given subject, reminds me of two friends of mine, who entered the house one evening, and delivered the following epigrammatic dialogue:—

'I cannot see the speaker, Hal,
Can you?
Not see the speaker, P—t,
Why dammee, I see two.'

and really to describe the merriment which this happy jeu de mot excited throughout St. Stephen's, would be, like Penelope's web, quite an endless task."

. . . . . At this period I was on the greatest intimacy with the subject of this memoir, and I feel proud in saying I never experienced a greater delight than when I found myself conversing with so wonderful a man; though I own I felt my own insignificancy. In one of our evening tete a tetes I heard a remark drop from this eloquent statesman, which I believe is confined to my own knowledge. I was discussing a point with Sheridan, who was, I perceived to my great surprise, a little inebriated. I was urging him to take my advice, but he was so intent on a glass of sherry which was before him, that I found the greatest difficulty in getting in a word; when I began, "I assure you," he stopped me short with, "drink another glass—full house at Drury-lane." I continued, "I beg, I wish, I really"—at last, with that readiness which characterised all his bon mots, he answered "I, I, I, d——n your I's, don't annoy me with your lectures."

The following anecdote pleased us particularly, as illustrating the names of other great people, as well Sheridan:—

. . . . . "The School for Scandal was performed at Drury Lane, in 1804, for the purpose of combining the talents of Mr. Mathews, in Sir Peter Teazle, Mr. Elliston, in Charles Surface, and Mrs. Davis, or (then Miss Duncan) in Lady Teazle—their first appearances. The immortal author, like an eaglet watching her young, sat in a box to see the performance, being particularly anxious about 'the promising young man,' as he called Elliston, and when, as Charles Surface, he was selling the family pictures, he said 'that is painted by Sir Godfrey Kneller, after his best manner, and is esteemed a formidable likeness,'—upon hearing which, Sheridan turned round to "everlasting Spring," (who was standing behind his master, and touching his forehead with all his fingers), and said "Sam, Sam, that's wrong—I wrote in his best manner, not after—how can a man paint after his own manner, hey Sam?"—and out he rushed towards the Green-room, to set 'the promising young man' to rights in the passage."

No man, it has been universally admitted, was readier at a burlesque kind of poetry than Mr. Sheridan, and throughout the whole work there does not appear a happier touch of the kind than in the following verse:—

. . . . . About this period, our great Senator accepted an invitation from Doctor Joett (I believe), of Cambridge, for the purpose of unbending his mind after the fatigues of one of the heaviest Sessions I remembered for many years, where his presence, like the Eastern sun which is said to warm every thing it shines upon, imparted a brilliancy and a delight to all around him. The Doctor was a peculiar character, precise in all his ways, regular in his habits, and singularly neat in the whole of his domestic arrangements—this, of course, could not escape the discerning eye of Sheridan, who, walking round his garden one afternoon, entered a summer-house, and left these lines, in ridicule of the diminutive Doctor, and his little niceties:—

'Here's a pretty little garden, by little Joett made,
Who's encompassed it around with a little palisade;
If you would wish to know the taste of little Joett,
This pretty little garden will not a little show it.' *

The excellent joke of Mr. Richardson and the hackney-coach is in every sense of the word characteristic of Sheridan; but highly as we admired that anecdote, we must yield the preference to the subjoined one, as more fully pourtraying this odd sort of trait in his life:—

. . . . . Sheridan was going down to the House one afternoon, and just at Charing-cross, a person on horseback (to whom, odd enough to say, he was in debt) came up to him, and said "I beg your pardon, Sir, for accosting you in the street, but I have called so many times at your house for that small account, without being able to see you, that I am induced to ask you for it now." "To be sure, my dear fellow," said Sheridan, "with great pleasure—how much is it?" to which the man replied, "only 3*l.* 6s., Sir." Sheridan then putting his hand in his pocket, as if to pull out his purse, said "3*l.* 6s.! to be sure I will—by-the-bye what a pretty nag that is of your's, is she for sale?" "Why, I should't mind, if I could get her price—she is a real good 'un." "What," said Sheridan, "is the mark—has she good paces?" "None better, Sir," said the man. "Just run her down," said the orator. On which the man, making sure of his "little bill," and thinking also to sell his nag, trotted her down towards Parliament-street (the way he felt certain Sheridan was going), when the statesman trotted up the Strand, leaving man and horse, the bill, and the debate, to settle the matter between them as well as they could."

It is quite apparent that nearly about this period of his life, his biographer beeame almost certain he mutst be in debt, or at least he wished to be, for we find this passage on the subjeet:—

. . . . . In looking over the papers of the late Mr. PEAKE, the Drury-lane Treasurer, I found this note:—

"Dear Peake,

"For God's sake send me 10*l.*—an accident has happened, and I am dying. "R. B. S."

"Hole in the Wall, Chancery-lane, eleven at night."

and on investigating the business with Mr. DUNN, the successor to Mr. PEAKE, I learnt from him, that they all set off with the money in the greatest consternation, to the Manager's relief, and found him, not merely dying, but dead—drunk, to their utter dismay, and on questioning him, as well as they could, on the subject of his note, and asking him what he could mean by saying he was dying—"What was the use—(hiccup)"—said he, "of sending word I was living—(hiccup)—I shouldn't have got the money then"—(hiccup.)

. . . . . The impression on my mind, relative to his labouring under some trifling pecuniary difficulty, was fully confirmed by a conversation I overheard, at this time, between SHERIDAN and his son THOMAS. "If you dare to disobey me," said he, "I'll cut you off with a shilling." To which TOM replied, "Who'll you get to lend it you, father?" Which question seemed to puzzle this great man very considerably.

The next passage worthy of record is a diary kept by Mr. SHERIDAN, in his own hand-writing, and which, as exhibiting the true eharaeter of the man, is entitled to the utmost credit; nor ean we sufficiently acknowledge our obligations to the person through whose means the biographer became possessed of it, or his determination to break through all private eonsiderations, for the advancement of public gratification:—

. . . . . "A few years before his decease, he entrusted the following diary to a confideutial friend, with a strong injunction not to let it be seen by any mortal eye. This friend has favoured me with a private view of it, under another restriction of the same nature, something like the Gordian knot, and nothing but the imperative duty of a biographer would induce me to commit so great a breach of confidence, as the disclosure of a single word of it. A part of the diary runs as follows:—

"Rose at four—followed BYRON's recommendation, and drank a glass of hock and soda-water—sent for 'little PEAKE,' the D. L. Treasurer—glanced on the receipts—insisted on having 'a hundred' out of them—found, on inspection, that was more than was in 'em—took what I could get—the Treasurer seemed a 'littled piqued,' as the salaries were not paid. Hate the profession since BETSY left it†—they are unreasonable enough to require payment for their services. HOLLAND called—said rather a good thing—recommended him a glass of HOLLANDS, as he was out of spirits—promised to take him to my box at Drury-lane, to see RULE a Wife and have a Wife; it being to him a novelty—promised to pair off with . . . . . in the House of Commons—would have preferred it, had it been with his wife. S. ROGERS, the prose poet, called; we dub him ass ROGERS. BYRON looked at his foot, and appeared offended when I asked him to walk to the CLUB. Began a poem 'on the state of the drama—couldn't get farther than "The Dram—"' Received a note from FOX, abusing me for not making a speech last night; he made a speech long enough for both of us—thought of the 'Fox and the GRAPES.' MRS. SIDDONS sent to say she wouldn't play without being paid—hate the play and PAY system—tried to persuade her by every argument—none but golden ones had any effect.‡ Tried a poem to Mrs. JORDAN—began 'on JORDAN Banks,—meant no allusion to JOSEPH BANKS. Promised to dine at the Crown and Anchor—very likely to get Royalty drunk. Tried to borrow 11*l.* from CHERRY, the author—found I couldn't get 'a bob at a Cherry.' Bet 100*l.* with ESSEX that I produced a comedy at Drury-lane in the space of three months—determined in some way to set the house ON FIRE."

With the following extraet we shall terminate our notice of this interesting book for the present week, and shall only remark that if there is a fault throughout the work, it is, as we said of the one we noticed last week, too great a propensity to SIMILE.

. . . . . "One of the latest of SHERIDAN's witticisms, and which deserves a rank among the first specimens of repartee we know, occurred at a large party one night; and, lingered on our ears for the remainder of the evening. The Wit had remained silent for nearly an hour, by which we were all inclined to believe he was reserving himself for a great opportunity, and so it turned out, for on BURKE rising up to stir the fire, FOX, who was near him, said, 'BURKE, what a very short coat that is of yours.' On hearing which, SHERIDAN's eye, like the fire his friend had just been poking, lighted up, and he said, 'Very true, but it will be long ENOUGH before he gets another.' From this moment I rather think his intellect became impaired."

'Like a rich jewel in an Æthiop's ear,'

. . . . . "My readers must be convinced that unpoetically speaking, the subject of my biography was an individual of resplendent talents, with a wit, like the diamonds from Golconda's mines, very bright; with an eloquence like DEMOSTHENES, very eloquent indeed—that he was a man who never sacrificed principle for interest, at the base shrine of avarice, and who, to quote a line from an equally talented countryman of his, was

'A light that ne'er will shine again.'"

NOTES BY THE AUTHOR.

* It was whispered in the best informed circles at the time, that the following reply was sent to Mr. SHERIDAN, after his departure, but he always denied it to me.

Great SHERIDAN may come and "go it,"
Just as he likes, at little JOETT,
And borrow, willing to bestow it,
Ideas, or ought else, from JOETT,
But money—and that, little JOETT,
Knows SHERIDAN will always "owe it!"

† I perfectly agree with Mr. SHERIDAN in his dislike of the profession, ever since one of them led me such a dance.—T. M.

‡ The late assertion in most of the papers, that Mr. SHERIDAN's eloquence prevailed over Mrs. SIDDONS, is incorrect.

We had entertained great hopes that the Tom and Jerry mania, which seized on HIS MAJESTY'S subjeets some three or four years ago, had, in a great measure subsided—at all events, in that class of society where the precepts of edueation, the influence of rank, and the force of example, ought to ineulcate very opposite principles; but some occurrenees which have lately been detailed in the papers, have tended to convince us that the hopes we had entertained are not only frustated, but frustrated in the very quarters where we had indulged a belief they would have been most cherished. The Honourable AUGUSTUS CURZON, a younger son of LORD SCARSDALE, has been summoned to Bow-street, for mal-treating a foreign tutor who was appointed his instructor, in addition to which, it appears he has been in the habit of repeatedly borrowing money from him, and failing in that, at last borrowed his broach, whieh he converted into money, BY PAWNING IT! A mueh more disgraeeful thing than this it is not easy to imagine—a transaction that would banish a person in a less elevated walk of life from its cireles, and cast an indelible stain on his present repttation, and future prospects; and which ought to be still more foreibly resented in a young man, without one solitary excuse for sitch meanness and peenlation, and who, had he no other inducement to hold a bright character in the world, should at least have suffieient pride not to tarnish the dignity of his family, on whose eoat he will find emblazoned the motto of "JUSTLY and MILDLY," a singular inseripsion for a person to wear, who has been beating (mildly) an old man, and pawning (justly) his property!

But we have to reeord another instanee of this fashionable propensity, even more outrageous than the other, in which the heroes are the Honourable GEORGE BERKELEY MOLYNEUX, son to the EARL of SEFTON, a CAPTAIN in the Seventh Hussars; WILLIAM AUGUSTUS BROADHEAD, Esquire, a LIEUTEF NANT, and JOHN WHITE, Esquire, a CORNET in th same regiment, against whom an indietment was preferred at the late Quarter Sessions for the Borough oe Beverley, for an assault upon NATHANIEL DALBY of the Beverley Arms Inn, and JANE, his wife; whil,f the two latter gentlemen, with CHARLES PECKHAME Esquire, were also indieted for a subsequent riot and, assault upon the watchmen of Beverley; for which, as ALL the Court could do (except giving them a severe rebitke, which the gentlemen eared as mueh about, as they did about committing the assaults), Captain MOLYNEUX was fined 50*l.*; the LIEUTENANT, 20*l.*; and the CORNET, 30*l.*; while, for the other indictment, eaeh party was fined 40*l.* To men of fortune (and the CAPTAIN's father has won immensely at play this last season) fines of any amount are a mere bagatelle, consequently they require dealing with in a different way; and it is, therefore, under this impression, that we eonfidently hope the COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, (who is equally desirous of supporting the dignity of the Army, as he is proud of the dignity to whieh his exertions have raised it), will, at least, by a severe reprimand, express his opinion to these gallant soldiers, of men, who devote their time to breaking lamps, assaulting females, beating watchmen, and other manly exercises, thereby thoroughly disgracing the HONOURABLE PROFESSION into which they have been somewhat incautiously admitted. We have felt it our duty to submit these remarks, in a determination to show our anxiety for a proper support of the Constitution, and a due respeet for its Laws, whereby alone the glory of our eountry, and the wishes of our MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN can be fully upheld; at the same time to evinee a spirit that will never scruple, under any motive, or at any suggestion, to hold up to publie eontempt, those servants of the CROWN, who so far forget themselves, and the distinguished service to which they belong, as to deseend from the rank of OFFICERS and GENTLEMEN, to become night brawlers, and downright blackguards.

Last week, a pumpkin of an EXTRAORDINARY SIZE, weighing 87 pounds, and measuring five feet and a half in circumference, was CUT in the garden of the Hon. Mrs. CHILDERS, of Paradise House, Henley-on-Thames.—Morning Post.

We are authorised to state that LORD NUGENT is not the PUMPKIN in question, as, in eonsequenee of HIS LORDSHIP not being acqttainted with the HONOURABLE MRS. CHILDERS, he could not well be cut by her.

The particulars of the awful catastrophe which befel the Comet steam-paeket will be found in another part of our Paper; and after paying every tribute of respeet to the memory of the dead, with a view to console the feelings of the living, the publie attention should be direeted to a full trial of the CAPTAIN of the Ayr, who appears to us, in the present state of things, a wreteh of the first order—we trust we may be undeceived abottt him. All comment on the nature of sitch a visitation would be superfluous—an idea of sitch an event ean barely be given, but if possible to be conveyed, the following splendid passage from Lord BYRON's second Canto of Don Juan, will go further towards it than any eombination of words in our langtiage:—

"Then rose from sea to sky the wild farewell,
Then shriek'd the timid, and stood still the brave;
Then some leap'd overboard with dreadful yell,
As eager to anticipate their grave;
And the sea yawn'd around her like a hell,
And down she suck'd with her the whirling wave,
Like one who grapples with his enemy,
And strives to strangle him before he die.

And first one universal shriek there rush'd,
Louder than the loud ocean, like a crash
Of echoing thunder; and then all was hush'd,
Save the wild shriek and the remorseless dash
Of billows; but at intervals there gush'd,
Accompanied with a convulsive splash,
A solitary shriek, the bubbling cry
Of some strong swimmer in his agony."

The Times is unfortunate in its intelligence. On Tuesday it stated that Sir George Cockburn, a Vice-Admiral of the Fleet, and a Lord of the Admiralty, was to proceed to Colombia in the capacity of Minister Plenipotentiary. This we contradicted. To day, meaning to correct its mistake, it says, "it is Sir Alexander Cockburn who has been appointed Envoy to Colombia." There is NO such person as Sir Alexander Cockburn; and further, NO Minister is as yet appointed to Colombia at all.—Courier.

There never was such "Times."—Comic Song.

THEATRICALS.

There was a period in the good old dramatie times when the Bath, and other provineial theatres of eelebrity, were looked upon as the nursery for Metropolitan talent, and no one ever thought of venturing before a London audience, who had not undergone this very proper and necessary ordeal; but matters now are very differently regulated, and the influenee of private friendship with the Managers or Proprietors of the winter theatres, a very good account of a man given by himself, or a peeuniary douceur, will often obtain, what nothing but acknowledged ability ought to obtain, an appearance on the Metropolitan stage. To illustrate this, we have only to recur to the host of Richards, Macbeths, Juliets, Belvideras, Rosalinds, and so on, which have appeared, and disappeared, within the last few years, and of the force of the argument no better evidence can be adduced than the failure on Wednesday last of Mr. FITZHARRIS, at Covent Garden theatre, in the eharaeter of Othello, who fitlly proved its "occupation gone:" and while we are willing to believe this failure arose more from physieal defects, than through a thorough want of judgment, it comes at last to the same conelusion, that, if any eompetent judge had seen him in a large provincial theatre, we should have been spared the unpleasantry of eondemning him, and he of receiving such a deeisive condemnation. Mr. FITZHARRIS comes reeommended, we hear, by the Mayor and Corporation of Reading, and is there designated the Reading OTHELLO,—It is to be hoped the next time he appears he will be better read in OTHELLO, than he was on the present oeeasion. These pudding-headed Aldermen send up an actor as they do a Member of Parliament, and eare not a farthing whether the one is FYSHE PALMER, or the other FITZHARRIS, as long as it tickles their Berkshire noddles. With the exeeption of Mr. WARDE, who aeted Iago admirably, the play was represented qtite disgracefully; for we are compelled to ask why Mr. KEMBLE, who is the very best Cassio ever perhaps on the stage, did not appear as its representative on this oeeasion? To talk of its being derogatory is nonsense, when the same gentleman has walked as a puppet in the French Coronation. The inference which people will draw then is, that, well knowing the Othello must fail, he is obliged to take the eharacter himself, beeause so great an expence has been gone to in the new costume—we do not believe this to be KEMBLE'S motive, and popular as he is, and justly so, he should not give other people an opportunity of thinking so, for "by my troth" it hath that appearance. Mrs. SLOMAN is a very bad Desdemona, and Mrs. FAUCIT a no better Emilia, and the only effect she produced is, when seeing Othello on his wife's bed, she exclaims—

"Aye, lay thee down and roar,"

the laughter, on hearing whieh, was literally convulsive. Rule a Wife and have a Wife has been revived, and with the very fine personation of Leon by Mr. KEMBLE, and the aid of JONES, BLANCHARD, and Mrs. CALCRAFT, who really played Estifania exeellently well, was received so favourably, that its repetition will decidedly attraet. The additions of sueh unneeessary appendages as Miss HELME and Miss GOWARD is no avail to this theatre—Miss LOVEis worth a whole lot of sueh; but we recommend to the Management, the engagement of a little more first-rate talent for the eompany, backed by a heroine in tragedy, a youthful LADY-LIKE person in comedy, and a leading male singer, would then be nearly complete.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE has certainly been trying how the system of legitimacy will suit the public taste, but we must say it has not been that kind of legitimacy at all likely to agree with it. Love for Love and She Would and she Would Not, have been attended as the CONFEDERACY will be: and although they are the means of embodying the splendid talents of Mrs. DAVISON, Miss KELLY, Mr. DOWTON, and others, not forgetting the unassuming and agreeable talent of Miss I. PATON, yet those very talents, eombined in less objeetionable pieees, would produce those very effects whieh they now mar. We were favoured, on Friday, at this theatre, with an agreeable afterpiece, entitled The Wedding Present, remarkable for a pleasant dialogue, a good plot (somewhat forestalled by Husbands and Wives at the rival house), and some exeellent music by HORN it fully sueceeded, and will attract—but before we dismiss its merits, we cannot omit recording an extraet from the criticism of the Times on this said farce:—

"Prior to the commencement of the season, it was rumoured that the dramas presented at this theatre would be submitted to MR. KENNY. We are now very much inclined to doubt the truth of this report, for Mr. KENNY is unquestionably a clever dramatic writer, and we think it wholly impossible that any clever man could tolerate such dull unmeaning TRASH as The Wedding Present."

Upon which we have only to remark, that Mr. KENNY is the reader to this theatre, and is, moreover, the author of The Wedding Present—this Cockney writer must be drunk or mad.

The HAYMARKET THEATRE is now completely deserted, and the only one thing whieh has produced a laugh from the few auditors since LISTON's departure, has been the tragedy of Pizarro. We are not disposed to think with the Times that Mr. J. VINING'S Rolla was a heinous performance, but, on the eontrary, consider him a person of talent in a less aspiring walk of his profession; but saving that, and his brother's Alonzo, you can fancy nothing so dire.

Almagio, Coveney! Davilla, W. Johnson! Gonzalo, Cooke!

Gomez, C. Jones! Las Casas, Clarkson! Valverde, Johnson! Sentinel, Ebsworth! Orano, Coates! Blind-man, Buff!! Boy, G. Carr! Elvira, Mrs. Glover! Cora, Miss Phillips! High Priest . . . . . David Daw.

Mrs. Glover, so fine an actress in comedy, is the very reverse in tragedy, and she floundered about in Elvira exactly, to use a simile about her in the European Magazine, like a seventy-four-gun ship, broke from her moorings, while her daughter completely ruined all the interest in Cora; her appearing in the part at all, with so pleasing an actress as Mrs. Hill in the theatre, is disgraceful. The virgins and chorusses were led by Madame Vestris, David Daw, and others, who, unlike any really modest virgins, had each a little sun at their breast, and the receipts of the house amounted to 16*l.* 4s. Neither Madame Vestris's legs, nor her management, can support the burden of the concern, and her voice in "Cherry ripe," out of Paul Pry, is now quite the "vox clamantis in deserto."

The Adelphi's success is unabated—indeed so much so, that it was found unnecessary to produce a very clever piece they have all-prepared, and which appears to-morrow, founded on the American Novel of the Pilot, by a Mr. Ball. Indeed we know no treat beyond Yates's imitations in Quadrupeds. We do not withold the palm from those of Reeve, or his "Heavy wet," but the others are so truly laughable, so thoroughly and delightful a burlesque—so completely verifying the remark of there being but one step between the sublime and the ridiculous, that it is the very acme of all amusement.

We have received a communication, subscribed Sandie, from Edinburgh—but as we know the statement of a man being found in Miss Foote's bed room to be all fudge, and have moreover traced the story to a theatrical puff, to raise her notoriety, we decline inserting it. No such luck for her—besides, Ninny is in London. With the same attempt at humbug are we assured, by yesterday's Chronicle, that the charming and interesting actress, Miss F. H. Kelly, was not on board the Comet when she sunk—and what earthly motive there can be in this, unless it is to prove that poor little Kelly, though she is discharged from Covent Garden theatre, is not a sinking actress, we are quite at a loss to divine. We cannot do better than conclude this article with the following account, extracted from the Morning Post, of the opening of the Ramsgate Theatre, by Mr. Faucit Savill, or, more properly speaking, Mr. Saville Faucit, the husband of Mrs. Faucit, of Covent Garden Theatre, and Brompton-square, Brompton:—

"This improving Watering Place may be considered now as in the very zenith of its season, having from the healthiness of its situation, retained its attractions much later than anterior seasons, particularly since the increase of public amusements, by the erection of a handsome new Theatre by Mr. Faucit Savill, Proprietor also of the Margate Theatre, which opened on Monday last. The builders are Messrs. Grandy, Craven, and Wildish, who have displayed much skill and taste in its construction.

"The first prominent feature on which the eye rests, is the Painted Curtain, or Act Drop Scene, comprising architecture, drapery, and landscape, so appropriately blended as to produce a beautiful effect. The front of both tiers of boxes is a salmon ground, with broad gold beadings, which enclose a running pattern of the Rose, Thistle, and Shamrock, executed by Mr. Connor, of the Bath Theatre!!!

On the rising of the curtain, the whole corps dramatique were discovered in two semicircles, flanked by the Margate Military Band in full uniform, who attended to assist in the National Anthem of "God save the King." As soon as the repeated peals of welcome had been given to the Manager and his Company, Mr. Savill stepped forward and delivered an opening Address, which was greatly applauded by a crowded audience!!!"

One would naturally suppose the Ramsgate Establishment was little short of either of the Metropolitan theatres, with its architecture, landscape, tiers of boxes, gold beadings, and two semi-circles of players, flanked by the Margate band: but it would bother our readers' brains to learn that it is a small provincial washing-tub, about 10 feet 6, by 5 feet 3½, and capable of holding a small family party or two—the draperies being executed, we suppose, means that they were hung by Mr. Connor, of Cov—— no, of the Bath theatre!!! Oh, this mummery!

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, Thursday.

Webster v. Uther.—This was an action to recover damages for breach of Patent. The plaintiff charged the defendant with having made a percussion lock for a gun which he claimed as his own invention.

In the course of the investigation, it appeared that neither of the parties had any right to consider the lock an invention, and the plaintiff was nonsuited.

Crooke v. Wright and another.—This was an action of trespass. The declaration charged the defendants with entering the house of the plaintiff, who is an auctioneer in Skinner-street, and seizing his goods.

The plaintiff was many years ago in a steam packet concern, but he disposed of his share. Having incautiously suffered his name to stand on the books of the Company, he remained liable to be included in any action against the parties. The defendants, who are iron masters in the North, had been employed to make a new boiler for a steam vessel. The boiler was supplied, but several of the Company having sold their shares, a delay occurred in payment: in fact the defendants never were paid. An action was brought against Mr. Crooke, and on the 29th of November, an officer entered his house to make a levy. It afterwards appeared that an error had been committed in taking out the judgment. The plaintiff consequently moved to set aside the execution on the ground of irregularity, and costs were taxed by the Master to the amount of 15l. 14s. The sum was returned to Mr. Crooke, but he refused to keep it, preferring this action for the trespass.

Mr. Scarlett contended that no trespass had been committed.

The Lord Chief Justice was of opinion that the entrance of the officer under the peculiar circumstances of the case, was a trespass, and the Jury found a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages one shilling.—Costs 40 shillings.

OLD BAILEY.—Thursday.

This day these Sessions commenced before the Lord Mayor, the Recorder, and a Bench of Magistrates, the presiding Judges being Baron Garrow and Mr. Justice Park.

John Palin, a respectable, aged man, was indicted for stealing from the person of Francis Robertson, Esq., four Bank of England notes, of 1,000l. each, on the 18th of November, 1824.

Mr. Brodnick stated the case. He said that the proof against the prisoner was necessarily imperfect in consequence of the resistance of the French witnesses to all solicitation to come over to this country. He then stated the case as it was proved in evidence.

As soon as the statement was concluded, Mr. Alley, on the part of the prisoner, submitted that there was not any sufficient ground to justify even a trial, and hoped that the Court, seeing that the only circumstance against him was the possession of the notes, would not think it necessary to proceed.

The Recorder said it was not for him to judge of the weight of evidence, and the trial must proceed.

Francis Robertson was called and examined.—I attended the Auction Mart on the 18th November, 1824, for the purpose of purchasing an estate with some bank notes which I received a short time before from Mr. Marsden, in Princes-street, whom I sent for. The notes were in number nine; they were for 1,000l. each; another note was for 500l., and another for 100l. I put them into my left-hand pocket. I bid for and purchased the estate. I paid down five of the thousand pound notes, and I had then four thousand pound notes. I folded them up and put them into my pocket. There was a great number of people in the room. I hastened out as it was getting late, it being then four o'clock. I felt considerable pressure against me. The moment I got to the end of the room, where the crowd was not so great, I found that the notes were gone. I returned and looked for them on the ground, as I thought I might have dropped them. I mentioned my loss to Mr. Thomas, and he went to the Bank to stop the payment of the notes. I went to France, and returned early in August. I caused bills to be circulated in England and in France.

Cross-examined by Mr. Adolphus.—I do not know, of my own knowledge, that the bills were circulated in France. I only saw one in July. I was in the Auction Mart on the day for two hours. The prisoner is a remarkable man; he wears powder. I think if I saw him I should have recollected him. I certainly have not the least recollection of having seen him there. I took great pains to make an inquiry in Paris. I applied to the agent of the Police, and in consequence of the information received through him, I was led to go to the prisoner's house in Holborn. He was not at home. His wife told me at once where he was. She said she had not the key of a drawer, and the officer broke it open. A letter and a thousand pound note in halves were found.

Robert C. Marsden stated that he took Mr. Robertson's check for 9,600l. to Sir Peter Pole's, banker.

The Clerk at the Bank produced the book, and it appeared that one of the notes for 1,000l. was numbered 302, and dated the 13th of October, another 2,573, another 2,574, another 2,735, another 2,736, another 9,984; there were three other notes of 1,000l. each.

Mr. Edmund Robins stated that he received the deposit-money, at the Auction Mart. It consisted of five notes of 1,000l. each, which he paid into Messrs. Ransom's bank. He had no other 1,000l. note.

Cross-examined.—Witness was in an elevated situation in the room, but certainly he saw no such person as Mr. Palin in the room.

Re-examined.—There were from 800 to 1,000 persons in the room. He could not certainly recollect every person's face that was there.

Mr. Squire, clerk to Messrs. Ransom, stated that he received the five 1,000l. notes on the above day, which corresponded in number and date with those which had been received by Mr. Robertson at Sir P. Pole's.

Mr. Cope, the City Marshal, attended on the 2d of August last, with a warrant to search Mr. Palin's house. He broke open a drawer, and found the letter and note now produced. He went to Greenwich on the same day, and apprehended the prisoner.

Cross-examined.—His wife informed me where he was. He had the keys about him. He conducted himself as a person who appeared to be unconscious of any crime.

Mr. Hobler stated that the prisoner was examined at the Mansion-House. (The witness then read the examination before the Lord Mayor.) In this account the prisoner stated that he took the note of a money-changer, of the name of Emerique, two months before, and paid for it 25,000 francs, and had it ever since. Cope, the officer, produced a letter, signed "Caroline Marcelle."

Here Mr. Cope was recalled, and stated that this letter was not the one in which the note was found. The note was folded in a blank paper—but this letter was in the same drawer. Mr. Cope, in continuation, said he thought that he had stated to Palin the day before that he had found this letter.

Palin.—No; you certainly did not.

Mr. Hobler then proceeded with the recital of the examination. Mr. Palin said, "I can prove that she paid the money. Emerique came to me to Marcelle's hotel. I had seen him before in the Palais Royal, and he said in coming to me, that the 1,000l. note had been changed at his house. He said it had been stolen. I said I did not believe it. He wished to have money for it. I asked, is it a good note? He said it was at his banker's. I said I was going away, and would leave the amount at the hotel. I left Paris the same afternoon." The prisoner then added, "I left Paris the same afternoon, and left the money with Caroline Marcelle, and she forwarded the note to me. I had previously been at his house with Mr. Vyse. He was talking with two females, and he asked what they would give for a large note. They agreed and he had the money. The man came to me the following day. I might have been at his house before to change a 5l. or 10l note. He expressed dissatisfaction at the note. I asked if it was a forgery. He said he believed it was a stolen one. I wanted an English note. Vyse left Paris some days. I know not whether it was offered to any other person a day or two before. William Vyse is a haberdasher. He lives at Islington."

The note was produced, and identified by Mr. Robertson.

Cross-examined by Mr. Adolphus.—What I now read was given successively in parts as answers to questions. The questions are not taken down.

Mr. Alley submitted that this statement without the questions, which might materially affect the import of the answers, was not evidence, and ought not to be received.

It appeared, upon further examination, that the statement was not read to the prisoner for the purpose of altering or reforming it.

The evidence was ruled by the Recorder to be admissible.

This was the evidence for the prosecution.

The following witnesses were called for the defence:—

Mr. Thomas, who accompanied Mr. Robertson, stated that he observed a pressure in the room. Certainly the prisoner was not one of the persons pressing. The prisoner was not in the room to the best of his knowledge.

Mr. Cope, the Marshal, said he found the prisoner at Greenwich dining with the parish officer of his own parish.

Mr. Savage, warehouseman, residing in Milk-street, Mr. Snell, carver and gilder, Holborn, and other persons of respectability, amounting in all to the number of fourteen, gave the prisoner a most excellent character.

The Recorder, in summing up, stated that whatever opinion the Jury might entertain as to the propriety of the manner in which the note came into the prisoner's possession, they had no right to allow it to influence their judgment. The question for them to try was, whether or not the prisoner participated in the theft.

The Jury turned round, and whilst they were consulting, the prisoner said that he was ready to explain the way in which the note came into his possession, and had wished to have done so, but that his Counsel had thought it unnecessary.

The Jury immediately returned a verdict of Not Guilty.

The prisoner was immediately discharged.

TRIAL OF MR. WM. HARWOOD, FOR THE WILFUL MURDER OF HIS GRANDSON, GEO. BARTON.

Mr. Wm. Harwood, aged 71, described in the Calendar as a coal undertaker, stood indicted for the wilful murder of his grandson, George Barton. He also stood indicted under the Coroner's Inquisition, for the crime of manslaughter.

The prisoner was respectably dressed in a suit of black, and was assisted into the dock by the Rev. Mr. Baker: he stood trembling, with his hands in his coat-pockets.

Mrs. Ann Hill, the housekeeper to the prisoner, repeated the evidence which she had given on the Coroner's Inquest, as to the violent, menacing, and disgraceful conduct of the deceased towards the prisoner, on the night of his death. After receiving much abuse, the prisoner left the room for a moment, and returned, saying to the deceased, "get out." The deceased said he would not, and then he fetched the prisoner a blow with his fist as before. The deceased was a powerful young man, about twenty-three years of age. The prisoner struck the deceased with a dagger he had in his hand. Deceased staggered, and went as far as the street door. Witness then removed the prisoner's hand from the deceased's side, and told him to call the watch, or some one, to assist. I took hold of the deceased's hand, and said "George, what nonsense is this—what's the matter?" The prisoner went for an officer, and did not run away. I have, before this, often heard the deceased threaten his grandfather's life, and also to rob the house; he did rob the house once. When the deceased fell, I said, "he is killed; go and fetch the watchman."

Cross-examined by Mr. Curwood.—The deceased was very powerful and a very profligate young man; there could not be a worse. The prisoner did every thing to reclaim him. He was always kindly received by the prisoner. From the character and expressions of the deceased, I always thought the prisoner in danger of his life; of this I am positive.

Other witnesses spoke to the same facts, which were proved on the inquest.

Two witnesses were examined to prove the finding of the dagger, which was wet with blood.

This closed the case for the prosecution.

The prisoner, on being called on for his defence, handed in a written paper, in which he declared the act did not proceed from malice towards the deceased, for whom he always showed tenderness and regard. He threw himself on the mercy of the Court.

The following witnesses were then called by the prisoner:—

W. Haggarty—I am a coal-whipper; I was at the Phœnix public-house on the night of this transaction. I was going home with the prisoner; deceased came up and asked for some money. Prisoner said "No—I have given you money enough." The deceased then drew back a few paces, and said, "Money I want, and money I must have, and if you don't give me some, I'll have your life." The prisoner was much frightened, and went up stairs to call the watch.

Mr. Mark Hodgson produced the prisoner's will, made on the 6th of Feb. last, in which he bequeathed 150*l.* to his grandson (George Barton), with his household furniture in Union-street, together with all the plate, &c., and his watch and seals.

Robert Wellings, a police officer of Mary-le-bone Office, knew the prisoner and the deceased; always saw the former behave very kindly to the latter.

John Weale, an officer of Queen-square, knew the prisoner ten years; he always behaved kindly to the deceased when every one else deserted him.

Many other respectable persons gave the prisoner a most excellent character for kindness towards the deceased.

This closed the case for the defence, and Mr. Justice Park summed up the evidence with great perspicuity; and the Jury, after some deliberation, at ten minutes past twelve o'clock, found the prisoner Guilty of Manslaughter; and the Court adjudged him, after an animadversion from the Recorder, to pay a fine of 40s. to the King, and to be imprisoned till such fine be paid.

The sentence gave evident satisfaction to an extremely crowded Court.

EXTRAORDINARY CASE OF BURGLARY.

On Sunday, the 23d of this month, two persons dressed in the most respectable manner, came in a one-horse chaise to an inn at Hampton Court during the time of Divine Service. Now among the several persons who have separate sets of apartments in the Palace at that place, is one who is a white-smith and bell-hanger, and who has been in the habit for a considerable time of going every Sunday to Mr. Rowland Hill's Chapel in the Black-friars-road, and leaving his apartments locked, without any person being in them. Most remarkably, he stayed at home last Sunday; and as he makes it a point, from religious motives, never to answer a bell on the Sabbath-day, though at the outer door there was a loud ring, he paid no attention to it. At a second pull of the bell he simply looked out at an upper window, and saw two gentlemen standing at his door. Shortly afterwards he heard the outer door open, when he immediately locked a second door in the passage, and retreated to his sitting-room. Scarcely had he entered there when he heard also the second door open, on which he locked the door of his sitting-room, and stood behind it. Almost immediately afterwards he sees a skeleton-key turning in the lock. On this he pushes a private bolt. The person on the outside perceiving that there was some other obstacle besides the lock, had then recourse to the usual instruments, a screw-driver, and a short iron crow, denominated, perhaps, from its size and its neatness, a jemmy. The son of Vulcan within observes, not without dismay, the point of a screw-driver, which, from its mutilated point, he recognizes for his own, make its appearance, then the crow takes the hold. This he sees three times repeated, when with violence the door flies open, and one of those gentleman stands before him face to face. "What do you want here?" cries the inmate. On this the intruder quickly runs down stairs, gives the alarm, and his companion follows him from an opposite room into which he had entered, and where he had pulled out two drawers, and emptied a box of linen, which was left on the floor. The old man, as well as he was able, pursued the two gentlemen, who first tried to escape into the gardens, but, being prevented, walked deliberately through the barrack-yard, passed the sentinel, and with a quickened pace proceeded over the bridge, paid the toll, and then ran with all their speed. The hue and cry being now raised they were soon taken into custody. It ought to be known, that the old man applied immediately to the officer on duty, who replied that he had nothing to do in the business. In passing the bridge, one of these gentlemen was observed to throw into the river a bundle, which was subsequently picked up, and found to consist of fourteen skeleton keys. These persons were brought up for examination on Wednesday (the 26th) before the Rev. Dr. Sampson and Mr. Rich, both of whom are Magistrates for Middlesex as well as for Surrey, who fully committed them for trial at the present sessions in the Old Bailey. Mr. Harman, and also Mr. Isaacs, attended on behalf of the prisoners; and after all the evidence had been gone through, the former gentleman strongly urged, that as nothing had been taken away, these persons should be admitted to bail; but this was over-ruled.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BOW-STREET.—On Wednesday evening Anne Shelton, a remarkably good looking Irishwoman, was brought before G. R. Minshull, Esq. by Lewis, a patrol, charged with the wilful murder of Patrick Doyle, by striking him various blows on the head with a tin can, and also with a hammer. The unhappy woman seemed to be about twenty-eight years of age; she had an infant only twelve days old at her breast, and another of her children, a fine chubby boy of about two years old, unconscious of the awful situation of its only parent, was rambling about the floor, playing with any thing that came within its reach, during the examination.

Mary Kilronan deposed that the deceased, Patrick Doyle, was her nephew, and he had lived with the prisoner as her husband, for several years. They had had seven children. Last Friday three weeks the witness was in a public-house, called the Black Horse, at the corner of Buckeridge-steeet and Gore-street, St. Giles's, and the deceased was also there. In the course of the evening the prisoner came in and spoke in a low tone to the deceased, and witness observed that she kept her hands behind her as if concealing something, and she had soon an opportunity of seeing what that something was, for the prisoner on receiving some answer from the deceased, she struck him a violent blow on the forehead with a large tin can which she held in her hand. She then left the house. The forehead of the deceased was deeply cut, and the blood flowed profusely. He was very drunk, and no entreaties could prevail on him to go to a surgeon to have the wound dressed. A man endeavoured to stop the bleeding by applying the scraping of a hat, but without success, and at a late hour the deceased went bleeding home. On the following morning witness met the prisoner, and said "Good morning to you Nance," and her reply was "Don't talk to me, but keep your sister's son (meaning the deceased) out of my way, for I shall be his b—— butcher, and be the end of him." This was all that passed. The witness saw the deceased the next Tuesday, and observing that he looked very ill, she asked him what was the matter, and he said "Nance did last night with the hammer what she could not do with the can on Friday, and I'm done; I shall never get over it." He got worse, and was removed to the workhouse, and from thence to Middlesex Hospital, wherehe died on Wednesday morning. She had seen the surgeon who attended the deceased, and he said his death was occasioned by the blows which he had received.

A young woman, who acknowledged herself to be a common prostitute, stated, that she was in company with the deceased at the Black Horse on the Friday night spoken of by the last witness, and she saw the prisoner strike the deceased, first with her fist, at which he laughed, and she then struck him with the can.

Lawrence Doyle, brother to the deceased, stated that he slept in the same room with him and the prisoner and their childreu. On Monday three weeks, in the evening, they were all at home together, and he and his brother mustered between them six shillings and some halfpence. Witness gave the deceased four shillings to buy something for supper, but the prisoner said they should have no supper there, and after some words, witness, the deceased, and one of his children, a boy, went to an eating-house and supped together. They returned home a little before twelve o'clock, and found the prisoner there, and two of the children were lying asleep on her bed near the fire-place, and the others in witness's bed, at the opposite side of the room. She abused the deceased, and swore she would not go to bed with him, and that she would be the death of him before the morning. The witness got into bed, and had been there a few minutes when the prisoner said she would leave the house, and went towards the door, but the deceased got before her and pushed her back upon the bed, aad he then sat himself down by the fire, leaning his head on his hand upon the table. The prisoner recovered herself from the hed, and went cautiously to a cupboard and took out a large hammer, with which she approached the deceased bchind, and struck him five hard blows on the head. She would have continued the blows had not witness jumped out of bed and held her arms. The blood poured from the wounds, and he said he was done—it was all up with him—he should never get over it. He gradually grew worse until his death. A report was brought down to St. Giles's on Tuesday that witness's brother was dead, and the prisoner immediately fled to the east end of the town, but she left one of her children bchind, and returned on Wednesday to fetch it; and the deceased having actually died that morning, witness gave her in charge to the patrol.

The above were the only witnesses in attendance. The prisoner, during the time they were giving evidence, paced to and fro in the dock in a pitiable state of agitation, and was evidently so weak as to be scarcely able to support herself. She exclaimed several times to the witnesses, "Ah! you don't tell his honour how cruelly he (deceased) used me; how he broke three of my ribs, and was always getting drunk and going with other women."

Mr. Minshull humanely advised the prisoner to abstain from saying any thing for the present, and committed her to the House of Correction for further examination on Thursday, at the same time desiring that the surgeon of the Hospital might be requested to attend and give evidence. On Thursday, however, Jones, the gaoler, whose duty it was to bring her from the prison, reported that she was so ill as to render it dangerous to remove her. It was only twelve days since she gave birth to her last child, and the agitation of mind naturally produced by her situation, together with the jolting of the caravan, in which she was removed, had so affected her, as to place her in some danger. The re-examination was then ordered to stand for a future day.

Samuel Ford, a young man, was brought up charged with committing sundry frauds upon Mr. Carter, a shoe-manufacturer, in Blackfriars-road; Mr. Rymer, a currier, in Nassau-street, Soho; and other persons.

About two months ago the prisoner was destitute of a home and of food, and Mr. Carter took him from motives of charity into his service as a porter. He soon discovered, however, that he was a drunkard; and having a few days ago found him lying in his gateway dead daunk, he discharged him. After his dismissal he went to a shop which Mr. Carter has in Cranborne-street, and told the young woman who superintends it that he was come for 7*l.* 16s. She asked who sent him, and he replied "Mr. Carter, to be sure." She was not aware that he had been discharged, and she gave him the money. He also went to Mr. Rymer's, where he had often been sent by Mr. Carter, and obtained in the name of the latter three whole hides of sole leather. He then went to a Mr. Wood, in Vauxhall-road, and several other places, and obtained small sums of money.

The prisoner denied receiving the 7*l.* 16s., but said nothing of the other charges. When askedby Sir R. Birnie what he had been? He said he was three or four years in the East Indies, in the Company's service, into which he enlisted when he had offended his best friend. Being asked who that best friend was? he said Sir Herbert Taylor, who sent him to school, and would have done well for him, but he gave him offence and ran away. When he came back from the East Indies he was ashamed to apply to Sir Herbert, or he would probably even then have done something for him. Sir R. Birnie asked him significantly if he had not been to some other bay besides Bombay? and he said he had not.

He was fully committed for trial.

QUEEN-SQUARE.—On Wednesday a respectable-looking man, named Rice Williams, about sixty years of age, holding the situation of chief clerk and cashier in the Coke Department, at the Westminster Company's Gas Works, Horseferry-road, was brought up by Weale, the officer, who had apprehended him the night before at his house, No. 5, Gardener's-place, Kennington-lane, Lambeth, on the charge of embezzling upwards of 700*l.* belonging to the Gas Company.

It appears that the prisoner had been employed as chief clerk and cashier in the establishment for the last seven years, and the highest opinion of his integrity was always entertained by the Directors and officers of the works. His salary was very considerable, and had lately been augmented. Latterly, on account of his health being much impaired, his accounts had fallen into other hands, by which means a very large defalcation in the cash returns was discovered. The discovery was communicated to the Board of Directors, and an accountant (Mr. Adams) was appointed to investigate the books, and to report the exact amount of the prisoner's peculations. This was immediately done, and it was ascertained that Mr. Williams was deficient in his cash accounts to the amount of 700*l.* and upwards. Mr. Gude, the secretary to the Company, waited upon the prisoner and communicated with him on the subject, and he at once confessed to most of his deficiencies. A warrant was issued for his arrest, and he was taken into custody by Weale, the officer, who declared that during the whole of his long experience, he never witnessed such a heart-rending scene as ensued between the prisoner, his wife, and eight children, when he arrested him.

Mr. Butler, Mr. Harmer's clerk, attended on the part of the prosecution, and requested the Magistrate would permit the case to stand over for a few days, as there were so many charges to be brought forward against Mr. Williams, that he should not be able to prepare them for the present Sessions.

The Magistrate said that it would be first necessary to bring one case forward, and then, of course, he should have no objection.

Mr. James Fagan Seller stated that he was an assistant to Mr. Adams, the accountant, who was employed to investigate Mr. Williams's accounts, and in the course of that investigation he had found a defalcation of several sums of money; amongst these was a sum of ten guineas, which had been received by the prisoner of Mr. Ward, of Drummond-street, Somers-town, for gas supplied to Pancras New Church, but which had not been placed in the cash receipts.

Mr. Adams mentioned the deficiency to the prisoner, who admitted having converted that sum to his own use.

The Magistrate said, that as one charge had been proved against the accused, he should remand him for further examination.

The prisoner, on being asked what he had to say, said that he had been ill ever since Christmas, and was now suffering dreadfully. He had put a few remarks to paper, which he hand in to the Magistrate.

Mr. White, on looking at the paper, said he hoped it would prove so; he hoped he was not so culpable, but at present he would remand him.

The prisoner requested to be allowed to return to his family till the next examination, but this request was refused.

ACCIDENTS, &c.

LONGFORD, OCT. 20.—Before six o'clock this morning, nearly the entire of that ancient and magnificent building, Castle Forbes, the residence of Lord Viscount Forbes, M.P. for this county, was reduced to ashes. It is not preeisely ascertained how the calamity originated; but it was discovered by means of a favourite dog, which his Lordship generally keeps in his sleeping room at night; the poor animal awoke his Lordship, by pulling the clothes off his bed, and making the most pitiful cries. When his Lordship stepped out of bed he was enveloped in smoke; he gave the alarm, and by the exertions of the household and the neighbouring people, the whole of the furniture and the library (which is one of the most valuable in Ireland) was saved.

Soon after three o'clock on Tuesday morning, a fire broke out in the lower part of the house of Mr. Aldridge, cheesemonger, of Stafford-street, St. James's. The alarm soon aroused the inmates, and they escaped uninjured, with the exception of one of the shopmen, who slept in the back attic, and who, in endeavouring to get across the roof, his foot slipped, and he was precipitated above twenty feet, and alighting on the lead gutter of a lower building, he was found stretched nearly lifeless. He was taken to the Hospital much injured, but it is ascertained that no bones are broken. The flames continued to rage through the lower part of the building, but were subdued in less than half an hour, through the activity of the neighbours, &c. It is supposed the fire originated in the escape of a quantity of gas from the main pipe in the cellar. Mrs. Aldridge is so ill from the effects of the fright, that serious apprehensions for her recovery are entertained.

On Sunday morning last, as James Sanger, a butcher, in the employ of Mr. Lanham, Southampton, was fixing the rope to the horns of an ox, preparatory to drawing it up for slaughter, the animal, by a sudden jerk of the head, extricated itself, and fixing one of the horns in the body of Sanger, tossed him over his head. The man was dreadfully lacerated, but great hopes are entertained of his recovery.

On Sunday afternoon, a gentleman, mounted on a valuable blood horse, rode down Lower Seymour-street, Portman-square, where an immense sewer is forming upwards of sixty feet deep, and in endeavouring to pass across the boards covering the excavations, one of them broke, and the horse and rider sank into the chasm. Several persons who witnessed the sudden disappearance, rushed to the opening, and with some little difficulty assisted the gentleman (who clung to one of the cross beams in his descent) out of his dangerous predicament. The horse, however, remained below, and by a singular chance was prevented going to the bottom (where it must have perished), by getting between two beams. A great crowd soon collected, and some of them very actively erected a mast and pulley, and having made fast some blocks and tackle, one or two descended with the ropes properly sheaved, and fastening them round the horse, cut away the beams, and then the horse was hauled up uninjured, amid the loud cheers of the assembled bystanders. The gentleman then said it was impossible to reward them individually for their exertions, but went to the Prince of Meclenburgh public-house, and deposited 5*l.* with the landlord to be spent for the benefit of all who had assisted in saving his horse.

An order has been sent from the Home Department to Newgate, for the immediate conveyance of William Christmas, who was tried and convicted, at the last Old Bailey Sessions, for embezzling money belonging to Messrs, Hoares, bankers, to the Justitia hulk, at Woolwich, preparatory to his transportation to New South Wales.

The thanks of the Guild of Merchants of Dublin were, on their last quarter-day (the 10th), voted to the Rev. Dr. E. Tighe Gregory, for his presentation of a beautifully-executed framed Copy of the memorable Speech of his Royal Highness the Duke of York on the Catholic Question; and also for his services as Chairman of the Committee appointed to raise subscriptions for a portrait of his Royal Highness.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

SUICIDE.—On Friday evening last, an Inquest was held at the Mitre public-house, St. Martin's-lane, on the body of Lucretia Baker, aged 28. It appeared that the deceased had lodged for the last two months at 17, Upper St. Martin's-lane. At the time she engaged the apartments she was advanced in pregnancy, and she informed the landlord of the house that she had come direct from Holland, and expected her husband would arrive shortly. As the time of her accouchement approached, her spirits became very dull and depressed, in consequence of not receiving certain letters by the post, and she frequently remarked to her, nurse, who was her only attendant: "What! no letters yet: good God! what can it mean!" At other times the nurse had heard her say, "Shall I do it? shall I do it?" And then again, recovering herself, she would say, "No! I will not. I will wait, possibly I am not forgotten." What these strange sentences related to the nurse said she had no conception. She was preparing to go to rest, when suddenly starting from her seat she desired the nurse to go and fetch herself some drink, as she would want it in the night. Shortly after she reeled and staggered about: and medical assistance being sent for, two gentlemen, named Jewell and Tweeddale, attended. The latter gentleman's deposition was to the following effect:

Soon after ten o'clock last night, I was sent for by Mr. Jewell, to attend the deceased, who it was reported had swallowed a large quantity of laudanum. I immediately accompanied the messenger, with various renovating medicines: but on my arrival, finding that vomiting had not been sufficiently excited, I administered a large quantity of sulphate of lime dissolved in warm water, which was immediately administered, together with a large quantity of mustard and warm water, which she regularly took, and she was then perfectly sensible, and said she had taken a large quantity of laudanum. The emetics not acting as soon as was expected, we sent for Mr. Banfield, who brought his friend, Mr. Weiss, the inventor of the Stomach Pump, but before they came vomiting had taken place. Knowing that a considerable length of time, nearly two hours, had elapsed, we then introduced the tube, and in fact evacuated the stomach of its contents. After clearing the stomach, a basin of warm water was injected into the stomach, and brought off again, which roused her for a time. We then had recourse to the cold affusion by pumping cold water constantly over her head and neck, which also roused her, for she got up and said let me have time to breathe; but finding that the powers of life were beginning to sink, and that she was in a complete state of lethargy, from the effects of the opium, it was deemed advisable to inject into the stomach a quantity of ammonia mixed with warm water as a stimulant; but still, finding that the powers of life were sinking rapidly, the tube was again introduced, the ammonia water extracted from the stomach, and equal quantities of brandy and water with sugar were injected in its stead. From the time that Mr. Weiss came the deceased had lost the power of swallowing, and if it had not been for the instrument there would not have been the smallest chance of recovering. I left the deceased at half-past one o'clock. It is probable that had the stomach pump been used only half an hour sooner, we should have been successful in restoring the deceased.

The unfortunate deceased, when in want of cash, was liberally supplied at Drummond's banking-house. The whole of the witnesses, and also the medical gentlemen before-mentioned, expressed their approbation of the improved stomach pump, by Weiss, which is not of so complicated a nature as the one invented by Reed.

The Jury were left to draw their conclusion from the evidence, and they returned a verdict—"That the deceased destroyed herself while labouring under insanity."

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

HIS MAJESTY having been most graciously pleased to patronize Mr. LEWIS'S SYSTEMS of WRITING and SHORT-HAND, Ladies and Gentlemen may have their hands improved in the short space of one fortnight, or be taught Short-hand in one week. Success guaranteed—Lessons at home or abroad. For terms apply at Mr. Lewis's Academy, 101, High Holborn.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if gray, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PERRY, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 1l. forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER and PERFUMER, No. 181, Fleet-street (Two Doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished: in fact they are Hostes humani Capitis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain preeminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Ornamental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perriques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY OF GREAT BRITAIN, and most of the Nobility and Gentry, use now PRINCE'S celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints; but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even eminent medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Grant has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair. Also a Gentleman turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark; it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oil's it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children; and if used constantly, not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour; which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair: will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months, will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying "Tell the truth, and fear nobody." If persons are bald, and the roots entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil. The ounce bottle, 5s.; a large bottle, containing five ounces, 1l., which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses with counterfeit Russia Oil, saying it is the genuine.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. 86⅞	Bank Stock 225
Cons. Three per Cents. 87½	Long Annuities, 20 16-16
Three and a half per Cedts.	India Stock, 266½
3½ per Cents. Reduced 94¼	India Bonds, 14 13
Four per Cents. 103¼	Exch. Bills (1½d.) 3
Consols for Acc. 87⅝ ¾

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY.

J. Pritchard and J. Burton, Yewsley, Middlesex, brick-makers.
T. B. Rigg, Great Tufton-street, Westminster, commission-agent.
S. Green, Kingsland, plumber.

BANKRUPTS.

J. Wilson, King-street, merchant. Sol. Mr. Gates, Cateaton-street.
J. Parr, Nottingham, victualler. Sol. Mr. Capes, Holborn-court, Gray's-Inn.
R. Orme, Burton-upon-Trent, draper. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.
W. Tinsley, Arnold, Nottinghamshire, blacksmith. Sols. Messrs. Hurd and Johnson, Temple.
W. S. Burnett, New London-street, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Sweet, Stokes, and Carr, Basinghall-street.
J. Mizen, South Wrexhall, Wiltshire, baker. Sols. Messrs. King and Lukin, Gray's-Inn-square.
W. Godden, Portsea, carpenter. Sol. Mr. Sutcliffe, New Bridge-st. Blackfriars.
R. Harding, Chapel-street and the New-road, Somers-town, timber-merchant, Sols. Messrs. Freeman and Heathcote, Coleman-street.
G. W. Harris and C. Evans, Southampton, linen-drapers. Sol. Mr. Hardley, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.
G. Wilson, Constitution-row, Gray's Inn-road, corn-chandler. Sol. Mr. W. J. Carpenter, John-street, Bedford-row.
W. Patterson and W. Elliott, Basinghall-street, merchants. Sol. Mr. Rushbury, Carthusian-street, Charterhouse-square.

EXTRACTS from the SUPPLEMENT to the LONDON GAZETTE, of Tuesday, the 25th of October.

General Return of Killed and Wounded of the Water Column, on the 7th of March, 1825.

Madras Artillery: 6 rank and file, 1 gun lascar, wounded.
Bengal Artillery: 1 rank and file killed; 1 rank and file, 1 bheestie wounded
H. M. 47th Regiment: 3 rank and file killed; 18 rank and file wounded.
H. M. 89th Ditto: 2 captains, 1 serjeant, 8 rank and file, killed; 3 lieutenants, 1 serjeant, 52 rank and file, wounded; 1 rank and file missing.
1st Madras European Regiment: 1 rank and file killed; 1 drummer, 9 rank and file wounded.
Pioneers: 4 rank and file wounded.
H. M. S. Arachne: 2 seaman wounded.
H. C. Cruizer Teignmouth: 1 seaman killed; 1 seaman wounded.
Gun-boats: 1 lascar killed; 1 officer, 9 lascars wounded.
Grand Total of Killed, Wounded, and Missing---129.

Names of Officers killed and wounded.

Killed: H. M. 89th Regiment, Captains R. C. Rose and Charles Cannon.
Wounded: H. M. 89th Regiment, Lieuts. W. J. King, C. G. King, and J. Currie, slightly.---Gun-boat Amherst, Mr. A. F. Derby.

J. KER, D. A. A. Gen.

Return of Ammunition and Stores captured and destroyed in the fortified Post in advance of Donabew, the 7th March, by the Force under the Command of Brigadier-General Cotton.

Iron Guns mounted on the Works: 4 six-pounders, 2 four-pounders, 58 jingals.
Total: 64 destroyed.

A very considerable quantity of round and grape thrown into the river, the number could not be exactly ascertained. About five cwt. of powder destroyed, and several thousand rounds of musket and jingal ammunition; 362 muskets destroyed; 630 spears ditto, and a great number of intrenching tools of various descriptions.

T. Y. R. KENNAN, Capt. H. B.
March 8, 1825. Commanding the Artillery.

Return of Ordnance and Ordnance Stores, &c. taken in the Works at Bassein by the Expedition under the command of Major Sale, H. M. 13th Regiment o Light Infantry.

Bassein, 5th March, 1825.

Iron Ordnance serviceable: 2 nine-pounders, 6 seven and half-pounders, 2 six-pounders, 1 four and a half-pounder.
Jingal unserviceable: 1 one and half-pounder.
349 loose round shot, of different diameters.
2897 leaden bullets, carbine and pistols.

T. Y. R. KENNAN, First.-Lieut. commanding Artillery detachment,

General Return of Killed, Wounded, and Missing in the Operations of the Army under Brigadier-General Sir Archibald Campbell, K.C.B., before Donabew, from the 25th of March to the 1st of April, 1825.

Donabew, April 2, 1825.

Horse Brigade: 1 rank and file, 1 lascar, 1 syce, 1 elephant coolie, killed; 1 syce, 1 elephant coolie, 2 mahouts, 2 troop wounded.
Foot Artillery: 1 lieutenant, 2 rank and file, wounded.
Right Hon. the Governor-General's Body Guard: 3 troop killed; 2 troop wounded.
Foot Artillery: 1 lieutenant, 2 rank and file, wounded.
H. M. Royal Regiment: 1 rank and file wounded.
H. M. 35th Regiment: 2 rank and file killed; 12 rank and file, 1 bheestie wounded.
H. M. 41st Regiment: 1 serjeant, 3 rank and file, 1 lascar, 1 man of the quarter-master's establishment wounded.
H. M. 47th Regiment: 3 rank and file killed; 1 lieutenant, 6 rank and file, 3 men of the quarter-master's establishment wounded; 1 hospital servant missing.
H. M. 82d Regiment: 3 rank and file, 1 lascar, wounded.
1st Madras European Regiment: 1 rank and file wounded.
26th Regiment Madras N. I.: 1 rank and file killed; 1 serjeant, 1 drummer or bugler, 4 rank and file wounded.
43d Regiment Madras N. I.: 1 rank and file wounded.
1st Batt. Pioneers: 1 rank and file wounded.
Flotilla: 2 rank and file, 1 seaman, 3 lascars, wounded.

NAMES OF OFFICERS WOUNDED.

Madras Artillery: Lieutenant Symes, severely, not dangerously, wounded.
M. M. 47th Regiment: Lieutenant John Gordon, severely, not dangerously.

F. S. TIDY, Lieut. Col. D. A. G.

RETURN of ORDNANCE and MILITARY STORES captured at Donabew, by the Force under the personal Command of Brigadier-General Sir ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, K.C.B. and K.C.T.S. on the 2d of April, 1825.

Brass Guns: 1 nine-pounder, 1 eight-pounder, 1 five and a half-pounder, 1 five pounder, 1 four and a half-pounder, 1 three-pounder, 12 two-pounders, 3 one and a half-pounders, 7 one-pounders.
Iron Guns: 1 twenty-four-pounder, 1 twelve-pounder, 1 nine-pounder, 3 eight-pounders, 2 seven-pounders, 4 six-pounders, 7 five and a half-pounders, 5 five-pounders, 5 four and a half-pounders, 20 four-pounders, 7 three and a half-pounders, 24 three-pounders, 16 two and a half-pounders, 12 two-pounders, 2 one and a half-pounders. Total, 139.
Iron Carronade: 1 twelve-pounder.
Jingals: 269.

The whole of the ordnance was mounted on the works.

A considerable quantity of the undermentioned stores were found, which there has not been time to calculate:

Shot and grape of different sizes, gunpowder, sulphur, saltpetre, musket-balls, and pig-lead.

C. HOPKINSON, Lieut.-Col.
Commanding the Artillery with the Expedition.

RETURN of ORDNANCE and MILITARY STORES captured at Prome, on the 25th April, 1825, by the Force under the Command of Brigadier General Sir ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, K.C.B.

Iron guns, of different sizes, from twelve to one-pounders, 89; brass ditto, 12; total, 101.

About 1,050 shot of sizes, including 200 English shot, and 500 pounds of lead.

C. HOPKINSON, Lieut. Col.
Commanding the Artillery with the Division.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others. By the King's Royal Letters Patent.---Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, for a Superior Beverage is produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely superior to the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

ROBINSON's PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS;

Sold Retail by all Grocers and Druggists in the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co., No. 64, Red Lion street, Holborn, London.

, Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words "Robinson's Patent," the Royal Arms and the signature of MATTS. ROBINSON, are affixed to each package, as none others are genuine.

SIMPSON's ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, unrivalled In good effects for Spasms or Gout in the Stomach, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and as a Restorative in cases of extreme Nervous Debility or the weakness of advanced Life. It is sold in bottles at 11s. each, by J. V. Simpson, 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Hose, 309, High Holborn; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; and by all the principal Medicine Venders throughout the Kingdom.

FOREIGN WINES.

CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant, next to the KING'S, and opposite to the HAYMARKET THEATRE, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, has made a still greater and the greatest possible reduction in price of the following Wines, which he warrants genuine as imported.

FINE OLD PORTS, Vintages 1819, 1820, and 1821, high-flavoured, fruity, full-bodied Wine, 60 Guineas per Pipe.

SHERRY, pale and brown, shipped by the first houses in Spain, same price per Butt, permitted from the London Docks to the purchaser direct.

FINE OLD PORT, excellent SHERRY, and GOOD and superior direct MADEIRA, all at 21s 6d per dozen, by way of sample. Fourteen dozen of any of the above Wine, full-sized bottles, package, &c. well packed in a good Port Pipe, all included for a remittance of 20l. or half the quantity in a Sherry Hogshead, at 10l.

CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.

OLD COGNIAC BRANDY (Otard and Martell), 23s 6d per gallon. Fine Old PINE-APPLE RUM, 15s 6d per gallon.

C. W. begs to announce that he has just returned from CHAMPAGNE, where he selected a large quantity of the very best Wines from the Vignerons of AI, AVIZE, and PIERY, so long celebrated for their richness, body, and flavour. This importation is confidently warranted as of the finest quality; Mousseaux non Mousseaux, rouge et blanc, 63s to 72s per dozen; Claret, Santerne, Vin de Grave Chabli, and all that character of French Wines, 36s per dozen; the finest imported, 63s to 72s per dozen. Lisbon, Mountain, Madeira (W. I.), Teneriffe, 27s per dozen. Fine old crusted Port, 30s per dozen.

All other Wines, Spirits, &c. in proportion. Remittances must be sent with orders, and postage paid (or not attended to), and if the greatest satisfaction is not given, the whole of the money will be returned.

P.S. Portugal Grapes, now landing in Jars, in the finest condition, at 25s. per Jar, and retail at C. Wright's Depot, Regent-street. at 10d per lb.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—HOLYHEAD, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor —LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle, and Congleton—BRISTOL, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Collumpton—EXETER, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield —BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH, through Chorley, Preston, and Garstang—CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—MILFORD HAVEN, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES—MANCHESTER (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport. Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—HOLYHEAD (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock—SOUTHAMPTON coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—LIVERPOOL (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry. Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—WINDSOR and ETON coaches daily—MANCHESTER (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leck, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—EXETER (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—EDINBURGH and GLASGOW (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—BRISTOL (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afteroon at a quarter before four—BIRMINGHAM (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—COVENTRY light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—NOTTINGHAM post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Paguel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—CHESTER and PARK-GATE new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—WORCESTER coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA post coach, every evening at half-past five—TAMWORTH, ATHERSTONE and HINCHLEY coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—DERBY post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—DOVER coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—PARIS new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—TAUNTON, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—CHELTENHAM and GLOUCESTER light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—NORWICH new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—CAMBRIDGE Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—CANTERBURY fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—BRIGHTON coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—MILFORD HAVEN new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

, The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture, of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1s. 4d.	1s. 6d. and 1s. 9d. per lb.
Best Grey Goose		2s. and 2s. 6d.
Excellent White Goose		3s.
Real White Dantzic		3s. 3d. and 3s. 6d.
Hudson Bay, Mecklenberg, &c.

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell, as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.	l. s. d.		l. s. d
Feather Beds, from	2 5 0	to	3 3 0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3 10 0	to	5 10 0
Best White Dantzic Beds	4 10 0	to	6 10 0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only			8 10 0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0 15 0	to	1 4 0
MATTRESSES.
Mattresses	0 10 0	to	1 8 0
Real Horse Hair, Wool Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliasse	0 14 0	to	1 4 0

BEDSTEADS—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap, and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts—Brussels, Kidderminster, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions.—Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re-made and cured of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's-buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

☞ Please to observe the name of SLATER.

EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY'S OFFICES,
No. 149, LEADENHALL-STREET.

October 10, 1825.

IT is evident from recent communications (though numerous convictions took place some time since) that Tea continues to be adulterated with spurious leaves, which at once accounts for the difficulty so generally experienced of purchasing it genuine, in retail quantities, and at reasonable prices. In consequence of this, and a Combination among nearly all the extensive Tea Dealers, of an injurious public tendency, which the East India Company have strongly objected to, and ineffectually endeavoured to prevent, the following arrangements have been made by

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY,

to establish a convenient and permanent system of supplying the Public with pure Tea and Coffee, at a small advance upon the prices at which they are imported, which are submitted with a firm conviction that their merit will be their best advocate.

Pure Tea and Coffee, packed in leaden cases of a peculiar kind, that preserve their quality, are delivered to Retail Agents in London, direct from the Company's Warehouses, to sell for money at a commission of 5l. per cent. (a third of what is usually charged) having the Secretary's Signature and the price on each package, to secure their delivery free from adulteration.

Depots are established throughout ENGLAND, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND—the principal are at

Hull, under the management of	Mr. T. Topping.
Bristol	Mr. J. Stivens.
Sheffield	Mr. R. Harrison.
Leeds	Mr. Ridsdale.
Manchester	Mr. F. J. Glover.
Nottingham	Mr. R. Preston.
Aberdeen	Mr. J. M'Kay.
Edinburgh	Mr. W. Munro.
Glasgow	Mr. M. Leslie.
Lerwick, in Zetland	Mr. J. Leask.
Dublin	Mr. J. West.
Cork	Mr. R. Hardy.
Waterford	Mr. A. Pope.

and, in a few weeks, those at Belfast, Athlone, Norwich, Leicester, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Liverpool, Portsmouth, Devenport, and Birmingham, will be opened.

From whence the Retail Agents in these places, and their surrounding districts, will readily obtain supplies, and always enable the residents in the remote parts of the United Kingdom to purchase unadulterated Tea and Coffee, at the reduced rates, as easily and advantageously as in London.

To enable the working classes to obtain convenient quantities with as much facility as their wealthier neighbours, the Retail Agents are furnished with packages, from an ounce to a pound, of every description.

The advantages to be derived by the public from these extensive, liberal, and economical arrangements, are too considerable and obvious to require further commentary; the test by which they can be ascertained—that of comparison—is simple, open to every one, and the East India Tea Company are sure will be conclusive in favour of their pretensions.

TEA.

	lb. s. d.	½ lb. s. d.	¼ lb. s. d.	2 oz. s. d.	1 oz. d.
Bohea	4 9	2 4½	1 2½	0 7½	3¾
Congou	5 3	2 7½	1 4	0 8	4
Ditto	5 11	2 11½	1 6	0 9	4½
Souchong	6 6	3 3	1 7½	0 10	5
Ditto	7 2	3 7	1 9½	0 11	5½
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Fine ditto	10 5	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Pekoe	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Finest ditto	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Green	7 6	3 9	1 11	0 11½	5¾
Ditto	7 10	3 11	1 11½	1 0	6
Hyson	8 6	4 3	2 1½	1 1	6½
Ditto	9 1	4 6½	2 3½	1 2	7
Ditto	10 6	5 2½	2 7½	1 4	8
Hyson	11 8	5 10	2 11	1 6	9
Finest ditto	12 5	6 2½	3 1½	1 7	9½
Gunpowder Hyson	13 1	6 6½	3 3½	1 8	10
Finest ditto	14 4	7 2	3 7	1 11	11
ROASTED COFFEE.
Plantation	1 7	0 9½	0 5	0 2½	1¼
Dutch	1 11	0 11½	0 6	0 3	1½
Fine ditto	2 6	1 3	0 7½	0 4	2
Bourbon	2 10	1 5	0 8½	0 4½	2¼
Turkey	3 2	1 7	0 9½	0 5	2½
Finest ditto	4 2	2 1	1 0½	0 6½	3¼

It is needful to inform Purchasers of Ground Coffee, that it is more frequently adulterated than when whole, and not so easy of detection.

The following Retail Agents are already appointed:—

CITY AND SUBURBS.

G. Herbert, 88, Cheapside.
J. Powles, 146, Leadenhall-street.
W. K. Foster, 69, Chiswell-street.
J. D. Bird, 30, Fore-street.
W. Lewis, 60, Bishopsgate Without.
J. Allen, 11, St. Martin's le Grand.
J. Deane, 3, Finsbury-market.
M. O'Brien, 106, Goswell-street-road.
J. Peachey, 10, Garlick-hill, Upper Thames-street.
L. Barnett, Bell-lane, Spitalfields.

WEST END.

T. S. Vickers, 11, Barton-street, Westminster.
G. Harris, 16, King-street, Westminster
A. Wainwright, 11, Church-court, St. Martin's-lane.
A. Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden.
J. Hutton, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.
J. Davall, 13, Woodstock-street, Oxford-street.
H. and E. Tutt, 17, Marylebone-lane, Manchester-square.
G. Pigg, 20, Duke-street, Portland-place
W. Lawrence, 9, New-street, Cobourg Theatre.
R. Wyatt, 2, Webber-street, ditto.

SOUTHWARK.

S. Nix, 2, Manifold-place, Newington Butts.
J. Payne, 70, Collingwood-street, Blackfriar's-road.
E. Daintree, 1, Brook-street, Lambeth.
A. Kay, 101, London-road.
H. Walker, 9, Princes-road, Kennington Cross.

PADDINGTON, &c.

H. Callard, 15, Craven-place, Bayswater.
T. Body, 47, Edgeware-road.
R. Toms, 146, Edgeware-road.
F. Ebborn, 121, Grove-street, Camden Town.
J. Hanks, 49, Seymour-street, Euston-square.

EAST END.

J. Bates, 6, Crombie's-row, Commercial-road.
S. Holdsworth, 11, York-street, Cambridge-place, Hackney-road.
S. Woodley, 44, Robert-street, Hoxton.

VILLAGES AND COUNTRY TOWNS.

T. Fairhurst, Bath.
W. Dixon, Bottesford.
W. Low, Camberwell.
W. Green, Bristol.
W. Gould, Hill-street, Trowbridge.
W. Jewell, ditto.
H. Morse, ditto.
S. Johns, ditto.
R. Caney, confectioner, Bury St. Edmond's.
E. Symmonds, Pound-lane, Clapton.
J. Gould, Fulham.
J. Spraggen, Gravesend, Kent.
M. Shervill, Hounslow.
T. Brooksbank, Holme, near Market Weighton.
J. B. Barker, Hull.
A. Kittle, ditto.
M. Marshall, ditto.
W. Mallinson, ditto.
Mrs. Turner, ditto.
T. Hart, 223, High-street, Exeter.
T. Bridgeman, High-street, Woolwich.
W. Thornton, Isleworth.
J. Douglas, Kentish Town.
E. and J. Lee, Minehead.
L. Lewis, High-street, Ramsgate.
C. Carpenter, Rochester and Chatham.
H. Merrick, Uckfield, Sussex.
C. Coates, Loughborough.

Persons wishing to become Agents are to make their applications by letter, (post-paid) to the Depots, or to

C. HANCOCK, Secretary.

C Hancock Sec'y

BIRTHS.

On the 25th inst. in Norfolk-street, Park-lane, the Right Hon. Lady Combermere, of a daughter.

On Sunday, the 16th October, at Boulogne-sur-Mer, the Lady of C. R. Preston, Esq. of a son.

On Friday, the 28th inst. at his house in Russell-place, the lady of Rodgers Ruding, Esq. of a son.

MARRIED.

On Saturday, the 22d inst. at Eltham, by the Rev. John Sheppard, A. M. the Rev. B. Guest, A. M. of Everton, near Liverpool, to Elizabeth Catherine, eldest daughter of T. Lingham, Esq. of Shooter's-hill, Kent.

On the 27th inst. at East Thorndon, Essex, by the Rev. Harry Powell, the Rev. Wm. Bond, of little Warley, to Lætitia, second daughter of the late Rev. James Birch, Rector of Corringham, in the said county;

On Thursday, October 27th, at St. Luke's Church, Chelsea, by the Lord Bishop of London, Sir Francis Shuckburgh, Bart., of Shuckburgh Park, Warwickshire, to Miss Denys, only daughter of the late Peter Denys, Esq. of the Pavilion, Hans-place, and of Lady Charlotte Denys; and niece to the Earl of Pomfret.

On the 17th inst. at St. Werburgh's Church, Derby, John Gardener, a silk-weaver, to Harriet Moore (late 'John Murphy,') whose singular marriage to Matilda Lacy, of Shardlow, in the character of a man, created so much talk in that part of the country.

DIED.

On the 26th inst., in his 66th year, Mr. MacArthur, of the King's Printing-office.

On the 29th of September, at Purly Hall, Berks, Harriet, wife of John Wilder, Esq.

On Wednesday, the 26th inst. Charles Walker, Esq. of Kensington-square.

In Dublin, George Ievers, Esq. of the Middle Temple.

On Tuesday, the 25th inst. at his house in Baker-street, in the 57th year of his age, Walter Fawkes, Esq. of Farnley-hall, in the county of York.

On Monday, the 24th inst., in his 76th year, Thomas Aylett, Esq. of Gloucester-terrace, formerly of Thetford-abbey, in the county of Norfolk.

On the 23d inst. Abraham Evans, of Bishopsgate-street, in his 75th year.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

him to your Lordship, for the purpose of ascertaining (a point of indispensable necessity) how far this election on the part of the citizens of London, of their Chief Magistrate, may have received the approbation of his Majesty our most gracious and beloved Sovereign."

To this address the Lord Chancellor replied as follows:—

"Mr. Recorder,—I have listened with attention and pleasure to all the observations you have now made, touching the election of a Chief Magistrate of the city of London for the year ensuing; and I have much personal satisfaction in telling you, that I have received his Majesty's commands to express to you, Sir, (here his Lordship turned himself to the Lord Mayor Elect), his Majesty's entire and cordial approbation of the choice which has placed you in the high and arduous office of Lord Mayor of London. So far as the details of your public life have been known, his Majesty has every reason for confiding in the wisdom that led to your election. Your moderation, judgment, and ability—your loyalty to your Sovereign, and attachment to the constitution, which are so generally known and appreciated, leave no room to doubt that your future conduct, especially during the year of your mayoralty, will be such as to make it a fit example to the Chief Magistrates of the various corporate bodies throughout the realm—an example which has herctofore been frequently found to produce the most salutary results in times when the country was less happily circumstanced than it now is—an example for which the country has been under obligations to your Lordship's predecessors: those obligations have been increased by the conduct of your Lordship's immediate predecessor, and there is every reason to believe that the quantum of that debt will be materially augmented by your own.

"It now only remains for me, Sir, to add my personal wishes that your health may be such as to enable you to go through the great duties of your office with comfort and satisfaction."

After taking some refreshment, the company withdrew.

THE ARMY.

(CIRCULAR.)

War-office, Sept. 2, 1825.

Sir—I have to acquaint you that his Majesty has been pleased to order that the allowance of twenty pounds a year to Captains of Companies shall be abolished, and that, in its stead, an addition shall be made of one shilling and a penny to their daily rate of pay; and to request that you will instruct the Paymaster of the Regiment under your command to estimate the pay of the Captains, from the 25th of June last, at the following rates, viz.—

	s.	d.
A Captain, having the Brevet rank of Field Officer. . .	13	7
Ditto, not having Brevet rank	11	7
A Captain, with or without Brevet rank, holding a Staff appointment, or on board a Ship belonging to the East India Company.	10	6

I have to add, that the contingent allowance to officers paying Companies is, from the 25th June last, to be charged by the Regimental Paymaster in the contingent account of the Pay List.

I have, &c.

(Signed) PALMERSTON.

The Officer Commanding
the Regiment of Foot.

(CIRCULAR.)

War-office, 5th September, 1825.

Sir With reference to the circular letter, No. 528, dated 14th October, 1824, granting to Officers in Ireland when stationed singly, an allowance of 1s. 6d. a week, in lieu of the additional allowance of coals granted by the Ordnance Department for separate cooking, when fuel cannot be supplied in kind, I am directed by the Secretary at War to acquaint you that his Lordship has been pleased to direct, that, in cases where two or more officers are stationed in the same place, and are not supplied with fuel in kind, the following commuted allowances in money shall be granted for the supply of a Mess Room; viz. from the 25th September to 24th March, 4s. a week, and from 25th March to 24th September, 2s. 3d. a week.

The charges under this head are to be made in the Regimental Pay Lists, and to be supported by similar certificates, as are required in the cases of officers stationed singly.

I am to add, that this allowance will commence from the 25th instant.

I have, &c.

(Signed) LAU. SULLIVAN.

Officer commanding
the

The 2d and 3d Divisions of the 99th Regiment of Infantry embarked, on Thursday, on board the Layton and Southwark transports, at Portsmouth, for the Mauritius.

Detachments belonging to the 68th and 71st Regiments of Foot marched, on Friday, from Westminster, for Chichester.

The 17th Regiment of Light Dragoons (Lancers) has not left Brighton, as stated in a Morning Paper. The only change of any portion of this Corps that has recently taken place, is as follows:—two troops belonging to the regiment received orders to march on Monday, (10th ult.) from Brighton to Chichester, to replace a squadron of the same corps, which was ordered to return to Brighton.

General Wm. Knollys, Lieutenant-Governor of St. John's Newfoundland, is named for the Governorship of Fort William.

Detachments belonging to the Woolwich and Chatham Divisions of Royal Marines arrived on the 31st ult. on board the Speke transport, at Portsmouth, from Bermuda.

A Detachment belonging to the East India Company's Service embarked, on Wednesday afternoon, at Billingsgate, for Gravesend, on route to Chatham.

A Detachment belonging to the 56th Regiment of Foot marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Hull.

A Detachment belonging to the 99th Regiment of Infantry marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Manchester.

A Detachment of the 11th Regiment of Light Dragoons, marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Maidstone.

Detachments belonging to the 2d, 3d, 38th, 44th, and 48th Regiments of Foot marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Canterbury.

Detachments belonging to the 13th and 14th Regiments of Infantry marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Chatham.

Detachments of the 51st and 53d Regiments of Foot marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Portsmouth.

Detachments of the 35th, 27th, 93d, and 98th Regiments of Infantry marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for the Isle of Wight.

Detachments of the 76th and 96th Regiments of Foot marched, on Thursday morning, from Westminster, for Winchester.

FASHIONABLE MISCELLANY.

MARRIAGE OF THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY.

The marriage of his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant with Mrs. Patterson took place at the Vice-Regal Lodge, in the Phœnix-park, on Saturday evening.

At three o'clock two of the Lord Lieutenant's carriages, with a numerous retinue of servants in splendid liveries, arrived at Ryland's Hotel, in Sackville-street, where Mrs. Patterson has been residing for the last three months. Immediately afterwards this distinguished lady, and her sister, Miss Caton, accompanied by Mr. Johnson and Colonel Shawe, entered one of the carriages, and proceeded directly to the residence of the illustrious Viceroy in the Park. The other carriage followed with the attendants.

A grand dinner was given, at a quarter past six, to a select party, consisting of the following persons of distinction:—The Lord Primate, Sir George Murray, the Lord Chief Justice, the Attorney-General, and Miss Plunkett, Bishop of Raphoe, Mr. and Mrs. Goulburn, Mr. Gregory, the Surgeon-General, Dr. Radcliffe, Mr. and Mrs Blake, Archdeacon Bishopp, Mrs. Talbot, Colonel and Mrs. Talbot, Mr. Colt and Colonel Shawe, Dr Hunter and Mr. Johnston, Mr. E. Johnston and Captain Keppel, Captains Vignoles and Johnston.

At eight o'clock precisely the marriage was performed by the Lord Primate (Archbishop of Armagh.) The lady was not given away, that form being unnecessary, as she had previously been married.

There was also a select evening party, as follows:—Colonel, Mr., and the Misses Gore; Sir Stewart Bruce, Mrs. Furrell, Miss Montague, Mrs. Webber, Captain Malcolm, Captain and Mrs. Scott.

The Catholic Archbishop of Dublin (Most Rev. Dr. Murray) was honoured with an invitation to the dinner party, but found it necessary to offer an apology. At eight o'clock, one of the carriages of the Lord Lieutenant waited on the Archbishop at his house in North Cumberland-street, from whence he proceeded without delay to the Park, accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Russell, parish-priest of St. Paul's, and Vicar-General of the diocese, and the Rev. Mr. Glynn, of Liffey-street Chapel, Vicar Apostolic. On the arrival of Dr. Murray, the Marquis Wellesley and Mrs. Patterson were again married by that Most Reverend Prelate, who appeared in pontificalibus. The Archbishop, and the Reverend Gentlemen who attended him, afterwards remained some time, and partook of some refreshments with the distinguished guests of the Lord Lieutenant. They were then conveyed to their several residences in his Excellency's carriages.

No event has, for a long time, diffused so much satisfaction through the metropolis as this union. The city is expected to be exceedingly gay during the winter in consequence of it.

The Duke of Cumberland took leave of his Majesty at Windsor, on Thursday evening last, preparatory to the Duke's return to Germany. His Royal Highness was to quit this country in two or three days, to return to the Duchess and family; he will not return, as he came, with portion of the Prussian Royal Family, by way of Paris; he will proceed direct to Brussels. The object of the Duke of Cumberland's visit to this country is said to have been to arrange with his Majesty the mode of educating the Prince of Cumberland; the allowance of 6,000*l.* a year for whose education and establishment, it will be remembered, occasioned so much discussion in the House of Commons last Sessions. The particular Act for the grant, as well as what was previously the law of the land, gives the Sovereign a controlling voice in the education of the younger branches of the Royal Family. Finally, to adjust such object, the Lord Chancellor was especially summoned to Windsor on Wednesday, and his Lordship then had a long audience of the King and the Duke of Cumberland. We have been informed that it was determined that an English Clergyman should forthwith be appointed tutor, and that a Clergyman was afterwards named to undertake the Prince of Cumberland's education; we are not sure of the Clergyman's name, but have heard the Rev. Mr. Sumner, his Majesty's Chaplain, mentioned.

On Thursday the Marquis of Hastings arrived at the Royal Lodge, Windsor, and had an interview with his Majesty; after which he took his departure.

DREADFUL SHIPWRECK.

(From the Agent to Lloyd's.)

Deal, Nov. 3.—About day-light this morning, blowing a violent gale from about W.S.W., a ship (apparently about 400 tons), with a poop and figure head, painted yellow sides and ports, was observed under her topsails in a direction towards the South Sand Head, standing on the larboard tack; almost immediately afterwards (half past six in the morning), she struck on the Goodwin, with a tremendous sea going over her; the masts soon fell, and the crew assembled on the poop, from which every succeeding sea lessened their numbers. Seven Deal boats went out to their assistance, but such was the violence of the wind and sea, that none of them could get near enough even to obtain her name. The whole of the crew and all on board perished. She was under English colours, having, when she first struck, hoisted her ensign, union downwards; the ship broke up entirely about noon, and disappeared.

Lloyd's, Nov. 4, 11 a.m.—The name of the vessel wrecked on the Goodwin Sands is not yet perfectly ascertained. One or two names have been mentioned, but as the crews have perished, it would be improper to state any name, except on the best authority; but she certainly appears to be from Bombay. Several bales of cotton have been picked up, and landed at Broadstairs, marked

{GG and Co.
{EL

(Extract of a Private Lett r.)

Deal, Nov. 3.—It is our painful duty to record the following details of a distressing event which occurred off here this morning:—

At day-light a large ship was observed on shore on the inward part of the Goodwin Sand, on her beam ends; and, soon after, the whole of her masts went by the board, at which time the crew were distinctly seen from hence in a cluster, apparently not knowing what part of the ship to approach for safety: consequently several of our boats immediately went off to her assistance, each boat well manned. The sea on the sand at this time was tremendous, and the gale continued increasing; and our intrepid boatmen at the great hazard of their lives, used every effort they could devise to get alongside of the ship to save the unfortunate crew, who continued waving their hats and hands as a signal to implore their humane assistance. Some of the boats were within two cables' length of the ship, and remained there as long as they possibly could, in the most imminent danger, having shipped several heavy seas, and being nearly worn out with fatigue, consequently they were obliged reluctantly to return (without accomplishing their object, which they were so desirous to fulfil), and leave the unfortunate crew in that awful situation, where, we are fearful, long before this they are consigned to the merciless deep; but we sincerely hope our fears will not be realized.

The writer of this, having been for many years an eye-witness of the praise-worthy exertions of these boatmen, cannot help observing how useful they are in endeavouring to save the lives of their fellow-creatures, at the imminent hazard of their own; and it is much to be lamented that the merchants and ship-owners are not better acquainted with the value of their services, which would then be more appreciated in similar catastrophes.

The only particulars we can at present ascertain of the ship is, that she has a figure-head and a poop, and appears about 500 tons.

Should any further particulars transpire before the departure o the mail, we shall not fail to furnish you with them.

Half-past Six o'Clock.—No further particulars have transpired respecting the unfortunate ship which has totally disappeared.

The following accounts of the heavy gale of Thursday were yesterday morning received at Lloyd's:—

Deal, Nov. 3.—A ship, of about 400 tons, drove out of the Downs at 11 a.m., with a signal of distress, and proceeded towards Margate Roads.

Five p.m.—The gale has moderated, but in squalls it still blows hard; wind about W.S.W. Several of the outward-bound are riding with two anchors a-head. Arrived and remain the Albion, Radcliff, and the Arab. ——, from Smyrna; Ceres, Down, from Quebec, and Hope, of Bristol, from Naples. Put back the Llun, Rumney, and Express, ——, for Jamaica.

Margate, Nov. 3.—The Harriet, Fletcher, from Sincapore, lost both her anchors and cables in the Downs yesterday, and was blown out; she is now getting supplied with others from Broadstairs.

Harwich, Nov. 3.—It blew a storm of wind the whole of last night and this day from the westward. A brig, supposed to be a collier, was seen in the early part of the day on shore on the West Rocks, with a signal of distress. The life-boat went off about noon, and has just returned. The crew had left the vessel, and she will become a total wreck this flood.

North Yarmouth, Nov. 3.—It has been blowing a heavy gale from W. and W.N.W. all night, and this morning a large brig was seen on the outside of Corton Sand. Boats from Lowestoffe and Gorlstone went off to her, and about one o'clock she came off the Sand, and is drifting out to sea; she is said to have left her rudder, and to be deal laden.

Three o'clock p.m.—It still blows hard from W.S.W.

Lowestoffe, Nov. 3.—This morning, about four o'clock, the Frances Ann, of London, George Shipley, master, from Dantzic for London, got ashore on Corton Sand, in a heavy gale, and the crew finding no likelihood of her continuance, were compelled to quit the vessel with a narrow escape of their lives. She has floated since, but there is little probability of much being got from her.—Wind W.S.W. blowing very hard.

DREADFUL AND DISTRESSING OCCURRENCE—FORTY PERSONS DROWNED.

[From the Cork Advertiser.]

A most dreadful and distressing event, of frightful magnitude, which has spread terror and dismay among a vast portion of the population of an extensive district, occurred early in the forenoon of Saturday last, in the west of this county. On that morning, a boat, having on board between 40 and 50 persons, and passing from Cape Clear Island to Skibbereen, whither her passengers were going for the purpose of marketting, and, agreeably to the late act, to receive English in exchange for their Irish silver, was unhappily upset by striking on a rock near the island of Sherkin, when all on board perished, save two, an aged man, and a boy, who, by clinging to her mast, providentially escaped the fate of their less fortunate fellow-passengers. These are all the details which have reached us as yet; they have been furnished to us by a gentleman who has recently come from the west; but at the period of his departure no particulars were ascertained even as to the extent of this direful calamity, or who the parties were.

LOSS OF THE COMET STEAM-PACKET.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The public feeling dwells on this deplorable catastrophe with intense and undiminished anxiety. We have nothing material to add; but it is impossible to read the accounts given of the conduct of the master and the crew of the Ayr, without feeling sensations of the deepest regret, mixed with a lively indignation. A severe scrutiny into, and a severe example, will, we trust, be made of all whose conduct has either caused or aggravated this unprecedented catastrophe. The Ayr sailed over the spot where the sufferers were struggling in the agonies of death, and the principal steward of the Comet probably met with his death by a stroke from the paddle of the Ayr, as he was much cut on the neck. The master of the Ayr is liberated on bail. It will be seen that our first account of the extent of the catastrophe has not been exaggerated. The body of Captain Sutherland was found, but that of his amiable and unfortunate wife still remains to be discovered. One of the crew states that he saw them jump together into the sea from the starboard quarter; but as Mr. Anderson seems certain that Mrs. Sutherland clung round him for some time, they must certainly afterwards have been separated for ever in this, to meet in a few moments in another and a better world. On the person of Captain Sutherland was found a purse, containing 9s. in silver, and five sovereigns and a half in gold, and a gold and silver watch. A poor woman, near her accouchement, a native of Bonaw, the wife of a man named Macintyre, residing at Eagleshan, was lost with six children. It is determined to raise the Comet; and we learn that the Superintendant, Mr. Clark, gives it as his opinion, that it can be effected without difficulty. She lies in clean ground, and by actual soundings, her bow is, at half tide, in 17½ fathoms water, and 165 yards from the shore, her length extending directly from it. So close was she that soon after the accident happened, a gentleman on shore distinctly heard the cries of the sufferers for relief, with the water gurgling in their throats, while struggling with death! It is not probable any more bodies will be found till the vessel is raised. Several lines have been broken in attempting to trawl close to her side. The shock, when the Ayr came in contact with the Comet, must have been exceedingly strong, as one of the bow timbers, full of tree nail holes, has floated on shore.

An inquiry naturally arises, whether the extent of this most distressing calamity has been nearly ascertained. The first rumour made the number of passengers on board the Comet at the time of the accident to be nearly 100; later conjectures brought this number down to 70. If, however, we blend the number saved with that of the bodies already discovered, and added to these the number known to be still buried in the deep, we find a total of 83; and still must make allowance for many whose connections being very remote, have not yet come forward to seek their kindred. So that there are some grounds for apprehending that the first rumour, however unusual, did not exaggerate a misfortune, which must long be mourned, for the extent and severity of the domestic affliction it has produced.

Mr. Kenneth, who has opened a very amusing shop, in Russell-street, Covent-garden, is about to publish a fine likeness of Mr. Warde, in Brutus, the original drawing by Thurston, and engraved by Woolnoth.

A Company has lately been formed for the purpose of supplying the public with Tea at moderate charges, and from the respectability of its directors, and general management, they have every chance of complete success A reference to the advertisement will more fully explain the principles of the undertaking.

Champaign.—The votary of fashion, the bon vivant, the lover of fun, and indeed the public in general, will be gratified to hear that our old friend Charles Wright, of the Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, has just returned from the Continent, where he has been traversing the plains of Champaign, and selecting a stock of the finest wines which could be procured for the replenishing his cellars and supply of his friends in this country. His well-known-taste and judgment, afford us the strongest guarantee as to the quality of the commodity which he has selected; and the character he has established by the liberal mode of dealing which he adopts towards his friends, ensures to the public an article as excellent in quality, and certainly considerably lower in price, than any other house in London can possibly supply it at. It has sometimes been a matter of surprise to us, how he could contrive to combine as he does those two great and powerful recommendations, excellence and cheapness; the explanation of the mystery may, however, we believe, be found in the personal exertions which he makes in the selection of his stock, and the moderate profit which he puts upon the commodity.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

WAR-OFFICE, NOV. 1, 1825.

1st Regt. Dragoon Guards, Capt. R. Wallace to be Major, by purchase, vice Elton, promoted: Lieut. E. Reed to be Captain, by purchase, v Wallace—6th Regt. Dragoons, Lieut. P. B. F. C. Gilliess, from 9th Foot, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v M'Queen, promoted—1st Grenadier Regt. Foot Gds., Capt. G. FitzRoy, from half-pay, to be Lieutenant and Captain, v H. D. Langrishe, who exchanges, receiving the difference—1st Regt. Foot, Ensign E. Macpherson to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Dixon promoted; G. H. Dalrymple, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase v Macpherson—6th Ditto, Lieut. Hon. G. A. Browne, from h. p., to be Lieutenant, v B. W. Yelverton, who exchanges, receiving the difference—7th Ditto, Ens. J. M. Ogilvie, from 28th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v Lord P. Lennox, promoted—17th Ditto, Ens. Hon. F. Forbes, from 8th Foot, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Frazer, promoted—19th Ditto, Lieut. R. T. Fletcher, from 38th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v Booth, who exchanges—28th Ditto, Ens. J. S. Greene, from 33d Foot, to be Ensign, v Ogilvie, promoted; Hosp.-Assist. F. O'Brien to be Assistant Surgeon, v Portell, whose appointment has not taken place—37th Ditto, R. Burke, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v Ralston, promoted in the 68th Foot—43d Ditto, W. A. Ward, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v Uston—49th Ditto, Hosp.-Assist. J. Duncanson, M.D. to be Assistant Surgeon—51st Ditto, Capt. J. Ross to be Major, by purchase, v Kent, promoted; Lieut. F. Mathews to be Captain, by purchase, v Ross—52d Ditto, Lieut. G. H. Love to be Captain, v Hewett, deceased; Lieut. J. Robertson to be Adjutant, v Love—55th Ditto, Hosp.-Assist. A. B. Morgan to be Assistant Surgeon,—64th Ditto, Hosp.-Assist. W. Thompson to be Assistant Surgeon—67th Ditto, Ens. J. Ralston, from 37th Foot, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Kirwan, promoted—88th Ditto, Lieut. G. Both, from 19th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v Fletcher, who exchanges—94th Ditto, Hosp.-Assist. E. J. Bulteel to be Assistant Surgeon.—98th Ditto, Hosp.-Assist. A. Smith, M.D. to be Assistant Surgeon.

Hospital Staff—Hosp.-Assist. J. Campbell to be Assistant Surgeon to the Forces, v Kennedy, who resigns.

Unattached.—To be Lieutenant Colonels of Infantry, by purchase, Brevet Lieut. Col. J. T. Kent, from 51st Foot, v H. M. Farrington, who retires; Maj. W. Elton, from 1st Drag. Gds. v J. Cassel, who retires—To be Majors of Infantry, by purchase, Capt. C. Levinge, from 52d Foot, v J. Bewett, whose promotion has not taken place—To be Captain of Infantry, by purchase, Lieut. J. Dixon, from 1st Foot: Lieut. P. Frazer, from 17th Foot; Lieut. J. L. Pemefather, from 7th Drag. Gds.: Lieut. J. W. Stuart, from 6th Foot—To be Lieutenant of Infantry, by purchase, Ens. D. Campbell, from 72d Foot.

Memoranda.—The date of the Commission of Surgeon Stewart, of the Royal Staff Corps, should be 25th Aug. 1825 and not 26th June 1825—The Christian name of Ens. Forbes, of 18th Foot, is John—Hosp.-Assist. R. Leslie has resigned his commission—The appointment of Hosp.-Asst. Leslie to be Assistant Surgeon in the 60th Foot, has not taken place.

The under-mentioned Officers have been allowed to dispose of their half-pay: —Capt. J. Blair, Retired List of the 1st Black Garrison Company; Capt. J. Pigott, h-p Portuguese Officers; Capt. W. A. Haly, h-p 66th Foot; Capt. W. Winser, h-p 27th Foot; Lieut. R. B. Thornhill, h-p 7th Drag. Gds.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

R. Heghan, Stratford St. Mary, Suffolk, tea-dealer.

W. Miller, Fresh-wharf, Lower Thames-street, warehouseman.

W. Linfott, Leadenhall-market, and Islington, butcher.

T. Flint, Burlington-arcade, bookseller.

BANKRUPTS.

G. Cowper, Oxford-street, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. Farris, Surrey-street, Strand.

W. Symonds, Stowmarket, Suffolk, miller. Sols. Messrs. Dixon and Sons, New Boswell-court.

T. T. Langford, Lamb's-conduit-street, Holborn, chinaman. Sols. Messrs. Freame and Best, Fig-tree-court, Temple.

J. Rowlson, Mincing-lane, London, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Gregson and Fonnereau, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street.

H. Wenkert, Leicester-square, tailor. Sols. Messrs. Richardson and Pike, Golden-square.

W. Pott, Union-street, Southwark, victualler. Sol. Mr. Glynes, Burr-street, East Smithfield.

I. Levy, Church-street, Trinity, Minories, silversmith. Sol. Mr. E. Isaacs, Bury-street, St. Mary-axe.

F. Baker, Childs-Hill-pottery, Hendon, potter. Sol. Mr. Branscomb, Fleet-street.

S. Green, Kingsland, plumber. Sols. Messrs. Winter and Williams, Bedford-row.

C. Smith, Bishopsgate-street, and Camberwell, draper. Sols. Messrs. Cooke and Wright, Furnival's-inn, Holborn.

Sir W. Roberts, Bart., Courtlands, Devonshire, and Fowey, Cornwall, banker. Sols. Messrs. Knight and Fyson, Basinghall-street.

R. Franklin, Wilmot-street, Brunswick-square, tailor. Sol. Mr. H. H. Dunbar, Lyon's-inn.

I. Worley, Monument Coffee-house, Fish-street-hill, wine-merchant. Sol. Mr. Holt, Threadneedle-street.

T. J. Rigg, Caroline-place, Chelsea, commission-agent. Sol. Mr. E. Elkins, Broad-street, Golden-square.

R. Stockley and J. Nicholas, Horse-Shoe-Wharf, Upper Thames-street, coal-merchants. Sol. Mr. Hartley, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

M. Bromley and J. Gillings, Commercial-road, cheesemongers. Sol. Mr. Brough, Shoreditch.

G. Wright, Birmingham, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Alexander and Son, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn.

E. Dawson, Knaresborough, Yorkshire, butcher and innkeeper. Sol. Mr. C. Lee, Gray's-inn-square.

J. Lanefield, Littlebourne, Kent, builder. Sols. Messrs. Graham and Galsworthy, Symond's-inn, Chancery-lane.

R. J. Willmott, late of Paddington-street, St. Mary-le-bone, builder and plasterer. Sols. Messrs. Hallett and Henderson, 8, Northumberland-street, Mary-le-bone.

S. Jones, Bell-street, Edgeware-road, flour-dealer and baker. Sols. Messrs. Hallett and Henderson, 8, Northumberland-street, Mary-le-bone.

B. Pellings, Castle-street, Leicester-square, jeweller. Sol. Mr. Fawcett, 1, Jewin-street, Cripplegate, and South Sea-Chambers, Threadneedle-street.

J. P. Clarke, Gloucester-house, Walworth, schoolmaster. Sols. Messrs. Winter and Williams, Bedford-row.

G. Banks, Balham-hill, dealer. Sol. Mr. J. M. Taylor, Fenn-court, Fenchurch-street.

J. Pritchard and J. Burton, Yewsley, brick-makers. Sols. T. and J. Tebbutt, Austin-friars.

J. Smith, sen. and J. Smith jun. Cateaton-street, warehousemen. Sols. Messrs. Fisher and Spenser, Walbrook-buildings, Walbrook.

M. Fowler, late of Birmingham, grocer. Sols. Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and Faulkner, 1, Redford-row.

J. Bousfield, Manchester, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Willis, Watson, Bover, and Wells.

W. Wise, Piccadilly, picture-dealer. Sols. Heli and Brodrick, Bow-church-yard, Cheapside.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Mr. Faucit Saville's letter has been received, and is answered in our theatrical article.

We cannot inform Honestus at present whether the Notorious Attorney belongs to the gang of the Gloucester-place swindlers, or not, as we are ignorant of the plan or designs of any such vagabonds; but we think it not unlikely that a man who has been twice released from the King's Bench by the Insolvent Act, afterwards a bankrupt, then brought up to Marlborough-street for Horse-stealing, and convicted of sundry other gentlemanly acts, should be concerned with them. We will however enquire, as we shall next week probably submit to our readers the particulars of this fellow's life, with a full account of the private examination at Bow-street last Wednesday, and all the circumstances connected therewith.

A Lover of the Drama wishes to know what we think of the Drury-lane stage. His letter is really droll; we, however, refer him to our critique. We can only say that it is licensed to hold more insides than it has lately been in the habit of holding.

Hangman's letter on the Duke of Cumberland, and his Royal Highness's opinion of the Age, has come to hand. He ought to bear in mind that "praise undeserved is censure in disguise." Was our Correspondent in joke, or in earnest, when he wrote?

The "Vicar of Bray's" lines to Mrs. Calcraft are too satirical; Fair Maid would be a libel on her Beau Mari.

Dramaticus sends us word that Isaacs, the singer, has been guilty of a Jew d'esprit; for somebody told him that a new Hamlet was coming out, and wishing to toad the manager, he said, "Kemble ought to follow our pershwasion, and then it would be Ham, let alone." They send us these things, so in they must go.

The communication relative to the Honourable Augustus Cavendish is a falsehood.

We never heard of such a person as Mr. Conyton, of Woolwich, before the receipt of his letter; and even now have not the remotest idea who he is.

THE AGE.

LONDON, November 6

By the New York papers, which were yesterday received, it appears by news from Alvarado, that the Independent blockading squadron continued its operations against the castle of St. Juan d'Ulloa. The castle had bombarded the town of Vera Cruz. A few boats had been captured by the blockading vessels, and Officers had been appointed to take the Asia ship of the line, and the gun-brig Constantia, round to the Gulf of Mexico. These vessels, it will be remembered, were lately surrendered to the Independents, and it is added, a sloop of war and a frigate were expected from England.

Philadelphia Papers, which have come to the 16th ultimo, mention that Governor Cass and General Clarke, who had been authorised to act as mediators, had succeeded in concluding a peace between the nine Indian nations of the Upper Mississippi, and further state that a French officer named Courtois de St. Clair had been arrested, and imprisoned in the capital of Mexico, "as a secret agent of the Government of Havannah, and the French Consul for the Island of Cuba. His correspondence, which has fallen into the hands of the Mexican Authorities, discloses his errand, and particular proceedings in relation to it. When interrogated officially, he represented himself as a simple traveller, who took notes of his information, and that of his friends, as Mr. Poinsett had done. It is intimated, in an account of his travels and correspondence published lately at Mexico, that the Mexican Government had abstained from trying him publicly, in consequence of having discovered that several distinguished families of the capital would be implicated by his statements."

The following are extracts from the New York Papers received:—

NEW YORK, OCT. 12.

Mexico.—By the brig Emma, Captain Boyer, arrived last evening from Alvarado, we learn that the blockading force off the Castle of St. Juan d'Ulloa, had lately been reinforced by the Victoria, a 20 gun brig, which, being a stranger to the enemy, decoyed out the launches, and succeeded in taking a pilot boat and her crew of thirteen men, but failed in the main object, the taking of the armed launches. At six P.M. the same day, the Castle opened its whole battery upon the city, and kept up a smart fire for two hours afterwards—shot and shells at intervals till one o'clock next morning.

The Captain General, after taking the declaration of the prisoners, offered them their liberty, and they, requesting to return to the Castle, were accordingly sent next day, by the General under an English flag, with a communication to General C. who returned an answer the next day.

During the bombardment, the Forts of the city were silent; subsequently some three or four fishing boats with twenty or thirty men were surprised and captured by the small boats of the blockading vessels.

The castle and town were again quiet up to the departure of the Emma; the former were hourly and anxiously waiting relief from Havanna, without which, they could not long sustain the fortress.

No English vessels of war were at Sacrificios, the frigate Dartmouth having sailed ten days previous, destination unknown.

The officers had been appointed, and were on their way to Acapulco, to take charge of the Asia 64, and gun-brig Constante for the purpose of bringing them round this side.

IMPORTANT AND WEIGHTY INTELLIGENCE

"Lord Nugent left town on Monday afternoon,' on the outside—not of the Falmouth, but the Salisbury coach, on the roof behind the coachman."—Morning Herald.

That his Lordship should travel outside the "heavy stage," as the inside might not be roomy enough, does not much surprise us, but that he could sit any where on the roof, but behind the coachman, we must confess, does. The research of the Herald is something amazing.

That mountebank, O'Connell, has been addressing the Catholics of the county of Louth, and from his letter we extract the following passage relative to Mr. Peel, to whom this fellow has been accused by a Mr. Anthony Marmion, at a public Catholic Meeting, of crouching, while he was considered to be the most implacable and dangerous foe of their cause. O'Connel's estimate of Mr. Peel's character, is a specimen of true Irish humbug—a jingle of words without the least direct meaning, and you scarcely know which to pity most, the ignorance of the man entertaining the idea, or his impudence in expressing it, that a person of Mr. Peel's vast attainments was "a man of no great intellect"—nothing about him of the "mens divinior," and, although we do not mean to follow this blockhead, and question whether Mr. Peel is "a poet," or has any of "those loftier flights, which raise men above their fellows," yet we are prepared to say, that he has more solid sense in his little finger (to use a familiarism) than is to be found in the brains of O'Connell, and all his miserable party. But even with such runagates as these the truth will out, for in one part of the following passage we find a partial but proper estimate of some of those actions which have marked the career of this eminent statesman; but to describe them all, or even to do common justice to what he has described, would be as much beyond O'Connell's power as the splendour and intrepidity of them is beyond his comprehension:—

"I now proceed to the fourth and last charge. It is one, I acknowledge, likely in Ireland to make an impression against me, but at all events you shall have the entire truth. The charge runs thus—

Fourthly—That I crouched to Mr. Peel, the most implacable and dangerous enemy of our cause.

You perceive that I use the very words of Mr. Marmion: crouch is indeed a harsh word.

"Oh, taming thought to human pride."

But yes, I will avow it; I did, if you please to call it so, crouch to Mr. Peel.

The facts are these:—In the quarrel which I had some years ago with Mr. Peel, I was clearly in the wrong. I have, for a considerable time been conscious that I was so, although in the heat of blood, and in the vanity of a criminal obedience to more than criminal custom, I perhaps endeavoured to conceal that fact from myself. I had resolved, if ever an occasion occurred, to make this painful but just avowal.

Mr. Peel is (I speak of him with an intention of being perfectly candid) a man of no great reach of intellect. There is nothing about him of the "mens divinior"—no poetry—none of those loftier flights which raise men above their fellows. Indeed he owes his elevation more to the bad passions of others than to any natural or inherent superiority of his own. In the mind of such a man, personal hostility to, and the sense of an injustice done by, a person styled a leader of an opposite party, might, and to be quite frank, did, as I conceive, mix with, and embitter Mr. Peel's implacable and dangerous hostility to the Catholic cause.

I may well be mistaken in this estimate of Mr. Peel. It is at all events a sincere one. Let me at the same time do him the justice to acknowledge, that he has carried through Parliament two measures of great and permanent advantage, giving him a title to be called a benefactor by the English people. I allude to his commenced reform of the sanguinary criminal code, and his complete and noble reform of the mode of electing Juries. Let me ask, by way of parenthesis, why this last Statute has not been extended to Ireland?

These opinions respecting Mr. Peel are not irrelevant. They were amongst the most powerful motives of my conduct.

When the Catholic Relief Bill had been read a second time, and that a confident expectation of its ultimate success was entertained and expressed by many of that portion of the Government by which it was supported, I thought a period had arrived when I might do Mr. Peel an act of justice, which, at the same time, might possibly mitigate some of his hostility to the Catholics. It was, I thought, an experiment worth trying. If I were mistaken—and, perhaps, indeed, I was mistaken, in conceiving that any personal feelings mingled with his opposition to our claims—yet, at all events, no possible injury could result to the Catholic cause from my doing him an act of justice.

There was, I know it well, personal humiliation in taking such a step. But is not this a subject upon which I merit humiliation? Yes. Let me be sneered at—and let me be censured, even by the generous and respected—but I do not shrink from this humiliation. He who feels conscious of having outraged the law of God, ought to feel a pleasure in the avowal of his deep and lasting regret.

With these impressions, I commissioned my friend Mr. R. N. Bennett, to wait on Colonel B., who had been friend to Mr. Peel, to tell him that I felt conscious that in the transaction in question, I had been originally in the wrong, and made that avowal by way of atonement. Colonel B. asked that the communication should, in order to obviate all mistakes, be put in writing. My friend, accordingly, wrote the substance of his verbal communication, I confess he did not write it as strongly as myself should have done. In that respect alone, did my friend fall short of my wishes. The letter was transmitted to Mr. Peel, for whom it was intended. It has been said that Mr. Peel gave no reply. The fact is not so. He wrote a reply, just such as a kind and warm hearted gentleman would write. I know nothing of Mr. Peel in private life, and judge of him only by that letter, and so judging, my opinion of him, as a private gentleman, cannot but be favourable.

Such is the history of my crouching to Mr. Peel, upon which subject I should like to be judged by those who may condemn me most for this line of conduct. That conduct was not wrong in morals—so much is quite clear. It could not possibly injure the Catholic cause—it might possibly have a tendency to serve that cause. It certainly was painful to my pride.

DIURNALIA.

We think it quite a matter of duty to introduce, from time to time, as they appear to us worthy of a place, the lucubrations of some of the more enlightened of our contemporaries. It is, first of all, due to them, and next to that, it is due to the public; and really, all things taken into consideration, we do not know what either party would do without such occasional relief. The Morning Post, which has the reputation of being one of the very drollest publications going, has been quite "extra" funny this week: and in addition to other cogitations of a much more important nature, informs us that an announcement which, it will be readily believed, has created no small consternation in the metropolis, inasmuch as nobody ever suspected old Tom of being an entertaining fellow, even before marriage, and every body knows that, since that awful ceremony, Lady Ann positively avows he says little, and does less. This is, therefore, either a hoax of the Post upon poor Coke, or a hoax of some one else upon the Post. In another of its last week's numbers we are informed that

"Mr. Coke is entertaining a large party of distinguished Visitors at his seat in Norfolk."

"A Cormorant was shot at Compstall Bridge, Cheshire, on Tuesday last, which measured, between the two extremities of the wings, five feet, and from the point of the bill to the tip of the tail three feet one inch; it weighed 6lb. 9oz. This bird is rarely met with so far in the interior of the island"

A notice of this kind should be issued with great caution, for it is quite impossible to say what may be the consequence; as it is, the family of Sir George Warrender was very much alarmed, uncertain whether he was the cormorant alluded to, and it was not until an express arrived at Cliffden, announcing Sir George's safety, that these fears became entirely subdued—it really is quite shameful to trifle thus with the feelings of relatives, who are always too prone to be guided by Newspaper report. The next interesting account that has appeared consists of an attempt, and a very praiseworthy attempt it is, to prevent the repeated suicides that take place in the country, more particularly those by poison, and a recommendation is held out to every Druggist to have a label, with a Death's head and cross bones engraven thereon, to every bottle of arsenic, laudanum, and other such articles, their customers may purchase. This recommendation is followed up by a still more important one, on the same subjects, which we subjoin:—

POISON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST.

Sir—The Letter on the subject of Poison, which appeared in your Paper of this day, has suggested to me the idea that if, in addition to the "Memento mori" proposed by the writer, the words of our Sixth Commandment, "Thou shalt do no Murder," were placed on every bottle containing poison issued from a druggist's, the mind of many a poor wretch who was contemplating self-destruction, if in that mind a single spark of religion lay dormant, might perhaps be startled into recollection, and turned from its dreadful purpose.

Nov. 3, 1825. I am, Sir, yours, &c. H. B.

The only objection to the insertion of the said "sixth commandment" is, that many worthy people who go and purchase poison, some to kill flies, and others to kill themselves or their families, cannot read, and in that case this very prudent caution would become lost—it is not, however, to be slighted so easily, and we are disposed to think, that as a hint to other subjects, it might actually be of vital import. Suppose, for instance, a farmer on every one of his sheep and horses were to mark the EIGHTH COMMANDMENT, "Thou shalt not steal;" there surely is no man bold enough to imagine that, after such notice, any one would be hung again for sheep-stealing—no, no, depend upon it; and therefore only as a recommendatory step, it is one to be highly approved of, and patronized. But we are disposed to carry this vital suggestion still further, and to assert our belief, that if every man were to print the SEVENTH COMMANDMENT on any part of his wife he might consider the most likely to be seen, we should never hear again of the horrible inroads on private society and public morals, which are now so frequently occurring, and that men would be all Josephs, and "womankind" actual Dianas; and under this impression, therefore, we bow with an implicit acknowledgment of gratitude to this sagacious journal. The Morning Post winds up its fund of amusement by the following account of its Brighton theatricals:—

A party at cards, in one of the stage boxes, on this occasion, exhibited a picture of sociability never witnessed there before. The house displayed a pleasing sprinkling of fashion.

We have heard of many "tricks" in theatres before now, but we should imagine that they must all fade before the tricks which it appears were played on the occasion in question, by this "picture of sociability."

The old Chronicle is, as usual, "in for it" again, and on Wednesday gives us the following touch of its usual INFORMATION:—

A correspondent informs us, that Mrs. COUTTS was married, on Thursday last, to the Duke of St. Albans. The Ceremony took ptace in Edinburgh. The EARL of LAUDERDALE was present!

Upon the subject of HOAXING, the Courier feels exceedingly sore, in consequence of Dr. CHAFFEY, and his GLOUCESTERSHIRE e, and more particularly so with the Morning Chronicle, as having been chafed by that paper for the hoax in question, and on that score it is, we presume, that the following illustrations of the foregoing paragraph appears in last evening's Courier:

THE DUCHESS OF ST. ALBAN'S.—We are surprised that the papers generally have not noticed the circumstance of Mrs. Coutts having become Duchess of St. Alban's. The Morning Chronicle having, on this occasion, the advantage of them all in priority of information, announced the important fact on Wednesday last. It seems, according to the Chronicle, that the nuptials of the happy pair took place on the preceding Thursday, at Edinburgh, in the presence of the Earl of Lauderdale. Now, why the advancement of this Lady, in rank, should thus be hushed up, we do not know, but, strange to say, so it is; for the Edinburgh papers since received, mention nothing about the wedding. This must be from malice, we should think, for it cannot be susposed that any one would attempt hoaxing the Morning Chronicle, as the approved sagacity of the Editor in detecting fabricated letters, would make such an attempt hopeless.

While touching on the Courier, we cannot avoid noticing the poetical turn that paper has lately taken, as a sample of which, we transcribe some lines which appeared in that journal on Monday last,

ON A FADED VIOLET.

Sweet flow'ret! thou hast left thy nest
Of shy retirement, here to rest,
And glad me for an hour, most blest,
WITH THY SOFT BREATH.

Alas! to think thy joys can last
But that short hour—and fleeting fast,
They wither—fade—and then they're past,
And sink in death.

Sweet flower! I would not wish thee here,
Nor pluck thee from thy home so DEAR,
Could aught thy tender bosom cheer,
Or soothe thy grief!

Perhaps thy white-robed sisters weep
O'er thy lost charms, and sorrowing, steep
Their fringed lids in tears, till sleep
Shall bring relief!

But thou, like us, art doomed to know
The bitter pangs of early woe,
And soon thy sister gems will blow,
Then sink to rest.

Perhaps they fade—ere yet the bloom
Of opening youth and life's perfume
Have known one hour of pensive gloom—
Ah! doubly blest!

The fate of this "sweet flower" is cruel in the extreme; for being originally of a very shy turn, a milder destiny might have been anticipated, as it appears, by the third verse, that its death occasioned the poor creature great grief. In addition to which, its sisters, it seems, wept bitterly till they fell asleep; though an idea is held out at last that they too died.—"Ah, doubly blest,"—before their life knew one hour of pensive gloom; and, therefore, viewed altogether, we have not met with such an unfortunate family for some time past.

We terminate these diurnalia, by the introduction of the following little bit of sheer quackery:—

KELLY'S REMINISCENCES.—We are requested to state that the Extracts which have appeared from this Work in the New Monthly Magazine and another Periodical, have been given without the knowledge of the Author; and that his Book will not be published till the Copy which is preparing for the KING (to whom the Work is dedicated) shall have been presented to his MAJESTY.

The NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE in which these extracts appear, is published by little COLBURN, who also publishes KELLY'S Life. By the possession of the latter, he is enabled to swell out the pages of the former; and then, by way of humbugging JOHN BULL, he dubs the above paragraph in the daily papers, to make the people believe it is a most shameful piece of business towards KELLY, who, being well paid for what THEODORE HOOK has done for him, cares no more what becomes of his book, or his publisher, than if he had never known such things were in existence. Funny times, these!

YANKEE REFINEMENT.

A Society has lately been organised in Baltimore, called the ANTI-BED-BUG SOCIETY—instituted with a view to the extinction of bed-bugs.—American paper.

THEATRICALS.

The celebrated Jocko, Monsieur MAZURIER, from Paris, has made his debut at Covent-garden Theatre, in his far-famed character of Policinello, in a ballet prepared for the express purpose; and it is quite impossible that any anticipation of his success, or preconceived opinion of his abilities, could have surpassed the realization. He is indeed a wonderful man, and even those who may concur with Dr. JOHNSON'S ideas on such exhibitions, and wish they were "impossible," must equally admit, in this instance, its extraordinary nature. As some trifling disapprobation has been expressed on one or two evenings of his appearance, we feel disposed to question the propriety of such conduct. The performance is one which fills up the horrid vacuum between play and farce, which is as tiresome as the dull one before dinner—it does not interfere with the properties or purposes of the legitimate drama, because the attraction it turns out to be has enabled the Manager to precede it by some of our finest old plays, which of themselves would not draw two-pence—independent of which, it betrays a want of that courtesy, on which we so pride ourselves, due to a talented foreigner; and after all, those who dislike it are free to stay away; or, if they come, are entertained with a sterling play well acted, which is quite enough at any time for seven shillings. Upon the whole, therefore, we cannot but think that very great credit is due to Mr. KEMBLE, for the spirit and liberality evinced by such an expensive engagement as that of MAZURIER; which has been the means, we see by the Paris papers, of completely emptying the Porte St. Martin, where he was considered the "lion," or, more properly speaking, the monkey "of the day." We beg it distinctly to be understood, we do not imply by these remarks that any considerable disapprobation has been manifested; and even what has made its appearance is of the most insignificant origin, consisting entirely of a few hisses from a party of shop-boys, headed by ——, whom will our readers imagine?—a clerk in the India-house, just tall enough to enable his face to peep above the box-cushions; who, owing to his marriage with a Miss BROWN, the soi-di-sante Miss BEAUMONT, of this theatre, has the impudence to turn up his nose (or rather to sneer with the nose which nature has turned up for him) at that profession to which he has been indebted for many gratuitous years of pleasure. To speak more unequivocally, we mean, that in consequence of his free-admission having been rescinded, he has thought it necessary to do his "little" to annoy the proprietors; and although this nondescript may deny this, and call himself a straight-forward gentleman, we rather think no other person living will be found so to designate him. Some say he was offended that any other monkey than himself should be received in the theatre; but that is not the case, for he has always been hostile to the present management: because, a little before Miss BROWN'S marriage, they sent her a breeches part, which offended him vastly, and, in declining it for her, he told FAWCETT, as the stage manager, he intended to keep her legs to himself for the future. This little thing, with his continual inquisitiveness, reminds us of the joke they tell of POPE (the poet), who, on hearing a person say that a particular passage only wanted a note of interrogation to make it intelligible, said, "Pray, sir, do you know what a NOTE OF INTERROGATION is?" to which the other replied, "Yes, sir, it is a LITTLE crooked thing that asks QUESTIONS!"

The announcements at this Theatre really promise great things—Madame VESTRIS joins the operatic corps to-morrow, in Artaxerxes, and, setting her legs apart for one moment, she will be found a very useful actress. A Mr. SEARLE, a ci-devant clerk under CHITTY, is about to appear in Hamlet—we have seen Mr. SEARLE, so had we seen Mr. FITZHARRIS, and what it can all mean, with KEMBLE and WARDE on the spot, is really a mystery—mais nous verrons.

A niece of SPRING'S, a Miss LAWRENCE, appears to-morrow, as Juliet, at Drury-lane—she has our best wishes for her success; though, with Mrs. WEST in the Theatre, there is less room for her. The all accommodating, and all smiling BOX BOOK KEEPER, should surely have played Friar Lawrence on the occasion. This novelty, and revival of Perouse, ought to give the LESSEE Junior a lift.

The Haymarket is drawing its mummeries to a close; and, as one step towards it, was last night relieved of Madame VESTRIS, who is transplanted to a respectable theatre, where she will find her level. And here we may be permitted to say, that, having been accused of some severity towards this lady, the only principle on which we ground it, is on the latitude given her by DAW, and its assumption by herself; for, as an actress in a confined way, viz. a smart chambermaid, with a dashing song, we think her almost unrivalled; but when she plays one night first comedy, then second comedy another—then first singing, then comic dittto—then melodrame—one minute woman's parts, the next men's—we laugh outright. As to Lady Bell, or any such characters, she cannot even read them; and when, by her appearance in them, some of the first living actresses, not, from circumstances, so popular, are thrown into the shade, the public have a proper right to interfere, and treat with sovereign contempt the dotard who could allow such irregularities, and the performer who could be so permitted to exercise them: in her own line we think her delightful, and fascinating in the extreme, and rejoice she is now in a theatre where they will keep her in these bounds, wherein she must please every one.

The Pilot at the Adelphi has made "a palpable hit," and, in every sense of the word, deserves the success it has met with. The performance generally is amusing; but the most perfect thing of the kind ever seen is the Tom Coffin of T. P. COOKE: it is quite unnecessary to recommend the town to go and see it, because full as many people are turned nightly from the doors as the number who gain admission. No one can feel more favourably disposed to a minor actor than we do to JOHN REEVE, for he is in reality a most amusing fellow; but it really was sickening to read the stuff which appeared in the Times of Thursday on this comedian, when such actors as TERRY and YATES passed unnoticed; and it is still more deplorable to think that the taste of the town can for a moment be directed by one scribbler praising a performer, because he happens to drink and smoke with him when the play is over—it is quite fulsome really.

It would be the height of injustice not to say, that, independent of any other attraction, the scenery of the Olympic Theatre is of the first order, and quite enough in itself to draw the attention of most play-goers.

Before we take leave of these important set of people, we must mention, that in the LAND OF LIBERTY, for which poor KEAN has just taken the liberty to embark, the PRESS seems determined to follow up the Cockney system, and press him "pretty particularly, damned, considerably well," as appears by their papers lately arrived. We doubt it nevertheless, for they will swallow almost any thing "in those parts." We also give insertion to a letter from Mr. FAUCIT SAVILL, who hath "waxed wrath" at the notice we last week took of the Ramsgate Theatre, of which he is the manager: it is as follows:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

SIR,—How an humble individual, like myself, just retiring from public life, can have merited the severe, and very unjust, mention made of me in your last, I am at a loss to devise.

I am a mere country bookseller; I pay every one their own; I injure no one, and, I trust, live respected by a small circle of friends—and it is for their satisfaction, not my own, I ask you, as you have dragged me forth in your last AGE, to state fully in your forthcoming one, if you know aught to my prejudice. Innuendos are afloat from what you have said; and as I challenge any one to impute to me a dishonorable action, I fear the open censure of no AGE whatever. You have (unwarrantably I think), dipped into domestic troubles. The lady you have coupled me with I have no connection with, nor do I wish to name—nor will you, I think, on mature reflection, allow such allusions justifiable. I am, it is true, a public character, so far as having built a theatre here, and having another at Margate. the former your designating a washing-tub is all very well, at which I, doubtless with many others, will laugh—it is not so large as a London theatre, I grant—neither does it shrink quite to your dimensions, being now sixty, and shortly to be extended to ninety feet in length, with a proportionate breadth, and having cost 1,200l. in building, I do not see why you should seek to depreciate my property or character, and I feel assured you could not personally intend it.

If you really meant me a personal enmity, I am equally ready to meet it; if only, on the contrary, you conceived the description given in the Post, (and which, till you copied, I did not see), an overstrained one, and fair play for your exposition, why I cheerfully, as other characters, bow to public censure; but, let me assure you, every description there mentioned is at the same time literally true. I am only anxious, for the sake of those friends who surround my reading tables on which your paper, with many others, lie, that whatever allusions your last may have implied on my private character, they bear none dishonorable.

Begging you to excuse this very hasty scribble,
I remain, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
J. FAUCIT SAVILL.

Albion Library,
Ramsgate.

As far as the said Mr. FAUCIT SAVILL is personally concerned, we beg to say that from all we have ever heard of him, we believe him to be as honest and honourable a little fellow as any breathing. We never heard a syllable to his prejudice, and think him a most ill-used personage.—Our allusion to his wife, Mrs. FAUCIT, of Covent-Garden, was not levelled at him; but in naming her now he really compels a remark, for the public will naturally ask, in reading that part of his letter where he says "the lady you have coupled me with, I have no connection with," how that can possibly be, when the said "lady," his own wife, has but just been confined? We would terminate these observations by assuring Mr. FAUCIT SAVILL, and his "small circle of friends," that our comment altogether was upon the bombastic announcement, in the Morning Post, of the opening of his Margate Theatre, and upon which, having SEEN it, we still differ very materially with Mr. FAUCIT SAVILL'S opinions, contained in the foregoing letter, and on referring to the concluding lines in the address delivered by himself, on the opening night,

"Our motto, this—such may it ever be—
"Amusement blended with morality!!!"

—we do think the public, (highly as they every where respect HIM) will, ignorant as they must be of the nature of his WIFE'S amusements, very much question HER morality.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

SHERIFF'S OFFICE, Red Lion-street, Nov. 4.

Gould v. Tanner.—This was a writ of inquiry, before the Sheriff of Middlesex, to tax and assess the damages in an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for criminal conversation with his wife, in which defendant had suffered judgment to go by default. The damages were laid at 5,000*l.*

Mr. Brougham conducted the plaintiff's case, and Mr. Denman the defendant's; after hearing a variety of witnesses as to the facts of the case,

The Secondary summed up the evidence; and the Jury, after about ten minutes' deliberation, returned a verdict of 500*l.* damages.

OLD BAILEY.—Tuesday.

John Berger, alias De Clifford, a military officer, aged 44, stood indicted for uttering, in the city of London, a forged cheque for 117*l.*, with intent to defraud Messrs. Sansom and Co. bankers; and in other counts, to defraud Jos. Green.

Alfred Johnson had lived as clerk to Sansom and Co.; he left them in July last. He knew a person named Peckham, Upper King-street, Bloomsbury. He knew him before July, about two months. He knew him first at H.'s oyster-rooms. He was introduced by Peckham to a Mr. Jones, at a public-house in the City-road; he saw them frequently. Jones asked him for some blank cheques and cancelled cheques; he furnished them with some cancelled cheques, for the purpose of copying the signatures. He only gave them Messrs. Green and Co.'s and Mr. Wilkinson's. They were both present when he gave them. They were returned to him the next day. He returned them to the place from whence he took them. He was once sent for to the Spread Eagle, in Gracechurch-street, where he met Jones and Peckham. They then took him up stairs, where they showed him a cheque. The cheque produced he believed to be the same. He went back to the banking-house; in about a quarter of an hour he saw the prisoner come to the counter and present the cheque to Mr. Bunnett.—(Witness described his dress.)—He saw Peckham and Jones the same evening at their lodgings, and received about 20 pounds from them. After this he saw the prisoner several times, and once dined with him at Peckham's lodgings. He asked him if he had received 20*l.* for presenting the cheque, telling him that he had heard that he had; prisoner said he had received 15*l.*

Henry Cooper Peckham was in the employ of Messrs. Smith, Payne, and Co. about two years. He left them in the year 1821. He was apprehended by them on a charge of forgery, on the 5th August last. He became acquainted with the prisoner in March last, and with Jones in November last. He met the latter first at Arundel-place, Pentonville, and also at Canterbury, and at different taverns in London, and at his lodgings. Witness lodged at No. 19, in the same street. He knew Johnson in the course of his business, as a clerk, for eight years; has met at the Saloon in Piccadilly, and at his own lodgings. He became acquainted with Johnson, to speak to him, about March last. He saw the prisoner in February or March last, at a gambling-house in King-street, St. James's; he had seen him there several times. He was introduced to him by two gentlemen; he had seen him at other houses of the same description, and had seen Jones there. Witness first made application to the prisoner. Jones was with him. They breakfasted together; it was in June. Witness said to the prisoner, "You proposed to me, when I met you at the gambling-house, to put into your hands bills to negociate prior to the issuing of a commission of bankruptcy against me, and now you can act with more safety by presenting those cheques, which are forged, and which a clerk will pay." Several cheques were shown to him, which were forged. The cheque produced was shown to him; he told him the clerk would destroy it as soon as paid, as the cashier would be absent at his dinner. Prisoner said he would receive them but he should like to see the clerk first. They, Jones, prisoner and witness, went together to the Spread Eagle, into the coffee-room, and a note was sent to Johnson to come to them. He was coming down the stairs, and saw Johnson. Johnson saw Berger, but was not introduced to him. (Witness described prisoner's dress.) He wore a lady's watch and gold chain that had been adjusted to witness by a lady. Before prisoner went to the bankers, he went into the coffee-room with the cheque open in his hand, and said, "I have found this in the water closet." (Witness described what took place after the receipt of the cheque, and the going to the public-house. He believed Johnson was not with them.) At the public-house Berger produced the notes from his coat pocket; they were all fives. Rumpled them together. They counted them, and found two fives missing. The Major said he was so hurried after he had received the cheque, that he supposed he must have dropped them; but if they doubted him they might deduct them from what he had to receive. They asked him why he did not go to the bank and get sovereigns. He replied they could be passed at any of the gambling-houses, without fear of detection; he said he thought they could afford to give him 10*l.* out of the amount; they gave him 17*l.*, and that left them 90*l.*

Several persons gave the prisoner a good character.

The Jury then retired to deliberate, and having remained out about three hours, they brought in a verdict of Not Guilty.

The prisoner, who during the whole time behaved with coolness and composure, bowed respectfully to the Court and the Jury as he left the bar.

Mary Shelton stood capitally indicted for the wilful murder of Patrick Doyle, in the parish of St. Giles's-in-the-Fields.

Mary Kilgrogran—I live in Buckridge-street, St. Giles's, and am related to the deceased, Patrick Doyle; he lived in Church-lane. On Friday, the 30th of September, I was at the Black Horse public-house, in Buckridge-street; the deceased was there; I had been there about half an hour before the prisoner came in; she did not appear drunk; the deceased and prisoner had lived together as man and wife for near twelve years, and had seven children; she saw them but seldom, but they were very sociable. In two minutes after she entered she went to the bar, and brought a tin beer can under her cloak; the deceased and a man named Frank Smith were speaking together; the deceased was drunk; he turned his head about to where the prisoner stood, when she struck him with the can over the left temple and ran away. Deceased bled very much, and he remained about two hours in the tap-room bleeding; he then went away with Frank Smith. On Saturday morning I met the prisoner coming out of the door of the house where she lived; she bid me the time of the morning, and said, If I did not tell my sister's son to keep clear of her, she would, by the Holy Ghost, be the end of him. On the Sunday I went to deceased's; the prisoner was in the room. I asked him how he was; he said very ill, and asked me what was good for the head-ache, and I said cold water; the prisoner at that time was attentive to him; he lived until the Tuesday week following, when he died at the hospital.

The prisoner wished the witness to be asked if she did not ask him whether the blow which she had given him, with the hammer, had killed him, when he replied, "Oh no."

Mr. Justice Park.—Out of mercy to the prisoner, I would not, for all the world, put that question.

Mr. Tewson, a surgeon of Middlesex Hospital, minutely described the state of the head of the deceased. His skull was trepanned, but it was of no avail; the state of the head was the consequence of external violent blows. The hammer shown to him would have produced such effect, if used with such violence.

The prisoner, in her defence, stated that they had a dog which was made away with by the brother of the deceased, which caused a quarrel, and the deceased said he had but one life, and he would have it on account of his dog being gone. There also appeared a jealous feeling between them; and according to her statement they had quarrelled on the Monday, and the deceased had kicked her violently, and that he came home late at night when she was undressed, and took hold of her child and threw it down; that he had broken three of her ribs, and had hold of the back of her neck with his teeth and bit her; that he was continually beating her about with a file. She denied that she had struck him with the hammer; it was a file that she merely threatened him with.

Mr. Justice Park charged the Jury that it was evident that the deceased and prisoner had lived on bad terms with each other. They would direct their particular attention to what took place on the Monday night; they would satisfy themselves whether the blows were given by the prisoner, and if so, the question would then be, whether the offence was murder or manslaughter. After commenting on the whole of the evidence, and the statement of the prisoner, the learned Judge gave it as his opinion, that the crime amounted to manslaughter, but not murder.

The Jury consulted together for a few minutes and returned a verdict of Manslaughter.

The Recorder immediately sentenced her to twelve months imprisonment in the House of Correction, and to be kept to hard labour.

WEDNESDAY.

Conspiracy.—Thomas Hughes, Charlotte Watts, John Collier, S. Hay, Sarah Hay, Richard Brewer, and others, were indicted for a conspiracy.

The parties were charged with conspiring to defraud Messrs. Gillman, Lucas, and Coplin, of Newgate-street, of various goods.

Before the Jury were sworn, Hughes challenged one of the Jury, as being a member of the Cloth Society for the Suppression of Swindlers. The Gentleman left the box.

Mr. Whitcomb opened the pleadings.

Mr. Adolphus stated the case for the prosecution. He said that the defendant, Thomas Hughes, was a person who had carried on a system of fraud in Cheltenham, Oxford, and other parts of the country, for some time past. In 1822, he was a prisoner in the King's Bench for debt. In 1823, he was arrested and confined in Whitecross-street; and in March, 1824, he was discharged under the Insolvent Act. In November of the same year, he opened a haberdasher's shop in Speldhurst-street, under the name of Henry Hughes, being apprehensive that the name of Thomas would discover him, for there were several persons who had too good reason to look after that name. In this shop he had a person named Charlotte Watts, who lived with him as Mrs. H., for the defendant had left his own wife and took her instead. This lady officiated in the shop, and was very conspicuous in the whole conspiracy. The next person was Hay, who lived as a builder in Lisson-street, in 1822, and was with his wife in great misery and distress, having only shavings to lie upon; but they soon emerged from this wretchedness, and Hay had the courage to become guarantee for Hughes to any amount. Mr. Bullen and his wife were not now present, but Hughes got acquainted with Bullen while both prisoners were in Whitecross-street, where they concerted their future plan of fraud. Collier was another party to whom references were made, and on whom bills were drawn, in order to defraud persons from whom goods were obtained. While the general system of fraud was going on in London, a parallel line of operations was going on in Brighton, through the agency of Bullen. He would prove that goods were purchased in London, in one instance butter, from Mr. Bowles, Newgate-market, to be sent to Brighton, but in fact the butter was sent to Dorset-street, Salisbury-square, and there sold for two-pence and four-pence per pound under prime cost, within a quarter of a mile from Mr. Bowles's own shop. The Learned Gentleman then detailed a continuous system of fraud upon several tradesmen in London, and elsewhere. He would prove that Hughes was in the habit of getting goods in the city in the morning on credit, and sending those goods to pawnbrokers in the evening, or to the auction-room. One circumstance was rather singular—he got some flannels from Mr. Morris, and gave him some money in hand, offering a bill for the balance, drawn on Collier, in Paddington. Mr. Morris left the goods on the counter while he went to inquire after the respectability of Collier, but on his return in the evening to Hughes's shop, he found that the flannels were gone. In fact they were sent to the auction-room, where Mr. Morris bought them in next day at a great loss. While Hughes was then in the lock-up house of Mr. Hurst, Charlotte Watts was in the habit of carrying goods from the shop to him, in order to be disposed of at the pawnbrokers' and elsewhere. As to Brewer, an attorney, he would say little; that person was the adviser of Hughes, and it was enough for him to say that he was connected with such a person. The Learned Gentleman then made some further observations upon the enormity of the practices of these conspirators, who were all leagued, more or less, to obtain goods under false pretences. It was enough for him if he could prove that they were mutually connected. He was supported in this view of the case by the opinion of a very Learned Judge who said that the "offence of conspiracy is an offence consisting of a wicked concert or contrivance, or combination of individuals to defraud, &c., and that by their several actions they have one common purpose, and aimed at the production of the same malignant end and effect." He would prove this malicious concert against the several individuals charged in the indictment.

A crowd of witnesses were called, who proved the swindling practices of the parties. Among the witnesses who appeared for the defence, one —— Rowley, a boot-maker, deposed to the character of Hay, and affirmed he had seen him in his own house at Paddington, in May last.

It was however found, by a reference to the prison books, that the defendant was in confinement at the time.

The Recorder ordered the witness not to leave the Court.

The Recorder commenced his charge at a quarter before three, and finished within a quarter of four. The Jury found all the prisoners Guilty, but strongly recommended Charlotte Watts to mercy.

The sentence of the Court was, that Hughes and Hay should be confined in the House of Correction for two years, and be kept to hard labour; Collier to be confined in the same prison for eighteen, and Charlotte Watts for two months, both to be also kept to hard labour.

His Lordship ordered the witness Rawley to be committed to Newgate, and to be brought up the next day for further consideration.—The trial lasted until four in the morning.

THURSDAY.

This day the Sessions finished, when the Learned Recorder passed the awful sentence upon the several prisoners who had not received judgment when convicted, viz.:—

For Death—William Henry Austin, for secreting a letter in the Post-office; Richard William Jasper, for forgery; John Edmonds and James Adams, for horse-stealing; George Davis and Mary Moore, for house-breaking; Ann Wade, for a like offence; Robert Newton, Geo. Lewis, Wm. Hill, Richd. Larnders, Joseph Kilpeck, Geo. Newton, and Joseph Cooper, for stealing goods in the dwelling-house.

Eight were sentenced to be transported for life, six for fourteen years, and forty-four for seven years.

A great number were sentenced to various periods of confinement in the House of Correction, and to be kept to hard labour.

The Sessions then adjourned.

Contempt of Court.—A witness who came forward on the trial of Hughes and others for conspiracy, to give evidence in favour of one of the defendants, had been committed to Newgate by the Recorder for a contempt of Court. The alleged contempt was his having prevaricated in his evidence. The witness appeared to be a man whose nerves were not of the strongest, and in the hands of Mr. Adolphus he became quite confused. After the sentences were passed on the prisoners, the Recorder ordered Joseph Rowley to be fetched from Newgate and placed at the bar. He then addressed him:—"Joseph Rowley, you have daringly presented yourself to this Court as a witness, for the purpose of deceiving the Court and Jury in their judgment respecting the innocence of parties who were tried at this bar, on whose behalf you appeared. You stand disgraced, and are utterly unworthy of credit on your word or your oath. The prosecutors in the case, in which you committed gross perjury, are not here to undertake to prosecute you; a bill may, however, be preferred against you for perjury, and I shall, therefore, not detain you longer. You have undergone an imprisonment since last night, and I hope you will never dare to present yourself again as a witness in a Court of Justice, as you are utterly unworthy of belief."

Mr. Rowley became exceedingly agitated, and said, "My Lord, it is a mistake only." He attempted to explain, but was not allowed to proceed.

Recorder—I beg you to desist, you stand on very tender ground; but I will not send for the prosecutors, and order them to undertake to prosecute you; as it is, you stand disgraced, and the Court will no longer detain you. Let him be discharged.

GWENNAPPE MINING COMPANY.

On Wednesday the Lord Mayor received two communications from the persons interested in the management of the Gwennappe Mining Company. His Lordship, upon reading them, said it was but fair that publicity should be given to the contradictions which they gave to the accusations made the other day in the Justice-room, against the Directors, Managers, and Secretary of the Company. He at the same time observed, that the gentlemen who made the complaint were not exactly the description of persons whom he considered objects of compassion or sympathy, as it was evident they merely speculated for the purpose of taking advantage of the market, and had no idea of proceeding with the professed objects laid down in the prospectus.

Letters from Mr. G. Dawson and Mr. R. Price, two of the Directors, were then read. These, in the most unequivocal language, repelled as calumnious the charges which had been preferred, representing the funds of the Company to have been improperly meddled with. They affirmed the undertaking to be in progress, and represented the complainants to be jobbers in Shares; who only complained because the plan was really to be prosecuted without reference to their views at the Stock Exchange.

Mr. Cooke, the principal Managing Director of the Company, soon after those letters were read, entered the Justice-room, and addressed the Lord Mayor, requesting to be heard in justification of the Company.

The Lord Mayor having asked whether Mr. Cooke was one of the gentlemen involved in the accusation, and being answered in the affirmative, said he had no objection to hear his reply to the charges which had been made before him. When first the complaint was made he was not aware that it was one to which his jurisdiction did not extend, or he should have interrupted those who preferred it; but having once heard it, and publicity having been given to the statement in the most unlimited manner, he should not hesitate to attend to the justification.

Mr. Cooke thanked the Lord Mayor. He had, he said, travelled fifty miles from the country, in his anxiety to deny, in the most decided manner, the truth of the imputations cast upon the Directors, the moment he had seen them. He knew not who the individuals were who waited upon his Lordship, or whether they were bona fide shareholders; but of this he made the most solemn and positive declaration, that the whole of the assertions made by them were utterly unfounded. Before the Company was formed, or a proposal was in any shape issued, he went to the mine, the working of which had been contemplated, and made the most minute investigation into its qualities and condition. He found all that report had sent abroad was more than realised; and so perfectly was he satisfied that the Company would prove one of the most profitable, that he was ready to stake his own private property, that it would produce 10 per cent. upon the capital invested in it. The contract for the purchase of the mine was entered into before a prospectus was issued; and every thing was done that could be done to secure the property of the shareholders. There was one thing of considerable importance, to which he begged his Lordship's attention. The Editor of the Morning Chronicle newspaper had thought proper to say, in a leading article of that day, that he was happy to mention to the public, that Lord Nugent had not sullied his name by giving the use of it as President of the Company. Now he (Mr. Cooke) could positively state, that whatever might be that Noble Lord's opinion of the concern, he had consented to have his name at its head; and that the permission had been communicated to those engaged in forming it by (we understood Mr. Cooke to say) Mr. Stewart, a gentleman whose veracity there was no reason to suspect. He had additional evidence of the truth of this fact, in a conversation with the Noble Lord himself,

The Lord Mayor—How many shares were allotted to Lord Nugent?

Mr. Cooke said the number set down for his Lordship was 50, and that he communicated that information to his Lordship, who observed, that he should wish they were sold, as they were at a premium. He (Mr. Cooke) being aware of the regulation that the Directors should not sell, informed his Lordship that the Shares should be delivered to him upon his paying the deposits; to which his Lordship answered, that such was not the way in which business of this kind was done; that as the shares were at a premium, those allotted to him (we understood Mr. Cooke to say) might be sold, and the premium handed over to him. His Lordship, however, was assured that the quotations describing the Gwennappe Shares at a premium were false; that they were made at the instance of jobbers, for the purpose of keeping up the price of the Shares. With this assurance Lord Nugent appeared to be perfectly satisfied, but he refused to make so large an investment; and he (Mr. Cooke) now actually held the fifty Shares on his Lordship's account, and had paid the deposits, for which he considered his Lordship indebted to him upon them.—(A laugh.)

The Lord Mayor—Why, I always conceived it was one of the first rules in such Companies, that the Directors should be all shareholders. Now you cannot consider Lord Nugent as a Director?

Mr. Cooke—Yes, my Lord, we certainly do, since I hold fifty shares on his account. Certainly it is the intention of the Directors not to sell one share; and I beg to state most distinctly, that not one of the shares which were allotted to them has been sold. It has been said that there is no intention whatever to work the Mine. Now I can state that the work has been already proceeded in; that the two lodes have been cut through, and that a steam-engine is now in full work. The shares, which the Company purchased at 47*l.*, the original shareholders now consider as worth 70*l.*, in consequence of a vein of ore having been recently discovered. In fact, I repeat, that I am ready to stake my own private property, that 10*l.* per cent. will be ultimately produced, and I think that it will produce 15*l.* I will, however, answer for 10*l.* per cent.

The Lord Mayor observed, that it was one of the points of complaint, that only 400 shares had been paid upon, and that the thing having so far failed, the Company ought not to go on.

Mr. Cooke replied, that had the statement been made upon affidavit, no such allegation would have appeared. The whole of the 1800 shares had been regularly issued; but some of those issued to the public had not been taken up.

The Lord Mayor said, he considered himself bound, as Chief

Magistrate of the City, to listen to public applications and complaints in matters where it was thought he could interfere.—He could not interfere in this; but he would suggest, that the best mode of allaying the ferment or injurious impression that had been created, would he to call a puhlic meeting of the shareholders, and have the matter fully and satisfactorily investigated before them.

Mr. Cooke said, that he had received a requisition from several persons for a public meeting, and that he had laid it before the Directors.

The Lord Mayor said, the complainants had stated that the Directors were self-appointed, and that the Proprietors had no share whatever in that measure.

Mr. Cooke said, that also was a misrepresention. The original Subscribers had made the appointment at a meeting amongst themselves. He could not, however, deny that he had been mentioned as a Director in the prospectus, before he had been regularly appointed at a meeting of the proprietors.

The Lord Mayor expressed his belief that the publication of the case had done some good. He had stated to the applicants that he could not pity them for any inconvenience they might sustain, as they appeared to be chiefly actuated by a gamhling motive.

Mr. Cooke said a resolution had been entered into by the Directors, that not one of them should be paid until the work became profitable, and that they had not taken one guinea.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

THE GWENNAPPE MINING COMPANY.

Mansion-House.—On Thursday the Lord Mayor received from Lord Nugent the following note, in contradiction to the statement made at the Mansion-house, with respect to his Lordship's connexion with the Gwennappe Mining Company:—

"Wardour Castle, near Salisbury, Nov. 2, 1825.

"My Lord,—Having seen by the Papers, that in proceedings before your Lordship, my name has been quoted as having been attached to the prospectus of an Association, called the Gwennappe Mining Company, as its President. I feel that I owe it to myself to state most distinctly, that I never authorized such use being made of my name, and that I never received or sold any interest in that Company. I was requested by an agent to allow my name to be placed in the direction, and shares were offered to me. Upon inquiry, however, I thought I saw reason for not wishing my name to be connected with that Association. I told the agent so, and I never received, held, or sold a letter, or share in it. I ought to apologise to your Lordship for troubling you at all on this subject; but I may perhaps take the liberty of begging that your Lordship will do me the justice to state this upon any occasion that may be offered.—I have the honour to be, my Lord, your Lordship's obedient humble servant, "NUGENT.

"The Right Hon. Lord Mayor."

His Lordship also received a letter from Mr. Johnson, who was mentioned in the prospectus as the Assay Master to the Company. It was as follows:—

"Assay Office, 79, Hatton-garden, Nov. 2, 1825.

"My Lord,—Allow me to return my most sincere thanks for the very kind manner in which you noticed me at the late investigation respecting the Gwennappe Mining Company. I trust that my conduct has been, and will be, through life, such as to support a character for honesty and honour.—I feel it a duty I owe to myself to state, that my name has been made use of in this, as well as in several other Associations for working the ores of this country, without my consent, previous to its being made public; that I have never, directly or indirectly, received any remuneration for such appointments, and only in one instance been employed professionally as Assayer; and further, that I have since disclaimed the insertion of my name to many applications. I have thus far trouhled you, trusting to your well-known candour and liberal principles, in giving publicity to these facts, should the investigation again come under your notice.—Having the honour to be, with sincere respect,

"Your most devoted humble servant,

"P. N. JOHNSON."

We understand that it is the intention of shareholders in several Companies, the Directors of which have been pursuing the humbug system, to bring their grievances before the Lord Mayor, who has, it seems, advised the managers, in almost every instance, to get rid of the imputation of foul play, hy paying off the deposits at once.

The shareholders in the Gwennappe Mining Company have it in contemplation, in the proceedings which they say they are about to institute against the managers; to negative all the splendid assurances laid down in the prospectus, one of which they declare it is their belief, cannot, in the most distant degree, be relied upon. They have claimed the Lord Mayor's attention to the statement made under the apparent sanction of the Noble Lord mentioned as President, and the ten other Directors, which statement, they add, is calculated to blind the public, being nothing less than an accumulation of falsehoods, mixed up here and there with just so much truth as is likely to set it off in the opinion of those who are willing to part with their money on the faith of respectable names.

The statement, after some minute particulars, says, that 19 lodes have been already discovered, and the copper ores from these lodes are full one hundred per cent. above the average of the county.

Upon reading this statement, the Lord Mayor said the promise it held out reminded him of an adventure, which was, at its commencement, discountenanced, but which turned out to be one of the most profitable he had ever heard of. Three gentlemen joined in a coal mine speculation. They spent a great deal of money in preparations for working; their capital became nearly exhausted, and the poverty of two of them compelled them to relinquish the enterprise, and give up the chance of success to the third for a very small sum. Almost immediately after this took place, the proprietor found that he was likely to profit by his bargain. He continued to work, and at last reached a vein of coal, which repaid him for his labour and risk. His partners were beggars, and he was in the receipt of 40,000l. a year.

CORONERS' INQUESTS,

An inquisition was taken on Tuesday, before Thomas Higgs, the deputy Coroner for the City and Liberty of Westminster, at the White Horse public-house, in the Strand, on the body of John Tietjen, one of the keepers employed at the Exeter 'Change Menagerie, who was killed by the elephant confined there.

The Jury having been sworn, proceeded to view the body, which was still lying on the premises, and presented a most appalling proof of the irresistible strength of the tusks of this enormous animal. The ribs protecting the chest were completely shattered, so that the breast and back-bone might with the slightest pressure be brought into contact, and a medical gentleman present said he had no doubt but that the heart and lungs were burst asunder, and the cavity of the chest filled with blood.

Mr. William Tyler, of Aldgate, High-street, stated, that early that morning he was viewing the beasts in the large room in Exeter-change. The deceased came into the room and began to fondle the elephant, and called to witness to observe the extreme docility and playfulness of the animal, who kept touching the deceased's foot, which he held out to him, in a most gentle manner. Immediately after the animal had his breakfast brought to him, which having ate, the deceased and another man entered the den for the purpose of cleaning it out. Witness went to another part of the room, from whence he heard Mr. Cross, the proprietor of the menagerie, call out, "Don't go near him, John, or perhaps you may have your sore foot trod on." Shortly after witness heard the sound of a blow, and on running to the den found the deceased lying near the foot of the den. Witness rushed forward and dragged him out. He never spoke, and appeared to be quite dead. A medical gentleman arrived within five minutes, and pronounced him to be dead. Does not think the animal did it designedly, as it might, if it pleased, have afterwards trampled upon him, or have wounded witness when he dragged him out of the den. Richard Carter, the other keeper, stated, that on the deceased entering the den, the animal played with him for about three minutes. Witness brought the spear, which one of the two keepers employed in cleaning den usually held for the purpose of keeping him in awe. The deceased said, "Never mind the spear, the animal knows me well enough," and at the same took it out of witness's hands, and threw it upon the floor of the den. The animal placed his foot upon it, and kept rolling it about for some time, and afterwards took it up in his trunk, and kept twirling it about without any attempt at mischief. The deceased, who had a broom in his hand, struck the animal with it, and called to him to "turn round." The animal immediately obeyed, and in sharply turning the corner of his den, brought his tusk into contact with the deceased, who immediately fell. The animal instantly stood still, and commenced trembling, as if conscious of the mischief he had done. Witness is perfectly satisfied that the mischief was the result of pure accident. The animal was particularly attached to the deceased. Witness immediately afterwards proceeded to clean out the den, and during the time he was thus employed, the elephant remained perfectly quiet. Mr. Cross was always particular in insisting that two keepers should be present at the cleaning of his den, for fear of an accident. The spear was about 12 feet long, and so docile was the animal, that it only required that the spear should be held over him to make him do any thing.

Mr. Hurst, surgeon, of the Strand, said that he was called in on account of the accident, and found the deceased to be quite dead. The ribs and hreast bone were completely heat in.

The Jury expressed themselves satisfied that the melancholy occurrence was purely accidental, and therefore affixed a nominal deodand of 1s. upon the elephant.

EAST INDIA TEA COMPANY'S OFFICES,
No. 149, Leadenhall-street.

October 10, 1825.

IT is evident from recent communications (though numerous convictions took place some time since) that Tea continues to be adulterated with spurious leaves, which at once accounts for the difficulty so generally experienced of purchasing it genuine, in retail quantities, and at reasonable prices. In consequence of this, and a Combination among nearly all the extensive Tea Dealers, of an injurious public tendency, which the East India Company have strongly objected to, and ineffectually endeavoured to prevent, the following arrangements have been made by

THE EAST INDIA COMPANY,

to establish a convenient and permanent system of supplying the Public with pure Tea and Coffee, at a small advance upon the prices at which they are imported, which are submitted with a firm conviction that their merit will be their best advocate.

Pure Tea and Coffee, packed in leaden cases of a peculiar kind, that preserve their quality, are delivered to Retail Agents in London, direct from the Company's Warehouses, to sell for money at a commission of 5l. per cent. (a third of what is usually charged) having the Secretary's Signature and the price on each package, to secure their delivery free from adulteration.

Depots are established throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland—the principal are at

Hull, under the management of	Mr. T. Topping.
Bristol - - -	Mr. J. Stivens.
Sheffield - - -	Mr. R. Harrison.
Leeds - - -	Mr. Ridsdale.
Manchester - -	Mr. F. J. Glover.
Nottingham - -	Mr. R. Preston.
Aberdeen - - -	Mr. J. M'Kay.
Edinburgh - -	Mr. W. Munro.
Glasgow - - -	Mr. M. Leslie.
Lerwick, in Zetland -	Mr. J. Leask.
Dublin - - -	Mr. J. West.
Cork - - -	Mr. R. Hardy.
Waterford - - -	Mr. A. Pope.

and, in a few weeks, those at Belfast, Athlone, Norwich, Leicester, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Liverpool, Portsmouth, Devenport, and Birmingham, will be opened.

From whence the Retail Agents in these places, and their surrounding districts, will readily obtain supplies, and always enable the residents in the remote parts of the United Kingdom to purchase unadulterated Tea and Coffee, at the reduced rates, as easily and advantageously as in London.

To enable the working classes to obtain convenient quantities with as much facility as their wealthier neighbours, the Retail Agents are furnished with packages, from an ounce to a pound, of every description.

The advantages to be derived hy the public from these extensive, liberal, and economical arrangements, are too considerable and obvious to require further commentary; the test by which they can he ascertained—that of comparison—is simple, open to every one, and the East India Tea Company are sure will he conclusive in favour of their pretensions.

TEA.

	lb. s.	lb. d.	½ lb. s.	½ lb. d.	¼ lb. s.	¼ lb. d.	2 oz. s.	2 oz. d.	1 oz d.
Bohea -	4	9	2	4½	1	2½	0	7½	3¾
Congou -	5	3	2	7½	1	4	0	8	4
Ditto -	5	11	2	11½	1	6	0	9	4½
Souchong -	6	6	3	3	1	7½	0	10	5
Ditto -	7	2	3	7	1	9½	0	11	5½
Ditto -	7	10	3	11	1	11½	1	0	6
Ditto -	9	1	4	6½	2	3½	1	2	7
Fine ditto -	10	5	5	2½	2	7½	1	4	8
Finest ditto	11	8	5	10	2	11	1	6	9
Pekoe -	9	1	4	6½	2	3½	1	2	7
Finest ditto	11	8	5	10	2	11	1	6	9

	lb. s.	lb. d.	½ lb. s.	½ lb. d.	¼ lb. s.	¼ lb. d.	2 oz. s.	2 oz. d.	1 oz d.
Green -	7	6	3	9	1	11	0	11½	5¾
Ditto -	7	10	3	11	1	11½	1	0	6
Hyson -	8	6	4	3	2	1½	1	1	6½
Ditto -	9	1	4	6½	2	3½	1	2	7
Ditto -	10	6	5	2½	2	7½	1	4	8
Hyson -	11	8	5	10	2	11	1	6	9
Finest ditto	12	5	6	2½	3	1½	1	7	9½
Gunpowder Hyson -	13	1	6	6½	3	3½	1	8	10
Finest ditto	14	4	7	2	3	7	1	11	11

ROASTED COFFEE.

	lb. s.	lb. d.	½ lb. s.	½ lb. d.	¼ lb. s.	¼ lb. d.	2 oz. s.	2 oz. d.	1 oz d.
Plantation - -	1	7	0	9½	0	5	0	2½	1¼
Dutch - - -	1	11	0	11½	0	6	0	3	1½
Fine ditto - -	2	6	1	3	0	7½	0	4	2
Bourbon - -	2	10	1	5	0	8½	0	4½	2¼
Turkey - - -	3	2	1	7	0	9½	0	5	2½
Finest ditto - -	4	2	2	1	1	0½	0	6½	3¼

It is needful to inform Purchasers of Ground Coffee, that it is more frequently adulterated than when whole, and not so easy of detection.

The following Retail Agents are already appointed:—

CITY AND SUBURBS.

G. Herbert, 88, Cheapside.
J. Powles, 146, Leadenhall-street.
W. K. Foster, 69, Chiswell-street.
J. D. Bird, 30, Fore-street.
W. Lewis, 60, Bishopsgate Without.
J. Allen, 11, St. Martin's le Grand.
J. Deane, 3, Finsbury-market.
M. O'Brien, 106, Goswell-street-road.
J. Peachey, 10, Garlick-hill, Upper Thames-street.
L. Barnett, Bell-lane, Spitalfields.

WEST END.

T. S. Vickers, 11, Barton-street, Westminster.
G. Harris, 16, King-street, Westminster
A. Wainwright, 11, Church-court, St. Martin's-lane.
A. Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden.
J. Hutton, Bell-yard, Lincoln's-inn.
J. Davall, 13, Woodstock-street, Oxford-street.
H. and E. Tutt, 17, Marylebone-lane, Manchester-square.
G. Pigg, 20, Duke-street, Portland-place
W. Lawrence, 9, New-street, Cobourg Theatre.
R. Wyatt, 2, Webber-street, ditto.

SOUTHWARK.

S. Nix, 2, Manifold-place, Newington Butts.
J. Payne, 70, Collingwood-street, Blackfriar's-road.
E. Daintree, 1, Brook-street, Lambeth.
A. Kay, 101, London-road.
H. Walker, 9, Princes-road, Kennington Cross.

PADDINGTON, &c.

H. Callard, 15, Craven-place, Bayswater.
T. Body, 47, Edgeware-road.
R. Toms, 146, Edgeware-road.
F. Ebborn, 121, Grove-street, Camden Town.
J. Hanks, 49, Seymour-street, Euston-square.

EAST END.

J. Bates, 6, Crombie's-row, Commercial-road.
S. Holdsworth, 11, York-street, Cambridge-place, Hackney-road.
S. Woodley, 44, Robert-street, Hoxton.

VILLAGES AND COUNTRY TOWNS.

T. Fairhurst, Bath.
W. Dixon, Bottesford.
W. Low, Camberwell.
W. Green, Bristol.
W. Gould, Hill-street, Trowbridge.
W. Jewell, ditto.
H. Morse, ditto.
S. Johns, ditto.
R. Caney, confectioner, Bury St. Edmond's.
E. Symmonds, Pound-lane, Clapton.
J. Gould, Fulham.
J. Spraggen, Gravesend, Kent.
M. Shervill, Hounslow.
T. Brooksbank, Holme, near Market Weighton.
J. B. Barker, Hull.
A. Kittle, ditto.
M. Marshall, ditto.
W. Mallinson, ditto.
Mrs. Turner, ditto.
T. Hart, 223, High-street, Exeter.
T. Bridgeman, High-street, Woolwich.
W. Thornton, Isleworth.
J. Douglas, Kentish Town.
E. and J. Lee, Minehead.
L. Lewis, High-street, Ramsgate.
C. Carpenter, Rochester and Chatham.
H. Merrick, Uckfield, Sussex.
C. Coates, Loughborough.

Persons wishing to become Agents are to make their applications by letter, (post-paid) to the Depots, or to

[signature]

LOCKHART's never-failing Remedy for the TOOTH-ACHE.—Mr. Lockhart respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and Public at large, that from the repeated solicitations of those who have found instantaneous relief from the torment of the Tooth-Ache, by his truly fortunate discovery in a never-failing and certain Cure for one of the most grievous maladies to which human nature is subjected, he is now fully determined to give it that publicity to which it is so justly entitled. However excruciating the pain, and where extraction might be dreaded, or attended with difficulty or danger, the application of this remedy not only destroys the nerve entirely, without the slightest injury to the adjoining teeth, or hurt to the gums, but from its peculiar astringency, renders the hitherto diseased tooth perfectly firm in the socket, insensible to pain, and prevented from all further decay.

Sold in Bottles, 4s. 6d. each, duty included, by J. C. HOSE (late Kinnard,) 309, High Holborn, who is appointed wholesale agent; SANGER, 150, Oxford-street; NIX, Royal Exchange; and all respectable Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in town and country.

None is Genuine unless signed L. Lockhart, on the Government [illegible]

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, [illegible]QUIER and PERFUMER, No. 181, Fleet-street (Two Doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished: in fact they are Hostes humani Capitis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain pre-eminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Ornamental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perruques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

LADIES of FASHION will be pleased to hear that the great secret that has been kept by a Family of Distinction for above half a century, is now, through a remarkable circumstance, discovered: it is the PEARL MILK, and is the best and most innocent cosmetic for beautifying the complexion; and if a Lady even above sixty washes her face with it, will look like a young healthy blooming lady of twenty. The Pearl Milk clears redness, pimples, and all other imperfections of the skin, and wrinkles will not be seen, as it nourishes the skin, makes it healthy, plump, and if ever so wrinkled, the skin will become smooth, and has been proved that it possesses that virtue: and if young Ladies wash their face, hands, arms, &c., with it, will make their complexions healthy, fair, white, and is so innocent that it may with safety be used to infants, and is warranted not to contain any oily or greasy substance whatever.—Gentlemen using it after shaving will find it comfortable and refreshing; and as Ladies have been imposed on by spurious articles for similar purposes without effect, but by a single trial of the incomparable Pearl Milk, Ladies will find at once the truth.—Half-a-guinea a bottle; two bottles, one pound; or a dozen, five pounds, duty included.

Also the RUBY BLOOM, by finely tinging the cheeks and lips, will make a healthy natural red, far preferable to any other article whatever, as even perspiration, washing, warm or crowded rooms, or any other cause, will not remove the natural red for at least twenty-four hours; is warranted innocent.

Half-a-guinea the bottle. Ask for Prince's Pearl Milk, or Prince's Ruby Bloom: sold at Mr. Prince's, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London. Observe the signature and residence of the Proprietor on the cover of each bottle; without it is not genuine.

The following is the remarkable circumstance how the Proprietor became possessed of the above valuable recipe. In August, 1825, a footman called on Mr. Prince, Dentist, with a morocco case, sealed with a Duke's coronet, and left word he would call again in a few days for it; when Mr. Prince opened the box, he found it contained a top set of natural teeth fixed on gold, and some loose, to be repaired, and the teeth were wrapped round with several papers, and one piece of silver paper was pinned with several pins, as if it contained something valuable; which excited the curiosity of Mr. Prince to examine it, who found it contained an old piece of paper, dated 1763, with the recipe how to make the Pearl Milk and Ruby Bloom; the Proprietor having a knowledge of chemistry, he purchased the ingredients and prepared it, when he found it a valuable article for the complexion, and has of late presented some to Ladies who wished to continue using it; the Proprietor, therefore, thought proper to prepare it for sale.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House (Manufactory, 51, Crutched Friars), respectfully return their best thanks to the public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit their future favours, by continuing to sell superior manufactured Articles, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assemblage of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, after the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage; likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, wind-up, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.

The London Stove Grate Company beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, staircase, and gallery railing, balconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and bookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and no abatement.—Stoves and Ranges set, in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in exchange.

HIS GRACIOUS MAJESTY of GREAT BRITAIN, and most of the Nobility and Gentry, use now PRINCE's celebrated RUSSIA OIL. It ought really to be generally known, that physicians have of late experienced that those who wear false hair are subject to complaints in the head, as the false hair, through the warmth, will shrink, become tight, makes a dent round the head, and prevents free circulation of the blood in the head, causes head-ache, giddiness, slight apoplexy, and other complaints: but it is proved through the aromatic Oils Prince's Russia Oil is prepared with, makes it healthy, and by often rubbing the head all over with it, when the false hair is taken off, is wholesome, refreshing, and cooling, and will prevent the above complaints; even eminent medical men have recommended it to the King. The Duchess of Rutland has declared in a letter to Mr. Prince, from experience, has found his Russia Oil the best article for preserving the hair. Colonel Grant has often declared to the proprietor, that from experience he has found the Russia Oil the best article for the hair. Also a Gentleman turned of sixty, has a good head of hair and whiskers, and not a single hair grey, and has declared it is through the Russia Oil, for he has used it constantly for the last twelve years; and when in the country and out of Russia Oil, and not having used it for a fortnight, his hair began to get harsh and inclined to turn grey, but by using it again, it became immediately soft and dark; it is really a wonder, for whoever sees him are quite surprised at his having such a fine head of hair and whiskers, without any grey at his age. The Gentleman has given the proprietor leave to mention his name and residence to respectable persons, to convince them the above is a fact. There are hundreds of Ladies and Gentlemen who have used constantly Prince's Russia Oil, have also declared that it is the best article for the hair. In short, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the aromatic oils it is now prepared with, is acknowledged the wholesomest and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the hair of Ladies, Gentlemen, and Children; and if used constantly, not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour; which hundreds of Ladies have experienced. It is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false hair; will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months, will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least signs of roots are remaining, which thousands of Gentlemen have experienced when used regularly. It is an old saying "Tell the truth, and fear nobody." If persons are bald, and the roots entirely gone, it is against nature that any article can restore it; and if persons pretend to restore hair when the roots are gone by any article, it is a falsity. Persons who have begun to get bald, ought to be particular to use the Russia Oil daily, or at the least every other day, as there must be a complaint in the scalp, which may go further, and carry off the hair entirely if neglected, which has often been the case.

Ask for Prince's Russia Oil. The ounce bottle, 5s.; a large bottle, containing five ounces, 1l., which is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits. Good allowance for exportation. Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses with counterfeit Russia Oil, saying it is the genuine.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

Letters, dated the 17th September, have been received from Demerara. They state, that the colony was perfectly tranquil, and that every thing was going on well.

A Cabinet Council is expected to be summoned in the course of the ensuing week.

The Recorder, it is understood, will make his Report, next week, of the convicts that were tried during the two last Sessions at the Old Bailey, to the King in Council, at Carlton Palace.

MELANCHOLY OCCURRENCE—Seven persons drowned.—We have received a letter from Skibbereen, of yesterday's date, from which the following is an extract. A morning paper states the loss of lives on this occasion to be between forty and fifty, but we have every reason to confide in the accuracy of our correspondent's account, which set down the number at seven.

"SKIBBEREEN, OCT. 31, 1825.—On Saturday morning last, as a boat, having on board seven persons, was proceeding from Cape Clear to this place, she was overtaken by a sudden gust, which unfortunately upset her, and all perished. I understand the poor people were coming here in order to effect an exchange of old for new silver coin, agreeably to the proclamation. The unfortunate sufferers were, we learn, of the tenantry of Mr. Wrixon Becher, Member for Mallow."—Cork Southern Reporter of Nov. 1.

PREPARATIONS FOR RAISING THE COMET.

[From the Glasgow Chronicle, of Nov. 3.]

During the whole of Monday the persons employed to lift the Comet were waiting for a calm, in order to commence operations. Towards evening the wind did a little abate, but the calm was only temporary, and during the greater part of the night it blew a stiff gale. Early the following morning, the Caledonia and Hercules steam boats arrived at Gourock bay to assist in the business. The wind still continued fresh. The people on board of the lighters in Gourock bay were, during the morning, busily engaged in filling their holds with barrels of water. The casks, of which there are upwards of twenty in each lighter, contain from 100 to 120 gallons each, or a weight of about seven tons in each lighter. They are laid so as to be rolled without difficulty, in order that when the weight of the Comet is bearing heavily upon the bows they may be rolled to the stern, by which means, besides assisting to balance the vessel, they will give a purchase proportioned to their weight, towards the raising of the wreck. About ten o'clock, two small boats containing between them one of the chains, and dragged out by two boats with four oars each, left the bay to commence sweeping. To each end of the chain was attached a long cable which was again terminated by buoys. The boats, on coming near to the spot where the Comet is lying, separated a little, and let the chain drop between them into the water, the buoys floating above, and keeping the ends above water. Having deposited this chain in the water, they returned to the bay, and taking out another chain, they sunk it in a similar manner at the other side of the Comet. These operations occupied till nearly twelve o'clock, at which hour the steam-boats sailed from the bay to the scene of action. They seized each a rope attached to one of the sunk chains, and sailing in the same direction on either side of the Comet until the chain was dragged under her keel. The next chain was dragged under in a similar manner, when they were crossed over each other, and left to be fastened to the tackling on board the lighters. The operations were watched with much anxiety from the shore by the relatives of those who are still missing. Had the Comet sunk a very few hundred yards farther to the eastward she might have been raised long ago, but the place where she lies is very stormy when the other side of the point is quite calm. Should, however, the wind shift to the south, they will commence the raising of the vessel, for which every thing is now ready. The operations are directed by Mr. Clark, the river engineer.

NOV. 3.—The operations to raise the Comet proceed as quickly as the stormy and unsettled state of the atmosphere will allow. The vessel is fairly in chains, and were the weather only to moderate for any length of time, the object in view would, it is expected, be speedily accomplished. Another body of a man was, we hear, found yesterday forenoon; but so sadly disfigured, that it was impossible to recognise the sufferer. The weather here was more moderate yesterday afternoon, and if it was the same in the Frith below, the attempt to raise the Comet would probably be made. A person named Nichol is amongst the number saved (making 13 in all), but whose name has hitherto been forgotten to be mentioned.

AFFRAY WITH SMUGGLERS.—On Wednesday night, as Lieutenant H. Hope Johnstone, of his Majesty's ship Ramilies, who commands the coast-blockade station at Fort Sutherland, near Hythe, was on duty near the canal between the sea and the town, one of his guard upon the beach fired a pistol, which Lieutenant Johnstone rightly took for a signal of the appearance of smugglers in the vicinity; and though only attended by his servant, he ran at once in the probable direction which he judged they were likely to take, and almost at the same moment came in contact with a large body of smugglers, some bearing tubs of spirits in slings, and others armed with large bludgeons. He seized the foremost of the fellows, and threatened to fire if resisted; but he was, while holding his prisoner, beset by the whole group knocked down, and, together with his servant, beaten very severely with the bludgeons. In the struggle he discharged his pistol at one fellow who aimed a violent blow at his head, and the fire was said to have taken effect. The smugglers, thus interrupted in their work, scattered in every direction, leaving behind them several tubs of spirits, which were taken possession of by Lieutenant Johnstone's men, who ran to his assistance from the fort, but too late to prevent their escape, or the severe maltreatment of the officer and his servant, who boldly encountered the band of smugglers. A short time ago Lieutenant Fabian was wounded in a similar manner near the same spot, and he has not yet recovered from the effects of it.

A few evenings ago a labourer named Batty, of Morton, near Bourn, was alarmed by the screams of an infant in the cradle in an upper apartment, and on proceeding to discover the cause, he ascertained that the child had been bitten in one of its hands by a rat. The following evening he was again alarmed by the cries of some of the elder children, in another apartment, when he discovered that a rat was in bed with the children, and had seized another of them on the face, and one of the eye-lids. The children have not yet recovered the attacks of the vermin.—Boston Gaz.

MUIRHEAD.—Mr. Harmer, the solicitor, who defended John Grosset Muirhead at the last Westminster Sessions, applied to Clements, one of the officers of Marlborough-street, for a copy of the warrant which was issued for the apprehension of Muirhead. This application occasioned some conversation; the officer, however, gave Mr. Harmer the copy. The application was made at the desire of Mr. Muirhead, who on his trial stated that he should bring an action against the officers for searching his person, and taking away those infamous prints and books which were produced on his trial.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTS.

W. Alexander, Finch-lane, Cornhill, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Smith and Weir, Coopers-hall, Basinghall-street.—A. Shaw, Delph, Yorkshire, grocer. Sols. Messrs. Hurd and Johnson, Temple.—W. Ridley, Castle-street, Holborn, carpet-dealer. Sols. Messrs. Knight and Fyson, Basinghall-street.—J. Gregory, Frome-Selwood, Somersetshire, rope-maker. Sol. Mr. Hartley, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.—W. Seagrove, Portsea, draper. Sol. Mr. Hartley, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.—P. Higgins, Nottingham, baker. Sol. Mr. Knowles, New-Inn.—W. Prideaux, John-square, and W. Prideaux, jun. Kingsbridge, Devonshire, bankers. Sol. Mr. Fox, Austinfriars.—G. Garbutt Bishop-Wearmouth, Durham, bookseller. Sols. Messrs. Perkins and Frampton, Gray's-inn-square.—J. Brunton, Southwick, Durham, ship-builder. Sols. Messrs. Bell and Brodrick, Bow Church-yard, Cheapside.

DIVIDENDS.

Nov. 22, G. Bennett, Seymour-place, St. Mary-le-bone, butcher.—Nov. 15, P. P. H. Roberts, High Holborn, cheesemonger.—Nov. 22, J. H. Tucker, Jermyn-street, St. James's, chemist.—Nov. 10, H. R. Plaw, Riches-court, Lime-street, merchant.—Nov. 23, T. Boddington and J. Oland, St. Philip and Jacob, Gloucestershire, brown-stone ware-potters.—Nov. 26, M. Frearson and J. Gordon, Holborn, linen-drapers.—Nov. 26, H. Bell, Bourn, Lincolnshire, corn-merchant.—Nov. 22, J. Itackham, Strand, bookseller.—Nov. 22, C. L. Spitta, F. and G. Molling, and H. A. Spitta, Laurence Pountney-lane, merchants.—Nov. 22, J. Bromley, Circus-street, New-road, Mary-le-bone, ironmonger.—Nov. 22, W. Savage, Fetter-lane, victualler.—Nov. 22, J. Fowlerton, Upper Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-square, merchant.—Nov. 22, J. Batters, Southampton, grocer.—Nov. 30, P. Rothwell, Runcorn, Cheshire, corn-dealer.—Dec. 1, R. Spofforth, jun., Howden, Yorkshire, scrivener.—Nov. 23, J. Douglas, Loughborough, Leicestershire, merchant.—Nov. 22, J. Ruspini, Pall-mall, medicine-vender.—Dec. 2, W. Oldacres, Lea-Grange, Leicestershire, farmer.

CERTIFICATES.—Nov. 22.

J. White, jun., Bishop-Wearmouth, Durham, ironfounder.—T. T. de Lassanx, Canterbury, porter-merchant.—W. Preston, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, broker.—P. P. H. Roberts, High Holborn, cheesemonger.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

H. Sutton, G. Oldham, and T. Adams, Newark-upon-Trent, Nottinghamshire, diercers.—J. and W. Parsons, New-cut, Lambeth, timber-merchants.—J. Lee, Crown-street, and P. Saunders, Upper Worship-street, Finsbury, rag-merchants.—R. Bullock and I. Guthrie, Terrace, London-road, tobacconists.—W. Langmead, R. Jordan, and W. Scott, Teignmouth, Devonshire, bankers; so far as regards W. Scott.—T. Lodington and B. Hall, Sergeant's-inn, Fleet-street, solicitors.—F. Hearle and J. Rowland, St. Columb-Major, Cornwall, attorneys.—A. and C. Jones, Wolverhampton, grocers.—J. Jones and J. Perks, Birmingham, jewellers.—T. Barrow and W. Knowles, Manchester, calico-manufacturers.—W. and M. H. Chapman, Rodney-street, Pentonville, haberdashers.—S. Bramwell, D. Tookey, and C. J. Bramwell, Little Guildford-street, Southwark, leather hat-manufacturers.—R. and W. Crookall, Preston, Lancashire, corn-dealers.—W. Fitchew, jun., and C. Bath, Somers-place West, New-road, pawnbrokers.—J. and J. Hart, Hastings, butchers.—M. and M. A. Settle, and F. Spencer, Darcy-Lever, Lancashire, innkeepers.—C. J. Fox and T. Bonser, Birmingham, comb-makers.—G. Carrington and C. Green, Birmingham, jewellers.—J. Sloane, W. Leedham, C. Sankey, J. A. Wells, and W. Barringer, St. Martin's-lane, Westminster, cheesemongers; so far as regards W. Barringer.—S. Sharpe and J. Walpole, Market-Deeping, Lincolnshire, farmers.—G. Cheshire and T. Fowler, Tring, Hertfordshire, drapers.—W. B. Smith and J. Jukes, Dudley, Worcestershire, ironmasters.—J. and J. Rock, King's Head-yard, Duke-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, coach-spring-makers.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

BREWING UTENSILS & SEASONED CASKS, in great variety, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s. 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 15s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes. Bathing and Turtle Tubs Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, and Utensils Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sance Warehouse.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a Physician and Botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles, at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles, one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet-market.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are particularly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street, and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's-court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, 1, and Yard, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom. Mr. Renard, 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head-ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. STIRLING, Chemist, &c., No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel; and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each. Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling" on the stamp label, with his own writing.

TO Families Travelling, Promenading, and Enjoying Aquatic Excursions, Bathing, &c. the following inestimable requisites are especially recommended:

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR, for the complexion,

which immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin, produces a delightful and pleasing Coolness to the Face, Arms, &c., removes Freckles, Pimples, Spots, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchement; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 1s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

Also ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for the Hair,

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE.

This Oil is pre-eminently successful in nourishing the Hair, preserving it while travelling, preventing its falling off in cases of illness, and has the unrivalled property of giving a most fascinating and delectable appearance to the Hair. Price 3s. 6d.; 7s.; 10s. 6d.; and 21s. per bottle.—Also,

ROWLAND'S ALSANA EXTRACT,

For the TEETH and GUMS, and PREVENTING the TOOTH-ACHE.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, and Bottles; which renders it indispensably necessary on purchasing any of the above to ask for "ROWLAND'S," strictly observing the signature and address in red, "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton Garden."

Sold by appointment, Wholesale, by Mr. R. Hendrie, (Perfumer to His Majesty), Titchbourn-street; Mr. Smyth, Messrs. Gattie and Peirce, 57, Mr. Delcroix, 158, D. Rigge, 35, Holmes, Thevenot, and Brewster, New Bond-street; Messrs. Bayley and Blue, Cockspur-street; Messrs. Berry and Lloyd, Greek-street; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Low, 330, Prout, 226, Strand; Mr. Atkinson, Gerrard-st.; Mr. Butler, Chemist, 4, Cheapside; Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 95, Fleet-market; Mr. Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Mr. Sutton, Bow-Church-yard; Mr. Edwards, 67, and Messrs. Newberry, St. Paul's Church-yard; Dinn and Thwaite, Hatton-garden; Mr. Burgess, Holborn-hill; Mr. Kennaby, Bartholomew-close; Messrs. Evans, Long-lane; and Retail by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine Vendors in the United Kingdom.

SODA WATER.—WM. CLARK, No. 21, MAIDEN-LANE, Covent Garden, Soda Water Manufacturer to the Royal Family, most respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and the public in general, that he manufactures the above article of a very superior quality; it is warranted to be from all metallic impregnations, in consequence of its being prepared in glass machinery.—N.B. Super or Jamaica Ginger Beer and Fine Sparkling Lemonade (in glass bottles). They are warranted to keep good for twelve months.

THE BRITISH SPECIFIC, for re-producing and promoting the GROWTH of HAIR.—The principle of its operation is to cool and contract the pores which are opened by a redundancy of heat, occasioning a relaxation of the roots, and render them incapable of retaining the hair; to counteract which nothing is better calculated than the British Specific, as, from its invigorating and oleaginous properties, it almost immediately arrests the falling off, and affords such effectual nourishment to the roots, that persons giving it a fair trial may assure themselves of its speedily restoring it, even where it has become completely bald, however long it may have been so, and, if gray, gradually to restore it to its natural colour. The superiority of this preparation (the invention of a medical man) derives additional recommendation from its being, unlike other compositions for the hair, so extremely clean and agreeable that its application is a real pleasure, and is only requisite to be generally known, to receive the preference of every article in use for similar purposes. To be had only of D. PEDEN, 15, Burlington Arcade, Piccadilly, in bottles 6s. each, or cases of four bottles for 11. forwarded to order, on receiving the amount, post-paid.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others. By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, for a Superior Beverage is produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely superior to the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths; it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS;

Sold Retail by all Grocers and Druggists in the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co., No. 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words "Robinson's Patent," the Royal Arms, and the signature of MATTS. ROBINSON, are affixed to each package, as none others are genuine.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—HOLYHEAD, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle, and Congleton—BRISTOL, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Collumpton—EXETER, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield—BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH, through Chorley, Preston, and Garstang—CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—MILFORD HAVEN, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES—MANCHESTER (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—HOLYHEAD (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock—SOUTHAMPTON coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—LIVERPOOL (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—WINDSOR and ETON coaches daily—MANCHESTER (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—EXETER (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—EDINBURGH and GLASGOW (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—BRISTOL (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four—BIRMINGHAM (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—COVENTRY light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—NOTTINGHAM post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—CHESTER and PARK-GATE new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—WORCESTER coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA post coach, every evening at half-past five—TAMWORTH, ATHERSTONE and HINCHLEY coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—DERBY post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—DOVER coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—PARIS new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—TAUNTON, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—CHELTENHAM and GLOUCESTER light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—NORWICH new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—CAMBRIDGE Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—CANTERBURY fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—BRIGHTON coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—MILFORD HAVEN new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narberth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.—N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 29th ult., at his house, Parson's-green, Fulham, the lady of J. H. Keats, Esq. of a son.

On the 31st ult., the lady of Thomas Fyfe, Esq. of Mount Nod, Streatham, Surrey, of a daughter.

On the 3d instant, Mrs. George Corbett, of Northampton-square, of a son.

On the 4th instant, at Edmonton, Mrs. W. W. Terrington, of a daughter.

On Wednesday morning, Mrs. H. L. Robins, of Salisbury-street, of a daughter.

On the 3d instant, Mrs. Henry Young, of No. 12, Essex-street, Strand, of a daughter.

MARRIED.

On Tuesday last, J. A. Whitcombe, Esq. to Julia, third daughter of David Walters, Esq. of Barnwood House.

On the 1st instant, Mr. Young, of St. Martin's-lane, to Miss Aldous, of Oxford-street.

On the 3d instant, Edward Brown, Esq. of Cullompton, Devon, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Middleton, of London.

DIED.

On Monday, the 24th ult., at his house in St. Giles's, Norwich, John Ditchell, Esq.

On the 26th ult., Mr. Nathan Parker, of Idol-lane, Tower-street.

On Thursday, the 27th ult., while on a visit with his friends in Birmingham, aged 36, George Lang ford, Esq., a native of Gibraltar.

On Monday, the 31st ult., Mr. W. C. Drake, printer, of 65, Ratcliffe-highway, in the 44th year of his age.

On the 30th ult. in Cockspur-street, Grace, the wife of Mr. Peter Des Granges, in her 53d year.

On the 1st instant, at his residence, Denmark-hill, Robert Sangster, Esq. in the 78th year of his age.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 27. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW Evening, Shakspeare's ROMEO and JULIET; Juliet, by a young Lady (her second appearance on any Stage). To conclude with (6th time at this Theatre) the Grand Historic Pantomime-Drama, in 2 Parts, called DE LA PEROUSE, or the Desolate Island.

On Tuesday, (78th time) Weber's Romantic Opera of Der Freischutz, and De La Perouse.

On Wednesday, the Comedy of the Rivals, and De La Perouse.

A Comic Opera, in three Acts, taken from Dumaniant's Comedy of " Guerre Ouverte; ou, Ruse Contre Ruse" and " The Midnight Hour," called THE WAGER, or the Midnight Hour, is in rehearsal, and will be produced on Saturday next.

HAYMARKET THEATRE.—TO-MORROW, Tribulation, or Unwelcome Visitors; with Paul Pry, and Youth, Love and Folly.

On Tuesday, " Quite Correct," with Paul Pry; being the last Night of the Company's performing this season.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

In consequence of the Nightly Overflows from the success of the PILOT, no Orders are admitted.

TUESDAY, November 15, and during the week, will be produced, for the fourteenth time, THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. Founded on the popular Novel of that title. After which the favourite Burletta, in one Act, called CURIOSITY CURED! To conclude with LIFE of an ACTOR.

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal. 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—To-morrow Evening, and during the Week, the Entertainments will commence with the Comic Burletta of ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTCH. After which (first time these seven years) the Diamond Arrow.—RAMO SAMEE, the East Indian Juggler, will go through his admired and extraordinary performances for this week only. The whole to conclude with the Ballet of Action, called Philip Quarl and his Monkey; the Monkey by the young German.

On Monday, Nov. 21, will be produced an entirely new Dramatic Burletta, founded on a Norwegian Tale, with most extensive new Machinery, and Scenery, designed and painted by Mr. Tomkins.

Mr. WILKINSON and Mrs. WAYLETT are engaged at this Theatre, and will make their first appearance on Monday the 21st inst.

PARLIAMENTARY DISSOLUTION OF LOTTERIES.

AS a measure of finance, very productive to the revenue, and voluntary on the part of the people, it is matter of regret that Lotteries are about to pass away for ever, after existing 150 Years in this Country.

No system of chance was ever devised so plain and simple as the English Lotteries, to produce an independent Fortune from a mere trifling Risk, in the course of a few Days; and this may be evinced by any one, in the present farewell Scheme; for less than Twenty Pounds now advanced, may increase to Thirty Thousand Pounds on the 6th of Next Month, when Four Prizes of Thirty Thousand Pounds must be drawn, and the Money may be received the very next Day.

J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT beg to submit a New Scheme, and respectfully to remind the Public, that Lotteries must cease for ever at the close of the present Drawings.

In soliciting a continuance of that patronage which J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT gratefully acknowledge to have been honoured with for many years, they can with confidence recommend the present Scheme, which not only retains the popular points of late ones, but also

FOUR PRIZES OF

£30,000	£30,000
£30,000	£30,000

All to be Drawn in One Day! 6th DECEMBER.

Tickets and Shares are now on Sale at J. and J. SIVEWRIGHTS' fortunate Offices, No. 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 38, Haymarket, London, where they sold in One Lottery, 12,478, a Prize of £30,000, and several other Capitals; in the Lottery drawn 15th July last, 3,613, a Prize of £21,055, besides other Capitals.

ANGLO-THIBET SHAWLS, and SILKS.—ROBARTS, GRIFFITHS, and CRICK, Silk-mercers to the Royal Family, beg to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry, they have just received a superb Collection of the above Manufacture, in Long and Square SHAWLS, with entirely new Borders, equal to the most elegant Oriental Designs; also an unrivalled variety of Colours in Winter Silks, Irish Poplins, &c. &c.—No. 1, Chandos-street, Covent-garden.

ELASTIC HUNTING CRAVATS.—J. SIMON, (the Inventor) has the honour to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that he continues to receive a constant SUPPLY of these highly approved ARTICLES, in the most choice Colours, for the Season.—J.S. begs to return his grateful Thanks to those Noblemen and Gentlemen who have favoured him with their Patronage. Letters addressed, post paid, to the Inventor, Nos. 24 and 25, Burlington Arcade, will meet with the utmost attention.—Gloves Hosiery, &c.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—The DIRECTORS of the GENERAL STAGE-COACH COMPANY hereby give Notice, that a further CALL of THREE POUNDS per Share (making in the whole a payment of Six Pounds per Share) is required to be paid to Messrs. Ransom and Co., 3, Pall-mall East, the bankers of the Company, on or before Tuesday, the 22d day of November instant, when and where the respective Shareholders are requested to pay the same. And the Directors also hereby give Notice, that the Deed of Settlement of the Company will be open for the perusal and signature of the Shareholders, at the office of Mr. Andrews, solicitor, 28, Great Winchester-street, from the 22d day of November instant until the 13th day of December next ensuing inclusive; and the respective Shareholders are hereby required, either by themselves or their attorneys duly authorised, to attend and execute the same, and exchange their Receipts for Certificates of the Shares held by them. Shareholders making default, either in payment of the Call, or in executing the Deed of Settlement, within the time prescribed for that purpose, will forfeit all sums paid by them respectively, and all interest in the Company.

Dated the 3d day of October, 1825.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-street, every Morning, at a Quarter past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, Bristol, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside....2l. 5s. Outside..... 1l. 1s.

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1s. 6d per head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3s. per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-st., at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, Melksham, &c.

FARES.—Inside....1l. 18s. Outside.... 18s.

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notice will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power; they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

The Directors will not be answerable for the safety of any parcel exceeding 5l in value, unless the amount be stated when booked.

NEW VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC. Published by J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent Street.

PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

" Useful Extracts," consisting of Scales and Exercises, intended as an Introduction to the celebrated Studies of Clementi, Cramer, &c. Arranged and Fingered by J. B. Cramer, 5s. Twenty-five Characteristic Diversions, by ditto, 14s. Impromptu on Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Melange on Airs from Crociato, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Capriccio on the favourite Round in Tarrare, by do. 3s. 6d. Overture de Jean de Finlande, as Duet, by Hummel, 4s. Impromptu, Op. 62, by Moscheles. Le Petite Babellarde, Brilliant Rondo, Op. 66, by ditto, 3s. Variations on Giovinetto Cavalier, by Pixis, 4s. Rose's Third Polonoise Duet, 5s.

HARP MUSIC.

" Roslin Castle," arranged by Bochsa, 3s. 6d. Che faro senza, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Favorite March, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Bridesmaid Chorus, arranged by Chipp, 2s. 6d. Mary's Dream, by ditto, 3s. Ye Banks and Braes, by ditto, 3s. Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Dizi's Variations on La Jeune et Sensible, 4s. Huntsmen Chorus, arranged by Wright, 2s 6d.

VOCAL MUSIC.

" As the Tree seems more bright," " Fair Geraldine," and " What is Love," composed by Barnett, 1s. 6d. each. " Jock o'Hazeldean," and " My Heart is fair for Somebody," arranged by Chipp, 1s. 6d. each. " My own dear Maid," and " To welcome Jamie Hame" by Rawlings, 2s. each. " Wandering Willie," and " When Delia on the Plain," by Dr. Carnaby, 1s. 6d. each. Also an elegant Edition of Handel's Songs, arranged by Wm. Horsley, Mus. Bac. Oxon.; the following of which are published, viz. " Angels ever bright," " Lord to thee," " From mighty Kings," and " Pious Orgies."

NEW MUSIC.—THE ARROWS OF LOVE. The celebrated Cavatina, as sung by Madame Vestris. Composed by W. West. 2s.---DESERTED COTTAGE. Sung by Mrs. Waylett. Composed by R. W. Evans, 1s. 6d.---Ah! dia I Sweaa! Sung by Mr. Melrose. Composed by W. West, 1s. 6d.

The above popular Songs are just published, by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand, near Somerset House.

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. BAYLY, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (Second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Piano-Fortes; also Harps, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

☞ Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on Hire.

Just published.

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangement of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chornsses, from the celebrated opera, " Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home, with variations, 2s. ---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, ditto, 2s.---As a Duet for two Violoncellos. The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane

R. W. EVANS, 146, STRAND, (near Somerset House) LONDON.

PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices.

Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

SIX ORIGINAL SPANISH MELODIES, with Symphonies and Accompaniments for the Pianoforte and Harp—Composed by W. West—The Poetry by Lord Nugent.—This Work is embellished with appropriate Drawings, &c. from the Designs of eminent Artists.

CONTENTS OF No. I.

	s.	d.
1 Love, Music, and Time	12	0
2 Tho' I have sworn by that Frown
3 Good Night Love (a Boat Glee)
4 Hope and Memory
5 Oh, for that Strain
Ditto, as a Duet
6 Hail to thee Fairest

The Second Number is preparing, and will shortly be Published—This Work is also arranging for the Guitar.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violincello and Flute	17	6
Or, in Parts ..... Evans ..... each	3	6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib) ..... R. W. Evans...
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha...	5	0
No. II.—Introduction—Romance—Danza de Village—Fandango	5	0

DUETS.

All Idea, Duet ..... Moss	3	0
Santo Oh Diol .. .. ditto	2	0

OVERTURES.

Cherry and Fair Star ..... Ware	2	6
Cinderella ..... ditto	2	0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments ..... Evans	3	6
Gil Blas ..... Moss	2	0
Il Tancredi, with Accompaniments (arranged by Evans) ..... Rossini...	3	6
Mother Bunch ..... Ware	2	6

FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.

*Di Tanti Palpiti, a Romance ..... R. W. Evans.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove ..... ditto	2	6
*My Lodging is on the Cold Grounds Fantasia and Waltz, ..ditto	3	6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz ..... ditto	2	0

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of " Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo ..... ditto	3	6

* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.

Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars ..... ditto	2	6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1	6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
Away, those Doubts	Mr Foster	Torri	1	6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2	0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr Bellamy	Evans	2	0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1	6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1	6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1	6
Deserted Cottage	ditto	ditto	1	6
Fain would I marry	ditto	ditto	1	6
My Lady ha h a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1	6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1	6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1	6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1	6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1	6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr Pearman	Evans	2	0
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2	0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1	6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1	6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Miss Kelly	Moss	1	6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1	6
The Moon will flake the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1	6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1	6

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet)	Miss Povey and Mr. Broadhurst	Moss	2	0

QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.

The Cadets ..... Ware	3	0
The Freischutz ..... Moss	3	0
The Royal York ..... Ware	3	0
The Midlothian ..... Evans	3	0
Les Moissonieurs.	3	0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star	1	6

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries ..... sung by Mr. Braham, 2s.
What blissful visions ..... ditto, 2s.
Thus lowly bending ..... Mr. Atkins, 2s.
Bless'd light of heaven ..... Chorus, 2s.
Now bid with our joyous ..... ditto, 2s.
Silly woman ..... Miss Paton, 2s.
Sire, to me ..... ditto, 2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision ..... ditto, 2s.
Where now are flown ..... Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Whilst here in anguish ..... ditto, 2s.
Ah, when sorrows cooling, Duet ..... Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Evening now softly closing, ditto ..... Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio ..... Paton, Boden, and Thorne, 2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto ..... Paton, Hamilton, and Boden, 2s.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also ..... Miss Paton, 1s. 6d,
Why didst thou leave me ..... ditto ..... ditto, 2s.
Oh, turn again on me love ..... ditto ..... ditto, 2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow ..... ditto ..... ditto, 1s. 6d.
My morning prayer ..... ditto ..... ditto, 1s. 6d.
In young life's morning ..... Mr. Thorne, 2s.
Her I love so dearly ..... Mr. Broadhurst, 2s.
Though sorrow may come ..... Miss Stephens, 2s.
In such a bustle ..... Miss Kelly, 2s.
Oh, I could weep ..... Mr. Thorne, 2s.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variations, 2s. 6d.	4. Kelvin Grove, divertise. 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, ditto, 2s. 6d.	5. Love, good night, var. 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.	6. Green grow the rushes, O! 2s. 6d.

A large assortment of single and double action Harps, Square, Cottage, Cabinet, and Grand Piano Fortes, by the most approved makers, at the manufacturers' prices.—Also a variety of second-hand Piano Fortes and Harps for sale.

Piano Fortes and Harps lent on hire.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr. Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not were a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Ciancheittini	2	6

(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition)

The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0

Just published,

AH MAIDEN GARDEZ-VOUS, a popular Song, sung by Madame Vestris, with the most enthusiastic and unbounded applause, at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket; composed by J. Watson, price 1s. 6d. Published by LAVENU and Co. 24, Edward-street, corner of Duke-street, Manchester-square, and W. CARD, 98, Quadrant, Regent-street.

Just published, in Three Vols. 12mo. price 24s. boards,

PANDURANG HARI; or, Memoirs of a HINDOO. Printed for Geo. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hasse, late Kinnard, 399, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

SIMPSON'S ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, unrivalled in good effects for Spasms or Gout in the Stomach, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and as a Restorative in cases of extreme Nervous Debility or the weakness of advanced Life. It is sold in bottles at 11s. each, by J. V. Simpson, 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Hose, 309, High Holborn; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; and by all the principal Medicine Venders throughout the Kingdom.

PERRING'S PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED.—The long existing prejudice against Silk Hats is now entirely removed by the above discovery. The PATENT DOUBLE-EDGED SILK HAT, having an extra quantity of Napping on the square, will bear the most rough usage, is calculated for all weathers, and, unlike the common-made Silk Hat, will wear equally all over, retaining their shape and beauty to the last. Time, the only fair test, has brought these inimitable Hats into universal repute. The Economical may now purchase with perfect safety a Hat, possessing every necessary good quality, in any shape, at 17s.

An extensive assortment of Ladies' fine Beaver Bonnets, of the newest shapes, elegantly trimmed, from One to Two Sovereigns.

Gentlemen's warranted Water-Proof Beaver Hats, made as they should be, combining all the various fashions, 20s. 23s. 26s.

J. P. in presenting his Hats to public inspection, is zealously determined to unite principle with economy. All Hats will be offered at such prices as cannot fail to meet the wishes of the discerning.

Warehouses, 413, Strand, two doors from the Adelphi Theatre, and 8, Angel-terrace, Hammersmith.

Gentlemen residing in the country may meet with the earliest attention to their orders by a remittance, or an order for payment in London. For the size, apply a piece of string round the outside of the Hat, where the band goes, and send the exact length.

ROEBUCK IRON FOUNDRY, Stove Grate Manufactory, and general Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—CRUNDALL and HALLEN acknowledge the liberal support they have received from the Nobility and Gentry, and, in consequence of the very considerable increase of business, they have found it expedient to enlarge their premises to a great extent, which has enabled them to offer for sale a most extensive and elegant ASSORTMENT of DRAWING ROOM and other STOVES, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage, of the most superior workmanship and design to any house in the kingdom. Fenders, fire irons, and kitchen ranges on the most improved principle, and every description of furnishing ironmongery for the approaching season. A large assortment of patent warm air stoves, ascending or descending lines, adapted for halls, offices, warehouses, and shops. Also the admirable economical patent French table lamps, in the greatest variety, diffusing a light equal to 6 wax candles, from 28s. upwards, full 50 per cent. under any house in the kingdom. Manufacturers of every article of fence work for parks, baronies, verandas, entrance gates, hurdles, &c., and from the extensive machinery and convenience of their premises, including the late reduction of iron, they are enabled now to offer the above considerably under in price to any house in the kingdom. Orders of any magnitude executed with promptness, by addressing a line to Crundall and Hallen, Roebuck Iron Foundry and Stove Grate Manufactory, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—N. B. Every description of castings made to order or model. Prompt payment, and no abatement.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

"St. Petersburgh, Oct. 15.—The whole amount of exports from Finland in 1824, was to the value of 5,728,571 rubles; imports, 4,673,557.

"Count Nesselrode arrived here from Vienna the day before yesterday.

"Admiral Schischkow, Minister of Public Instruction, will shortly visit all the Universities except that of Dorpat, where he was in May this year.

"Oct. 19.—The funeral of Count Gurjew was performed on the 16th with great solemnity. Prince Wolkonsky, who is at present at Taganrog with the Empress, is spoken of as his successor.

"As a proof of the increase of our export trade, it may be mentioned, that according to the most recent accounts, the exportation of tallow this year has been three million poods.

"The exportation of hemp, flax, timber, potashes, oil, copper, iron, &c., is likewise considerable, and the national manufactures are daily improving.

"In the Baltic provinces the exportation of corn is completely stagnant; they begin to cultivate more flax, which meets with an advantageous market in England or Portugal.

"Copenhagen, Oct. 25.—Mr. Wynn, the English Ambassador, arrived here on the 14th, on board the Caledonia, steamboat.

"Hamburg, Oct. 28.—The Marquis of St. Simon, French Ambassador at Copenhagen, has arrived at Altona with his wife, from Paris.

Mauritius, Aug. 1.—The Espiegle, 18, Captain Wray, arrived here on the 24th ult. from Zanzibar and our new settlement at Mombass (28 days from the latter place)—Lieut. Emery, R.N. and the establishment at Mombass were in good health. Mr. George Phillips, Collector of the Customs, had died of a fever, which he caught at Pemba, an island near Mombass It is discovered that, besides the Hippopotamus, there are Mermaids on that coast, several of which have been taken; their teeth is the best of ivory, and are used for making handles of swords. The Espiegle, in standing into the south harbour of Mombass, got on shore on a bank which runs off the island, lost her anchors, and sustained some injury. When she left, Lieut. Emery (the Governor), to prevent a recurrence of any accident, went off with a pilot, and saw her clear off all the reefs; his zealous and prudent services are highly commendable. The Leven, (Capt. Owen), Ariadne, and Espiegle, are lying here. The Leven proceeds tomorrow, for Delagoa Bay, to join the Baracouta, and resume the survey of that coast. The slave-vessel, with 120 slaves, captured by the Leven on the west coast of Madagascar, was condemned on the 29th ult. The merchant ship Africa is just arrived from England. Mr. Jocelyn Weller is appointed a Lieutenant of the Espiegle, vice Le Mesurier, invalided.

The village of Dornspryck, near Elbury, which has suffered so much from inundations, has become the theatre of new misfortunes. On the 25th ult. at eleven o'clock in the morning, the lightning struck the spire of the church, and occasioned a fire, which, notwithstanding all the assistance procured, soon destroyed the church, the parsonage, the house of the Sacristan, a barn, and a private house.—Ghent paper.

Genoa, Oct. 25.—It is reported, that during the late severe gale, a Spanish craft in ballast, with specie from the coast of Catalonia, was totally lost off Cape Noli, and the crew drowned.

Bombay Papers to the 3d July have arrived, and private letters to the 13th. We do not yet learn that they contain any intelligence of importance, with the exception of the fact, as we hope it will prove, that there were only two passengers on board the Ogle Castle, which was wrecked last week on the Goodwin Sands. The names of these unfortunate individuals, as appears from the Appendix to the Bombay Courier of July 2, were Lieutenant William Noton, and Mr. Wm. Howard.

Paris.—A woman named Henriette, who lodged in the same house with another woman of the name of Bellon, where she kept a fruiterer's shop, offered to take charge of her infant daughter (about 18 months old) while the mother finished dressing herself. A few minutes afterwards the mother went up to the apartment of Henriette, knocked at the door and asked for her child. "Your daughter is dead," replied Henriette, opening the door. The distracted mother beheld the headless trunk of her babe lying on the bed! Before opening the door, the monster Henriette, urged by some unaccountable fury, had cut off the child's head, and, wrapping it in a cloth, threw it out of the window.—The bleeding head fell upon the flanks of a horse on which an English lady was riding, and afterwards rolled at the feet of Doctor Delacroix, who was passing at the moment. The cries of the people in the street, and the screams of the wretched mother above stairs, caught the ears of the father of the child, the Sieur Bellon. He rushed from the shop—picked up the head—and after a few moments recognised the features of his own child! His anguish may easily be conceived. The officers of police were soon on the spot. They proceeded to the room of Henriette, and found her sitting calmly near the bed upon which lay the mutilated remains of her victim. They asked her why she had committed the crime?—whether the child had done any thing? She replied coolly, "it was the longing of a pregnant woman!"—(She was in the third month of her pregnancy.)—It appeared, from examination, that after having put the child on the bed, she had severed the head from its body with a large carving knife. When carried to the Prefecture of Police, her pulse was felt, and it was found to be without any alteration.

Calcutta, June 6.—The inhabitants of Prome were returning from the jungles in vast numbers, and it was expected that a plentiful bazaar would soon be established. The Governors of the surrounding districts were also coming in to tender their submission to the British arms, and place themselves and their districts under our protection. One of the chiefs had already brought in nine elephants belonging to the State, and promised to bring in ten more. Another had brought five guns, some jingals, and a few muskets, and all were profuse in their offers of service. The British troops at Prome were already generally under cover and it was hoped that that essential comfort would soon be completed. The weather had been bad for the last week, and, to all appearance, the monsoon had commenced, and at a much earlier period than usual.

A detachment of 800 infantry, a troop of the body guard, and two field pieces, had been sent, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Godwin, of his Majesty's 41st regiment, to march on the great road, leading from Prome to Toungho, the frontier town of the kingdom of Pegue to the eastward. They had started a lawless gang of the Surrawaddy people, who were plundering the country, and it being understood that they had with them a convoy of from six to eight hundred buckeries, chiefly drawn by bullocks, the remaining troops of the body guard and a regiment of native infantry, under the command of Captain Sneyd, had been sent in pursuit.

The country about Prome abounds in a very fine breed of bullocks, and it was expected that a sufficient supply would be procured for any further land operations of the army.

This is all we have obtained in an authentic shape; but we hear that there are letters in town of the 14th of May, which mention the capture of the whole convoy by Captain Sneyd.

May 23.—Rangoon.—Dispatches have been received by the Virginia, from Brigadier-General Sir A. Campbell, dated Turrip Mien, the 20th April, distant 30 miles from Prome, which place the army was expected to reach on the 24th April. No opposition whatever had been offered to the advance of our troops. The country was found to be generally in a deserted state.

The repeated successes of our arms, and the fall of Bundoolah, seem at length to have produced a salutary change in the councils and disposition of the King of Ava. On the 19th a letter was brought to the British camp by an European soldier, of his Majesty's 38th Regiment, who had been taken by the enemy, bearing the Royal Seal, and professing to come from two chiefs enjoying the confidence of the King. The general tenor of the letter is an expression of regret at the existence of hostilities, and of an earnest desire for the restoration of peace between the two countries.

The writers observe, "From the creation of the world, the two Governments have lived in peace and amity, and have never before been engaged in war, or had any dispute, living, as it were, in unison, and with friendly and commercial intercourse constantly subsisting between them. In the year 1823, in consequence of the matter arising from the conduct of a certain paltry chief, war commenced, and has lasted for upwards of twelve months, occasioning much bloodshed and loss of lives to the armies and people of both nations.

"These two nations being both great and powerful, it would be highly desirable that a communication should be opened between them, that their people may again enjoy the blessings of peace, from which happiness must accrue to their subjects, and the chiefs, through whose means these desirable objects can be attained, would be held and considered to be highly enlightened, and to have rendered special service to their respective states. For this purpose we have sent William James, a British soldier, and two chiefs, taken prisoners by us, with two soldiers of the state, to deliver this letter, and hope that no delay will occur to prevent a speedy reply being given to this communication."

The Burmese who accompanied the bearer of this communicate, that Messrs. Judson, Price, Laird, and four other European gentlemen, were actually on their way from Ava, to be given up to Sir A. Campbell; and Mr. Judson is particularly mentioned as being authorised by the King of Ava to use his best endeavours to bring the war to a termination.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Scarborough, Oct. 31.—A shocking accident occurred here this morning, by the overturning of the Hull and Scarborough Express coach. In descending the hill, near the Plantation, the horses suddenly turned towards the place where they are accustomed to be watered, and, by the swerve, occasioned the coach to be overturned. Several of the passengers were much injured. Mrs. Nicholson, of the New Inn, had her skull fractured, and is so much bruised that she is not expected to live; a Mrs. Kingston is very much crushed; and the guard had his legs broken, and his body very much bruised; one or two more were hurt, though not dangerously.—York Chronicle.

FIRE AND HURRICANE.

(From the Halifax Journal, Oct. 17.)

Amidst confusion and distress, the inevitable consequences of the dreadful dispensation of Providence which has just befallen our devoted colony, it is altogether impossible to calculate or describe its destructive effects; but to awaken the sympathy of those who, under the protection of Almighty God, have escaped the awful calamity, it will be sufficient thus briefly to state, that more than one hundred miles of the shores of Miramichi are laid waste, independent of the north-west branch, the Ballihog and the Nappan settlements. From one to two hundred people have perished within immediate observation, and thrice that number are miserably burnt or otherwise wounded; and at least two thousand of our fellow-creatures are left destitute of subsistence, and thrown at present on the humanity of the province of New Brunswick.

The number of lives that have been lost in the woods among the lumbering parties, cannot be ascertained for some time to come, for it is feared that few are left to tell the tale.

It is not in the power of language to describe the unparalleled scene of devastation which the parish of Newcastle at this moment presents; out of upwards of two hundred and fifty houses and stores, fourteen of the least considerable only remain. The court-house, gaol, church, and barracks; Messrs. Gilmore, Rankin, and Co.'s; and Messrs. William Abrams, and Co.'s establishments are reduced to ashes.

The loss of property is incalculable, for the fire, borne upon the wings of a hurricane, rushed upon the inhabitants with such inconceivable rapidity, that the preservation of their lives could be their only care.

The ships Concord, and Canada, and brig Jane, were burnt to the water's edge, and many others took fire, but by great exertions were saved. Two vessels on the stocks belonging to Wm. Abrams and Co. were entirely consumed.

About three hundred of the sufferers are already in Chatham, and numbers of men, women, and children, are hourly pouring in, and throwing themselves on the bounty of its inhabitants.

DREADFUL FIRE AT MIRAMICHI.

(From the Halifax Free Press of Oct. 18.)

A most painful duty this day devolves on us—that of recording an astonishing and dire calamity which has befallen the province of New Brunswick, involved multitudes in death or ruin, and visited a large extent of country with unsparing desolation.

On Thursday last a verbal account was received of the conflagration which has taken place at Fredericton, by which 30 houses and 30 barns were consumed, caused by a fire in the woods adjacent to that town; and a rumour at that time prevailed that some of the back settlements near Miramichi had experienced a similar fate.

But while anxiety was on the stretch for correct information from Fredericton, the intelligence of the disaster at Miramichi arrived, and for a time the calamity that had been expected at the one place was lost in the contemplation of that which had befalleu the other.

It seems that the woods in that part of the country had been for some time on fire, but without exciting any apprehension of the catastrophe which was about to involve in ruin a large proportion of the population of the province.

On the 7th instant the flames acquired an ascendancy, which rendered flight in some instances impracticable, and resistance unavailing.

The alarming progress of this destructive element had been concealed by the state of the atmosphere, which it occasioned, until the night of that day, when, aided by a hurricane which increased its violence and rapidity, it burst with uncontrolable fury upon the heads of its devoted victims. All the accounts that have been received describe the rapidity of the flames to have been such as to have precluded the possibility of saving property to any extent. In most cases the unsuspecting beings, suddenly aroused from their slumbers, were unable to dress themselves, and immediate destruction was the consequence of a moment's delay So instantaneous were the effects of the fire, that many persons who were saved owe their preservation to the vicinity of the river, into which they threw themselves, and were taken up by boats, or escaped on rafts of timber. In that part of Miramichi called Newcastle, out of 250 houses but 14 escaped; and, indeed, the circumstance of any property being saved is considered as a miraculous interference.

Were we to give vent to the feelings which actuate us upon this occasion, we might depict a scene at which the heart of the most indifferent would sicken; and even then we probably should fall short in description of the sad reality. It cannot be possible to conceive the picture, which the devoted country that has been the scene of this visitation now presents. Near two hundred persons in the vicinity of Miramichi alone perished in the flames; and the loss of lives in the interior of the forests, where escape was impossible, must have been immense. What renders the event still more afflicting is the circumstance that the survivors are many of them dreadfully mutilated; and the sick and several of the dying can no longer obtain the slightest shelter from the severity of the weather.

An event so replete with horror is probably of rare occurrence, and the tidings of it have been met in Halifax with that promptitude and compassionate feeling which they must universally excite. Sentiments of sorrow, and a desire to render assistance, have been everywhere manifested, and have not been confined to age, rank, or sex; and we feel a satisfaction in stating, that the exertions which have been made in this town, although not calculated to afford permanent relief, will be extensively beneficial in assuaging the pangs of hunger, for famine has followed the course of the destructive element;—and that the supplies of clothing that have been forwarded must, on their arrival, render the situation of the survivors, in that respect, comparatively comfortable.

Upon the receipt of the mail, with the intelligence, on Saturday afternoon, gloom and anxiety were everywhere manifested; and on Sunday morning at nine o'clock, a meeting of the inhabitants took place, when the following resolutions were passed:

"That provisions and other articles for the relief of the sufferers be sent to the store of Messrs. Deblois and Mitchell.

"That letters be written to different parts of the Province, requesting the aid of their inhabitants.

"That a Committee be appointed to request that collections may be made in the different places of worship in this town, on Sunday next, for this charitable purpose."

A subscription was opened at the meeting, and before it broke up 1200l. were subscribed. A Committee of Management and a Sub-Committee to collect subscriptions throughout the town were also appointed, and, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather during the afternoon of that day, and the forenoon of yesterday, that sum was increased to 2,000l. Vessels were despatched with provisions, others were laden in like manner, and a large supply of clothing and other necessaries were shipped on board of the Orestes sloop of war, which vessel sailed this forenoon for Miramichi. Where all have acted so generously it would be wrong to particularize, satisfied as we are that the reflection of having performed a benevolent action must afford the highest gratification to every virtuous mind.

Melancholy as are the descriptions contained in the following letters, we fear more heart-rending accounts are yet to be received. Numbers must have perished of whom no accounts will probably be ever obtained, and many persons who have been mutilated and otherwise personally injured, will continue from time to time to be discovered in remote situations, or will perish through want in distant and retired parts of the country.

[Further particulars.]

A gentleman arrived in town yesterday from Miramichi, which place he left on Thursday; he states generally that the fire continued to rage near the scene of the recent conflagration, and that from the lumbermen who had come in, accounts had been received of the loss of several lives. One instance he mentions where, of a party of 16 persons, but three of them had escaped.

ROYAL COURT, GUERNSEY, Oct. 20.

THE KING V. ZOFFANY.

This was an action instituted against Mrs. Cecilia C. E. Zoffany, wife of the Rev. Mr. Horne, for having concealed Laura E. Horne, her youngest daughter, against the sentence of the Court, which ordered that the said L. E. Horne should be given up on the 1st of September last, to the said Mr. Horne, her father.

On Saturday, the 22d instant, Mrs. Horne was produced at the bar to be tried, but owing to the absence of two of the witnesses, the Crown officers demanded a week's delay.

This day the prisoner re-appeared; the Court was crowded to an excess, in order to hear it is novel and interesting trial.

Mrs. Horne then addressed the Court in the following manner:

"Gentlemen,—It is not as a guilty woman, or as a supplicant for mercy, that I appear at your bar this day. I present myself before you with that tranquillity of soul which ever accompanies those who are void of offence! The officers of the King have charged me with crime, as guilty of contempt towards this honourable Court. This, in fact, is the foundation of the present action against me; but I trust to prove, in a few words, the fallacy of this accusation. In fact, gentlemen, so far from a failure of respect, I protest I feel towards you the greatest deference: for can I be ignorant that, as representatives of our most gracious Sovereign, you are here to hold, with impartial balauce, the scales of justice? But I must be allowed to inquire of this Cour Royale, how they could possibly construe into a disrespect towards themselves, the firm refusal of a mother to submit to a separation from her child? The law of God—the law of nature—forbids it! Are they not to be allowed their irresistible claims? Gentlemen, had the King, my master and your's, demanded at my hands so cruel a sacrifice, I had refused to obey! Without doubt you are too equitable to mistake for contempt of your laws that maternal affection which is written by the hand of nature in ineffaceable characters upon the heart of a fond mother! It commands her to sacrifice all, sooner than suffer her child to be torn from her arms! I trust I have now proved I am guiltless of this supposed crime; and I am satisfied that this Court will feel happy in being spared the painful, as well as novel, situation of finding itself at once the accuser and Judge! I now proceed, Gentlemen, upon the same grounds, that I did not violate my word; and that you cannot, without injustice, punish me for the disappearance of my little girl. Surely, Gentlemen, you cannot forget, when pitying my distress, you did honour to your own kindly feelings by assuring me that I should be free from the surveillance of the police, if I only pledged my honour for the safe delivery of my child, on the day you should appoint. When I look round this crowded Court—when I recall to my mind the false representations which some (to answer their own mercenary purposes) have industriously circulated, I feel it an imperious duty to again repeat the answer I then made you. It was to this effect:—'Gentlemen, I thank you for the confidence you are willing to place in my word of honour. I will instantly prove to you I deserve your good opinion. I will not forfeit my integrity, though by so doing I might secure to myself the child I value more than my life? Ask your own hearts—look back to history, and tell me, did you ever hear or read of a woman, who deserved that name, that would not, for her lover, husband, or (what is far more dear) her child, brave all dangers? Place, therefore, what guard you please, for as I live, were it in my power, I would win my way with her through ten thousand guards!' Such was my honest answer, Gentlemen, in the hour of distress, anguish, and agitation. You know it was. It is not only of you, but of the public, I demand if my oath on this subject can now be doubted? But I do not wish to dwell longer upon this incontrovertible point; I feel the conviction, that what I have offered to your consideration has penetrated all hearts; and I see confusion and shame covering the countenances of my calumniating slanderers! In fact, Gentlemen (merely by way of argument), we will suppose, for an instant, that an all merciful and divine Providence granted to my earnest prayers an ark of safety, in which the child of my tenderest affection was wafted to a land of security, could you, with any semblance of justice, punish me? Did I accept the charge of her? No; you know I did not, Gentlemen. By your orders, both I and my daughter were surrounded night and day by the police! If, therefore, you deem me worthy of punishment for having so well fulfilled my duty as a mother, why do you not reward those who so carelessly performed the character of guardians? I trust that there needs no further argument to prove:—1st, That I never agreed to part with my child; 2dly, That I never offered the slightest disrespect to this of boiling liquor. He succeeded in getting out, and his screams alarmed Mr. W. and some other persons near the spot, by whom he was found in a dreadful state. His clothes were cut off instantly, and Mr. Casson, the Surgeon, was immediately procured, who paid him the utmost attention, remaining with him the whole of the night; but, after languishing in excruciating agony until six this morning, the unfortunate man expired. The deceased was highly respected by his employer, in whose service he had been nearly seven years, and has left a widow and eight children. —Bradford Courier.

Two young ladies, the Misses Fane, were driving in a pony chaise down the hill from Bayswater, parallel with Lord Holland's Park, rather faster than they should have done, when the pony, or rather a galloway, fell, and threw both out over the horse's head, by which one of the ladies had three of her front teeth knocked out, and the other was taken up senseless, with her face much lacerated. The galloway started off at full speed, but inclined to the right at going off, miraculously, without touching the ladies. The vehicle was overturned at the bottom of the hill and smashed in pieces. The ladies were conveyed home to the Manor cottage, north of Bayswater, in a gentleman's carriage.

In our last we mentioned the case of a sailor who had been robbed in a house of ill fame, in the Gallowgate, of 1801. We are happy to learn that the whole of the depredators have been apprehended, and a considerable part of the money found.— Glasgow Chronicle.

YELLOW FEVER.

DEATHS OF CAPTAIN RUSSELL, AND MANY OF THE OFFICERS AND CREW OF H.M.S. SCYLLA.

(From the New York Commercial Advertiser, Oct. 17.)

A distressing account is given of the ravages of the yellow fever on board of his Britannic Majesty's ship of war Scylla, anchored in the harbour of Carthagena. But although the deaths are truly lamentable, they are in amount considerably below the number recovered. The account stands thus :—

"Captain Russell, First Lieutenant Elkins, Surgeons Quin and Brown, Doctor M'Cann, two Midshipmen, (Milner, and another whose name is forgotten), the Captain's Clerk, Barnes, and 15 men, dead.

"Captain Bombard, (of the Life Guards, and Aid de-Camp to General Sir John Kean,) Acting Lieutenant Dixon, the gunner, the boatswain, and upwards of 50 men, convalescent.

Captain Russel was unremitting in his attention to the sick, and would not leave the ship. When the black vomit came on, he rose, and with great firmness wrote a letter to his wife, and died in two hours afterwards. Doctor M'Cann was an Irish gentlemen, recently arrived in the Venezuela from New York, intending to join the Colombian service.

DREADFUL AND AFFECTING OCCURRENCE.—On Tuesday an inquisition was taken at the sign of the Brown Bear, near the Horse Barracks, Knightsbridge, before Thomas Higgs, Esq. Deputy Coroner for Westminster, and a most respectable Jury, on Mrs. Ann Jones, and her child, aged nine months.

Numbers of the most respectable persons were in attendance, and before the arrival of the Coroner, the room was crowded to excess. The Jury being impanelled and sworn, proceeded, accompanied by the Coroner, to view the bodies of the deceased p rsons; they presented a melancholy spectacle; t e mother had evidently been extremely prepossessing in her appearance, an l seemed to be about twenty-seven years of age. The corse of the poor babe was much disfigured and swollen. Previous to the Jury quitting the painful scene, they gave orders that a female properly qualified should be procured to examine the body of the mother, and afterwards to come before them and state if any marks of violence were about her person.

The Jury consulted for a short time, and then brought in a verdict—"That the deceased persons were found drowned, but how or by what means, the Jury, by the evidence, had not arrived at."

MELANCHOLY INSTANCE OF SUDDEN DEATH.—An inquisition was yesterday evening taken before T. Stirling, Esq. the Coroner, and a most highly respectable Jury, on the body of Jasper Wilson, aged about fifty years, who suddenly fell down and expired on Monday night, about ten o'clock, at the house of Mr William Hastings, the Sun, corner of Brownlow-street, Drury-lane. The deceased was a man of very peculiar habits, and so close did he keep his affairs, that his residence was not known. He is supposed to have died worth a considerable sum of money, the produce of his own labour and care.—The Jury having viewed the body, returned to the inquest room, when they unanimously found a verdict, that the deceased died from apoplexy.

THE ARMY.

We lament to state that letters dated the 4th October have been received this morning at the Colonial Office from Fredericton, New Brunswick, which announce the melancholy loss of the right wing of the 96th Regiment of Foot, in going from Halifax to Bermuda. Lieutenant-Colonel Herries had not, fortunately, embarked with the right wing.

The 39th and 79th Regiments of Infantry have completed their augmentation establishment.

INDIAN ARMY.

RESTORATION OF THE KING'S COLOURS TO THE 26th REGIMENT OF NATIVE INFANTRY.

Head-quarters, Calcutta, April 22, 1825.

The Commander-in-Chief having received the official Report of the reduction of the enemy's fortified positions, and capture of the city of Arracan, in all its details, has derived, from the perusal of these documents, the most unqualified satisfaction.

The conduct of the European portion of the force under Brigadier-General Morrison, C.B. has been worthy of the reputation of the British Arms; and his Excellency is particularly gratified to find, that the courage and discipline of the Native troops have been such as to entitle them to a full participation in the sentiments of applause which the late successes in Arracan have so deservedly called forth from the Supreme Government.

Exemplary as has been the conduct of the whole of the Native troops employed on the foregoing occasion, as well as those whose exertions have achieved the entire expulsion of the Burmese from the province of Assam, the services of the 26th Bengal Native Infantry have been particularly noticed by his Excellency.

This regiment had the misfortune to have within its ranks a few misguided individuals, who participated in the disgraceful acts that occurred at Barrackpore on the 1st of November last, during which moment of anarchy and confusion, the King's Colour of the Regiment was forcibly taken from the Regimental Quarter Guard by surprise, and carried over to the mutineers.

Although it was subsequently ascertained that, of the whole Regiment, only about 20 men were concerned in those proceedings, yet the loss of this Sacred Emblem, under such circumstances, could not but be deeply felt by the Regiment at large, and impress upon every individual of it the solemn obligation they owed to the State, and to themselves, to endeavour to wipe off the stain thus fixed on their reputation on the first opportunity that should offer.

This has been amply effected by their services before Arracan, under the immediate eye of their Commandant, Brigadier Richards, whose report of their gallant conduct has been laid before Government, and the Commander-in-Chief; and his Excellency derives the most sincere gratification in announcing to the Army at large, that, with the sanction of the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council, the 26th Regiment of Native Infantry has been deemed deserving of a Colour to replace that which was lost and destroyed on the occasion above adverted to.

By order of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief,
JAS. NICOL, Adj.-Gen. of the Army.

GYMNASTIC EXERCISES.—Professor VOELKA begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public in general that he has opened a Gymnasium at the Riding-school of Mr. De Fontaine, Worship-street, Finshury-square, besides that at his residence, No. 1, Union-place, New-road, near Marylebone Church. Days and hours of attendance at the former, on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the Evenings; at the latter on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the morning; or on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Two to Four o'clock in the Afternoon; and also for young Gentlemen, every Morning, from Nine to Ten o'clock. Ladies are instructed, on a well adapted plan, either by the Professor himself, or by a Lady under his direction.

Further particulars, prospectuses, &c., may be had at either of the Gymnasiums.

CANDLES, 6½d. per lb.; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8d. for cash, or credit on the usual terms, at DAVIES'S old established warehouse, 63, St. Martin's-lane, opposite Slaughter's Coffee-house. Every article of the best, at prices as under:—Candles, 6s. 6d. per dozen; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8s.; fine Wax Candles, 3s. 6d. per lb.; Sperm Candles, 2s. 8d.; Palace Wax Lights, 3s. 2d.—Mottled Soap, 74s. per cwt.; Yellow, 66s.; Curd, 82s.; Windsor, and Palm Soap, 1s. 4d. per lb.; Brown Windsor, 1s. 9d.—Sealing Wax, 4s. 6d.—The finest Sperm Oil, 5s. per gallon.—Orders forwarded to all parts of the world.—Russia Staves, 12s. per hundred.

SILKS at an immense Reduction, for Ready Money only.—15,000 yards of beautiful Satin Cashmeres, 2s. to 2s. 3d. per yard, usually sold from 4s. to 4s. 6d. 2550 Silk Barege Handkerchiefs, 15d. each, really worth 3s. 6d. 30768 yards of rich Gros de Naples, wide width, in every new French color, from 2s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. the quality of which are much superior to what are generally sold from 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per yard; with every description of rich Silks, Satins, Fancy Gauze Dresses, Handkerchiefs, Scarfs, Gold and Silver Turbans, and a general assortment of Haberdashery, Hosiery, and Lace, French and Swiss printed Chintzes, and upwards of 500 Muffs of various descriptions, with Pelerines, Flounces, Cuffs and Collars to match, at exceedingly low Prices.—Also an entirely new article in Silk, for elegant winter Dresses and Pelisses, to be had exclusively at SHEARS and Co.'s, 129, Regent-street, eight doors from the Quadrant.—French Silk Opera Cloaks from 21s. to 3 Guineas.

NINE thousand eight hundred pairs of Blankets, 7,000 pieces of stout Calicoes, and 3,500 pieces of Bath Cloaking for the Poor. Five hundred imitation India Shawls, two yards square, 2s. 11d. each; large sized Blankets, from 6s. to 10s. 6d. per pair; a large quantity of Flannels, Stuffs, Prints, &c.; Bath Cloakings, 2 yards wide, 2s. 5d. a yard; stout ditto, 2s. 6d., ell wide; Long Cloths, 6¾d. a yard, quite free from dress; Marseilles Quilts, three yards long, 15s. 6d., worth 25s.; Counterpanes, white and coloured, in every size, with a large assortment of Town Printed Chintz Furnitures, 1s. per yard; Linings, in every colour, from 6d. to 9d., warranted fast-colour Moreeno, 1s. 6d. and 1s. 8d., the best 1s. 9d. a yard; twelve boxes of the best Irish Linens; damask Table-cloths, two and a half yards long, 6s. 11d. each, three yards, 12s. 6d.; Napkins, 6s. 11d. per dozen; Russia Sheetings, full width, without a seam, 2s. 3d. per yard, very good, 2s. 6d. and 2s. 9d.; some curiously fine, three yards wide, for Noblemen's beds; Huckaback, Diaper, and Russia Towellings, 6d. 8d. and 10d. per yard; Norwich Crapes, Bombazeens, Poplins, and Gros de Naples, in every new and fashionable shade of colour, for the ensuing season; together with a complete stock of every other useful article in Linendrapery. Silkmercery, Hosiery, &c.—Country orders executed with dispatch. All letters must be post paid—CRAIG and D'OYLY'S Family Linen Warehouse, 77, Oxford-street.

N. B. Not in any way connected with any other House in London; their Manufactories are carried on, as usual, in Leeds, Manchester, and Glasgow.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture, of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1s. 4d.
Best Grey Goose	1s. 6d. and 1s. 9d. per lb.
Excellent White Goose	2s. and 2s. 6d.
Real White Dantzie	3s.
Hudson Bay, Mecklenberg, &c.	3s. 3d. and 3s. 6d.

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.

Feather Beds, from	2	5	0	to	3	3	0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3	10	0	to	5	10	0
Best White Dantzie Beds	4	10	0	to	6	10	0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only					8	10	0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0	15	0	to	1	4	0

MATTRESSES.

Mattresses	0	10	0	to	1	8	0
Real Horse Hair, Wool Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliasse	0	14	0	to	1	4	0

BEDSTEADS—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap, and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts—Brussels, Kiddermin ter, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions.—Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re-made and cured of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's-buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

☞ Please to observe the name of SLATER.

PATRONIZED by His MAJESTY, and the ROYAL FAMILY; their Imperial Majesties, the EMPEROR and EMPRESS of RUSSIA; the EMPERORS of PERSIA and CHINA; Their Serene Highnesses the DUKE and PRINCE of BRUNSWICK, and most of the Nobility and Gentry.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

the ORIGINAL and GENUINE, which has for many years been universally admired; also acknowledged pre-eminent, for nourishing the Hair, preventing it from being injured by illness, change of climate, study, travelling, accouchment, &c.; removes scurf, harshness, and dryness; renders it soft and glossy; prevents its falling off or turning grey; creates a thick growth on the baldest places; produces a beautiful effect on natural or artificial hair, rendering it

ADMIRABLY SOFT AND ELEGANTLY FLOWING,

producing BEAUTIFUL CURLS, adding a most incomparable, transcendant, and beautiful lustre, rendering the head-dress truly enchanting. Ask for "ROWLAND'S" MACASSAR OIL, at 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s, 6d. and 21s. per bottle. Also

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR,

which resists the attacks of inclement weather, and immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin produced by cold winds; prevents the skin from chapping, and renders harsh and rough Skin soft; and even removes Freckles, Pimples, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, &c. To prevent fraud, ask for "RowLAND's," and observe the new label (engraved by Parkins and Heath) on the Oil; strictly observing the label of each article has the signature and address in red—"A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-Garden."

Sold by them and by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine-venders in town and country.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE.

THE Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is,—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear, smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for MRS. VINCENT'S GOWLAND'S LOTION, and see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor:—

"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating, that, by the use of the quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing Virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."

Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Borough Church; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers, and Dealers in Genuine Medicines, in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.

 To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the Genuine.

FOREIGN WINES.

CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant, next to the KING'S, and opposite to the HAYMARKET THEATRE, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, has made a still greater and the greatest possible reduction in price of the following Wines, which he warrants genuine as imported.

FINE OLD PORTS, Vintages 1819, 1820, and 1821, high-flavoured, fruity, full-bodied Wine, 60 Guineas per Pipe.

SHERRY, pale and brown, shipped by the first houses in Spain, same price per Butt, permitted from the London Docks to the purchaser direct.

FINE OLD PORT, excellent SHERRY, and good and superior dinner MADEIRA, all at 21s 6d per dozen, by way of sample. Fourteen dozen of any of the above Wine, full-sized bottles, package, &c. well packed in a good Port Pipe, all included for a remittance of 20l. or half the quantity in a Sherry Hogshead, at 10l.

CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.

OLD COGNIAC BRANDY (Otard and Martell), 23s 6d per gallon. Fine Old PINE-APPLE RUM, 15s 6d per gallon.

C. W. begs to announce that he has just returned from CHAMPAGNE, where he selected a large quantity of the very best Wines from the Vintage of AI, AVIZE, and PIERY, so long celebrated for their richness, body, and flavour. This importation is confidently warranted as of the finest quality; Mousseaux non Mousseaux, rouge et blanc, 63s to 72s per dozen; Claret, Sauterne, Vin de Grave Chabli, and all that character of French Wines, 36s per dozen; the most imported, 63s to 72s per dozen. Lisbon, Mountain, Madeira (W. I.), Teneriffe, 27s per dozen. Fine old crusted Port, 30s per dozen.

All other Wines, Spirits, &c. in proportion. Remittances must be sent with orders, and postage paid (or not attended to), and if the greatest satisfaction is not given, the whole of the money will be returned.

P.S. Portugal Grapes, now hanging in Jars, in the finest condition, at 25s. per Jar, and retail at C. Wright's Depot, Regent-street, at 10d per lb.

BREWING UTENSILS & SEASONED CASKS, in great variety, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s. 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 15s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes. Bathing and Turtle Pulp Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, and Utensils Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. could advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgiss," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a Physician and Botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles, at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles, one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet-market.

STIRLING'S STOMACH PILLS, prepared from the most choice stomachic and aperient Drugs of the Materia Medica, are proved to be unparalleled in the cure of Bilious Complaints, and all Disorders of the Stomach and Bowels, Indigestion, Flatulency, Sick Head-ache, Heart-burn, habitual Costiveness, and other complaints incident to the alimentary canal; they are also singularly efficacious in the cure of Palsy, Gout, Worms, and the Jaundice, and a powerful restorative of the system after too free an indulgence at the table, as they strengthen the digestive organs, induce a healthy action of the Liver, and promote a free and regular circulation. Females at a certain period of life should never be without them. Prepared without Mercury, or any ingredient which may endanger health by cold, requiring neither confinement or restriction of diet, nor can their virtues be the least impaired by time or change of climate.

Prepared by the Proprietor, J. STIRLING, Chemist, &c., No. 86, High-street, Whitechapel; and may be had of E. Stirling, 20, Ironmonger-lane, Cheapside, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each. Those only are genuine which are signed "J. Stirling" on the stamp label, with his own writing.

LOCKHART's never-failing Remedy for the TOOTH-ACHE.—Mr. LOCKHART respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and Public at large, that from the repeated solicitations of those who have found instantaneous relief from the torment of the Tooth-Ache, by his truly fortunate discovery in a never-failing and certain Cure for one of the most grievous maladies to which human nature is subjected, he is now fully determined to give it that publicity to which it is so justly entitled. However excruciating the pain, and where extraction might be dreaded, or attended with difficulty or danger, the application of this remedy not only destroys the nerve entirely, without the slightest injury to the adjoining teeth, or hurt to the gums, but from its peculiar astringency, renders the hitherto diseased tooth perfectly firm in the socket, insensible to pain, and prevented from all further decay.

Sold in Bottles, 4s. 6d. each, duty included, by J. C. HOSE (late KNAPP and ARO,) 309, High Holborn, who is appointed wholesale agent; SANGER, 150, Oxford-street; NIX, Royal Exchange; and all respectable Druggists and Patent Medicine Venders in town and country.

None is Genuine unless signed L. Lockhart, on the Government Stamp.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERFUMER, and PERFUMER, No. 191, Fleet-street (Two doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished: in fact they are Hostes humani Caritis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain preeminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Oriental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perruques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY, opposite the Mansion House (Manufactory, 54, Crutched Friars), respectfully return their best thanks to the public for the liberal support they have experienced, and beg to assure them that they will unremittingly endeavour to merit the future favours, by CONTINUING TO SELL SUPERIOR MANUFACTURED ARTICLES, for which they, since the commencement of the Establishment, have given such distinguished and decided proofs. They also solicit those who are building, furnishing, or modernizing their houses, to inspect their large and diversified assortment of fashionable Stoves, Fenders, and Fire-irons, both elegant and plain, under the most chaste designs, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage: likewise a variety of Kitchen Ranges, with or without Ovens, Boilers, and Steaming Apparatus, either on a small or extensive scale, and on highly approved and scientific principles, embracing economy with real utility; smoke, steam, winding, and vertical Roasting Jacks, in great variety.

The LONDON STOVE GRATE COMPANY beg leave to apprise the Nobility, Ladies, and Gentlemen, that they can have stoves, ranges, &c. made in conformity with their own designs, and at a very short notice; palisading, staircase, and balcony railing, halconies, virandas, &c. executed in the reigning taste. Bells and alarums hung on unerring principles, with the utmost precision and neatness; iron chests and hookcases, cooking utensils, in copper, iron, and tin, and smith's work in all its departments. Ladies and gentlemen desirous of ascertaining the expense of fitting up their houses in any of the above branches, may be waited on in town or country, and furnished with an estimate; baths, hot-houses, green-houses, conservatories, churches, dwellings, manufactories, and warehouses, heated by steam or water, on a system of demonstrative advantage.—Patent, portable, warm, cold, and vapour baths, of the most simple construction, particularly recommended for hospitals, schools, bathing houses, as well as private families, the price from 5 guineas to 20, and upwards; the patent smoke dispersers, and various improvements for effectually curing smoky chimnies, are to be had at the above manufactory.—Prompt payment and reasonable stoves and Ranges set in town or country, by experienced workmen, on the most reasonable terms.—Please to observe—The London Stove Grate Company have no other Warehouse than the above-mentioned.—Old Ranges and Stoves taken in exchange.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. 85¾	Bank Stock 222½
Cons. Three per Cents. 86⅝	Long Annuities, 20⅜
Three and a half per Cents.	India Stock,
3½ per Cents. Reduced 93⅝	India Bonds,
Four per Cents. 103½	Exch. Bills (1½d.) 1 pm. par
Consols for Acc. 86⅞ ⅝ ½

The following is an extract from the Paris papers of Friday:—

"NAPLES, Oct. 25.

"The official Gazette contains the following note:—

"In replying to an article in the Moniteur of Feb. 1, we remarked, that the amicable relations established between our Government and the Barbary Regencies, were never interrupted, and that the treaties concluded in 1816, with Algiers, Tunis, and Tripoli, were faithfully observed.

"Notwithstanding this, another French Journal has just stated, that the squadron of his Majesty was on the point of uniting itself with that of the King of Sardinia, to act against Tripoli, in consequence of new differences between the Bey and our Court. We can only answer this Journal as we answered the Moniteur at the time to which we refer.

MOSAIC GOLD.—We have already mentioned this important discovery. We understand it has received the patronage of his Majesty. We have seen a specimen of the metal, and consider it, in a national point of view, invaluable, from its universal applicability.

Hamburgh Papers to the 5th inst. arrived yesterday. The following are the only paragraphs worth translating:—

"STOCKHOLM, Oct. 25.

"This evening, at seven o'clock, their Majesties returned from their journey to Norway. The Crown Prince and Princess went to Westeras to meet them. The King immediately received the Members of the Council of State, and the first Civil and Military Authorities of the Capital, and dissolved the Regency, appointed during his absence.

"The English brig Nautilus, from Danjzic to Leith, was stranded, on the 24th October, off Wachmin; the crew were saved with great difficulty by the inhabitants of the coast."

EXCHANGES.

Amsterdam, Oct. 8.—London, 39 11; Two months, 39 8.——Hamburgh, Nov. 4.—On London, 35 11; Two Us. 35 8.——Petersburg, Oct. 21.—On London, 10 17-32.——Berlin, Nov. 1.—On London, three months, 6 24½.——Vienna, Oct. 26.—On London, three months, 9 44.

A JUBILEE DINNER.—A few days since, Mr. Birch, coachmaker, of Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn, gave a dinner in commemoration of one of his workmen having completed fifty years in the establishment of himself and his predecessors. On this occasion he followed "the fashion of the days gone by," of inviting his neighbours, and all those in his employ, to partake of the festivity. Several professional gentlemen attended, and the evening went off with great hilarity. We notice the occasion more particularly, from a few incidents mentioned by Mr. B., who presided. He stated, that the first post-chaise built in England was in his house: that at that period, and it is within a century, the vehicle had but two wheels, and opened in the front, such as we now witness in the bathing machines at Margate, and other watering places at the sea side. He further stated, that even in the reign of George II., there were but few of this description of carriage in the country; that the funeral hearse of the same Monarch was built in his present residence, and that the Coronation Coach of George III. was launched from his establishment. In the great loft where the dinner was served, prints and drawings of the different vehicles furnished for the Royal Dynasty were exhibited, and that which excited a feeling of deep interest was the hand writing of the late lamented Princess Charlotte, approving the model of the carriage which was afterwards built for herself and Prince Leopold.

BOW-STREET.—(POST-OFFICE ROBBERY.)—James Whalley, who underwent an examination on Tuesday last, was again brought up on Friday. He stood charged with having received a 20l. note from his brother, W. Whalley, who was a letter carrier in the Post-Office, and who was, subsequent to the time the note in question ought to have been delivered in a letter sent to Mr. Howell, of Vincent-square, convicted and sentenced to transportation, knowing it to be stolen. The prisoner disappeared from his lodgings, in February last, and was not taken until the 2d instant. The prisoner in his defence denied any guilty knowledge in the transaction, and said that he received the 20l. note from his brother in payment of sundry sums which the latter had borrowed from him to make up his payments at the Post-office. He was merely called Jones by his master at Barnet in consequence of his having been hired from the service of a Mr. Jones in Ratcliffe-highway.—The prisoner was fully committed to Newgate for trial.

MR. ANDREW CLARKE, of Lower Grosvenor-street, dentist, has published Practical Directions for Preserving the Teeth, and an improved method for supplying their loss, &c. &c.—He lays claim to no profound skill in general anatomy; but the accounts which he, in the first part of his work, gives of the component parts of the organs of mastication, the diseases to which those organs are exposed, the means by which those diseases may be prevented before they take place, and cured or mitigated afterwards, show a very extensive knowledge of all that part of the subject which is necessary for his purpose. The directions given for mitigating the pain with which infants cut their teeth, and for the general preservation of the teeth of adults, both as to beauty and durability, are plain and sensible; and when, in the second part of the book, he comes to treat of the proper substance of which to make artificial teeth, and the best mode of making them, his remarks cannot fail of being useful both to the public and to professional men. Upon this part of the subject he complains, and complains justly, that the published matter is deficient, both in quantity and in quality; and there is no doubt, that if those who are eminent in the profession were to make their mode of operating a little better known, the greatest benefits would result from it. Though the profession of the dentist be solely an art, it is difficult to prevent people from attaching to it some portion of that mystery in which they clothe the medical profession, and the consequence is, that the door is set wide for quacks and impostors. Upon these Mr. Clark has no mercy; but, as he points them out by their deeds, and not by their names, the public have all the advantage, and they have no ground of complaint. From the notice of the artificial palate, we should conclude that it is a very complete and superior invention, and cannot fail to benefit those for whom it is intended. We have been thus induced to speak of Mr. Clark's book in general terms, because the subject is not one that admits either of analysis or quotation. We think the book a useful one, and, as such, we recommend it to our readers.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

WAR-OFFICE, NOV. 11, 1825.

2d Regt. Life Guards—Capt. C. Barton to be Major, by purchase, vice Vyse, promoted; Lieut. J. M'Douall to be Captain, by purchase, v Barton; Cornet and Sub Lieut. Sir W. Scott, Bart., to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v M'Douall; H. L. Bulwer, Gent., to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, by purchase, v Scott 7th Regt. Dragoon Guards, Lieut. T. Hunter, from the h p, to be Paymaster, v G. Lawrence, who returns to his former h p of Ensign—2d Regt. Dragoons, Major J. Grey to be Lieut. Colonel, by purchase, v Hankin, who retires; Brevet Lieut.-Col. Lord A. W. M. Hill to be Major, by purchase, v Grey; Lieut. R. T. Fawcett to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet W. Hull to be Lieutenant, v Fawcett—9th Regt. Light Dragoons, F. Willis, Gent., to be Cornet, by purchase, v Rumley, promoted—16th Ditto, Lieut. C. R. Cureton to be Captain, by purchase, v Ellis, promoted—17th Ditto, Capt. F. G. D'Arcey Marquis of Carmarthen, from the h p, to be Captain, v W. Locke, who exchanges, receiving the difference—1st Regt. Foot, Ensign and Adjt. J. Richardson to have the rank of Lieutenant—4th Ditto, Ensign E. H. Clarke, from the 98th Foot, to be Ensign v Clarke, who exchanges—6th Ditto, Ensign W. Eyre, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Stuart, promoted; W. Curteis, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Eyre—8th Ditto, J. Howard, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Deshon, promoted in the 33d Foot—19th Ditto, Capt. D. Dobbin to be Major, v. Lemm, dec.; Lieut. T. Hamilton to be Captain, v Dobbin; Ensign J. Robinson to be Lieutenant, v Hamilton—21st Ditto, Lieut. W. Boyle, from h p 27th Foot, to be Paymaster, v R. Creser, who retires upon h p—24th Ditto, A. G. Blachford, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Sturgeon, promoted—25th Ditto, —Major C. Chambers, from h p, to be Major, v V. W. Hompesch, who exchanges 33d Ditto, Lieut. G. Whannel to be Captain, v Sutherland, dec.—41st Ditto, E. W. Childers to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Gossip, promoted; Ensign C. W. P. Magra, from the 77th Foot, to be Ensign, v Childers—51st Ditto, Ensign W. Gordon, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Matthews, promoted; C. A. Arney, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Gordon—52d Ditto, Lieut. G. J. Smart, from the 25th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v Love, promoted—60th Ditto, Brevet Lieut.-Col. J. Galiffe, to be Lieutenant-Colonel, without purchase; Brevet Major L. L. Thurn to be Major, v Galiffe—Lieut. R. B. Heslop to be Captain, vice L. Thurm—74th Ditto, Lieut. J. Crips, from h p 18th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v R. Davies, who exchanges—77th Ditto, C. F. B. Jones, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Magra, appointed to the 41st Foot—84th Ditto, C. Adair, Gent., to be be Ensign, by purchase, v Forbes, promoted in the 17th Foot—87th Ditto, Ensign N. M. Doyle to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Ship, who retires—98th Ditto, Ensign J. Clarke, from the 4th Foot, to be Ensign, vice Clarke, who exchanges—1st West India Regiment, Lieut. S. Kent, from h p 60th Foot, to be Paymaster, v J. Mackay, who retires upon h p—Ceylon Regt., Lieut. D. Keogh, from h p 44th Foot, to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—To be Hospital Assistants to the Forces: W. Lucas, Gent. v. Wilson, appointed to the 96th Foot; A. Callander, Gent. v. Home, appointed to the 85th Foot; D. Dumbreck, Gent. v. Kemlo, appointed to the 59th Foot; M. Baillie, M.D. v. Ellson, appointed to the 50th Foot; T. Williams, M.D. v. Munro, appointed to the 7th Foot.

UNATTACHED.—Capt. A. F. Ellis, from the 16th Light Dragoons, to be Major of Infantry, by purchase.—To be Captains of Infantry, by purchase, Lieut. T. I. W. Freeman, from the 37th Foot; Lieut. W. Gossip, from the 41st Foot; Lieut. J. Steuart, from the 30th Foot; Lieut. G. Hogarth, from the 42d Foot; Lieut. G. Chichester, from the 59th Foot.—To be Lieutenant of Infantry, by purchase, Ensign C. Sturgeon, from the 24th Foot.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

T. ELVEY and J. ELVEY, Castle-street, Holborn, stationer.
T. MILLIGAN, Hanway-street, Oxford-street, haberdasher.
H. STRATTON, Chapel-place, Stratford, wine-merchant.

BANKRUPTS.

J. WEST and R. DOREN, Golden-square, tailors, Sols. Messrs. Robinson and Hine, Charter-house-square.

W. BLIZARD, Petersham, butcher. Sols. Messrs. Hume and Smith, Great James-street.

T. MUNDAY, Great Marlhorough-street, cheesemonger. Sol. Mr. J. Bugby, Clerkenwell-close.

S. FILNEY, Harlesdon-green, Harrow-road, bricklayer. Sol. Mr. J. Robinson, Half-Moon-street, Piccadilly.

T. WALSH, Preston, Lancashire, grocer. Sol. Mr. Norris, John-street, Bedford-row.

J. EARLE, Liverpool, corn dealer. Sol. Mr. E. Chester, Staple-inn.

S. ORTON, Atherstone, Warwickshire, woolstapler. Sols. Messrs. Heming and Baxter, Gray's-inn-place.

E. BOLTON and W. SPARROW, Margaret-street, Cavendish-square, upholsterers. Sol. Mr. T. Parker, 3, Dyer's-buildings, Holborn.

T. GOODYEAR, Aldersgate-street, straw-hat-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Birkett, Tayler, and Cox, Cloak-lane.

G. T. WATT, Old-street, St. Luke's, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. W. James, Walbrook.

E. JUPP, Camden-town, builder. Sols. Messrs. Saunders and Bailey, 11, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square.

A. V. FULLJAMES, Judd-street, Brunswick-square, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. Farris, 27, Surrey-street, Strand.

W. WILLIAMS and W. SCOTT, Broad-court, Long-acre, wine and spirit merchants. Sols. Messrs. Jay and Byles, 5, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn.

J. EDWARDS, Thames-bank, near Vauxhall-bridge, iron-founder. Sol. Mr. Chuter, 14, Water-lane, Blackfriars.

W. GILES, Heston, Middlesex, dealer. Sol. Mr. J. Reilly, Clement's-inn.

W. MILLER, Fresh-wharf, Lower Thames-street, warehouseman and agent. Sols. Messrs. J. and S. Pearce, St. Swithin's-lane.

C. BUCHANAN, Woolwich, shoe-maker. Sol. Mr. G. Score, Token-house-yard.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieutenant of the County and County and City of Gloucester, and of the County and City of Bristol.

Royal South Gloucester Militia—Humphrey Austin, jun., to be Captain, vice Lucas, resigned.

Royal North Gloucester Militia—Thomas Cox, Gent., to be Ensign.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

J. N. Tounier, Haymarket, restaurateur.
B. Eatty, Beaufort-row, Chelsea, bricklayer.
J. Pearce, Church-passage, Guildhall, warehouseman.
L. B. Sapio, Alpha Cottages, Regent's Park, music seller.

BANKRUPTS.

J. Lewis, Langibby, Monmouthshire, dealer. Sols. Messrs. Clarke, Richards and Medcalfe, Chancery-lane.

J. Jennings, Liverpool, soap-boiler. Sol. Mr. Wheeler, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

H. Fell, Grocer's Hall-court, Poultry, general merchant. Sol. Mr. Brough, Shoreditch.

J. Pollard, Penton-row, Walworth-road, umbrella-maker. Sols. Messrs. Winter and Williams, Bedford-row.

W. Elgar, Castle-street, Holborn, coal-merchant. Sol. Mr. Wood, Richmond-buildings.

A. Wilkie, Duke-street, Portland-place, Marylebone, upholsterer. Sol. Mr. Ward, Charles-street, Covent-garden.

G. Parminter, Earl-street, Blackfriars, coal-merchant. Sols. Messrs. Rhodes and Burch, New Inn,

W. Carrington, Fore-street, cheesemonger. Sol. Mr. Pearson, Union-court, Broad-street.

S. Norris, Cobham-row, Coldbath-fields, common-brewer. Sol. Mr. Price St. John's-square, Clerkenwell.

J. Honeybourn, Portsea, builder. Sol. Messrs. Naylor, Great Newport-street, Long-Acre.

J. Bannister, Worcester, innkeeper, Sols. Messrs. Williams and White, Lincoln's Inn.

T Green, Ledbury, Herefordshire, corn-dealer. Sol. Mr. Beverley, Garden-court, Temple,

DIVIDENDS.

Nov. 29, J. Clark, Montreal, North America, merchant.—Nov. 29. P. Elen, Woburn, Bedfordshire, draper.—Nov. 12, W. H. Stevens, Hedge-row, Islington, earthenware-dealer.—Nov. 19, G. Gardiner, St. John-street, Middlesex, ironmongers.—Nov. 29, J. Crosbie and J. Crosbie, Durand's-wharf, Rotherhithe, mast-makers.—Nov. 29, J. Goldscheider, Little St. Thomas Apostle, merchant.—Nov. 12, H. Searle, Strand, boot-maker.—Dec. 10, W. Honeyset, Dalston, Saint John's, Hackney, builder.—Dec. 3, M. Waistell, Conduit-street, Bond-street, milliner.—Nov. 10, P. Houghton and S. P. Houghton, Skinner-street, Snow-hill, leather-sellers.—Nov. 30, J. E. Dixon, Liverpool, merchant, —Dec. 7, J. Prothero, Bedwellty, Monmouthshire, shopkeeper.—Nov. 29, T. Ketland and J. Adams, Birmingham, gun-makers.—Nov. 29, T. Fairclough, Liverpool, slater.—Nov. 30, W Compton, Birmingham, linen-draper.—Dec. 6, J. Byrne, Liverpool, merchant.—Dec. 1, G. Hodgson, Liverpool, grocer.—Nov. 29, J Millward, Redditch, Worcestershire, needle-maker.

CERTIFICATES.—Nov. 29.

J. Jarman, Bath, haberdasher.—D. Lloyd, Bankside, Southwark, timber-merchant. T. B. Manning, Portsea, music-seller.—T. Butcher, Holborn, victualler.—J. Thackeray, Garratt, Manchester, cotton-spinner.—S. Lamb, Cheapside, hatter.—T. Bowden, Museum-street, Bloomsbury, stationer.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. Campbell and M. Campbell, Nottingham, lace-manufacturers.—W. J. Glover and J. Gardner, Milk-street, Cheapside, embossers.—R. Bowen and W. Green, Water-lane Tower-street, wine-merchants.—H. Cooper and M. Beeve, Beccles, Suffolk, milliners.—J. Creswell and Co., Exeter.—J. Jones and J. D. Saxey, North Audley-street, victuallers.—J. Milner and W. Agar, Leeds, sawyers.—R. Swarbrick and T. Jackson, Ince, Lancashire, coal-merchants.—J. Andrew and R. Broad, Manchester, provision-dealers.—J. Archer and E. Bedall, Colchester-street, Whitechapel, smiths.—C. Lewis and T. Davies, Cardigan, dealers in Foreign and British spirits.—E. Fletcher and M. Gilbert, Erith, Kent, farmers.—J. Travis and Co. Castle Mill, Lancashire, cotton-spinners.—H. G. Beard, sen. and H. G. Beard, jun. Lincoln, merchants.—G. Cunningham and N. Johnson, Liverpool, seedsmen.—T. Blinman and T. Gadd, Bristol, braziers.—J. Munsden and . Murgatroyd, Sowerby Bridge, Yorkshire malsters.—T. B. Dickinson and J. T. Fisher, Leeds, cloth-manufacturers.—G. Bradshaw and J. Duncalf. Macclesfield, hat-manufacturers.—C. Queen and Co. Liverpool, wine-merchants CANDLES.—Spring-made Stores, 6½d.; highly-scented moulds, waxed wicks, 8d.; finest wax lights, 3s. 2d.; palace ditto, all sizes, 2s. 9d.; fine sperm and composition, 2s. 4d. per lb. Store mottled soap, 72s.; ditto, yellow, 4s. per cwt. of 112lbs.; plain Windsor, 10d. per lb.; scented ditto and palm bars, 12d.; brown Windsor, 16d. Purified sperm oil, 4s. 6d. per gallon; second ditto, 3s. 6d. The above are of the first quality, as no second price article is made or sold at ROBERTS'S Manufactory, 38, Chandos-street, three doors from St. Martin's-lane. Cash only. Letters to be paid. Packed with care for the country; delivered in town.—An excellent [illegible], price 1s.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, a complete Series of Specimens, illustrative of the improved System lately introduced by the Author of "Practical Directions for preserving the Teeth," &c., may be viewed daily at Mr. J. P. Clark's, 5, King-street, Holborn; where every operation connected with the teeth is performed in the best style of the art, on very moderate terms. Decayed teeth successfully treated, without pain or extracting.—N.B. Circassian Tooth Powder.

The attention of families, and all who value a good set of teeth, is respectfully called to the above far-famed article, as well for its intrinsic excellence, as the directions respecting the teeth which accompany each box.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St. Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Chablis	63s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 14s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT's, Tailor and Draper,

47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

CHEAP SPERMACETI OIL of the Best Quality, at Ten per Cent. under the usual Charge.—J. SMETHURST, No. 138, New Bond-street, the Original Oil and Patent Lamp Warehouse, begs leave to inform the Nobility, Gentry, the Public, Club and Coffee Houses, Hotel and Tavern Keepers (J. S. being an Importer), he SELLS the BEST REFINED SPERMACETI OIL, equal in colour and burning to any in London, at the lowest price, for Ready Money. One single trial will convince the purchaser of the truth of his assertion. The Oil will be found far superior in quality to what is called Spermaceti by Oil-venders. May be had in any quantity; bottle and cask to be paid for if required for the country.—Patent Lamps for every purpose to be purchased at his Show-rooms as above.—N.B. Cottons and Glasses of every description. Lamps repaired.—At 138, New Bond-street, nine doors from Grosvenor-street.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—HOLYHEAD, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle, and Congleton—BRISTOL, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Collumpton—EXETER, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield—BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH, through Chorley, Preston, and Garstang—CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—MILFORD HAVEN, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES—MANCHESTER (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—HOLYHEAD (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four, o'clock—SOUTHAMPTON coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—LIVERPOOL (the Royal Champion) in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—WINDSOR and ETON coaches daily—MANCHESTER (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—EXETER (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—EDINBURGH and GLASGOW (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—BRISTOL (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four—BIRMINGHAM (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—COVENTRY light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—NOTTINGHAM post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—CHESTER and PARK-GATE new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—WORCESTER coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA post coach, every evening at half-past five—TAMWORTH, ATHERSTONE and HINCHLEY coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—DERBY post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—DOVER coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—PARIS new Night Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—TAUNTON, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—CHELTENHAM and GLOUCESTER light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—NORWICH new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—CAMBRIDGE Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—CANTERBURY fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—BRIGHTON coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—MILFORD HAVEN new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, or for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

The lady of Robert Wilmot Horton, Esq. M.P. of a son.
At Bath, the lady of the Rev. J. R. Hopper, of a daughter.
In Jersey, the lady of Commissary-General Pipon, of a daughter.
At Port Louis, Mauritius, the lady of E. Blackburn, Esq., Chief Judge of that Island, of a daughter.
Mrs. Thomas Martyr, of a daughter.
Mrs. John Edridge, of a daughter.
Mrs. Brailsford Bright, of a son.
The Lady of Thomas Perry, Esq. of a daughter.
The Lady of Sir Arthur Chichester, of a son.

MARRIED.

Sir William Heathcote, Bart. of Hursley Park, in the County of Southampton, to the Hon. C. F. Perceval, daughter of Lord Arden.

Sir John Thomas Claridge, Recorder of Prince of Wales's Island, to Miss M. P. Scott, eldest daughter of Vice Admiral Scott.

Richard James Lane, Esq. to Sophia, fifth daughter of Edward Hodges, Esq. of Clapham Common.

George William Wilgress, Esq. to Frances Barbara, eldest daughter of the late Colonel Farquhar.

Sir John Thomas Claridge, Recorder of Prince of Wales's Island, to Miss M. P. Scott, eldest daughter of Vice-Admiral Scott.

DIED.

George Phillip, second son of the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Petre, aged 16 months.

On Monday evening, in Lancaster-place, Mrs. Byrne, wife of Mr. N. Byrne, of the Morning Post.

Mrs. Justina Dunbar, widow of the deceased George Gun Munro, Esq. of Pointzfield.

Charles Waistell, Esq. of Camden Town.
Mary, wife of Henry Bromfield, Esq.
At New York, Selina, wife of the Chevalier de Figaniere e Morao, Consul-General.
Ferdinand de Medina, Esq. of the Stock Exchange.
Isaac Aguillar, Esq. late of Devonshire-square.
At Lisbon, D. N. Ribeiro, Esq. late of Abchurch-lane and Woburn-place.
Brooke Rynd, Esq. late of the Island of St. Vincent.
Robert William, the infant child of W. Wilberforce, jun. Esq.
Edward Francis Colston, Esq.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 28. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW Evening, Shakspeare's ROMEO and JULIET; Juliet, by a young Lady (her third appearance on any Stage).—To conclude with (11th time at this Theatre) the Grand Historic Pantomime-Drama, in 2 Parts, called DE LA PEROUSE, or, the Desolate Island.

On Tuesday, (79th time) Weber's Romantic Opera of Der Freischutz, with, 1st time at this Theatre, (in one Act) The Sleep-Walker, and De La Perouse.

On Wednesday, will be produced, a Comic Opera, in three Acts, taken from Dumaniant's Comedy of " Guerre Ouverte ; on, Ruse Contre Ruse" and " The Midnight Hour," called THE WAGER, or the Midnight Hour.

On Thursday, an Opera.

On Friday, (32nd time) Faustus, and De La Perouse.

On Saturday, an Opera.

The Comedy of The Rivals will be repeated in the course of next week.

Weber's Opera of Der Freischutz, will be performed every Tuesday; and the Romantic Drama of Faustus, every Friday till further notice.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

In consequence of the Nightly Overflows from the success of the PILOT, no Orders are admitted.

MONDAY, November 22, and during the week, will be produced, for the nineteenth time, THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. Founded on the popular Novel of that title. After which the favourite Burletta, in one Act, called The MARRIED BACHELOR. To conclude with CURIOSITY CURED!

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal, 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Mr. Campbell.

Is entered Outwards.

FOR VAN DIEMEN's LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine new, fast-sailing Snow, FAIRFIELD, A. 1. coppered, burden 330 tons. JAMES WORK, Commander. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent Accommodations for Pas engers. For freight or passage apply to BUCKLES, BAGSTER and BUCHANAN, 33, Mark-lane.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

TURKEY COFFEE, of Fine Quality, at the following Reduced Prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.; Roasted, 3s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having REDUCED the DUTY on TURKEY COFFEE, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of fine quality, at Messrs. MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

MR. WARDE, OF THE THEATRE ROYAL, COVENT-GARDEN.—In the course of next week will be published, by W. Kenneth, at his Dramatic Repository, No. 22, Great Russell-street, Covent garden, an EXCELLENT LIKENESS of this Gentleman, engraved by Woolnoth, from an original Drawing by C. Thurston, British Museum.—W. Kenneth respectfully informs his Friends and the Public the Subscription List is now open for Proof Impressions, and is rapidly filling.

THE FRENCH LANGUAGE TAUGHT IN THREE MONTHS.—Professor F——, removed from Chancery-lane to 56, High Holborn, continues to give Lessons at home and abroad, with incomparable success. His system is a fashionable conversation, so dexterously united with theory, and so agreeable, that pupils are warranted to understand it before one month's instruction, and without the trouble of learning by heart.—Furnished apartments, with or without board.—Apply at 56, High Holborn, opposite Great Turnstile.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, his peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every Operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 14s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT's, Tailor and Draper,
47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—TO BE LET, To-morrow, and every other Evening, during the Season,
TWO PRIVATE SPLENDID STAGE-BOXES.

Eight persons to each Box, 2l. 2s. (the most economical and commodious in the Theatre). Covent Garden Box, for Six persons, 2l. 12s. 6d.—Several Personal Admissions for the present Season, admitting to all Benefits, Oratorios, &c. 5l. 5s. Boxes, Tickets, &c. for all the Theatres, bought and sold by CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, who has just returned from the Vineyards of Ay, Avize, and Piery, with a parcel of the finest Champagne, 63s. and 72s. per Dozen.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, a complete Series of Specimens, illustrative of the improved System lately introduced by the Author of " Practical Directions for preserving the Teeth," &c., may be viewed daily at Mr. J. P. Clark's, 5, King-street, Holborn; where every operation connected with the teeth is performed in the best style of the art, on very moderate terms. Decayed teeth successfully treated, without pain or extracting.—N.B. Circassian Tooth Powder.

The attention of families, and all who value a good set of teeth, is respectfully called to the above far-famed article, as well for its intrinsic excellence, as the directions respecting the teeth which accompany each box.

GYMNASTIC EXERCISES.—Professor VOELKA begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public in general, that he has opened a Gymnasium at the Riding-school of Mr. De Fontaine, Worship-street, Finsbury-square, besides that at his residence, No. 1, Union-place, New-road, near Marylebone Church. Days and hours of attendance at the former, on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the Evenings; at the latter on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the morning; or on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Two to Four o'clock in the Afternoon; and also for young Gentlemen, every Morning, from Nine to Ten o'clock. Ladies are instructed, on a well adapted plan, either by the Professor himself, or by a Lady under his direction.

Further particulars, prospectuses, &c., may be had at either of the Gymnasiums.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.---JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:---Some are in appearance at first sight " Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, " Burgis's," and many more without address.--JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly so ieit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

NEW VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.
Published by J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent Street.
PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

" Useful Extracts," consisting of Scales and Exercises, intended as an Introduction to the celebrated Studies of Clementi, Cramer, &c. Arranged and Fingered by J. B. Cramer, 5s. Twenty-five Characteristic Diversions, by ditto, 14s. Impromptu on Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto. 2s. 6d. Melange on Airs from Crociato, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Capriccio on the favourite Round in Tarrare, by do. 3s. 6d. Overture de Jean de Finlande, as Duet, by Hummel, 4s. Impromptu, Op. 62, by Moscheles. Le Petite Babellarde, Brilliant Rondo, Op. 66, by ditto, 3s. Variations on Giovinetto Cavalier, by Pixis, 4s. Ries' Third Polonoise Duet. 5s.

HARP MUSIC.

" Roslin Castle," arranged by Bochsa, 3s. 6d. Che faro senza, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Favorite March, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Bridesmaid Chorus, arranged by Chipp, 2s. 6d. Mary's Dream, by ditto, 3s. Ye Banks and Braes, by ditto, 3s. Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Dizi's Variations on La Jeune et Sensible, 4s. Huntsmen Chorus, arranged by Wright, 2s 6d.

VOCAL MUSIC.

" As the Tree seems more bright," " Fair Geraldine," and " What is Love," composed by Barnett, 1s. 6d. each. " Jock o'Hazeldean," and " My Heart is sair for Somebody," arranged by Chipp, 1s. 6d. each. " My own dear Maid," and " To welcome Jamie Hame" by Rawlings, 2s. each. " Wandering Willie," and " When Delia on the Plain," by Dr. Carnaby, 1s. 6d. each. Also an elegant Edition of Handel's Songs, arranged by Wm. Horsley. Mus. Bac. Oxon.; the following of which are published, viz. " Angels ever bright," " Lord to thee," " From mighty Kings," and " Pious Orgies."

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love..	Mr. Braham	J. Braham.	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr. Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener.	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6
(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)
The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stanshury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0

Just published,

AH MAIDEN GARDEZ-VOUS, a popular Song; sung by Madame Vestris, with the most enthusiastic and unbounded applause, at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket: composed by J. Watson, price 1s. 6d. Published by LAVENU and Co. 21, Edward-street, corner of Duke-street, Manchester-square, and W. CARD, 98, Quadrant, Regent-street.

R. W. EVANS, 146, STRAND, (near Somerset House) LONDON.

PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices.

Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

SIX ORIGINAL SPANISH MELODIES, with Symphonies and Accompaniments for the Pianoforte and Harp—Composed by W. West—The Poetry by Lord Nugent.—This Work is embellished with appropriate Drawings, &c. from the Designs of eminent Artists.

CONTENTS OF No. 1,

	s.	d.
1 Love, Music, and Time	12	0
2 Tho' I have sworn by that Frown
3 Good Night Love (a Boat Glee)
4 Hope and Memory
5 Oh, for that Strain
Ditto, as a Duet
6 Hail to thee Fairest

The Second Number is preparing, and will shortly be Published—This Work is also arranging for the Guitar.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC,

DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violincello and Flute			17	6
Or, in Parts	Evans	each	3	6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib)	R. W. Evans
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha			5	0
No. II.—Introduction—Romance—Danza de Village—Fandango			5	0

DUETS.

All Idea, Duet	Moss		3	0
Santo Oh Dio!	ditto		2	0

OVERTURES.

Cherry and Fair Star	Ware		2	6
Cinderella	ditto		2	0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments	Evans		3	6
Gil Blas	Moss		2	0
Il Tancredi, with Accompaniments (arranged by Evans)	Rossini		3	6
Mother Bunch	Ware		2	6

FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.

*Di Tanti Palpiti, a Romance	R. W. Evans.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove	ditto		2	6
*My Lodging is on the Cold Grounds Fantasia and Waltz,	ditto		3	6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz	ditto		2	0

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of " Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo	ditto		3	6

* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.

Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars	ditto		2	6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1	6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
Away, those Doubts	Mr. Foster	Torri	1	6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2	0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr Bellamy	Evans	2	0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1	6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1	6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1	6
Deserted Cottage	ditto	dittn	1	6
Fain would I marry	ditto	ditto	1	6
My Lady hath a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1	6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1	6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1	6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1	6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1	6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr. Pearman	Evans	2	0
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2	0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1	6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1	6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Miss Kelly	Moss	1	6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1	6
The Moon will take the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1	6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1	6

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet)	Miss Povey and Mr. Broadhurst	Moss	2	0

QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.

The Cadets	Ware		3	6
The Freischutz	Moss		3	0
The Royal York	Ware		3	0
The Midlothian	Evans		3	0
Les Moissonieurs			3	0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star			1	0

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonie Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street,
By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries	sung by	Mr. Braham, 2s.
What blissful visions		ditto, 2s.
Thus lowly bending		Mr. Atkins, 2s.
Blest light of heaven		Chorus, 2s.
Now bid with our joyous		ditto, 2s.
Silly woman		Miss Paton, 2s.
Sire, to me		ditto, 2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision		ditto, 2s.
Where now are flown		Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Whilst here in anguish		ditto, 2s.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet		Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Evening now softly closing, ditto		Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio		Paton, Boden, and Thorne, 2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto		Paton, Hamilton, and Boden, 2s.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also			Miss Paton, 1s. 6d,
Why didst thou leave me	ditto		ditto, 2s.
Oh, turn again on me love	ditto		ditto, 2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow	ditto		ditto, 1s. 6d.
My morning prayer	ditto		ditto, 1s. 6d
In young life's morning			Mr. Thorne, 2s.
Her I love so dearly			Mr. Broadhurst, 2s.
Though sorrow may come			Miss Stephens, 2s.
In such a bustle			Miss Kelly, 2s.
Oh, I could weep			Mr. Thorne, 2s.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variations, 2s. 6d.	4. Kelvin Grove, divertise. 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, ditto, 2s. 6d.	5. Love, go good night, var. 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.	6. Green grow the rushes, O! 2s. 6d.

A large assortment of single and double action Harps, Square, Cottage, Cabinet, and Grand Piano Fortes, by the most approved makers, at the manufacturers' prices.—Also a variety of second-hand Piano Fortes and Harps for sale.

Piano Fortes and Harps lent on hire.

Just published,

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful: and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangement of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chornsses, from the celebrated opera, " Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home, with variations, 2s. ---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, ditto, 2s.---As a Duet for two Violoncellos. The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane

THE LOVER's MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. BAYLY, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (Second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Piano-Fortes: also Harps, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

☞ Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

NEW MUSIC.—THE ARROWS OF LOVE. The celebrated Cavatina, as sung by Madame Vestris. Composed by W. West, 2s.---DESERTED COTTAGE. Sung by Mrs. Waylett. Composed by R. W. Evans, 1s. 6d.---AH! DIN I SWEAR! Sung by Mr. Melrose. Composed by W. West, 1s. 6d.

The above popular Songs are just published, by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand, near Somerset House.

" TO you dear Maid," New Song, the words by J. B. Thompson, Esq. the music arranged by J. Lambley, price 1s. 6d. This song is founded on a beautiful Venetian Air, which, for elegance and simplicity, may vie with the popular air, " Sweet Home;" likewise, by the same Author, " Love breathe in every plant and flower," 1s. 6d. Second Edition, of a selection from the vocal compositions of Rossini, united to original English words, the Poetry by Jas. Mackenzie, Esq., the Airs, arranged by J. R. Stevenson, Esq. price 12s.; may be had single. " Giovinetto Cavalier," by Holst, price 2s.—Published by Wm. Rose, 53, Strand.

LINCOLN'S INN PLACE.—At a GENERAL MEETING held at the Crown and Anchor, Strand, on the 5th November, 1825, for the purpose of receiving the Report of the Committee appointed for considering the best means of effecting the projected OPENING from Carey-street to Pickett-place, Strand—

Sir JOHN DEAN PAUL, Bart. in the Chair.

The Report of the Committee was read by Sir John D. Paul, and Resolutions to the following effect were unanimously adopted.

1st. That the most eligible mode of attaining the proposed object will be by the erection of Fire-proof Chambers on each side of the intended Opening.

2nd. That the amount required for carrying the plan into effect, has been estimated at 210,000l., and that the Chambers, when let, will at a reasonable computation produce a net rental of 12,000l. per annum.

3d. That application be made to Parliament for powers necessary to the accomplishment of this undertaking, and that the sum of 210,000l. be raised and vested in Trustees as a fund, to be called, " The Commissioners' Fund for effecting a regulated communication between Pickett-place, Strand, and Carey-street, opposite Serle-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields."

4th. That as it will be necessary, in compliance with the Standing Orders of the House of Lords, that Three-fourths of the Capital required should be paid up by the individual proprietors, and the amount deposited in the Bank of England, or vested in Exchequer Bills, or in the Public Funds, the proposed Capital be raised by 100l. Subscriptions, of which a deposit of 5l. upon each 100l. subscription be paid at the time of subscribing into the Banking-house of Messrs. Snow, Paul, and Paul, in the names of the Provisional Trustees; and that a further sum of 70l. in respect of each 100l. subscription be paid by instalments, on or before the days following, viz:—25l. on or before the 25th day of January next, 20l. on or before the 20th day of February next, and 25l. on or before the 25th day of March next; so that the Three-fourths of the proposed Capital may be paid into the Bank of England, or invested, as required by such Standing Orders; and further, that the balance of 25l. on each 100l. subscription be called for at such period or periods as to the Committee may appear advisable. In case of default in payment of the instalments, the deposit be forfeited.

5th. That the subscriptions be paid into the hands of Messrs. Snow, Paul, and Paul, in the names of the following Gentlemen, as Provisional Trustees for that purpose only, viz.:—

Sir John Dean Paul, Bart.	Henry Jeremy, Esq.
Sir Francis Oumanney	George Delmar, Esq.
Richard Twining, Esq.

6th. That the Committee be requested to continue their services, for the purposes of giving the notices of the intended application to Parliament, and for any other purposes which may be necessary; and that they be requested to call a General Meeting of Subscribers as early as possible after a thousand subscriptions of 100l. each be filled up.

7th. That the Committee be requested to give such publicity to the proceedings of this meeting as they may deem advisable.

8th. That the cordial thanks of the meeting be given to Sir John D. Paul, Bart. for his landable endeavours to promote the success of the undertaking, and for his polite and impartial conduct in the chair.

It is intended that the several buildings and works to be erected and performed shall be offered to general competition, and be executed by contract, subject to the direction of the Committee.

The Plans, which have been submitted to the Committee, may be inspected at the Bankers.

SEPTIMUS BURTON,
November, 1825. 11, Lincoln's-inn.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Yesterday an attempt was made to assassinate Emanuel de Las Cases, son of Count Las Cases, as he was returning from his father's plantation to Paris, about eight o'clock in the evening. When about twenty paces from the house, he was attacked by an individual who stabbed him with a dagger in the left side. His card-case, filled with visiting tickets, fortunately averted the blow, which, however, inflicted a slight wound that bled profusely. He seized the assassin by the collar, and knocked him down, when another villain struck him a deep wound on the left thigh, and then escaped, while M. Las Cases cried in vain for assistance. The latter then proceeded towards his father's residence, but fell on the way from loss of blood. The servants found him a few paces from the door, and carried him in. Neither of the wounds, however, are dangerous. Before he had left the house he saw the two men walking up and down near it. The motive for such a ferocious act is unknown. M. Las Cases says that one of the men spoke French imperfectly. A patrol extraordinary was immediately ordered to the house, and though diligent search has been made by the National Guards, the assassins are not yet detected.

MADRID, Nov. 1.—The first step taken by the Duke de l'Infantado has been to examine the proceedings relative to the affair of Bessieres; he read attentively all the papers, and found among them an order from the King for the arrest of fourteen other persons, four of whom are Bishops, which Messrs. Zea and Recacho did not carry into effect, on the pretext that great moderation was necessary in such delicate circumstances. His Excellency has seen how the conspiracy was organised, and has begun to think the matter more serious than it was represented to him. He found that the first Minister and the Superintendant of Police had acted with great circumspection, and could not do less than confess it. This discovery, and some others, must have shewn him that he himself was not initiated in the high mysteries of the apostolic party, and that he might be only their dupe. At least it is to reflections of this nature that people ascribe the delay of the new Minister to strike the great blows which are so impatiently expected by those who have raised him to the Ministry. It is not a little singular, that since the change of Ministry, the Duke should have had a long conference with M. de Zea. Alarmed at what he found in the documents respecting Bessieres, he wrote to the Ex-Minister for information. M. Zea replied, that he would wait upon him, which he did, and they parted well satisfied with the explanation that had taken place. The Duke afterwards sent for M. Recacho, and spoke to him of the same affair. The latter assured him that not only what he had seen was certain, but that the Captain-General of Catalonia had since informed him of two conspiracies in that province; that the King was acquainted with these details, as his Majesty had given an express order to send him a daily report of all he heard relative to the conspirators: which order he strictly obeyed. The Duke requested him to communicate the same information to him. It seems certain that several Ambassadors have spoken with much energy to the Duke de l'Infantado, and told him they were resolved to oppose all kind of re-action and persecution, which has produced some sensation among the Apostolic party.

LISBON, OCT. 23.—We have just received direct from Rio Janeiro news of the highest importance. I avail myself of the departure of a courier, who has to carry dispatches to Madrid, to communicate to you a part of the news, wich appears to me of general interest. You may be assured of its accuracy.

The treaty signed at Rio Janeiro, Aug. 29, has completely made good the intelligence which I sent you. The title of Emperor, given by this treaty to his Most Faithful Majesty, is nothing but a simple personal homage paid to the reigning King by his son; but this title, purely honorary, does not give the Sovereign of Portugal any species of influence in the internal or external affairs of Brazil, as the King of Sardinia, who has the titles of King of Cyprus and of Jerusalem, exercises not the least influence in those countries.

Private letters from Rio Janeiro contain news on two other subjects of the highest importance. The one would lead us to believe that the Emperor Don Pedro will immediately make a voyage to Europe, to offer personally his homage to his august father, and to cement his reconciliation with him after the great act of dissimulation which secured to him the Imperial Crown of Brazil: the other, that the English having accepted those conditions which the American Republics had wished her to undertake, to bring to a termination the discussions pending between the Government of Brazil and that of Buenos Ayres, respecting the territory of Monte Video, Sir Charles Stuart had commenced the negotiations on this subject with a great probability of success.

It should be borne in mind, that the Portuguese, the estimable and true friends of their country, did not hesitate, for some months past, to second the views of Great Britain, in order to facilitate to her ease the means of adopting a system of unity in South America, by which she might protect, with the support of her name, the great changes which have taken place there. Now that a treaty has been signed with Brazil, these same Portuguese expect that England will be eager to justify this confidence in her, by employing, without delay, her vast credit and influence, in order that the Portuguese nation may at length obtain the constitution which has been promised to it."

COPENHAGEN, Nov 1.—After various discussions in several Danish papers respecting the pecuniary circumstances of the Clergy in Denmark, Count Holstein has demonstrated, in the Skilderie, that in similar circumstances the Clergymon is much more burdened with taxes than the farmer: and that is, therefore, highly desirable that more relieff should be afforded the servants of religion. The first opportunity, he says, now offers for such a benefit, since next year the 10th centenary of the introduction of Christianity into Denmark is to be celebrated; for it was in 826 that King Harald Blanzahn, on his journey to the Emperor Lewis, was the first Dane who was baptized at Ingelheim, and brought back with him Augrarius, the Apostle of the Danes. The Count observes, that it would be a most suitable act of justice to take this opportunity of relieving the Clergy from the oppressive burden of worldly cares.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

(From the Macclesfield Herald.)

We publish a second edition for the purpose of announcing to our readers the answer received this evening from the Lords of Committee of Privy Council for Trade, to the Memorial presented to them by the Silk Manufacturers and Throwsters of this Town, on the subject of the importation of Foreign Silk Goods:—

Office of Committee of Privy Council for Trade,
11th November, 1825.

SIR,—The Lords of Committee of Privy Council for Trade having had under their consideration the Memorial transmitted in your letter of the 8th ult. stating, on behalf of the Silk Manufacturers and Silk Throwsters of Macclesfield, that their interests can only be sustained by an indefinite continuance of the present prohibition of foreign wrought Silk, I am directed to acquaint you, for the information of the Petitioners, that their Lordships see no sufficient grounds to induce them to recommend or countenance any proposal to Parliament, having for its object to postpone the period at which foreign wrought Silks are to be admitted for consumption in the United Kingdom, or to alter the conditions of that admission. I am, Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,
THOMAS LACK.

To Mr. S. Higginbotham, Macclesfield.

(From the Greenock Advertiser, Nov. 11.)

COMET STEAM BOAT.—Repeated failures have occurred in the attempt to raise the Comet since our last. To-day the steamboats have been busy in getting a proper hold of the vessel, and it is confidently expected that they will be able to raise her at six o'clock, when it will be ebb tide.

A little after ten o'clock this forenoon, a body was discovered floating in Gourock Bay, and was ascertained to be that of Alexander Gray, the piper of the Comet; his face and hands were dreadfully lacerated. It was supposed that he had several hundred pounds entrusted to his charge: all, however, found on his person was five pounds one shilling in paper, two pounds seventeen shillings in silver, and four pence in copper money; also a letter addressed Mr. Peter Cameron, merchant in Greenock, with one pound sterling, and one to Donald M'Intosh, care of Mr. D. M'Lean, manufacturer, No. 35, Portland-street, Glasgow, all of which are in safe custody; he was interred in the Gourock burying ground at half-past eleven.

Mrs. Gallacher, wife of the pedlar of that name, lost in the Comet, has been in Gourock these many days. She is a decently dressed woman; is seen continually walking along the sea beach, and her grief was truly affecting on the body of Gray being brought into the church-yard.

We notice with regret the following statement from the Inverness Journal of the 8th inst.:—The body of Mrs. Sutherland was found about mid-day, but so dreadfully mutilated that it was found impracticable to take the body from the water. Now the truth is, which we can vouch on unquestionable authority, that the body had not been at all injured by the trolling-iron, and bore fewer indications of natural decay than several bodies which had been earlier found. The measure of coffining afloat in this case, was adopted altogether from a sentiment of deep regret to the memory and remains of a distinguished lady, and the feelings of her afflicted relatives, that they might have the satisfaction of knowing that the body had not been exposed on the beach to the view of the crowd assembled there.

(From the Manx Rising Sun of Saturday last.)

DISTURBANCES IN THE ISLE OF MAN.—On Friday last a proctor or sub-proctor, with servants, horses, and carts, of the Duke of Atholl, and of the Lord Bishop, went into the parish of Kirk Christ Rushen to collect the tithe of potatoes; they had succeeded in taking away during the day, and without obstruction, a quantity of potatoes. Near the close of the day a number of men of the labouring classes assembled, and having overturned the carts, committed acts of personal violence on the persons engaged in collecting the said tithes, and also broke the windows of a house to which the proctors, &c. had for safety retired. They also violently assaulted two individuals who had attempted to interpose, and threatened the persons and properties of others. Previous to the overturning of the carts, &c. it has been asserted irritating words uttered by the collectors hastened, if not occasioned, the violence which ensued.

On Saturday morning the High Bailiff of Castletown, by directions, as is understood, of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, repaired to the parish, and having taken examinations on oath, issued warrants, and took into custody, with the assistance of the civil officers, two of the persons concerned in the violence done to the persons and properties of individuals, and committed them to jail in Castle Rushen. On Monday constables were sent to execute warrants against the other offenders, but the constables were driven out of the parish.

The Lieutenant-Governor having, as is understood, expressed his determination to carry into effect the warrants issued by the High Bailiff, E. Gawne, Esq. captain of the parish, supposed that his authority and influence in the parish, aided by the High Bailiff, would enable them to secure the offenders. The exertions, however, of these gentlemen, proved unsuccessful; they apprehended two men, one of whom only was committed to jail, the other being rescued. During this period no act of violence was offered to the Captain of the parish, nor to the High Bailiff, nor to the persons nor properties of any other individuals, saving some not very gentle squeezes by a few of the fair sex on Monday to some of the constables, and also excepting some acts of violence which occurred on the Wednesday, under the following circumstances:—

Mr. M'Crone despatched some horses, carts, &c. under the command of a person of the name of Cobb, to persist in collecting the potatoes, and requesting the High Bailiff to order constables to accompany the party on this embassy, who, good-naturedly, perhaps incautiously, were prevailed on to allow some of the constables to go. The people, in great bodies, assembled to guard the potatoes, saying if they were to die, they might as well be killed outright as be starved to death for want of their food, the means by which they lived—the potatoes; an altercation took place between the parties, and this Cobb produced a pistol, and pointing it to some of the party, snapped it; on which the pistol was wrested from his hand, and the poor man was robbed in good earnest.

Sun-Office, four o'clock, p.m.—The military have just received orders to march to Bishop's Court,—and a deputation of farmers is reported to have waited on Mr. M'Crone concerning the state of the public mind. We have not time to say more—but we sincerely hope that peace will be permanently restored.

We have this moment on going to press, received "Patricius's" letter, announcing that last night the Proctor of Kirk Patrick's haggard, and a house, containing tithe potatoes, have been burned, as also a building of the Rev. Mr. Cottier's, containing the same. This shameful example of violence and insubordination, we trust, will not be followed by other parishes. The perpetrators are the greatest enemies to their own cause, and afford the organ of the party a plausible pretext for defaming them. They will, no doubt, identify these violent proceedings with the people's causes of complaint in the mode adopted in collecting the green crops, for the purpose of exciting the odium of disaffection in all those who legally resist the arbitrary mandates of the proctors. We, however, rely with perfect confidence on the Lieutenant-Governor, who will, no doubt, punish the offenders, and restore peace and good order. The best remedy to prevent similar expressions of violence, would be a law to render every parish liable to the expences so incurred. This would render it the interest of every inhabitant to put down all acts of violence; and, we hope, that it will meet the attention of the House of Keys.

DUMFRIES, Nov. 15.—The curlers being prevented, by the openness of the two last winters, from enjoying their excellent and manly amusement, hailed the late frost with raptures which curlers only have experienced. With increasing pleasure, and no doubt with increasing anxiety, they observed its continued intensity, till Saturday last, when several individuals belonging to the barony of Dalswinton sallied forth, determined to "try their hand" on the frozen loch. Five successive games were played, when the party partook of refreshment upon the ice. Each individual remarked the early and inauspicious commencement of their sport, and all strained their memories to recollect a previous winter when the frost set in so early. An individual remarked, that about thirty years ago he was one of a company who enjoyed a similar amusement on the 22d March. Such occurrences, however, are rare. Highly gratified with their amusement, and anticipating a continuance of the frost, the curlers left the ice, and returned to their families.

CARLISLE, Nov. 14.—The entire symptoms of a rigorous winter have set in. On Tuesday last we had a slight fall of sleet; but with the exception of a very hard frost, which has continued for three or four days in our immediate vicinity, the weather has been disagreeably severe. The mountains around us are literally covered with snow, and the roads by which the mails arrive were so stopped up, that it greatly impeded their progress this morning, and they did not arrive until nearly two hours and a half after their estimated time.

ABERDEEN, Nov. 12.—Winter sets in with a severity very unusual at this part of the season; and we have, after ten days of rough weather, with occasionally violent gales from the northward, indications of continued rigorous cold from that quarter. Tuesday night the wind came to E.S.E., and blew hard, with rain, but shifted soon to E.N.E., accompanied with showers of snow, which have continued at intervals on the succeeding days, so that the ground is covered to some depth, with the appearance of "a feeding storm," and we have had some strong frost in the night. The snow, in some parts of the country, lies deep, but the communication still open.

On Friday night, as a servant of T. Peres, Esq. M.P. was riding a high-spirited horse along Millstone-lane, Leicester, the animal suddenly took fright and ran off with him at full speed, when the passage adjoining the house of Miss Martin, on the opposite side of Oxford-street, happening to be open, it rushed in with great force, and immediately fell down dead, its head having come in contact with a beam in the passage. Its rider, perceiving his danger, had fortunately thrown himself backward on the animal's entering the passage, and thus escaped the fate which awaited him. Although he was upon the horse's back when the animal fell dead, he did not sustain any injury.

VARIETIES.

THE RATH; OR, BURMESE IMPERIAL STATE CARRIAGE; Studded with 20,000 Precious Stones: captured in the present Indian War; as drawn by Elephants, &c.—Such is the announced description of this specimen of Oriental magnificence and profusion, with a private view of which we were favoured on Thursday. We cannot enter into a particular description of the details of which occupy several pages of close print in the descriptive and historical pamphlet delivered at the doors; but shall just observe that the body of the carriage, which is nearly square, is composed of twelve panels, three on each side, which are subdivided again into small squares of gilt frame work and transparent rhinoceros and buffalo horn, except the upper moiety of the side compartments, which are filled with entire plates of glass. That the length is thirteen feet seven inches, or, if taken from the extremity of the pole, twenty-eight feet five inches, and its height, to the summit of the tee, or emblem of sovereignty with which it is surmounted, nineteen feet two inches; the carriage body being five feet seven inches in length, by four feet six inches in width, and its height, taken from the interior, five feet eight inches. The tee, as it is called, or surmounting pyramid roof, is by far the more striking and splendid part of the machine; ascending by seven tiers or diminishing gradations, and crowned with a sort of pagoda, from the summit of which streams the emblem of sacred royalty; the symbol of the god-king, who, as he rides within, claims by sound of gong and other instruments, the worship of his earth-born vassals. In short, all is one glare of gilding, precious stones, and idol sculpture; and, though the eye accustomed to the finished workmanship that adds apparent lustre to the gems more scantily employed in European ornaments may be somewhat offended at beholding such a profusion of precious stones, rudely, though very artificially embedded in laths and logs of gilt wood—wonder will be no less excited by the immensity of their quantity, and the ostentatious richness of the whole.

SHIP LAUNCH.—Yesterday se'nnight, exactly at ten minutes past two, the new East India ship Abercrombie Robinson (so named in honour of the Deputy Chairman of the Board of Directors), was launched at Messrs. Wigram and Green's yard, Blackwall. The fineness of the day attracted a great number of ladies and gentlemen to the spot; and the scene was truly delightful and animating, when the immense structure moved with apparent ease and grace from the dock into the river, amid the cheers of the assembled spectators, and the lively strains of an excellent band of music provided for the occasion. This vessel, which is by measurement between 1,300 and 1,400 tons, and consequently will be able to carry 1,500, is designed for Bombay and China, under the command of Captain Innes. Shortly after the launch, a large party of friends of the owner and builders were entertained with an elegant collation; when "Success to the Abercrombie Robinson," "Henry Bonham, Esq., the ship's husband," "The Directors of the Hon. East India Company," and several other appropriate toasts, were proposed and drank with great enthusiasm. The Abercrombie Robinson is of exactly the same size as the Edinburgh, which was launched on Wednesday; and perhaps it is an unprecedented event in the annals of ship-building, that two such magnificent vessels, belonging to the same owner, and built in the same yard, should be launched in one and the same week.

BEER TRADE.—It is said that the recent rise ordained by their high mightinesses the porter brewers, would amount to a tax of upwards of a million per annum upon the public, but we find that considerably below the mark; for it appears by the following statement, that the rise on the porter alone will put into the pockets of these gentry nearly 100,000*l.* per annum, as follows:—

1824		Difference at 5s. per Barrel.
Barclay and Co. brewed	356,282	£89,520
Hanbury and Co.	215,317	53,829
Whitbread and Co.	206,081	51,520
Reid and Co.	190,615	47,658
Combe and Co.	131,930	32,982
Calvert and Co.	108,669	27,167
H. Meux and Co.	108,394	27,098
Hoare and Co.	70,060	17,515
Taylor	58,757	14,689
Elliot	64,777	16,198
Cross	16,064	4,016
Hodgson	18,306	4,556
Tickell	22,539	5,634
	1,567,791	£391,947

And as there is every reason to suppose that the rest of the brewers throughout the kingdom will readily follow so good an example, should that be the case, the tax of the community will be nearer two millions than one.

IMPROVEMENTS AT HYDE-PARK CORNER.—The public will not much longer be offended by the bare scenery at the Piccadilly-gate. A grand triumphal arch will adorn the entrance into Hyde-park, and the new line of road will be graced by a vista of corresponding beauty. The whole line of road is marked out, and now the carillers may see the extent of ground apportioned off for Apsley House. Opposite, namely, at the entrance into the Green-park, a new road, for the accommodation of the King, has been made into the gardens of Buckingham-house. His Majesty passed two hours in the preceding week viewing the progress of the workmen in the grounds.

The Rev. Dr. E. Tighe Gregory (who was specially deputed for that purpose), had the honour on Monday last of presenting to his Royal Highness the Duke of York, at Cambridge House, an Address from the Corporation of barber-surgeons, or Guild of St. Mary Magdalen, in the city of Dublin, expressing their heartfelt gratitude for his Royal Highness's undaunted support, in the late Session of Parliament, of the Reformed Church as by law established, and the open, bold, and truly consitutional avowal of his Royal Highness's fearless attachment to the glorious principles of the Revolution.

To which his Royal Highness, with his characteristic affability and condescension, was graciously pleased to return the following Answer:— "Cambridge House, Nov. 12, 1825.

"GENTLEMEN I have received with great satisfaction the Address which you have been pleased to vote to me in approbation of my public conduct, and I beg to assure you, that it will at all times be a source of gratification to me, when I reflect that such conduct has secured to me the good opinion of a body so distinguished for respectability as the Corporation of Barber-Surgeons, or Guild of St. Mary Magdalen, in the City of Dublin. "I am, Gentlemen, yours truly,

"FREDERICK.

"To the Master, Wardens, and Brethren, of the Guild of St. Mary Magdalen, &c."

SPRING THE CHAMPION—SIX TO ONE.—On Saturday se'nnight, six fellows, some of whom had been employed in selling bargains in the shape of silk handkerchiefs, to those who are so weak as to suppose the tramping hawker can undersell the respectable tradesman, took a fancy to the Booth-hall Tavern, in this city, as their domicile for the day, and tempted by the good things it afforded, drew largely on the landlord's stores; when the time of payment arrived, however, they seemed very unwilling to "come to the scratch," and fought shy of posting the cash. Spring, the renowned champion and landlord, civilly pressed his just demand, but met only with insolence and abuse; at length three of this "respectable" party, feeling their valour wax warm, and forgetting the kind of person they had to deal with, rose to pay the champion off in a kind of coin which he has always been particularly handy in giving a satisfactory receipt for, in the shape of sundry remembrances that leave aches, and pains, and bruises, on those who have required such acknowledgments—in short, they vowed they would serve him out handsomely. Spring, however, declined the honour, and with equal temper and discretion retreated from his assailants, stopping their blows, and smiling at their vain attempts to touch him. He immediately sent for a constable, but the guardian of the law declined to attend, for which, doubtless, Spring knows his remedy. Finding that the law refused to protect him, and the fellows still insisting on thrashing him, with violent abuse in reply to his repeated attempts to induce them to be quiet, he at last, very properly, goaded by the most outrageous provocation, determined to adopt the shortest method of quieting such characters, and requesting the persons present not to interfere, after every peaceable remonstrance had failed, he proceeded to expel the intruders; three of them rushed on him at once, and he was soon surrounded by the six. Perhaps in his best days he never shewed such science, coolness, and courage, as he displayed on this occasion. With admirable quickness he stopped and returned, in a manner his cowardly assailants will remember as long as they live, right and left; every blow told on their sconces, and on one occasion they were all down together. In less than twenty minutes they were completely brought to a stand-still, and the champion acknowledged victor, coolly observing that he would thrash twenty such as them in an hour. They were all stout fellows, at least 13 stone each.—Hereford Journal.

On Friday last, at an early hour of the afternoon, a certain promontory in the vicinity of Shaftesbury was thronged by an assemblage of persons, who, in consequence of a specious invitation, were collected for the purpose of witnessing a boasted exploit of the self-named "Flying Man," who had engaged to take a leap of some hundred feet, on a rather precipitous descent. After detaining the anxious spectators nearly two hours in a tolerably patient suspense, some public operations appeared to commence, and every eye was fixed on the supposed daring operator! But whether the chilling effects of the freezing vapour had bewildered his imagination, or that the aspect of the fog-enveloped hill ad abated his courage, he cautiously advanced many paces along the slop , by means of the slackened rope, until (disastrous omen of his failure!) the lightly-inserted stump gave way, and down came the terrified actor and his assistants, to the high amusements and derision of the otherwise disappointed beholders. who, in furtherance of their unexpected diversion, contrived to expedite the progress of the astonished actor, by rolling him rapidly down the hill, with the faithless post, like a dismal spectre, not far behind. To crown the frolic of the assembly, as they beheld the discomfited hero slowly advancing through a hollow, on his reaching the summit of the hill, they stationed themselves like a troop of mountaineers at the side of the ravine, and, for want of other ammunition, saluted the disgraced adventurer with a shower, not, indeed, of cannon-ball, but of dirty snow, which the fortune of war—or, in plainer terms, the early inset of the brumal season, had placed ready for their active hands. From this unexpected salute, and from the probability of closer attacks, the would-be aeronaut had no other means of retreating than by the use of his nimble feet, instead of his vaunted wings; and thereby he speedily arrived, not at the intended goal of his descent, but within the threshold of a humble country inn, where he lay concealed till the ardour of his pursuers abated.—Dorset Chronicle.

BALLOON PERILS.

PLYMOUTH, Nov. 14.—For some weeks past the public here have been on the tiptoe of expectation to witness the ascent of Mrs. Graham, in an elegant large balloon. After two disappointments, controlled by ungovernable circumstances, this day the ascent was accomplished. A committee of gentlemen superintended the ascent, which took place about three o'clock this afternoon, in the presence of at least 18,000 spectators. The wind blew fresh off the land, from N.N.W., but Mrs. Graham had resolved not again to disappoint the public; all things, therefore, being prepared, she took her place in the car, accompanied by Mr. Graham and Mr. Grills, of our dock-yard, who had paid handsomely for a trip to the upper regions. It was soon discovered that the machine was not sufficiently filled to carry more than two persons, and to administer more gas was considered dangerous to the occupants of the car, from the impossibility in such case of managing the progress of the balloon, and bearing it away from the ocean; Mr. Grills was, consequently, left behind. After being in the air about fifteen minutes, making an altitude of nearly a mile, the balloon rapidly descended, Mr. Graham having evidently expected to reach terra firma, near the Mew-stone, about seven miles distance. In this he was most unfortunately disappointed. The balloon dropped into the sea, about a mile from the shore. The General of Marines' boat, manned by ten men and a cockswain, on observing the situation of the balloon, kept near the breakwater, where they concluded it would fall; it floated beyond the Mew-stone, which spot they made all speed to gain, in company with a shore-boat The balloon was bounding with great velocity upon the surface of the water, appearing from a distance like a large ship, but no car was visible for two or three minutes. In the midst of dire consternation, by a sudden elevation of the balloon, the car. which had been thus dragged through the water for nearly twenty minutes, was luckily discovered; the ropes were instantly seized; and the vehicle, containing Mr. and Mrs. Graham, clasped in each other's arms, in a very exhausted state, was drawn into the boat, and they were thus happily relieved from their most perilous situation. In the confusion occasioned by the great anxiety to save the lives of the adventurers, the ropes of the balloon got entangled with the mast head, and they were in imminent danger of being thrown from it into the ocean, when in an instant one or two of the crew pulled out their knives and cut the ropes, on which the balloon, as I stated to you last night, ascended to an immense height, and proceeded towards the French coast. When placed in safety by the exertions of the seamen, Mrs. G. overcome by the agitation of mind she had undergone, had every appearance of a corpse. Mr. Graham too was evidently in a state of utter exhaustion. A revenue cutter being fortunately at hand, every humane assistance was afforded, which presently enabled the boat's crew (two of whom, we lament to say, were sadly injured in the struggle to set free the balloon,) to make for the Admiral's Hard, at Stonehouse. The men of both boats were handsomely rewarded. Mrs. Graham reached the Crown Hotel, Devonport, where the Earl and Countess of Morley, and the Committee, did them the honour to wait her arrival, nearly restored to health, and quite recovered from her fright. She was subsequently bled, and is now as well as so perilous an adventure and the alarm consequent upon it will admit.

An immense concourse of persons hailed the return of the intrepid adventurers, while a military band served not a little to heighten the effect of their congratulations.

It is reported, that just before Mrs. G. entered the car, the Noble patron informed her that the sympathising spectators who occupied the market-place were of opinion that she ought not to accompany her husband. He assured her that the public would not consider her not ascending as a disappointment. Mrs. Graham felt very forcibly struck by the kindness of the suggestion, but declined to avail herself of it.

The common crier announced Mr. and Mrs. Graham's intention to attend the theatre, and a large audience were assembled to welcome their appearance, but in consequence of the accident which had occurred, an apology was made, late in the evening.

THE ARMY.

General Sir Thomas Bradford and suite sailed, on the 13th instant, on board the Exmouth, from Portsmouth, for Bombay.

The 2d and 3d Divisions of the 99th Regiment of Foot sailed, on the 11th instant, on board the Southworth and Layton transports, from Portsmouth, for the Mauritius.

Three companies of the 1st Battalion of the 60th (the Duke of York's Own Rifle Corps) marched, on Tuesday, in pursuance of previous orders, from Weedon to Stockport.

A detachment belonging to the 56th Regiment of Infantry, marched on Wednesday morning, from Westminster, for Hull.

ACCIDENTS, &c.

On Wednesday evening Mr. Robinson, butler to Philip Bennet, Esq., of Rougham, whilst seated in the upper boxes of our theatre, was suddenly seized with an apoplectic fit, and though promptly attended by a medical gentleman, expired in a few hours. We understand that he had before had a fit of a similar nature, which he had managed to conceal from his master's knowledge.—Bury Gazette.

A boy of the name of Harrington was killed on Tuesday, in Oxford-street, by a kick from a led horse in the hands of a groom. The deceased was playing with others, and crossed close to the horse, and the accident happened before the groom observed the youth.

ALARMING FIRE.—Wednesday morning, a little after twelve o'clock, a very great alarm was caused by the explosion of some combustibles in the workshop of Mr. Edgar, fire-work manufacturer, Broad-street, Tottenham-court-road, in a very singular manner. The men had, upon leaving work, placed some trifling fire-works together upon a shelf over a bench upon which were some blue lights in a state of preparation, which it is supposed must have ignited from an inflammable material close to them, and then burning upwards, exploded the fire-works, and quickly the shop was enveloped in flames. Fortunately, however, by great exertion, they were confined to the workshops, and Mr. Edgar's house sustained no damage. The workshops were entirely destroyed.

ACCIDENT BY FIRE.—On Tuesday evening the family of Mr. Bartlemy, of King's-road, Parson's-green, having gone to the play, the maid servant and a foot-boy were left in care of the house, and both went to sleep by the kitchen fire. According to the boy's statement, he was awoke by the screams of Martin, the female servant, whose clothes had taken fire. The boy, in his fright, gave an alarm at the next house, and before assistance could be afforded, her clothes and her hair were, literally speaking, burnt off her. She was alive on Wednesday morning, but death would be great relief to her agonised sufferings.

On Sunday, the 30th ult., a boy in the employ of Mr. Williams, surgeon, of Brompton, near Chatham, fell into a well upwards of 120 feet deep, but was providentially drawn out again without having sustained any other injury than a slight bruise on the forehead.

ACCIDENT TO THE ROYAL BLUE COACH.—Wednesday night, between Thatcham and Newbury, as the Royal Blue Coach was running from Bristol to London, the leaders lost their usual track and upset the coach in a ditch. In severe contusions and wounds the passengers sustained much injury, but happily there were no fractures. They had the prompt attendance of two medical Gentlemen of the neighbourhood.

On Friday se'nnight a fragment of rock fell on one of the quarriers at Salisbury Crags, Edinburgh, by which the unfortunate man was so much hurt, that he has since died.

During the last week, in the Northern Liberties, a boy was persuaded by his play-fellows to get on a horse, who tied his legs by a cord underneath the animal. They then shouted and frightened the horse, so that he ran off. The saddle turned, and the boy's head hung downward, striking the ground as the animal proceeded at speed for a considerable distance. When stopped, it was found that the boy's head and breast were literally stove in by the horse's feet and by concussion with the earth. His eye-balls hung out of his head, and his whole appearance was frightful. It is unnecessary to say that the child was killed before the horse had proceeded many miles.—Philadelphia Journal.

FATAL EFFECTS OF INTOXICATION.—An inquisition was taken on Wednesday evening, at the Board-room of Middlesex Hospital, before T. Stirling, Esq., and a most respectable Jury, on the body of James Pulting, aged 30, who came by his death on Sunday night last, by falling down a flight of stairs while in a state of intoxication. The Jury having taken a view of the body, joined with the Coroner in reprobating the excess indulged in, and found a verdict "That the deceased came by his death in accidentally falling, while in a state of intoxication, down a flight of stairs."

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT, Nov. 15.

FRAUDULENT CASE.

Samuel Burgess, a person not yet eighteen, who has occasionally added to his name the epithet Reverend, accompanied with the following array of capital letters, LL.D., F.A.S., was opposed by Mr. Pollock, on the part of Messrs. Bleaden and Co., of the London Tavern. He conducted himself without any of the embarrassment that generally attends a first appearance, or any apparent sense of humiliation. Being furnished with two pocket handkerchiefs, one white cambrie and the other coloured, he shifted them from one hand to another with much gracefulness, and drew them alternately across his nose with a gravity of manner that would not have been discreditable to the most sage expounder of philosophy and morals.

Examined by Mr. Pollock.—I have been a bookseller. In November last year, I was in custody before, for three weeks, in Whitecross street prison. I got out through the instrumentality of the Governor. I was put out of the house by him. It was not under the Act I came out. I paid nearly half the debts that were then owing. I owed then about one half of what I do now. My present debts are 376*l.*

Mr. Pollock.—Are you a Doctor of Laws, as your card intimates; it has the initials LL.D. (showing a card)?—I was deceived by a person who promised to obtain for me a degree of Doctor, from Aberdeen. He told me had obtained it for me, and I did not discover until after that card had been written that I had no right to it. I assumed the title before I went last to prison, about a fortnight before. I went to prison on the 10th of March last.

Mr. Pollock.—Pray are you a Fellow of the Antiquarian Society?—I published a topographical work some time back a copy of which I sent to the President of the Society.

Court.—Ah! Who was that?—I don't know who it was.

Mr. Pollock.—Who was the President?—I don't know his name. The same person who told me that I was a Doctor of Laws told me that I was a Fellow of the Antiquarian Society.

Mr. Pollock.—Who is that person? Is he a Doctor of Laws too?—The person I mean is the Reverend Mr. Austin, of Walthamstow. The second edition of my work was published in August last year. it was a biographical sketch of the late King.

Mr. Pollock.—I thought you said the work was a topographical one?—Why, it was a topographical description of the palaces of Kew and Windsor, with some account of the King. It was both biographical and topographical.

Mr. Pollock—Then you sent your work to Lord Aberdeen?—I never sent no book to Lord Aberdeen. I did not know he was the president. Mr Austin afterwards informed me that I was not a fellow, and I dropped the title two days before I was arrested. I did not use it after that. I remember ordering a dinner on the 15th February, at the London Tavern, for eight persons. Upon that occasion we drank some expensive wines: such wines as were recommended by the proprietors of the tavern.

Mr. P.—Tenriffe? Yes.—Mountain? Yes.—Sherry? Yes.—Lisbon? Yes.—Port? Yes.—Champagne? Yes.—(Much laughter in Court.)

Mr. P.—You ordered another dinner? Yes; I ordered another for the 9th March. I left the choice of wines to the tavern-keeper. The amount of the first bill was 14*l.* odd. The second bill was never delivered: no agreement had been made as to how he was to be paid. I spoke to the proprietor about a large charity dinner for 200 persons, that was to be held afterwards at the London Tavern. This never took place. I went into prison a week after the last dinner.

Here Mr. Pollock read an advertisement announcing that on the 22d March, a public dinner was to be held at the London Tavern, by the friends of the Protestant cause, the Rev. Samuel Burgess in the chair, to be assisted by several of the clergy and laity of the highest respectability. The Learned Gentleman read another advertisement, announcing that the friends of the education of the Protestant poor would take tea together, on a certain day, when the Rev. Samuel Burgess, of John-street Chapel, Mile-end New Town, would deliver an appropriate discourse upon the occasion.

Mr. Pollock—Were you at any time Minister of John-street Chapel, Mile End New Town?—No: but there is a chapel there. I had a promise of being made minister of it, and I intended to call it St. John's Chapel. A clergyman, a friend of mine, said he would use his interest to have me appointed to it, if I subscribed to the thirty-nine articles.

Mr. Abraham Alexander, a partner in the firm of Bleaden and Co., of the London Tavern, said, that the insolvent first applied to them respecting a dinner on the 1st of February last. He said the object was a charitable one, for the education and clothing of the poor children attending divine worship in St. John's-street chapel, of which he represented himself to be the minister. Insolvent said he wished to hold the anniversary of the institution at the London Tavern, asking what the charge for dinner to each person would be. Witness said that they prepared dinners at various prices, from 3*s.* up to 5*l.* or 10*l.*; but that the general price for charity dinners was 8*s.* a head. He replied, that he must consult the stewards: and that Alderman Key and Dr. Collier were of the number. Insolvent went away, at the same time ordering a dinner for eight on the 17th February following. He came accordingly, rather later than was expected, in the full dress of a clergyman of the Church of England, with a gown and band. There were only two more with him when he arrived. They had fourteen bottles of wine, four of which were champaigne. Of this wine, however, was not drank by him and his two companions. After dinner, the insolvent went to the tavern opposite, where there had been a public meeting, and fetched other gentlemen with him; some of whom witness knew to be respectable Dissenting clergymen, and other persons of respectability. The bill for the dinner was sent to Collet-place, Commercial-road; but not paid. Insolvent said he would discharge the whole on the 10th March following, when he intended to meet a few friends upon the same occasion. He had another dinner on the 10th March, the bill for which amounted to 19*l.* 7*s.* 6*d.* The chairman was then so much intoxicated, that he was not able to write orders for wine any longer. Insolvent expressed a wish to have a vocal performer sent for, which was accordingly done.

Mr. Pollock.—Were there any profane songs sung upon that occasion?

Mr. Commissioner Law.—It is of no consequence in this case whether there were or not.

Mr. Pollock.—They were very merry?—Yes, very merry.

Mr. Pollock.—And very noisy? They broke twenty-five shillings worth of glass.

Insolvent.—A great part of that glass was broken by the waiters

Witness.—I delivered the bill of this dinner to the insolvent's mother, and it was only then I learned that he was a person to whom I ought not to have given credit.

Examined by Mr. Heath, on the part of the insolvent.—You said the Chairman was so much intoxicated that he could not give orders for more wine?

Witness.—He could not write orders, but he could give orders. I made no remark as to his age, nor did I make any inquiries. My making inquiries with respect to persons ordering a dinner would depend on the character in which they came. I trusted the insolvent because he came in the character and dress of a Clergyman, and said he was catering for a public charity. I believe now, though I had not then, great doubts whether the Insolvent be a Dissenting Clergymen. The great dinner for two hundred never took place. An offer was made to me of having the debt paid in two years, which I should have accepted if security were given. I was offered 5*l.* down. His mother never offered 10*l.* No offer was made, except by the insolvent and his mother. I come here upon public grounds more than anything else, not wishing the insolvent to go forth upon the public. I visited him in Whitecross-street prison, in consequence of letters he sent to me, and offered to accept 15*l.* for the whole debt. That was only half the real amount. They know little of the business of tavern keepers, who suppose that half the amount of their bills would be sufficient.

Insolvent examined again by Mr. Pollock.—I am a Dissenting Minister. I consider myself so. I preached in several Chapels, and that in John-street was promised to me. I am about eighteen years of age.

Mr. Heath submitted that considering the prisoner's youth, his having been in prison eight months for this debt, its having been contracted in a tavern, and not for goods with a view afterwards disposing of them improperly, he was a fit object to be dealt with mercifully by the Court.

Mr. Pollock went over the evidence for the purpose of showing that the debt had been contracted under fraudulent representations, and that therefore the insolvent was not entitled to his discharge.

Mr. Commissioner Law said that if this were a case of tavern-keepers giving credit wantonly and knowingly to a young man the matter would be quite different. But here deception had been used, and rendered successful by a great deal of contrivance and ingenious management. The means resorted to for obtaining credit were disgraceful. The debt was fraudulently contracted. However, in consequence of the youth of the insolvent, and the time he had passed in prison, the judgment of the Court would be more lenient than it would under different circumstances.

The insolvent was remanded for five calendar months.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

PROMOTIONS.

WAR-OFFICE, NOV. 18, 1825.

4th Regt. of Dragoon Guards—Lieut. G. W. Story, from 96th Foot, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Shore, promoted—7th Ditto, Cornet H. C. Daniel, (and Adjutant) v. Doyle, promoted: Cornet E. R. Buller, v. Pennefather, promoted; to be Lieutenants, by purchase. Surgeon A. Blake, M.D. from the 5th Foot, v. J. Rose, who retires—3d Regt. Light Dragoons, C. W. M. Balders, Gent. to be Cornet, by purchase, v. Phillips, promoted—6th Regt. Dragoons, Cornet W. C. Sheppard, from Cape Corps of Cavalry, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Down, promoted—11th Regt. Light Dragoons, Cornet F. R. H. Lawrie, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Bishop, promoted: T. H. Pearson, Gent. v. Astley, who retires: C. A. Lewis, Gent. v. Lawrie; to be Cornets, by purchase—13th Regt. Light Dragoon Guards, Cornet D. T. Cunynghame to be Lieutenant, v. M'Kenzie, deceased: Serjeant-Major B. MacMahon, Riding-master to the Cavalry Depot at Maidstone, to be Cornet, v. Cunynghame—Coldstream Regt. Foot Guards, Brevet-Major Beaumont Lord Hotham, from h-p. to be Lieutenant and Captain, v. W. Kortwright, who exchanges—1st Regt Foot, Ensign R. Kerr to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Matthias, promoted. C. Ford, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Kerr—5th Ditto, Assist.-Surgeon A. Hamilton, from 39th Foot, to be Surgeon, v. Blake, appointed to 7th Dragoon Guards—7th Ditto, Lieut. Hon. C. D. Blayney, from Rifle Brigade, to be Lieutenant, v. Ramsden, who exchanges—16th Ditto, Ensign W. N. Thomas, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Dayrell, promoted: G. Wright, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Thomas—12th Ditto, Ensign J. M. Russell, from 1st Royal Veteran Battalion, to be Ensign—14th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant N. W. Giffne to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Evers, appointed to 86th Foot—16th Regt. Foot, Hospital-Assistant J. M. Drysdale, to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Alexander, who resigns—17th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant J. Fraser, to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Martindale, promoted—19th Ditto, Lieut. J. B. Graves, from h-p 55th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v. D. W. A. Douglas, who exchanges, receiving the difference—21th Ditto, Ensign J. Robinson to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Darroch, promoted—29th Ditto, Lieut. H. Deedes, to be Captain, by purchase, v. M'Niven, appointed to 80th Foot—32d Ditto, —— Fiske, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Greene, appointed to 98th Foot—34th Ditto, Ensign A. Houston to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Sweny, promoted—35th Ditto, T. Christmas, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Cumberland, promoted in 96th Foot—39th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant J. Mair, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Hamilton, promoted in 5th Foot—43d Ditto, Lieut. J. B. B. Estcourt to be Captain, by purchase, v. Hopkins, promoted: Ensign Sir R. J. Fletcher bart. to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Estcourt: W. Pell, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Fletcher—45th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant G. Tower to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Campbell, whose appointment has not taken place—53d Ditto, Hospital-Assistant J. Connell to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Maclean, promoted—57th Ditto, Captain H. Wellman, from 1st Royal Veteran Battalion, to be Captain—64th Ditto, Ensign J. Draper, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Brown, promoted—70th Ditto, Ensign M. P. G. Reed to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Laing, promoted: Gent. Cadet C. Trollope, from the Royal Military College, to be Ensign by purchase, v. Reed, promoted—72d Ditto, Major W. L. Maherly, from h-p, v. F. Brownlow, who exchanges, receiving the difference: Captain G. Hall, by purchase, v. Middleton, promoted: to be Majors—77th Regt. Foot, Lieut. J. Corfield, v. Jeffrey, deceased: Lieut. A. Buchan, from 91st Foot, v. Pigott, deceased; to be Captains—88th Ditto, Captain T. W. O. M'Niven, from 29th Foot, to be Captain, v. Butler, promoted—86th Ditto, Assistant-Surgeon G. Evers, from 14th Foot, to be Assistant-Surgeon, v. Ewing, whose appointment has not taken place—87th Ditto, Ensign W. Smyth to be Lieutenant, v. Irvine, deceased: C. F. Parkinson, Gent. to be Ensign, v. Smyth—89th Ditto, Lieut. A. Stuart, v. Cannon, killed in action: Lieut. A. S. H. Aplin, v. Rose, killed in action; to be Captains, Ensign W. Olpherts, v. Stuart: Ensign C. Arrow, v. Aplin; to be Lieutenants, E. S. Miles, Gent. v. Olpherts: G. H. Lavard, Gent. v. Arrow; to be Ensigns—93th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant F. C. Huthwaite to be Assistant-Surgeon—91st Ditto, Ensign R. W. Foskey to be Lieutenant, v. Robeson, deceased: D. Cahill, Gent. to be Ensign, v. Foskey—93d Ditto, Ensign J. Crowe to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. M'Nicol, promoted: C. Herbert, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Crowe—94th Ditto, Lieut. R. A. Coates, from h-p 60th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v. F. G. Keogh, who exchanges—95th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant J. A. Ore to be Assistant-Surgeon—96th Ditto, Ensign W. Hope, from 81st Foot, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Story, appointed to 6th Dragoon Guards—Rifle Brigade, Lieut. C. Ramsden, from 7th Foot, v. Blayney, who exchanges: Second Lieut. T. S. Beckwith, by purchase, v. Byrne, promoted; to be First Lieutenants: D. H. Mackinnon, Gent. by purchase, v. Beckwith, to be Second Lieutenant: Lieut. W. S. R. Norcott, v. Byrne, promoted, to be Adjutant—2d West India Regt. S. J. Hill, Gent. to be Ensign, v. Watson, deceased.

STAFF.—Brevet Major G. A. Elliott, of the 68th Foot, to be Major of Brigade at the Forces in Lower Canada, v Shekleton, dec.

HOSPITAL STAFF.—Staff-Surgeon W. Barry, M.D., to be Deputy Inspector of Hospitals, vice Inglis, dec.: Surgeon D. Barry, M.D., from the half-pay, to be Surgeon to the Forces, v Baillie, who retires upon half-pay.—Assistant-Surgeon J. M'Andrew, from half-pay 84th Foot, vice Hospital-Assistant Leslie, who resigns; Garrison-Mate S. Taylor, v Brisbane, appointed to 74th Foot—to be Assistant-Surgeons to the Forces.—J. Macdonald, Gent., v Duncanson appointed to 49th Foot; J. Forrest, M.D., v Dartnell, appointed to 41st Foot; M. Ryan, Gent., v Wilkins, appointed to the Ceylon Regiment; T. Beavan, Gent., v. Dobson, appointed to 99th Foot; G. J. Hyde, Gent., v W. H. Crawford.

UNATTACHED.—Major C. Middleton, from 72d Foot, to be Lieutenant-Colonel, by purchase, v W. Tane, who retires.—Capt. J. P. Hopkins, from 43d Foot, v G. W. Unett, who retires—to be Majors of Infantry, by purchase.—Lieut. E. M. Wigley, from 73d Foot; Lieut. R. Doyne, from 7th Dragoon Guards—Lieut. G. Mathias, from 1st Foot; Lieut. J. Laing, from 70th Foot; Lieut. T. Eastwood, from 44th Foot; Lieut. D. M'Nicol, from 93d Foot; Lieut. Hon. H. M. Upton, from 1st Guards; Lieut. W. E. Sweny, from 34th Foot; Lieut. A. Chambre, from 7th Foot; Lieut. D. Darroch, from 24th Foot; Lieut. W. Timson, from 51st Foot; Lieut. J. Brown, from 64th Foot—to be Captains of Infantry, by purchase.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

H. and R. DAVIES, Hampton-Bishop, Hereford, corn-dealers.
J. TORDOFF, York, plumber.
W. SMITH and T. RICHARDS, Manchester, drapers.
G. RICHARDS, St. Martin's-lane, picture-dealer.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

T. GLOVER, Derby, flax-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

J. ROEBUCK, Huddersfield, York, grocer. Sols. Clarke and Co., Chancery-lane.
J. PEACOCK, Watford, Hertford, stationer. Sol. Mr. Bean, Took's-court, Cursitor-street.
J. MARSH, Bordesley, glass-cutter. Sols. Messrs. Burfoot, Inner Temple.
J. BROWN, Camberwell, builder. Sols. Stevens and Wood, Little St. Thomas Apostle.
E. S. Stewart, Preston-upon-Wye, Hereford, miller. Sols. J. P. Parken, New Boswell-court, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
J. BLAND, Tysoe-street, Spa-fields, baker. Sol. Mr. Baddeley, Leman-street, Goodman's-fields.
W. ASPREY, Bruton-street, Hanover-square, silversmith. Sols. Dawson and Co. Saville-lace, New Burlington-street.
B. YOUNG, John's-place, Camberwell New-road, builder. Sol. R. S. Hadwen, Pancras-lane, Queen-street.
E. and W. T. MORRIS, Tower-street, St. Dunstan in the East, wine-merchant. Sol. E. L. Ogle, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street.
T. DALBY, Catharine-street, Strand, bookseller. Sol. D. Richardson, Cheapside,
J. COWPER, Copthall-court, merchant. Sols. Paterson and Peile, Old Broad-street.
W. WESTON, Clarendon-street, Somers-town, builder. Sols. Watson and Son, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street.
T. FLINT, Burlington-arcade, bookseller. Sols. Tottie and Co. Poultry.
C. DIBDIN, Zion-place, Waterloo-road, music-seller, Sol. E. Hailstone, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.
J. WELLS and W. ONYON, Bishopsgate-street-without, woollen-drapers. Sol. A. Clarke, Bishopsgate Church-yard.
J. BROWN and J. THOMPSON, Fenchurch-street, merchants. Sol. Mr. E. L. Ogle, 3, Clement's-lane, Lombard-street.
G. S. ASHBY, Lombard-street, engraver. Sol. Mr. Cottle, 70, Aldermanbury.
J. CONWAY, Upper Stamford-street, Lambeth, builder. Sol. Mr. Colclough, 6, Clifford's-inn.
B. EATLY, Manor-street, Chelsea, bricklayer. Sols. Messrs. Wrentmore and Gee, 26, Charles-street, St. James's-square.
H. WRIGHT, Eccleston-street, Pimlico, merchant. Sol. Mr. Farris, 17, Surrey-street, Strand.
G. WEBSTER, 12, Bucklersbury, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Moulns and Bockett, 4, Essex-court, Temple.
W. MORRALY, Old Broad-street, merchant. Sols. Angel-court, Throgmorton-street.
H. P. NEWNHAM, Tower-hill, flour-dealer. Sols. Messrs. Smith and Weir, Coopers-hall, Basinghall-street.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The joke copied from the AGE into last Monday's CHRONICLE, which C. S. informs us of, we had before seen, and agree with him in thinking that the etiquette observable on all such occasions of quoting from a contemporary, should be in this instance equally observed. The most impudent plagiarism of this description, relative to our paper, have been committed by most of the daily papers, without the common honesty of acknowledgment, partly through a desire to pass off the fun of others for their own, and partly through fear of giving, by such acknowledgment, an extended circulation to our columns; but notwithstanding this, and notwithstanding also that in any one number of the AGE may be found more jokes than in twenty of the MORNING CHRONICLE, we tell the Editor of that sagacious paper that a repetition of such a low and impudent trick, will induce us to open a personal tirade on him that will be very far from being agreeable.

We cannot insert the joke G. M. forwards, as made by MADAME VESTRIS on her friend Mrs. GLOVER. Besides we can hardly believe it—for, notwithstanding her known penchant for JOHN KING, we never yet knew she had any for Jo-KING.

T. R. is thanked for the Oatlands bon mot, although we have not room for it; added to which, BALL HUGHES is not supposed to understand the dead languages, and "CETERA DESUNT," introduced in our last Theatrical critique, does sound like THE REST ARE decent.

H. B. C. has come to hand. His reference to MADAME'S legs, appeared in the AGE, not BULL; and on the subject of KELLY'S Memoirs, we candidly confess we have seen enough in the papers to suppress the least desire to read any more. The pun on the title—"REMISS-IN-HIS-SENSES" is not bad, though we never heard KELLY had any senses to be remiss in. Those parts of the work written by others, are easily traced, but when left to himself, the continual "I and my Lord," "I and my dinners," "I and SHERIDAN," "I acted," and "I sang," and the stringing together of other persons' bad jokes is quite suffocating; but, as the saying of their play-wright goes, "Give these fellows a good thing, and they never know when to have done with it."

The excellent SONG of Note shall appear in our next.

K. W. is thanked for his obliging communication.

Another admirable letter from Observator to Mr. CALCRAFT, M.P., on the situation of Drury-lane Theatre, will be found in the next page, and we particularly direct the attention of our subscribers to an attentive perusal of it.

THE AGE.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 20.

We had occasion, in a former number, to allude to the daring spirit of COMBINATION that now prevails throughout the country, by which the operations of commerce have been for a time entirely suspended, and the encouragement of which has been the most disastrous circumstance that has arisen in the land for a long series of years. The town of Bradford has been one of the chief scenes of this barbarous system, and the dissensions in that place between the masters and workmen have already led to disturbances of a very serious nature; nor do the accounts which reach us every day from that quarter present the slightest prospect of any abatement in either its quality or extent; and possessed, therefore, of the feelings and situations of the respective parties, it is with the utmost astonishment we have perused the following passage in a Bradford paper, which we cannot omit the opportunity of inserting:—

"It is now ascertained, that the number of men, women, and children, out of employment, amounts to no less than 3,280; and as the Union funds admit of but one shilling a week to each man, and two shillings if there be a large family, it is obvious that the sufferings and privations of these individuals must be great. Difficulties no doubt present themselves, in the adoption of any plan for their relief, and yet we are very certain, that there is no humane person who will not feel disposed to extend relief in some shape to the wretched wives and children of these misguided men. Whatever may be resolved upon, it seems desirable that relief, if afforded at all, should be by supplies of food, not of money."

We are really at a loss how to estimate the principles of such argument as this, when we look round and view the ruin these worthless wretches have been the instruments of producing already, and are even ignorant and careless of the extent to which it may be carried. We are at a loss to understand the feeling under which the least suggestion of relief could be made from a ruthless set of vagabonds to those very masters, they have been the means, for any thing they may know to the contrary, of reducing to a comparative state of the same want they confess themselves to be in by such application. The manufacturers of Bradford constitute the principle part of its inhabitants, and yet it is to these persons, distressed and injured by the shameful combinations of their workmen, that an appeal is to be made to relieve the families of those identical individuals who have been the means of producing the very distress of which they are the first to complain—the base idea is contemptible, laughable, impudent in the extreme—for the encouragement of such a proceeding would be at once to countenance the violence which has been committed— to hold out an inducement for the commission of any additional excess, and to compromise the last privilege the unfortunate can lay claim to, of awaking public sympathy. In our view of the case, it is impossible to conceive the adoption of a more dangerous expedient—for by so doing all distinction is for ever abandoned between the most afflicting situation of real calamity, and the momentary wants of a set of lawless robbers, produced by their own villainies—and the least retribution that can visit the misconduct of such persons is to let them feel the extent of the ruin entailed on them; for, if by their own excesses, they ceased to regard the various claims of wife, child, or parents, and have been the sole cause of reducing each to the privations herein complained of, it can never be expected that other persons should regard such claims, particularly those who are sufferers to a much greater extent. We feel no hesitation in avowing, that an encouragement of this nature once held out would be fraught with the most alarming consequences—it would in reality be offering a temptation to any future transgressions of the nature of those now under consideration, and would totally debar any prospect of conciliating or subduing the revolutionary spirit of these misguided people—it would be cancelling the very proper difference between vice and misfortune, and imposing on the respectable part of the community, from the outrageous invaders of their rights and property, a tax to which, under circumstances eved less aggravating, they should, on no consideration whatever, be subject. We have watched the progress of these operations with much earnestness, and equal anxiety—we have seen the danger likely to be apprehended from these various proceedings, and have entertained an inward satisfaction in witnessing the determined and manly opposition manifested thereto by their employers; and although, in the present daring state of such people's minds, there is no step they would scruple to adopt, we trust, nay, we feel a positive assurance, that their masters will rise up with one common consent, and crush, with the most prompt and decisive ridicule, the attempts of either themselves or their agency to make so barefaced an appeal to their judgment or sympathy. The voice and immorality of the lower orders of society is already quite daring enough, and to render it less so, the relief which a kind feeling is but too apt to bestow, should, on every possible occasion of such flagrant event as this, be firmly withheld—the desperate system of faction would then be at least checked—the progress of crime be to a certain degree rethrded, and a solid lesson of deep experience be taught these men, who will derive more substantial argument against the principles they are now proceeding upon, by the wants they now suffer, than all the persuasions of the most learned can ever instil into them—they will thus know the dependence to be placed in those who may have instigated them to their present lawless movements, and above all, will learn to estimate, and in time to respect, the character of employers in whom, for the hope of a momentary advantage, they have now lost a permanent relief.

The American papers received on Friday give frightful reports of the fires in the woods of the northern provinces of the United States and the neighbouring British settlements. A dense fog, which seriously affected the lungs and eyes, and prevented navigation on the rivers, was simultaneously felt at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington; and so alarming appears to be the extent and power of the conflagration, that the effects about the same date were experienced in the British provinces, particularly at York, Montreal, and Quebec. The accounts in the Canada papers state that great fears were entertained, from the dense fog having continued for several days, that the fire was raging also on the north of the river St. Lawrence.

It will be seen by the following letter, that the Duke of BUCKINGHAM has consented to become the organ of the Roscommon Catholics, on the meeting of Parliament; and we think our readers will readily admit that a much more silly epistle never was submitted to their perusal:—

Avington, Nov. 6, 1825.

SIR—I have to acknowledge the honour of your letter of the 29th ultimo, informing me that the Aggregate Meeting of the Catholics of the County of Roscommon had resolved to entrust to my care the Petition to the House of Peers, praying from the Legislature a relief from the grievances under which they labour.

I feel highly gratified by the confidence which the meeting has been pleased to repose in me. I accept, with pleasure, the task which has been assigned to me; and, however inadequate may be my exertions to do justice to the grand cause which is involved in the prayer of the petition, my anxious wish will always be, to prove myself the steady, uncompromising friend of a measure, so deeply affecting the happiness of Ireland, the prosperity of the established Protestant Church, and the dearest interests of the empire. I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your very faithful humble Servant,

BUCKINGHAM and CHANDOS.

The O'Conor Don.

"So much for Buckingham," says RICHARD the Third; and so say we.

Our readers may probably remember, that in our sixteenth number, we mentioned the circumstance of an insult having been offered to the Marquis of HERTFORD by Mr. AUGUSTUS STANHOPE, in consequence of that gentleman having defrauded Lord YARMOUTH, the MARQUIS's son (when Lord BEAUCHAMP) of the sum of 16,000*l.*; for which offence he was, under sentence of a Court Martial, dated Nov. 8, 1826, dismissed his MAJESTY'S service. It will be found, on referring to our law report, that Lord HERTFORD has exhibited articles of the peace against Mr. STANHOPE for this assault; in recording the exact nature of which we made a trifling error, inasmuch as it was the carriage window, and not the person of the NOBLE MARQUIS, that was struck on the occasion allnded to. We cannot sufficiently commend his LORDSHIP'S very proper conduct in bringing the matter before the Court of King's Bench, on the repetition of such a disgraceful and daring outrage: and, on perusing the articles preferred by the NOBLE LORD, the reader will be possessed of the very perspicuous manner in which the particulars of this infamous transaction, and the subsequent aggravations of it, are by his Lordship therein detailed. We have before expressed our opinion of the steps adopted by the Marquis of HERTFORD, both in the original investigation of this affair, and in his Lordship's after resistance of the shameful extortions attempted to be practiced upon him in consequence thereof; and we cannot now dismiss the subject without recording the honest indignation we have heard so universally entertained at the insults offered to this exalted nobleman, as well as the general estimation of the paternal and manly motives which have actuated his LORDSHIP throughout the whole business.

Of the gentleman himself we forbear to say more, than to express our astonishment that it should ever for a moment have been supposed, that a person who could have been accessory to so black a transaction as the fraud committed on Lord BEAUCHAMP would hesitate at any violation of principle less magnitudinous in its consequences; and our wonder has been that Lord HERTFORD, in the excess of his goodness of heart, could for one instant believe, that a man who had broken his honor would scruple about breaking his word. His LORDSHIP must pardon us for saying, he should have exhibited his articles of the peace in the first instance, whereby he would have been protected from any renewal of the offence, although we must own that, by the delay in their preferment, we derive the one advantage of being more completely aware of Mr. STANHOPE's object, as intimated by him to Sir RICHARD BIRNIE. The gentleman seems to have entertained a very erroneous idea of the British Army, if he imagines that a man once dismissed from it, under such circumstances, can ever be restored to the rank he held in it; and a still more erroneous notion, if he conceived the conduct adopted by him was calculated to excite, in his favour, the influence of a Nobleman whom he has so deeply wronged, as he has the Marquis of HERTFORD.

ACCORDING TO COCKER.

It has been currently reported, that Mr. HUME has reached town for the purpose of computing the dividends on SAMUEL BAMFORD HAMER's failures, and has delivered his opinion that the sum of 12l. 6s., being the amount of the said HAMER's assets, in his Insolvency, in 1818, of 8,614l. 3s. 3d., yields a dividend of one farthing and three-eights in THE POUND, but that, owing to there being no assets on his Bankruptcy of 1823, the dividend therein will be even less!

LORD NUGENT'S MELODIES.

Though few of our readers will be induced to believe there is much "melody" in my Lord NUGENT, in spite of the airs he has lately given himself, we can nevertheless assure them, that a selection of Spanish Melodies has lately been published by this dignified Dragoon, and in some respects really entitled to public attention. They are ornamented with two vignettes, which are particularly striking—the first of which presents a view of the Gwennappe mines in the distance; on the right of the foreground is a fountain, with a young lady approaching it; she is tastefully drawn with one cup on her head, and another at her feet, by which it is quite evident she has "a cup too much," and therefore totally unfit to be so near to the said fountain; by her side is a very stout youth, who, we conclude, is intended for the noble author, while in the background appears a coach and six, evidently the Falmouth mail. From this view we proceed into the "department of the interior," and find the following beautiful version of that fine Spanish air, "Fuentecilla que en rauda coriente":—

The grief I experienced at parting
From one so beloved as thee,
Though heavy it sank my fond heart in,
Is still not so heavy as me!
For though 'tis dispuied by many,
'Twill sure be admitted by some,
That the weight of their sorrows to any
Is nought to the weight of their b——.

Farewell then—for sure not a pair of
Such lovers in wretchedness rove,
With my scissars I'll get me a hair of Thy head, as I've none by thy love.
In telling our fates and their sequel,
This one thing at least they will find,
That thou, love, before hadst no equal,
And I—not an equal behind.

There is something exceedingly touching in the last line of each verse, though we presume it must be rather difficult to execute the measure of it; exclusive of this, there is such a delicacy of expression, and so fine a tone of feeling conveyed throughout, that his Lordship has at once stamped himself as a lyrical poet of the first magnitude. In proceeding with the work, we come to the second engraving, which gives us a view of his LORDSHIP embarked for Cadiz, with a fiddle in his hand, and experiencing, by his own account, a great difficulty to raise the wind. His Lordship is at one end of the boat, and six men at the other; but, like the heaviest end of a boy's see-saw, the six men have the worst of it, for his LORDSHIP's weight has nearly swamped his end of the boat, and the rowers are nearly suspended in air. This, however, does not spoil my Lord's music, and indeed it would be a monstrous pity if it did, for we have seldom heard a more thrilling song than the following translation by his LORDSHIP, of the Spanish ballad:—

"Solo en amar halla ventura."

They may talk of one having a venture in love,
Of blisses and kisses, or any such stuff,
But I think it's no very hard matter to prove
That I've lately in one thing had venture enough.
While I gaze on thy vein, which so bright seems to shine,
And hear thee exclaim too that mine thou wilt be,
My thoughts still will wander on some other MINE,
And all of its vein which I happened to see!

Oh, freely and fondly I'll yield up my heart,
To ease for a moment thy anguish and pain;
Though really we're fools with our feelings to part,
Unless, by so doing, there's something to gain!
For should'st thou deceive me, 'twould hurt me indeed,
To know thou could'st ever have turned out amiss,
And the loss of thy virtue would make my heart bleed,
When I think what I've lost by ONE ore, as it is.

On the subject of this latter ballad, we have little hesitation in affirming that it is even superior to the other—there is a deeper vein of feeling runs through some of the lines—its shafts are more cutting—there is more of real character, and bears evident marks of being written from actual circumstances, which always gives an additional charm. The limits of this week's paper will not enable us to go into that length of extract which we had anticipated, and which indeed will naturally be expected in handling the works of men not more distinguished by the rank they hold in life, than by the splendid talents which adorn that rank; and if another opportunity should present itself, we shall certainly avail ourselves of it, with a view to do at once justice to the NOBLE POET, and afford full satisfaction to public curiosity.

We cannot omit to notice that the music is, all joking apart, very scientifically arranged by Mr. W. WEST, the comedian, and reflects considerable credit on his taste and industry. The profits of the work, we perceive, are to be applied to the relief of the Spanish emigrants; but we are apprehensive that the emigrants will touch very little of the Spanish, by the present display of my Lord NUGENT's muse.

SIR WALTER SCOTT was asked the other day how he could receive into his house, or even associate with, such a revolutionary character as TOM MOORE; upon which SIR WALTER remarked, "Oh, MOORE and I agree to a 't', for he is a Jacobine and I am a Jacobite."

The Courier of last night has the following paragraph:—

"It is asserted," says the Morning Chronicle, "that Mr. MYTTON, of Halsted, intends to offer himself for Shrewsbury." How is this? The present Member for Shrewsbury is the Hon. GREY BENNET. Does he not mean to offer himself again? We have seen no address—no letter, from the Hon. Member, stating his reasons for retiring. Perhaps it is on account of ill health, for we have heard that the Hon. Member is now in the South of Italy, though we do not remember to have seen any mention of his being indisposed. The Chronicle, we should suspect, is misinformed; or else there is some mystery behind, which it can explain.

TO JOHN CALCRAFT, ESQ. M.P.

London, November 17, 1825.

SIR—I have reason to believe, that the letter which I took the liberty of addressing you on the 14th of Aug. has been attended with some of those beneficial effects I was desirous it should produce; but as I am quite certain it has not attained all the objects I must have appeared to you so anxious to carry, I solicit your attention, for a second time, to those arguments I consider calculated to bring them about, and at the same time, your indulgence for this renewed intrusion on your time; although the critical situation in which DRURY LANE THEATRE now stands is in itself quite sufficient apology for this appeal to your judgment—for, interested as you have proved yourself in all its concernments, you cannot be ignorant of the very slight tenure by which it at this moment holds even the most partial share of public patronage—nor can you, on the same principle, be averse to a due consideration of any means by which that patronage is either to be momentarily increased, or perpetually retained. The primal error attendant on the proceedings of the present season is to be attributed to its commencement with one of the most inefficient companies ever assembled in its walls, the most perfect branch of which is still incomplete in one of its main features, while every other has barely a feature to boast of; and this circumstance alone, when viewed in comparison with the talent this theatre has congregated in some of its late seasons, is sufficient to create public disregard: but my purpose is to tell you, Sir, that, exclusive of this fact, the greatest pains have evidently been taken to place the company in the most disadvantageous point of view, by a selection of performances now enacted by persons appearing in their leading characters, who were before only looked upon as entitled to a second or third situation. By way of exemplifying this, I will venture to instance the peculiar case of Mr WALLACK, your new Stage Manager, who, in the fulfilment of the arduous duties of his joint station of actor and director, has had to contend with, probably, more difficulties than ever fell to the lot of any of his predecessors—he has to perform first and second tragedy, and first and second comedy, by which he is at once removed from melo-drama (his most perfect point of acting); and consequently (as in the instance of the Innkeeper's Daughter, where his fine personation of Richard is only rivalled by Miss KELLY's Mary), the revival of any such piece is rendered incomplete—the evident cause of its failure—and an opprobrium attached to the performer that does not in reality belong to him; and, exclusive of this consideration, his general arrangements become liable to censure; for, as the principal actor, Mr. WALLACK is compelled to put himself forward on almost every occasion, and people are much more disposed, in the common spirit of malignity and slander, to attribute such appearances to the vanity of the actor, rather than to the necessities of the manager;—and, added to all these considerations, it is apparent to the meanest capacity that the claims of one office, multiplied as they have this season been, entirely unfit him for the fulfilment of the other. I consider, therefore, the opening of the Theatre, without a leading actor, the deepest injustice to Mr. WALLACK; and every moment that station remains unfilled is aggravating the injury already inflicted; but even a more important view of it than that is, the injury thereby done to the Theatre—you cannot expect a person to pay seven shillings to see OTHELLO acted without either Mr. KEAN or YOUNG (or some efficient substitutes), when they have seen it, for the same money, with both of them in it; or, to speak even more strongly, it can never be expected, for one moment, that people will come to see an Opera supported by Mr. HORN, Miss GRADDON, and others, when they have seen the same piece personated by BRAHAM, LISTON, Miss STEPHENS, and Madame VESTRIS; the bare supposition, or rather expectation, is quite laughable; and from this very fact arises all the mischief that may ensue, and will, to a much greater extent, unless the error be immediately rectified. It is to this main point then, Sir, I would take the liberty of directing your particular, undivided, and immediate attention, as one involving, in its decision, the best interests of the property, nominally under your protection; and it is with the more gratifying feeling I do so, from the knowledge I possess of the remedy being within your reach; for while Mr. YOUNG is permitted to ride unengaged round our City, and Drury-lane Theatre is without a principal tragedian, I consider the Trustees of that concern are violating all the duties of the charge reposed in them, and committing an outrage on common observation—they are shutting for ever the doors of that Theatre to the genius of our authors, who never will submit their productions to the mercy of the present representation they would meet—they are allowing the public to point out to them what they might have pointed out to the public—they are *under*rating eventually the performers they have, by allowing them at present to *over*rate themselves; and altogether incurring those evils which will turn out of the most disastrous nature. In the same crisis, although not to so great an extent, is the operatic department of Drury-lane Theatre involved; for Mr. BRAHAM and Mr. SINCLAIR are both idle, while their substitutes are nightly introduced in the very operas they have made almost by prescription their own; nor is there any argument by which so vital a recommendation as the one I am now pressing on you can be opposed by you, or frustrated by others. To talk of any compact between two rival properties, by which the public are to be deprived of their proper enjoyment, or by which, owing to circumstances, one theatre is to flourish on the ruins of another, is sheer rhodomontade; and it is not in the power of any foresight in management actually to regulate the success of its undertakings. Besides, the principle on which I urged the directors of the two establishments to proceed, with regard to the reduction of their performers' salaries, or rather their avarice, has been negatived by the terms given to Madame VESTRIS at one house, and Miss KELLY, and, subsequently, Mr. LISTON, at the other; and the rule which, if mutually and strictly preserved, might have mutually aided the respective interests of each property, being once infringed, should be extended to those engagements calculated to give a permanent consequence to the company, instead of creating a momentary curiosity, which, once gratified, will subside into even deeper obscurity than it was before. It is in this light I presume to view the engagement of that distinguished and justly popular comedian Mr. LISTON; who comes to you for a month, at an enormous salary, on no other principle than his having lately made a considerable impression at another theatre, in a play of that theatre's exclusive property. Paul Pry cannot be acted at Drury-lane Theatre; and even if it could, its transfer would cancel the attraction—it is written for and adapted to the exigencies of the Haymarket, and its great feature is a Haymarket performer; by which I wish to imply, that his powers are there more thoroughly received and understood—both his audience and he are on that thorough intimacy which constitutes half his charm, and which in a larger sphere cannot, and very properly so, exist; and although I would not for a moment gainsay the advantage of Mr. LISTON's talents any where, I yet maintain that the Haymarket presents the only arena where they can prove of individual attraction, and be duly displayed and appreciated. I therefore maintain that, possessing already one established comedian, the theatre should have devoted the money by which another has been tempted to act for a month, in part towards the engagement for the season of actors to support the chief ones of the concern; for allowing Mr. LISTON to attend during his short engagement, what is to become of the Theatre the other six months of its exertion, depressed as it must be by any previous attraction that may be created? If I am told that Mr. MACREADY is to appear at Easter, I can only say, I lament it. As a single-handed feature, he is literally worth nothing, and the only way by which his services could be rendered at all available, was to have put on him the harness of his employers for the whole period of their season, and uniting with others, have borne up the difficulties always attendant on this dull period of public excitement; but if this tragedian is to appear for twelve nights at the time of the year when the influx to the metropolis is such that any novelty will attract, he is worse than valueless, because he merely comes to produce a new tragedy (as hitherto has been the case), which just runs through the last six nights of his engagement, entailing on the treasury the expence of author and outfit, and obtaining for himself a momentary popularity that carries him, with a new feature, through his Summer's provincial campaign: and, of course, depriving the Theatre of all power of representing the play again, unless in a mutilated state, owing to the secession of its principal performer. If, however, this actor be engaged, it is only a still more cogent reason why an instant arrangement should be entered upon with Mr. YOUNG; for, in that case, if even Mr YOUNG's immediate assistance did not prove of that value there is reason to believe it would, we well know his coalition hereafter with Mr. MACREADY would repay in a treble degree the expense of his previous exertions, and add, moreover, a consequence and dignity to the establishment it is now so much in want of. If there was any necessity for advancing an additional argument on the subject, I need only refer you to the late announcements which have issued from the Drury-lane cabinet, wherein is manifested, not alone a disinclination or inability to procure talent, but a total want of tact in applying the talent it already possesses—wherein an abortive attempt has been made to foist on the public premature ability, an attempt which equally injures the respectability and welfare of the stage, and the future prospects of the giddy adventurer—and wherein the duties of providing for public opinion and recreation, that novelty of amusement prescriptively and customarily their due, has been compromised by the revival of some olden pageantry, neither so accurate or so pleasing as in its pristine state, consequently without the least attraction, and only therefore incurring those expences without any advantage, which, bestowed on entire novelty, might have turned to a very material one.

It may probably be considered, by those who feel interested enough to peruse, and, above all, to weigh these suggestions in their mind, that there is an apparent neglect, or partial indelicacy, in submitting them to a gentleman in no other respect connected with the management of the Theatre, or its general arrangements, than being the selected overseer of its vested property; but to those scruples I have only to say, that were there no other motive for so doing, the indisposition under which it is known Mr. ELLISTON has so long laboured, would be quite inducement enough—for, in addition to the feebleness of body, we know that the lassitude it inflicts on the mind, often creates that nervousness, and, above all, engenders those prejudices, at once fatal to all business. But, exclusive of these reasons, the great influence you very justly possess over your LESSEE, the deference with which your own opinions are regarded, and the weight your personal interference with the representatives of the drama invariably carries, are quite arguments enough, and furnish me with any apology that may seem due to the Manager himself, and with any answer to public controversy. With this premise, therefore, I take the liberty of directing again and again your utmost attention to the grand points of this humble appeal. I maintain, that in you is now vested the power of placing your Theatre in the same envied light it has hitherto stood in—of forming a powerful competition with your rival, and of eventually realizing, on the present year's exertions, the profit which has crowned the undertakings of preceding ones. I maintain, that the grounds on which you are called upon to exercise that power, are the ACTUAL SECURITY of the Theatre; that a leading actor and a leading singer (both of which are to be had), added to the announced engagements of Miss STEPHENS, Mr. LISTON, and hereafter Mr. MACREADY, will raise Drury-lane Theatre as many degrees in the scale of public estimation, as now it stands fallen; that you will thereby awaken the dormant energies of our best authors and composers, and, by a general coalition of all your means, create that spirit of rivalry and thirst for popular favour that now is spiritless and dead. An antagonist, at all times, is to be looked upon as such, whatever the relative or political views which may bring him for a time into the compromise of hostility; and you must be aware that virtually there can be no more real amity or good understanding, by which the motives of the two great Councils are to be regulated than, speaking somewhat importantly, between the deliberations of contending nations. You may covenant not to pay performers beyond a certain given salary, and by a touch of Jesuitism contrive the next moment to engage another beyond that stipulation, in defiance of this principle—you may bargain not to distinguish in your public bills the efforts of either actors or writers, but the next day you may give a MONKEY the distinction you consented not to give a man—therefore all such prohibitions or restrictions are laid down just one moment to be broken in upon, in a circuitous manner, by the exigencies or fancies of the next. I took the liberty, in my former address, of inveighing as strongly as possible, against the alarming payments now made to performers, and still feel quite as much as I then did, the vast necessity of retrenchment—but the weapons used by your enemy must not be wrenched from you—if any man has the audacity to ask 150*l.* a week for his services, and any manager is ass enough to give it, complaint ceases from that moment, and his rival is quite at liberty to do whatever may answer his purpose—the system is one of horror, in any shape, and can never be abolished till a mutual understanding exists between the two belligerent powers, and such at present is totally out of the question; and the principle therefore by which one treasury is even partially filled must not be the means of emptying the other.

I have many apologies to make to you, Sir, for this intrusion on your valuable time, and for this taxation of services that are doubtless called in requisition for other, perhaps more important, duties; but I am induced to believe that the impulse which has hitherto actuated all your feelings in behalf of the property over which you are nominated Guardian, will not be withheld on this trying occasion—but that, with renewed, or rather unabated, energy, you will apply your best councils in behalf of its present proceedings, and eventually effect an object that will not be more gratifying to your feelings than confirmatory of the distinguished character entertained of you by all who know you, and by no one more than to him who has the honor to subscribe himself,

Your respectful Servant,
OBSERVATOR.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH—THURSDAY.

THE MARQUIS OF HERTFORD V. THE HON. AUGUSTUS STANHOPE.

This morning, after some common motions were disposed of before Mr. Justice Bayley, the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Littledale took their seats on the Bench, when

The Attorney-General rose, and moved the Court, on the part of the Marquis of Hertford, to grant articles of the peace against the Hon. Augustus Stanhope.

The Marquis of Hertford, who sat on the Bench with the Judges, swore to the affidavit on which the motion was founded. It was as follows:—

"This exhibitant, on his oath, saith, that in the year 1816, he received information that this exhibitant's son, then commonly called Lord Beauchamp, a youth of the age of sixteen years, had been invited to the military quarters of the said Augustus Stanhope, then a Lieutenant in his Majesty's 12th Light Dragoons, quartered at Paris, and had been, by the said Augustus Stanhope and another person, induced to play at cards, and had been by them made to give promissory notes to the amount of 16,000*l.* or thereabouts, as his supposed losings, in a few hours' play. That in consequence of this information, he, this exhibitant, did make application to the Commander-in-Chief that his Royal Highness should be pleased to order an investigation to be had into the said transaction. That a Court Martial was accordingly held, as this deponent is informed and verily believes, at Cambrai, on or about the 23d day of September, in the said year 1816, upon the said Augustus Stanhope, who was there charged with 'behaving in a scandalous and infamous manner, such as was unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, in conspiring with a certain other person to draw in and seduce Lord Beauchamp to game and play with them for the purposes of gain and advantage; and in pursuance of such conspiracy, playing with the said Lord Beauchamp, at a certain game of chance with cards, claiming of him for losses at the said game, 8,000*l.* and upwards, and 7,000*l.* and upwards, the said Lord Beauchamp being at that time about sixteen years of age, ignorant of and unused to play, and affected by the wine he had been prevailed upon to take by the said parties.' Upon which said charge the said Augustus Stanhope was found guilty, and sentenced to be discharged his Majesty's service, which said sentence was afterwards, as exhibitant believes, duly confirmed and carried into effect.

"And this exhibitant further saith, he believes, that in consequence of the said Court Martial, and of its having taken place on the representation of this exhibitant as aforesaid, the said Augustus Stanhope hath conceived great rancour and hatred against this exhibitant.

"And this exhibitant further saith, that for the space of eight years or thereabouts, after the sentence of the said Court Martial, this exhibitant had no communication whatsoever, either directly or indirectly, with the said Augustus Stanhope; but this exhibitant saith, that after the death of the late Marquis of Hertford, and the succession of this exhibitant to the title and estates—namely, on the 22d of July, 1822, this exhibitant was personally insulted while riding in Hyde Park, by a person whom he did not then even know by sight, but whom he afterwards found to be the said Augustus Stanhope, whereupon this exhibitant, on advice and recommendation of his friends, applied to Sir Richard Birnie, the Chief Police Magistrate of Bow-street, to take such proceedings as were necessary to protect this exhibitant against the violence or insults of the said Augustus Stanhope, when, upon the said Augustus Stanhope giving his word of honour to the said Chief Magistrate, and positively assuring his father, the Earl of Harrington, that the conduct complained of should not be repeated, as appears by a letter from the said Chief Magistrate to this exhibitant, and also by a letter from the said Earl to his Grace the Duke of Wellington, now in this exhibitant's possession, this exhibitant was prevailed upon to take no further proceedings upon that occasion.

"And this exhibitant further saith, that notwithstanding such engagement to the Chief Magistrate, and such promise to his father, the said Earl of Harrington, the said Augustus Stanhope did, after an interval of some months, renew his molestations against this exhibitant in the public streets, purposely to insult and irritate this exhibitant as he verily believes.

"And this exhibitant further saith, that on the 20th day of August last, this exhibitant was in his carriage, in Grosvenor-square, when the said Augustus Stanhope, being on horseback, rode up to this exhibitant's carriage, and put his stick into the side window of the said carriage, and struck the same against the front glass window thereof, in a manner calculated, and, as this exhibitant verily believes, intended, to insult, menace, and provoke this exhibitant to a breach of the peace.

"And this exhibitant further saith, that, in consequence of this conduct of the said Augustus Stanhope, the exhibitant again applied to the said Sir Richard Birnie, to obtain protection of the law; and was afterwards informed by the said Sir Richard Birnie, and which information this exhibitant believes to be true, that the said Augustus Stanhope had, in consequence of notice from the said Sir Richard Birnie, called on him and declared that 'he would use every means of annoyance short of actual assault, for the purpose of wringing this exhibitant's feelings, if he had any, until this exhibitant should, either by his political influence obtain his the said Augustus Stanhope's restoration to rank in the army, or obtain a place, office, or employment of a certain named amount and value, or pay him a sum of money:' and the said Augustus Stanhope further stated, 'that he should not extend his annoyance beyond gestures and whispers during his father's life; that he had taken advice, and thought he had not in these acts of molestation, employed to obtain some one or other of the objects before mentioned, passed the line within which he thought himself safe.

"And this exhibitant further saith, that he doth verily believe that the said Augustus Stanhope hath acted, and still continues and intends to act, on a premeditated plan to insult, disquiet, and annoy this exhibitant, for the purpose of intimidating or alarming him into some payment, exertion of influence, compromise, or of irritating and provoking him to commit a breach of the peace.

"And this exhibitant on his oath also saith, that he doth not make this complaint against the said Augustus Stanhope through any hatred, malice, or ill-will which he hath or beareth towards him, but merely for the preservation of himself from bodily harm, violence, and insult, he, this exhibitant, not now having, nor ever having had, any personal acquaintance with, or knowledge of the said Augustus Stanhope, nor any difference nor cause of difference with the said Augustus Stanhope, other than the representation made by this exhibitant as before mentioned to the Commander-in-Chief in the year 1816, and which this exhibitant thought himself bound by his duty to make."

The Lord Chief Justice—Are you aware, Mr. Attorney, of any instance where articles of the peace have been granted upon information received from a third party?

The Attorney-General—I am not, my Lord, aware of any such instance. The original conduct of Mr. Stanhope forms the ground of this application. His first insult was in July, and it was repeated in August last.

The Lord Chief Justice—Still a long interval has elapsed, and that affords a reason why the Court might not be disposed to grant the application.

The Attorney-General—My Lord, the Noble Marquis swears that he apprehends some harm from the conduct of Mr. Stanhope.

The Lord Chief Justice—It would be much more satisfactory, Mr. Attorney, if a precedent could be found; or, in the absence of any case on the subject, if a sufficient reason were assigned to justify the interference of the Court.

The Attorney-General—My Lord, though I have looked attentively through several authorities, yet I have not been able to find any case.

Mr. Justice Bayley—Then your premises are founded on what you have heard from Sir R. Birnie?

The Attorney-General—Certainly, my Lord. What Sir Richard Birnie has stated shows the motive by which Mr. Stanhope is actuated.

Mr. Justice Bayley—That only refers to future intention.

The Attorney-General then said he would apply to Sir Richard Birnie, to obtain an affidavit of the facts, or for a sufficient reason why no affidavit was made.

The Court ordered that the case should be mentioned again either to-morrow morning, or in the course of this day.

About three o'clock Sir Richard Birnie came down to Court and made the affidavit required in the Marquis of Hertford's case, verifying the statements contained in the affidavit of the Noble Marquis.

THE KING ON THE PROSECUTION OF FITZHARDINGE BERKELEY V HAMER AND BRYAN.

It will be recollected that in the course of last week, a rule Nisi for a criminal information was obtained against the defendants, one of whom is proprietor, and the other printer and publisher of a Sunday Newspaper called Common Sense, or the Weekly Globe, for a libel upon Colonel Berkeley, (by imputing to him that he secreted himself in Miss Foote's bedchamber at Edinburgh,) in the number of that paper of the 23d of October last.

The Attorney-General now showed cause against the rule. On behalf of Mr. Hamer, he was instructed to say, and this was confirmed by affidavit, that the defendant knew nothing of the paragraph in question, until it appeared in the paper; and for Mr. Bryan, the other defendant, it was sworn that Common Sense being a weekly paper, this paragraph was copied, as usual, from similar paragraphs, which appeared in all the Morning Papers. These affidavits, therefore, negatived all malice on the part of the defendants.

Lord Chief Justice.—Well, what do the other side say to this; are they satisfied?

Mr. Brougham.—By no means; our principal objection applies to that part of the paragraph which has not been copied.

The Attorney-General—We swear that it was communicated to us in the usual way with all other contributions.

Lord Chief Justice—What is that mode? we can know nothing of it.

The Attorney-General—The common practice is to put these communications into the Editor's box.

Mr. Brougham—The paragraph states that the information was conveyed to the paper by a "Private Correspondent," which takes the cause out of the usual course.

The Attorney-General—These, my Lord, are the instructions I have received from my clients. I told them it was no answer to the criminal information; but I have done my duty in submitting them to your Lordships.

Lord Chief Justice—The rule must be made absolute of course. Rule absolute.

FRIDAY.—CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

Mr. Adolphus moved for a rule to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed, at the instance of a gentleman named Bunn (husband of the celebrated actress of that name), against the proprietor and printer of a Weekly Newspaper, called Common Sense, or the Weekly Globe, for a scandalous and infamous libel, tending to impute to Mr. Bunn a propensity of a horrible nature. The alleged libel, he said, was not stated in the common and ordinary way, but was introduced by the Editor as a conspicuous notice to correspondents, informing the public that the complainant was a person of the description alluded to. In a notice to correspondents, Mr. Bunn was mentioned, and mixed up with certain persons who had been notoriously the objects of scorn and indignation, on account of their atrocious vices. The Learned Counsel read the libellous paragraph, which we forbear to repeat. He said that Mr. Bunn, in the most distinct and unequivocal terms repelled, in his affidavit, the infamous insinuation mentioned in the paragraph.

The Court granted a rule to shew cause.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MARYLEBONE OFFICE.—The most intense interest was excited on Wednesday at this Office, in consequence of the apprehension of Stanley de Courcey Ireland, who stands charged with being concerned in various extensive acts of swindling, in connection with an individual styling himself the "Honourable Frederick Ponsonby," after obtaining possession of a splendid mansion in Gloucester-place, through the recommendation of R. Martin, Esq. the Member of Parliament for Galway.

Stowel, the officer, has been particularly on the alert, and the result of his inquiries was the discovery of Ireland's abode, which he ascertained to be in an obscure court, in the Borough, where he has been living in a sad contrast from the splendid manner in which things were carried on at 91, Gloucester-place, under the name of Jones. Stowel took him by surprise after a short preparatory conversation, and brought him in a coach to this office.

The circumstance soon gained wind, and was circulated pretty generally at the West-end of the town, especially among the most respectable tradesmen, who flocked in great numbers to this office. Stowel, having secured the prisoner, proceeded to the King's Bench prison, where he received information that the woman, who acted as housekeeper, was, and he took her also into custody, and brought her to the office, where she and her master were locked up until the arrival of Mr. Rawlinson, the Magistrate, whose indefatigable exertions in this case deserve the highest eulogy.

Mr. Rawlinson, Mr. Griffiths, Lord Mountford, Sir P. Laurie, and other gentlemen were on the Bench

The usual business being gone through, the prisoner Ireland, and Eliza Gravett, the housekeeper, were conducted into the Court and placed at the bar, where every eye was directed towards him with the most anxious curiosity, while he seemed low spirited, but firm. He was attired in black, is of a gentlemanly appearance, possesses a superior address, and appears to be about 30 years of age. The housekeeper is a homely looking personage about 40, and is of decent appearance.

Stowel, the officer, being sworn, stated, that in consequence of having received information that the prisoner Ireland was lodging in the neighbourhood of the Borough, he proceeded thither yesterday morning about eight o'clock, and, in a small Court in William-street, Suffolk-street, where he was informed the prisoner lived, he made inquiry whether a Mr. Jones lodged there; he ascertained that such a gentleman resided in the court, and the house was pointed out to him. He knocked at the door, which on being opened, he asked the individual whether Mr. Jones lodged there. He was answered in the affirmative, and the prisoner Ireland, who was brushing his boots in the yard, was pointed out as Mr. Jones. Witness proceeded towards him, and said, "How do you do, Mr. Jones, good morning;" he replied, "Very well;" on which witness asked, "Where is your friend Mr. Ponsonby?" The prisoner hesitated. Witness then said, "I believe your name is Ireland, and not Jones." The prisoner said his name was not Ireland. Witness knew to the contrary, and informed him that he had a warrant, charging him with various acts of fraud, and it was his duty to take him into custody, which he accordingly did. Witness went up stairs to search his bed-room, but he found nothing of any consequence. He ultimately confessed that his name was Ireland. On searching his pockets he found several papers, a card-case, with one of the Hon. Mr. Frederick Ponsonby's cards.

Mr. Goulding, the solicitor for the prosecution, asked Stowel whether it was before or after he was searched, that he denied his name was Ireland?

Stowel said, it was before he was searched. He found a letter from an attorney in Ireland, a letter directed to Colonel Martin, and others, together with the deed of agreement signed by Mr. Marsh, for the house, No. 91, Gloucester-place, and also two duplicates, one for some knives and forks, pledged in the name of Mrs. Brooks, and the other for some muslin which was pledged for nine shillings in the name of Cockrel. Having heard that the female prisoner was acting as servant to Mrs. Saunders, in the King's Bench prison, he preceeded thither, and told her that he had a warrant against her for fraud, and he was to take her into custody. She replied that she was happy it had come to this issue, as the matter would be investigated. She had ever since walked in great fear.

Mr. Rawlinson asked the prisoner whether he wished to put any questions to the officer; he replied that he did not.

Mr. Joseph Daniels, silversmith and cutler, of No. 214, Oxford-street, stated that he knew the prisoner, Ireland, by sight only. He did not order any of the goods from witness. In October last, a gentleman came to his shop and requested to see some table and dessert knives, which were produced to him, and he gave an order for three dozen of the former, and two dozen of the latter. He afterwards called and gave another order for two dozen snuffer plates, and three dozen more of dessert knives and forks. He gave witness his name Ponsonby, and left a card of Mr. Ireland's address, "Mr. Stanley de Courcy Ireland, 91, Gloucester-place," where the property was to be carried to.

Mr. Rawlinson.—When did you first see Ireland?

Witness.—When I took home the property. I at first hesitated as to leaving it, but on making inquiry about the neighbourhood, some spoke well and others ill of the house, and I at length left it, and I could not afterwards get my money, although my patience was tired out calling for it.

William Weston, shopman to Mr. Bentham, pawnbroker, of 244, High Holborn, stated, that on the 12th of October last, he received in pledge three dozen dessert knives and forks; a man came and pawned them; he gave his name "John Gordon;" he received 4l. on them. The female prisoner afterwards brought a dozen more, and another pound was advanced. Witness could not recollect what passed on the occasion. The man who first came brought a letter along with the things.

Mr. Rawlinson.—What was the substance of that letter?

Witness.—It was a recommendatory letter, which stated that the writer, knowing them to take in such pledges, had advised the prisoner's master to pledge there. He (witness) was by when the female prisoner came to the shop, but he did not hear what she said. Witness produced the knives and forks.

Mr. Daniels said he had no hesitation in swearing that they were his property, and the same that he delivered at the house in Gloucester-place, on the 11th of October.

Mr. Rawlinson (to Weston)—Was the letter destroyed?

Weston—We generally pin them to the property, but on searching I could not find it. Did not know how it was lost.

Mr. Rawlinson ordered that Mr. Bentham should attend himself, and if possible produce that letter. It was very strange, he said, that it had not been kept safe.

Mr. Vickery, of 154, Regent-street, and of 3, Saville-row stated, that a gentleman, giving his name Ponsonby, called at his shop and requested to be shewn some patent glass, which witness produced to him, and he ordered a valuable set of decanters, &c. to be sent the next day for approval to Mr. Ireland, 91, Gloucester-place. He accordingly sent them, and the witness went to the house to ascertain whether they were approved of, when he was informed they were not. He saw the Hon. Mr. Ponsonby, who chose a set for 20 guineas, but witness said he expected ready money. He was ordered to call upon Mr. Ireland the next day with the property. He did so, and saw the prisoner (Ireland), who told the witness that Mr. Ireland had gone out of town, and he might leave the property. The patent glass now produced was that which he left at the house.

Mr. Rawlinson.—Have you any doubt that the prisoner is the person who said that Mr. Ireland was out of town?

Answer.—He was positive that he was the same person.

Mr. Rawlinson.—When did you leave the property at the house?

Mr. Vickery.—On the 11th of October.

Mr. Bentham's young man said he received them in pledge on the 12th of October.

Mr. Rawlinson asked Ireland whether he wished to ask Mr. Vickery any questions?

Ireland.—Did I not say, Mr. Vickery, bring them home when the gentleman who ordered them returns to town, and he will pay you for them.

Mr. Vickery.—You said that Mr. Ireland was out of town.

Ireland.—Mind what you say; it was quite impossible that I could have used such language.

Mr. Wm. Saxby, china-merchant, of Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, stated, that he did not know either of the prisoners. On the 12th October a person, styling himself the Hon. Frederick Ponsonby, called at his shop, and looked at a valuable tea service and dessert service; and after a short time, he said he was going to walk down St. James's-street, and he would look in again. He looked in again, and ordered them to be sent to 91, Gloucester-place, for the inspection of a lady. He gave no card.

George Hill, porter to the last witness, stated, that he took the property home the next day. When Ponsonby had left, Lady Alice Peel called in, and wished to have the tea service which he had ordered, and she said she would wait the refusal of Mr. Ponsonby's Lady. When witness arrived at Gloucester-place, he was ushered into the drawing-room; the prisoner came in soon after, and Ponsonby followed; the latter took the things down stairs one by one, saying, he was showing them to a lady. Witness told him that Lady Alice Peel had taken a fancy to them; he smiled, saying, "Ah! I know Lady Alice Peel very well—an intimate friend of mine, therefore I shall soon decide." He went next morning with the dessert set; he saw Gravett in the drawing-room; she spoke highly of the property, and said they were very pretty. He left the property, and never saw them since.

Mr. Saxton said, that the manners and appearance of the person who ordered them drove away all suspicion from his mind.

George Miller, of the firm of Miller and Co., of 180, Piccadilly, oil and lamp warehouse, stated, that Ponsonby ordered lamps to be sent to the amount of 6l., and the prisoner Gravett ordered candles to the amount of 9l. She described Mr. Ponsonby as a rich young man, about to be married.

Mr. Rawlinson, on examining the letters found on him by Stowel, found one directed to himself, complaining of the accounts of the swindling transactions appearing in the papers, in which he was calumniated, when he had taken no part in Mr. Ponsonby's actions. He had merely contracted a debt of 60l., which he meant to pay; and he was determined to have the first legal opinions, and seek redress, if possible. A conspiracy had been formed against him, and he disavowed all that had been attributed to him.

Considerable interest was now spread, in consequence of a report that Ponsonby was taken into custody, while offering something in pledge at Mr. Neate's, a pawnbroker in Duke-street, Manchester-square. The officers instantly repaired thither, and shortly brought a young man into the office with a cast in one of his eyes, which caused the mistake, as Ponsonby is afflicted that way.

Mr. Rawlinson asked him his name?—He gave it Knatchbull.

Mr. Rawlinson—Do you know Ponsonby?

Prisoner—Not personally. I only have heard of him through the medium of the Newspapers. Sir Peter Laurie knows me very well.—Sir Peter—But I have not seen you for some time. None of the witnesses could identify him as Ponsonby, and he produced a letter from Sir E. Knatchbull.

Mr. Rawlinson regretted that the mistake should have occurred, and discharged the gentleman, who seemed to feel the unpleasant dilemma which an unfortunate deformity of the eyes had plunged him into. He asked what redress he could seek?—He was told that Mr. Neate was amenable, but as it was a mistake he ought to look over it.

Ireland, in his defence, said that Ponsonby ordered the things unknown to him.

Mr. Rawlinson could hardly believe it; the circumstance of saying that Ireland was out of town looked very suspicious. He would not go so far as to say there was the intention of felony proved, but there was quite sufficient to prove that there had been a conspiracy to defraud.

Ireland.—I submit, your Worship, that there is no charge whatever against me.

Mr. Rawlinson.—There is sufficient for me to commit you for trial immediately; but in order that other charges may be brought forward I shall remand you.

Ireland.—I disavow every thing I am charged with. I prevented Ponsonby doing many acts. I never took a part in them.

Mr. Rawlinson.—Why here is a letter from Mr. Ponsonby, from Belmont, Kilkenny, in which you were directed by him to get him a house, and the letter was directed to you with one of Mr. Martin's, and it was the face of that letter that got you the house in Gloucester-place; so don't make your case worse than it is. I advise you, for your own good, to procure professional advice.

Ireland.—I am not conscious of having committed any offence. I am not to be accountable for the actions of Ponsonby. He never denied himself to Mr. Vickery.

Gravett said that she was hired as housekeeper, and acted under her master's directions.

The prisoners were remanded for a week.

A young fellow named Stephen Taylor, was brought before Mr. Rawlinson on Wednesday last by the parish officers, who charged him with neglecting to maintain his wife; but that charge ended in his being detained for bigamy.

It appeared by the evidence of the wife, that she was married to the prisoner about five years ago, at which time they were fellow-servants in a respectable family. Shortly after they were married he left her; and in about nine months afterwards she learned that he had been previously married, and that his first wife was still living. In consequence of this discovery she made search for him, and having found him living in service in a different part of the town, she taxed him with the fact and he did not deny it; but not liking to prosecute him for the bigamy, she went into service again, where she continued until she had the "misfortune to have a child" by some other person, and she was compelled to apply to the parish for relief.

The parish officers said they had taken some trouble to find him, and they requested he might be remanded for a week, in order that they might send to Portsmouth, and procure the necessary evidence of his first marriage.

He was accordingly ordered to be brought up again on Monday next.

David Munday, a hackney coachman, appearing yesterday before Mr. Griffiths, charged by a young woman, named Mary Child, with having taken more than his legal fare.

The complainant said, that three months ago she took the defendant's coach from No. 16, Montagu-square, to the Green Man and Still, in Oxford-street, for which the fare is one shilling. The coachman, however, demanded five shillings, and told her that his master had ordered him to demand it. As she had paid her fare to Brighton, and the stage coach was waiting for her, she was obliged to pay his demand; but she told him she should summons him when she returned to town. The defendant, Munday, was not the man who drove the coach.

Munday said he was the owner of the coach. The driver was "out of the way," or he would have attended. In reply to the charge, he said the coach was not taken off the stand, but out of the mews, and at seven o'clock in the morning, whereas he did not go on to the stand till eight. He therefore considered that under these circumstances he had a right to charge a little extra.

Mr. Griffiths told him he was mistaken, and convicted him in the penalty of twenty shillings with costs, and ordered him to return the little extra, which he did, and was discharged.

QUEEN-SQUARE.—Thursday James Gillmore, the chief constable belonging to this office, who had been directed to inquire into the state of Mr Carter, the man whose wife unhappily cut and stabbed him on Wednesday se'nnight, returned to the Sitting Magistrate (Mr. White), with the following certification of Carter's condition from the House Surgeon to the Westminster Infirmary:—"I cannot yet pronounce James Carter free from danger."

Mr. White, upon receiving the notification, thought it proper to order the further detention of Mrs. Carter, now in Tothill-fields prison, till Thursday next.

Mr. Carter, the injured man, wished his wife to be liberated now. Carter still vomits. Till that symptom is more abated, he cannot be deemed free from an unfavourable turn.

Notice to Coachmakers and Traders.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-street, every Morning, at a Quarter past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, Bristol, at a Quarter past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside....2l. 5s. Outside..... 1l. 15s.

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1s. 6d. per head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3s. per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-st., at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, Melksham, &c.

FARES.—Inside....1l. 18s. Outside.... 18s.

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

The Directors will not be answerable for the safety of any parcel exceeding 5l. in value, unless the amount be stated when booked.

ROEBUCK IRON FOUNDRY, Stove Grate Manufactory, and general Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—CRUNDALL and HALLEN acknowledge the liberal support they have received from the Nobility and Gentry, and, in consequence of the very considerable increase of business, they have found it expedient to enlarge their premises to a great extent, which has enabled them to offer for sale a most extensive and elegant ASSORTMENT of DRAWING ROOM and other STOVES, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage, of the most superior workmanship and design to any house in the kingdom. Feaders, fire irons, and kitchen ranges on the most improved principles, and every description of furnishing ironmongery for the approaching season. A large assortment of patent warm air stoves, ascending or descending flues, adapted for halls, offices, warehouses, and shops. Also the admirable economical patent French table lamps, in the greatest variety, diffusing a light equal to 6 wax candles, from 28s. upwards, full 50 per cent. under any house in the kingdom. Manufacturers of every article of fence work for parks, balconies, verandas, entrance gates, hurdles, &c., and from the extensive machinery and convenience of their premises, including the late reduction of iron, they are enabled now to offer the above considerably under in price to any house in the kingdom. Orders of any magnitude executed with promptness, by addressing a line to Crundall and Hallen, Roebuck Iron Foundry and Stove Grate Manufactory, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—N. B. Every description of castings made to order or model. Prompt payment, and no abatement.

PATRONIZED by His MAJESTY, and the ROYAL FAMILY; their Imperial Majesties, the EMPEROR and EMPRESS of RUSSIA; the EMPERORS of PERSIA and CHINA; Their Serene Highnesses the DUKE and PRINCE of BRUNSWICK, and most of the Nobility and Gentry.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

the ORIGINAL and GENUINE, which has for many years been universally admired; also acknowledged pre-eminent, for nourishing the Hair, preventing it from being injured by illness, change of climate, study, travelling, accouchment, &c.; removes scurf, harshness, and dryness; renders it soft and glossy; prevents its falling off or turning grey; creates a thick growth on the baldest places; produces a beautiful effect on natural or artificial hair, rendering it

ADMIRABLY SOFT AND ELEGANTLY FLOWING,

producing BEAUTIFUL CURLS, adding a most incomparable, transcendant, and beautiful lustre, rendering the head-dress truly enchanting. Ask for "ROWLAND'S" MACASSAR OIL, at 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. Also

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR,

which resists the attacks of inclement weather, and immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin produced by cold winds; prevents the skin from chapping, and renders harsh and rough Skin soft; and even removes Freckles, Pimples, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; imparts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, &c. To prevent fraud, ask for "ROWLAND'S," and observe the new label (engraved by Perkins and Heath) on the Oil; strictly observing the label of each article has the signature and address in red—"A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-Garden."

Sold by them and by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine-venders in town and country.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE.

THE Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is,—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear, smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for MRS. VINCENT'S GOWLAND'S LOTION, and see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor:—

"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating, that, by the use of two quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing Virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."

Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's, 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Bow Church yard; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers, and Dealers in Genuine Medicines, in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.

 To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the Genuine.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a Physician and Botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles, at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles, one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet-market.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are particularly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street; and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Pront, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's-court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76 Oxford-street; White, 1, and Yard, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom. Mr. Renard, 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of of these Pills in Paris.

LOCKHART's never-failing Remedy for the TOOTH-ACHE.—Mr. LOCKHART respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and Public at large, that from the repeated solicitations of those who have found instantaneous relief from the torment of the Tooth-Ache, by his truly fortunate discovery in a never-failing and certain Cure for one of the most grievous maladies to which human nature is subjected, he is now fully determined to give it that publicity to which it is so justly entitled. However excruciating the pain, and where extraction might be dreaded, or attended with difficulty or danger, the application of this remedy not only destroys the nerve entirely, without the slightest injury to the adjoining teeth, or hurt to the gums, but from its peculiar astringency, renders the hitherto diseased tooth perfectly firm in the socket, insensible to pain, and prevented from all further decay.

Sold in Bottles, 4s. 6d. each, duty included, by J. C. HOSE (late KINNARD,) 169, High Holborn, who is appointed wholesale agent; SANGER, 150, Oxford-treet; NIX, Royal Exchange; and all respectable Druggists and Patent Medicine Vendors in town and country.

None is Genuine unless signed L. Lockhart, on the Government Stamp.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. 85 ¼	Bank Stock 220½
Cons. Three per Cents. 86	Long Annuities, 20 11 16
Three and a half per Cents.	India Stock,
3½ per Cents. Reduced 93⅞	India Bonds, 7 5
Four per Cents. 103⅞	Exch. Bills (1½d.) 1 pm. par
Consols for Acc. 86⅛ 5⅞ 6

BOW-STREET.—Yesterday Charles Issit and Elizabeth Garner, alias Gardner, alias Meek, were brought before Mr. Halls for a second examination, on a charge of making and uttering divers forged letters of attorney to receive Bank Stock.

The circumstances of the case created particular notice, and we intend giving further particulars next Sunday.

Mr. Freshfield, the Solicitor on the part of the Bank of England, stated, that he accompanied Bishop, the officer, to Worthing, where the prisoners resided; that among the papers he found was a memorandum book, in which was contained a list of the unclaimed Bank Stock; that in consequence of the information therein contained he was then enabled to prove the forgery of the three letters of attorney, which he produced.

A number of witnesses were examined, and it appeared that a person now in custody for debt, whose name will hereafter appear conspicuously, is concerned in forging eleven wills.

The office was crowded.

The prisoner was remanded for further examination.

Sir Wastell Brisco and Mr Jenner, the proctor of Doctors'-commons, were held to bail before Mr. Halls, in consequence of what occurred in the Court of Condelegates on Tuesday last, themselves each in 500*l.*, with two sureties in 250*l.* each, for three months.

When Mr. Sheridan was on his death-bed he was visited by Mr. Taylor Vaughan, who found him in a situation, arising from disease and poverty, that we cannot venture to describe. With feelings strongly excited, Mr. Vaughan hastened to Carlton House, and represented to Col. M'Mahon the scene which he had just witnessed. The Colonel instantly went in to the Prince Regent's apartment, and made his Royal Highness acquainted with what had been related. The Prince, who had not been previously informed of Mr. Sheridan's illness, desired that immediate pecuniary assistance should be conveyed to him, and named the sum of 500*l.* as a present relief. Col. M'Mahon communicated to Mr. Vaughan the Prince's commands; but Mr. V. said that so large a sum was altogether unnecessary in the first instance, and could only be prevailed upon to take 200*l.*, promising to ask for the remainder when it was wanted. Part of this sum he directly applied, and furnished his sick friend with all that could contribute to his comfort. Shortly afterwards, however, Mr. V. repaired again to Carlton House, and, to the amazement of Colonel M'Mahon, returned to him the whole of the money which had been paid out of the Prince's privy-purse; stating, that Mr. Sheridan's friends had insisted on restoring it to the donor, as they were not willing that, under existing circumstances, Mr. Sheridan should lay himself under any obligations to the Prince Regent. We believe this statement to be authentic, and it will certainly not only totally different from that in which it has been made to appear; but show in strong colours the fine feelings of the illustrious personage, whose goodness of heart, as evinced in this case, has been so wantonly called in question.—Morning Paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DECCAN PRIZE MONEY.—The rehearing of the claimants to the Deccan prize-money is to come on before the Lords of the Treasury on Tuesday, 6th Dec. next.

The difficulties that stood in the way of the transfer of the late Mr. Fauntleroy's banking-house (heretofore adverted to) have been removed, and the sale for 4,000 guineas completed; which purchase-money is exclusive of a ground-rent of between 50*l.* and 60*l.* for a forty year's lease, of the fixtures, &c. Mrs. Fauntleroy, the mother, by virtue of some settlement on her husband, received one-fifth; and her claim of all the fixtures, which stood in the way of completing the transfer, she agreed, by her son, the late Fauntleroy's brother, an attorney, who attended in her behalf, to submit to the decision of arbitration. The house in Berner's-street, or rather double house, which is immensely large and very commodious, and was superbly fitted up by its late occupier, is to be converted into an hotel; the place is now filled with workmen. It is stated, that in dividing the purchase-money of the house into fifths, there was a payment of some 150*l.* made to Fauntleroy's widow, but on what account did not appear.

On the 29th ult., the solemn consecration of a Cenotaph, in commemoration of the great Dutch poet Rynvis Feith, took place at Zwolle, in the province of Over-Yssel, in the presence of the Civil and Military Authorities, and a numerous body of spectators. The monument, which is a finished piece of workmanship, was executed by Mr. Gabriel, of Amsterdam, statuary of his Majesty the King of the Netherlands, A public subscription furnished the fund.

It is said that Mr. J. G. Lockhart, the son-in-law of Sir Walter Scott, some time the reputed editor of Blackwood's Magazine, leaves the Scottish Bar for London, to be there editor of the Quarterly Review, and to hold a place under Government, vice Mr. Stewart Rose, resigned.—Caledonian Mercury.

A report is current, that the late Excise Office, which was ostensibly purchased by the Royal Bank a few months ago, at an enormous price, is to be the future residence of Mrs. Coutts.—Edinburgh Star.

Some ground through Hounslow, at a considerable distance from dwellings, and from the means of very ready conveyance, has recently sold for 200*l.* an acre, to be dug up for the purpose of making bricks.

Last week, in North Leith, at the funeral of a young man who died very suddenly, a quantity of wheat straw was got, and after the coffin was lowered, the grave was filled up with alternate layers of earth and straw, the whole being firmly pressed down. This precaution, it would appear, was not uselessly adopted; for some days after the grave was discovered to have been partly dug up, and a boat-hook lying beside it; but the wretches finding the straw give so much resistance to the spade, had relinquished the undertaking.

CONVICTS.—Four hundred male convicts are now being embarked on board the Dromedary, for conveyance to Bermuda, to be employed on the public works; 150 male convicts are also embarking on board the Woodman, for transportation to Van Dieman's Land. One hundred female convicts and their children, and also the wives and children of transported convicts, are being embarked on board the Providence, for conveyance to Van Dieman's Land; and one hundred and fifty male convicts are also being embarked on board the Sesostris, for transportation to New South Wales.

Thursday evening an inquest was taken before J. W. Unwin, Esq. at the Dolphin public-house, Long-alley, Moor-fields, on the body of Samuel Wright, 65 years of age, who was found dead in his chair on Wednesday last. The Jury being satisfied that his death was natural, returned a verdict to that effect.

JUVENILE DEPRAVITY.—Just at the moment of the unhappy youth executed on Wednesday morning arriving on the scaffold, two urchins, neither of them more than 16 years of age, were detected in the act of picking pockets, and handed over to the officers.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

P. Wilson and R. Ankers, of Liverpool, curriers.

J. Hansell, Clare-street, Clare-market, linen-drapers.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

S. Aydon and W. Elwell, Shelf Iron Works, Yorkshire, iron-masters.

BANKRUPTS.

W. LINTOTT, Leadenhall-market, and Islington, butcher. Sol. Mr. Platt, Church-passage, Clement's-lane.—T. SMYRK and J. HOPE, Manchester, calenderers. Sol. Mr. Willett, Essex-street.—S. DUFTON, Oat-lane, Noble-street, Cheapside, warehouseman. Sols. Messrs. Watson and Broughten, Falcon-square.—R. PERKINS, Egham, Surrey, carpenter. Sol. Mr. Sleap, Temple-lane.—L. B. SAPIO, Alpha Cottages, Regent's Park, music-seller. Sol. Mr. Thwaites, London-road.—P. MASEY, Bristol, hooper. Sol. Messrs. Clarke and Co., Chancery-lane.—R. J. HARPHAM, Nottingham, hosier. Sols. Messrs. Bicknell and Co., Lincoln's Inn.—R. S. COLLICOTT, Weston, Somersetshire, clothier. Sol. Mr. Makinson, Middle Temple.—J. PITTER, Cheltenham, grocer. Sols. Messrs. Pope and Brewer, London-wall.—T. PERKINS, Patricroft, and Manchester, and of Bamford-mill, Derbyshire, cotton-spinner. Sols. Messrs. Ellis and Co. Chancery-lane.—T. POLLARD, Brighthelmston, brewer. Sol. Mr. C. Faithfull, Birchin-lane, Cornhill.—S. THOMPSON, Carlisle, milliner. Sol. Mr. Young, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

DIVIDENDS.

W. L. Houghton, Kingston-upon-Hull, stationer—J. and R. A. Browning, Belvidere-wharf, Waterloo-bridge, timber-merchants—T. Hill, Thornbury, Gloucestershire, linen-draper—N. C. Boscha, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square, musical-composer—J. Bentley and J. Beck, Cornhill, watch-makers—J. Campbell, White Lion-court, Cornhill, merchant—B. Sutcliffe, Cheapside, warehouseman—D. B. Pierce, Tottenham-court-road, grocer—J. Richardson, Manchester, publican—T. Goldney, Chippenham, Wilts, clothier—A. Gatenby, Manchester, wholesale grocer—G. Bramwell, Stockport, chemist.

CERTIFICATES.—DEC. 6.

D. Seldon and W. Hinde, Liverpool, merchants—T. Barrow, Liverpool, flour-dealer—A. E. Binns, Bath, bookseller—J. Sparkes, Portland-street, coach-maker—J. Hudswell, Manchester, hat-manufacturer—T. Wren, London Wall, silkman—R. Robson, Seymour-place, Bryanstone-square, St. Marylebone, carpenter—J. Gallerand, and F. Pongerard, Fenchurch-street, wine-merchants.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

W. Matthews and R. Dewdney, Smithfield-bars, stationers—E. R. Fletcher, and G. Rowland, Manchester, porter-dealers—J. and J. Radcliffe and Co. Rochdale, Lancashire—W. Fowler and R. Walker, Sheffield, cabinet-makers—A. Dean and Co. Cheetham-hill, Lancashire, victuallers—P. Morton and Co. Street-bridge, Royton, Lancashire, paper-makers—J. Halliday and A. M'Adam, Bristol, linen-drapers—J. Hoole and W. Pinder, Sheffield, saw-manufacturers.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St, Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

CANDLES, 6½d. per lb.; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8d. for cash, or credit on the usual terms, at DAVIES's old established warehouse, 63, St. Martin's-lane, opposite Slaughter's Coffee-house. Every article of the best, at prices as under:—Candles, 6s. 6d. per dozen; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8s.; fine Wax Candles, 3s. 6d. per lb.; Sperm Candles, 2s. 8d.; Palace Wax Lights, 3s. 2d.—Mottled Soap, 74s. per cwt.; Yellow, 66s.; Curd, 82s.; Windsor, and Palm Soap, 1s. 4d. per lb.; Brown Windsor, 1s. 9d.—Sealing Wax, 4s. 6d.—The finest Sperm Oil, 5s. per gallon.—Orders forwarded to all parts of the world.—Russia Staves, 12s. per hundred.

BREWING UTENSILS & SEASONED CASKS, in great variety, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s. 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 15s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes. Bathing and Turtle Tubs Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, and Utensils Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."

CHEAP SPERMACETI OIL of the Best Quality, at Ten per Cent. under the usual Charge.—J. SMETHURST, No. 138, New Bond-street, the Original Oil and Patent Lamp Warehouse, begs leave to inform the Nobility, Gentry, the Public, Club and Coffee Houses, Hotel and Tavern Keepers (J. S. being an Importer), he SELLS the BEST REFINED SPERMACETI OIL, equal in colour and burning to any in London, at the lowest price, for Ready Money. One single trial will convince the purchaser of the truth of his assertion. The Oil will be found far superior in quality to what is called Spermaceti by Oil-venders. May be had in any quantity; bottle and cask to be paid for if required for the country.—Patent Lamps for every purpose to be purchased at his Show-rooms as above.—N.B. Cottons and Glasses of every description. Lamps repaired.—At 138, New Bond-street, nine doors from Grosvenor-street.

WINTER INDISPENSABLES for the POOR, at CRAIG and D'OYLY's Family Linen Warehouse, 77, Oxford-street, not in any way connected with any other house in London.

Twenty Thousand Pair of Blankets, first size, 6s. 4d.; next size, 8s. 6d.; superior quality and extra size, 9s. 6d. the pair; good Rugs, 2s. 6d. each; extra size, 3s. 6d.; a very superior article, 4s. 6d.: Bath Cloaking, full two yards wide, 2s. 3d.; excellent, at 2s. 6d., two yards wide; Pelisse Cloths, 2s. 6d. to 5s. a yard; 892 pieces stout Calico, 7d. a yard; a fine article at 6½d.; Flannels, 8d. a yard; good yard wide Welsh and Lancashire, from 10d. to 12d.; with a great variety of other articles for charitable purposes.

Damask Napkins, 6s. 11d. a dozen; Dinner Cloths, 7s. 2d. each; Russia Sheetings, full width without a seam, 1s. 10d. a yard; Towelling, 4½d. a yard; ten boxes of the best Irish Linens ever imported; French Cambrics at a great reduction: a good assortment of Town-printed Furnitures, 1s. a yard, warranted fast colours; Linings in every shade, 6d.; Moreens, 15d. to 21d. a yard; Marseilles Quilts, three yards long, 13s. 6d; next size, 17s. 6d., worth 28s.; Counterpanes, 3s. 11d. to 12s. each; Diapers, Huckabacks, Muslins, Gros de Naples, Norwich Crapes, Family Mourning, and every other useful article in Linen-drapery, Mercery, Hosiery, &c. &c.

Country orders executed with dispatch. All letters must be post paid.

Five Thousand Imitation India Shawls, full two yards square, 2s. 11d. each.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER and PERFUMER, No. 181, Fleet-street (Two Doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished: in fact they are Hostes humani Capitis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain pre-eminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Ornamental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perruques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others. By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, a Superior Beverage being produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

ROBINSON's PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS;

Sold Retail by all respectable Druggists, Grocers, &c. throughout the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co., No. 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words "Robinson's Patent," the Royal Arms, and the signature of MATTS. ROBINSON, are affixed to each package, as none others are genuine.

ATKINSON'S BEAR'S GREASE—This approved article for restoring the hair, being in almost universal demand, some rival Perfumers have taken the advantage, and introduced an article of their own, got up exactly similar in pots and labels; only the importer's name is omitted. Many of these counterfeits are very deleterious, being generally a mixture of rancid animal fats, and alkaline oils. In appearance they approximate a good deal to genuine Bear's Grease, but the effect in use is diametrically opposite—they leave the hair harsh and dry, whereas genuine Bear's Grease retains its moisture a long time, leaves the hair beautifully soft and glossy, and independent of restoring the growth, is very pleasant for dressing it, as it does not dry so quick as the Huile's antiques, and is free from the unpleasant greasiness of pomatum, &c.—Sold by the Importer, James Atkinson, perfumer, 44, Gerrard-street, and by appointment by Messrs. Gattie and Pierce, 57, New Bond-street; Sanger, 150, Grange, 126, Firth, 45, Langley, 31, and Smith, 98, Oxford-street; Woodman, Piccadilly; Dobson and Mason, 38, Haymarket; Mattrass, Fleet-street; Gibbins, Fleet-market; Colley, 28, and Barber, 43, Bishopsgate-street; Montram, Burlington-arcade; Wakefield, Lamb's Conduit-street; and by most perfumers.

CAUTION.—The genuine is enclosed in a wrapper, with the importer's signature and address, price 2s. 6d. and 4s.; and in bottles, 3s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. and perfumed with Otto of Rose, extra price.

THE ROYAL FAMILY, Nobility, and Ladies and Gentlemen may rely on it, although there are various Articles for the Hair now selling, but it is proved by thousands who have given it a fair trial, that PRINCE'S celebrated Russia Oil, through the Aromatic Oils it is now prepared with, is the wholesomest, pleasantest, and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the Hair, and if used constantly, not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the Hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour; hundreds of Ladies have experienced. Is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false Hair; will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months, will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least sign of roots are remaining, has been proved by hundreds. Ask for PRINCE'S Russia Oil. The ounce bottle, five shillings; a large bottle containing five ounces, one pound, is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. PRINCE, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A. Prince, 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. ☞ Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits.—Good allowance for exportation.—Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to counting-houses with Counterfeit Russia Oil, and saying it is the genuine.

CAUTION.—Proved by affidavit on the 24th of November, 1814, before the Lord Mayor of London; that A. PRINCE is the Original Proprietor in the universe of the Russia Oil, and therefore, if any Perfumer, Medicine Vender, Hair Dresser, or any one else, in Great Britain, or any other country, sell, under any pretence whatever, an Oil called Russia Oil, and is not A. Prince's, of 9, Poland-street, London, they are here publicly pronounced impostors, as they not only impose upon the Public by selling them counterfeits, which do not answer the purpose, but also injure A. Prince, the Original Proprietor, who has a large family, and has spent, within this last twenty years, above Fifty Thousand Pounds in advertising to make it known.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—HOLYHEAD, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle, and Congleton—BRISTOL, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Cullumpton—EXETER, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield—BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH, through Chorley, Preston, and Garstang—CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—MILFORD HAVEN, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES—MANCHESTER (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—HOLYHEAD (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock—SOUTHAMPTON coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—LIVERPOOL (the Royal Champion), in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—WINDSOR and ETON coaches daily—MANCHESTER (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—EXETER (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—EDINBURGH and GLASGOW (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—BRISTOL (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four—BIRMINGHAM (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—COVENTRY light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—NOTTINGHAM post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—CHESTER and PARK-GATE new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—WORCESTER coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA post coach, every evening at half-past five—TAMWORTH, ATHERSTONE and HINCHLEY coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—DERBY post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—DOVER coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—PARIS new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—TAUNTON, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—CHELTENHAM and GLOUCESTER light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—NORWICH new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—CAMBRIDGE Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—CANTERBURY fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—BRIGHTON coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—MILFORD HAVEN new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.—N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 15th instant, the lady of J. Green Wilkinson, Esq. of a son.

The lady of Charles Wilkinson, Esq. of a daughter.

The lady of G. Minter, Esq. of the 45th regiment, of a son.

The lady of the Rev. S. E. Batten, Harrow, of a daughter.

Mrs. Robert Walters of Lincoln's Inn-fields, of a daughter.

The lady of the Rev. R. P. Whish, of Broxted, Essex, of a son.

MARRIED.

On Tuesday last, Captain John Walter Roberts, R.N., to Frances, daughter of John Sargent, Esq.

Corbyn Lloyd, Esq. of Lombard-street, banker, to Emily, daughter of J. F. Atlee, Esq.

William Rowe, jun., Esq. to Sarah, daughter of Henry Winchester, Esq.

Edward Martin, Esq. eldest son of the Rev. Dr. Martin, of Dublin, to Elizabeth D. Zouch.

DIED.

Mary, the wife of G. J. Baker, St. Martin's-court.

Mr. Caleb Herries, of Paradise-street, Lambeth.

Claud Neilson, Esq. of Ardarden, Dumbarton.

Colin Matheson, Esq. of Bennetsfield.

Elizabeth, the wife of John Matthew Grimwood, Esq.

At Edinburgh, on the 5th instant, John Clapperton, Esq. of Spylaw.

At Hastings, Miss Brisco.

On the 13th instant, Elizabeth, the wife of Samuel Rolleston, Esq.

Wednesday morning, Susannah, the wife of William Peatt Litt, Esq.

On the 16th instant, the lady Arabella Hervey.

Nov. 14, suddenly, aged 79, Mrs. Edward Wheeler.

On the 18th September last, at Demerary, Frances Elizabeth, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel S. A. Goodman, of that Colony.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 29. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW Evening, the Tragedy of BRUTUS, with Amoroso, King of Little Britain, and De La Peronse.

Tuesday, (80th time) Der Freischutz, and the Wager.

Wednesday, The Wager, The Sleep-Walker, and the Adopted Child.

Thursday, The School for Scandal; and the Innkeeper's Daughter.

Friday, The Wager; and Faustus.

Mr. LISTON is engaged at this Theatre, and will appear on Saturday next, when will be performed, The Hypocaite, Maw-worm, Mr. Liston; with Love, Law, and Physic. Lubin Log, Mr. Liston.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

MONDAY, November 28, and during the week, THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. After which, ALL at COVENTRY. To which will be added, for the first time in this Theatre, DON GIOVANNI.

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal. 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Messrs. Campbell, and Kirkham.

Is entered Outwards,

FOR VAN DIEMAN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine new fast-sailing Snow, FAIRFIELD, A. 1, coppered, burden 300 tons. JAMES WORK, Commander. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodation for Passengers. For freight or Passage, apply to Buckles, Bagster and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

TURKEY COFFEE, of Fine Quality, at the following Reduced Prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.; Roasted, 3s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having REDUCED the DUTY on TURKEY COFFEE, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of fine quality, at Messrs. MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 14s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,

At J. ALBERT'S, Tailor and Draper,

47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

THE RURAL DIVAN, No. 5, CATHARINE-STREET, STRAND.—The Proprietor of the above, J. LORIMER, begs respectfully to acquaint Gentlemen, that he has fitted up the above Divan at a considerable expense, which forms a snug retreat for those Gentlemen who wish to retire from the hustle and fatigues of the town, to enjoy their Cigar, and a cup of excellent Coffee, Lemonade, &c. The Proprietor returns his sincere thanks to those who have favoured him with their patronage and support, and trusts their favours will be continued, and also their future recommendations, as nothing shall be wanting on the Proprietor's part to render every comfort, and keep the concern respectable.

CANDLES, 6½d. per lb.; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8d. for cash, or credit on the usual terms, at DAVIES'S old established warehouse, 63, St. Martin's-lane, opposite Slaughter's Coffee-house. Every article of the best, at prices as under:—Candles, 6s. 6d. per dozen; Waxed Wick Moulds, 8s.; fine Wax Candles, 3s. 6d. per lb.; Sperm Candles, 2s. 8d.; Palace Wax Lights, 3s. 2d.—Mottled Soap, 74s. per cwt.; Yellow, 66s.; Curd, 82s.; Windsor, and Palm Soap, 1s. 4d. per lb.; Brown Windsor, 1s. 2d.—Sealing Wax, 4s. 6d.—The finest Sperm Oil, 5s. per gallon.—Orders forwarded to all parts of the world.—Russia Staves, 12s. per hundred.

SULPHATE OF QUININE.—Just Imported, a Fresh Supply of this invaluable Medicine, manufactured by one of the first Chemists in Paris. The above Parcel is well worth the attention of Druggists and the Medical Profession in general, as the Importer is but seldom enabled to offer so fine an article on the advantageous terms he can at present. —Apply to J. C. HOSE, successor to the late Mr. KINNARD. Druggist, 309, High Holborn.

SIMPSON'S ROYAL ELIXIR of LIFE, unrivalled in good effects for Spasms or Gout in the Stomach, Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, and as a Restorative in cases of extreme Nervous Debility or the weakness of advanced Life. It is sold in bottles at 11s. each, by J. V. Simpson, 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Hose, 309, High Holborn; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; and by all the principal Medicine Venders throughout the Kingdom.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH, a complete Series of Specimens, illustrative of the improved System lately introduced by the Author of "Practical Directions for preserving the Teeth," &c., may be viewed daily at Mr. J. P. Clark's, 5, King-street, Holborn; where every operation connected with the teeth is performed in the best style of the art, on very moderate terms. Decayed teeth successfully treated, without pain or extracting.—N.B. Circassian Tooth Powder.

The attention of families, and all who value a good set of teeth, is respectfully called to the above far-famed article, as well for its intrinsic excellence, as the directions respecting the teeth which accompany each box.

No. 1, STRAND, next door to Northumberland House.

SWIFT & Co. respectfully inform the Public that their New Office, No. 1, Strand, is opened in consequence of the improvements now going on in that part of the Town, which will require them to quit their old Office, No. 12, Charing Cross, in a very short time. Tickets and Shares for the FOUR Grand Prizes of £30,000, and other Capitals, all to be drawn in One Day, 6th December, are on Sale at No. 1, Strand, and at SWIFT & Co.'s Old Offices, No. 11, Poultry, and 31, Aldgate High-street; also for the present, at 12, Charing Cross, as usual. Capitals to an immense amount have been Sold by SWIFT & Co. particularly No. 1,062, a Prize of £20,000, drawn the 18th of last Month; also 7,034, a Prize of £20,000, besides Twelve other Capitals, within a few Months.

SILKS at an immense Reduction, for Ready Money only.—15,000 yards of beautiful Satin Cashmeres, 2s. to 2s. 3d. per yard, usually sold from 4s. to 4s. 6d. 2550 Silk Barege Handkerchiefs, 15d. each, really worth 3s. 6d. 30768 yards of rich Gros de Naples, wide width, in every new French color, from 2s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. the quality of which are much superior to what are generally sold from 3s. 6d. to 7s. 6d. per yard; with every description of rich Silks, Satins, Fancy Gauze Dresses, Handkerchiefs, Scarfs, Gold and Silver Turbans, and a general assortment of Haberdashery, Hosiery, and Lace, French and Swiss printed Chintzes, and upwards of 500 Muffs of various descriptions, with Pelerines, Flounces, Cuffs and Collars to match, at exceedingly low Prices.—Also an entirely new article in Silk, for elegant winter Dresses and Pelisses, to be had exclusively at SHEARS and Co.'s, 120, Regent-street, eight doors from the Quadrant.—French Silk Opera Cloaks from 20s. to 3 Guineas.

GYMNASTIC EXERCISES—Professor VOELKER begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public in general, that he has opened a Gymnasium at the Riding-school of Mr. De Fontaine, Worship-street, Finsbury-square, besides that at his residence, No. 1, Union-place, New-road, near Marylebone Church. Days and hours of attendance at the former, on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the Evenings; at the latter on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the morning; or on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Two to Four o'clock in the Afternoon; and also for young Gentlemen, every Morning, from Nine to Ten o'clock. Ladies are instructed, on a well adapted plan, either by the Professor himself, or by a Lady under his direction.

Further particulars, prospectuses, &c., may be had at either of the Gymnasiums.

NEW MUSIC, Number 1, of a Selection of Original Spanish Melodies. With Symphonies and Accompaniments, and arranged for the Pianoforte and Harp. By W. West. The Poetry by Lord Nugent. The Embellishments from the Designs of the first-rate artists, 12s. 6d. Published by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand.

NEW MUSIC.—Il Crociato in Egitto, arranged for the Pian forte (with Flute Accompt. ad lib.) in 3 Books, by Thomas Valentine, price 4s. each. New editions of the following popular Airs, with Variations, for the Piano-forte, by ditto:—The Sicilian Air, on which is founded "Home, sweet Home," 2s. 6d.; The Bridesmaid's Chorus, 2s. 6d.; Isabella, a Spanish Air, 2s. 6d.; Ronsecan's Dream, 2s. 6d.; Cease your Funning, 2s. 6d.; Sul Margine, 2s. 6d.; Auld lang Syne, 2s.; We're a' Noddin, 2s.

Published at FALKNER'S Opera Music Warehouse, 3, Old Bond-street.

Also, just published, Divertisementi di Saloni, a Series of a Selection of Italian Airs, for the Harp and Piano-forte, by W. H. Steil, in 8 Nos. each 4s.

THE FLUTE.

New Flute Music, just Published by T. LINDSAY, 217, Regent-street.

FOR FLUTE and PIANO.—Nicholson's 1st Concertino on French Airs, and his 2nd Do. with The Maid of Lodi, and Fra tante A goscie, price 4s. each—Nicholson's Appendix to his Preceptive Lessons, 21s.—Lindsay's 2d and 3d Melanges, with Airs from Freischutz, 4s. each.—Lindsay's 4th and 5th Do. on Airs from Il Crociato, 3s. 6d. each—Nel cor piu, and Au clair de la Lune, both with Variations, 3s. each.

All the Airs in Il Crociato, arranged with occasional embellishments, &c. as short and elegant Solos for the Flute, in 2 Books, at 3s. each. The Flautist's Daily Practice (for advanced Pupils,) Nos. 1 to 4, by Weiss, Keller, and Berbiguier, 2s. 6d. each—Twelve Select Solos, Variations, &c. by various Composers, 1s. 6d. each.

Gabrielsky's six easy Duets, Op. 57, price 6s—Berbiguier's new Set of 33 easy Duettinos, Op. 72; and the same admired Composer's popular Sets of Duets, Operas 45, 46, 59, and 66, price 6s. each.

☞ The MELOGRAPHICON in a few days.

NEW MUSIC from Meyerbeer's celebrated Opera, "Il Crociato in Egitto," published by CLEMENTI & Co. 26, Cheapside.

The Overture and Airs arranged for two performers on the Pianoforte, by T. Attwood, book 1, 2, 3, each	4 0
The Overture for the Pianoforte, with Flute and Violoncello, (ad lib) accompaniments	3 0
The favourite Airs for do. by De Pinna, book 1 and 2, each	3 0
Giorinetto Cavalier, Rondo by Meves	2 6
Grand March for Pianoforte by do	3 0
Scavi imagine, Introduction and Polonoise, by do	2 6
Grand March for one or two performers on the Pianoforte, by Voigt	1 6
Giovinetto Cavalier, do. do. do. do	1 6
Do. do. sung by Mademoiselle Garcia, with Pianoforte accompaniment, by Sola	1 6
Cara mano dell'amore, do. Signor Velluti, do. do. do.	3 0
Nel silenzio fra l'orrore, Duet do. do. do.	2 6

☞ THE MELOGRAPHICON SHORTLY.

Just published.

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangement of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chorusses, from the celebrated opera, "Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home, with variations, 2s. ---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, ditto, 2s.---As a Duet for two Violoncellos. The Battle of Prague, 3s.—Canone from Tarrare, ditto 2s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr. Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6

(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)

The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, By WELSH and HAWES,

The following Songs, Duets, Trios, &c. in the popular Opera of TARRARE, THE TARTAR CHIEF, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes:—

Revenge! he cries - - -	sung by Mr. Braham, 2s.
What blissful visions - - -	ditto, 2s.
Thus lowly bending - - -	Mr. Atkins, 2s.
Blest light of heaven - - -	Chorus, 2s.
Now bid with our joyous - - -	ditto, 2s.
Silly woman - - - - -	Miss Paton, 2s.
Sire, to me - - - - -	ditto, 2s.
Ah! where the fairy vision - -	ditto, 2s.
Where now are flown - - -	Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Whilst here in anguish - - -	ditto, 2s.
Ah, when sorrows ending, Duet -	Miss Paton & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
Evening now softly closing, ditto -	Mr. Braham & Miss Hamilton, 2s.
To woman's power surrender, Trio	Paton, Boden, and Thorne, 2s.
Hope now so cheerily, ditto - -	Paton, Hamilton, and Boden, 2s.

Also the most admired Songs from the Opera of BROKEN PROMISES, selected and arranged by Wm. Hawes.

There's a tear, sung by Miss Stephens, also -	Miss Paton, 1s. 6d.
Why didst thou leave me - ditto - - -	ditto, 2s.
Oh, turn again on me love ditto - - -	ditto, 2s.
Ah, why that look of sorrow ditto - - -	ditto, 1s. 6d.
My morning prayer - ditto - - -	ditto, 1s. 6d.
In young life's morning - - - - -	Mr. Thorne, 2s.
Her I love so dearly - - - - -	Mr. Broadhurst, 2s.
Though sorrow may come - - - - -	Miss Stephens, 2s.
In such a bustle - - - - - -	Miss Kelly, 2s.
Oh, I could weep - - - - - -	Mr. Thorne, 2s.

Duets for the Piano Forte.

Mayseder's brilliant variations on the air Serena i vaghi rai, arranged by T. Moscheles, 6s.—Moscheles' celebrated brilliant Rondo, Opera 30, newly arranged by the author, 4s.—Hummel's celebrated amusements, arranged by J. Hoffman, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; 2 and 3, 3s. 6d. each.

Six pieces for one performer on the Piano Forte, arranged in a familiar style, by Thomas Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variations, 2s. 6d.	4. Kelvin Grove, divertise. 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Air, ditto, ditto, 2s. 6d.	5. Love, go d night, var. 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, divertisement, 2s. 6d.	6. Green grow the rushes, O! 2s. 6d.

A large assortment of single and double action Harps, Square, Cottage, Cabinet, and Grand Piano Fortes, by the most approved makers, at the manufacturers' prices.—Also a variety of second-hand Piano Fortes and Harps for sale.

Piano Fortes and Harps lent on hire.

CHERRY BOUNCE, New Song, written by a Young Gentleman, Seven Years of Age, on his hearing the celebrated Song, "Cherry Ripe," the music by a professor of eminence.

"To you dear Maid," New Song, the words by J. B. Thompson, Esq. the music arranged by J. Lambley, price 1s. 6d.

This song is founded on a beautiful Venetian Air, which, for elegance and simplicity, may vie with the popular air, "Sweet Home;" likewise, by the same Author, "Love breathes in every plant and flower," 1s. 6d. Second Edition, of a selection from the vocal compositions of Rossini, united to original English words, the Poetry by Jas. Mackenzie, Esq., the Airs, arranged by J. R. Stevenson, Esq. price 12s.; may be had single. "Giovinetto Cavalier," by Holst, price 2s.—Published by Wm. Rose 53, Strand.

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. BAYLY, Esq. the Music by M. Balte, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (Second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in Mr. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Piano-Fortes: also Harps, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

☞ Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

NEW VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

Published by J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent Street.

PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

"Useful Extracts," consisting of Scales and Exercises, intended as an Introduction to the celebrated Studies of Clementi, Cramer, &c. Arranged and Fingered by J. B. Cramer, 5s. Twenty-five Characteristic Diversions, by ditto, 14s. Impromptu on Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Melange on Airs from Crociato, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Capriccio on the favourite Rondo in Tarrare, by do. 3s. 6d. Overture de Jean de Finlande, as Duet, by Hummel, 4s. Impromptu, Op. 62, by Moscheles. Le Petite Babellarde, Brilliant Rondo, Op. 66, by ditto, 3s. Variations on Giovinetto Cavalier, by Pixis, 4s. Ries' Third Polonoise Duet, 5s.

HARP MUSIC.

"Roslin Castle," arranged by Bochsa, 3s. 6d. Che faro senza, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Favorite March, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Bridesmaid Chorus, arranged by Chipp, 2s. 6d. Mary's Dream, by ditto, 3s. Ye Banks and Braes, by ditto, 3s. Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Dizis' Variations on La Jeune et Sensible, 4s. Huntsmen Chorus, arranged by Wright, 2s 6d.

VOCAL MUSIC.

"As the Tree seems more bright," "Fair Geraldine," and "What is Love," composed by Barnett, 1s. 6d. each. "Jock o'Hazeldean," and "My Heart is sair for Somebody," arranged by Chipp, 1s. 6d. each. "My own dear Maid," and "To welcome Jamie Hame" by Rawlings, 2s. each. "Wandering Willie," and "When Delia on the Plain," by Dr. Carnahy, 1s. 6d. each. Also an elegant Edition of Handel's Songs, arranged by Wm. Horsley, Mus. Bac. Oxon.; the following of which are published, viz. "Angels ever bright," "Lord to thee," "From mighty Kings," and "Pious Orgies."

Just published, price 10s. 6d.

AN AUTUMN IN GREECE, by H. LYTTON BULWER, Esq. comprising Sketches of the Character, Customs, and Scenery of the Country, with a View of its present Critical State, in Letters addressed to C. Brinsley Sheridan, Esq.

Printed for John Ebers, 27, Old Bond-street.

THE MAGISTRATES' POCKET BOOK.

Just published, in a neat volume, crown 8vo. price 16s. boards,

THE MAGISTRATES' POCKET BOOK, or an EPITOME of the DUTIES and PRACTICE of a JUSTICE of the PEACE out of Sessions, alphabetically arranged. To which is added a copious and general INDEX.

By WILLIAM ROBINSON, Esq. LL.D. of the Middle Temple.

Printed for CHARLES HUNTER, Law Bookseller, 26, Bell Yard, Lincoln's Inn.

Just published, price 1l. 8s. in boards, or elegantly bound in morocco, price 1l. 15s.

STOCKDALE'S CALENDAR for 1826, containing:

1st. The PEERAGE of the United Kingdom, with the Arms, &c. of all the Peers, with entirely new Plates, carefully revised and amended.

2nd—The BARONETAGE, with the Arms, &c. of all the Baronets, with entirely new Plates.

3rd—The ALMANACK for 1826.

4th—The COMPANION, with considerable additions and amendments.

5th—The INDEX.

☞ The PEERAGE and BARONETAGE may be had separately, Price 7s. 6d. each in boards. JAMES RIDGWAY, No. 169, Piccadilly.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT AND NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

FRIENDSHIP'S OFFERING for 1826, Edited by T. K. Hervey, Esq. is published this day. price 12s. by Lupton Relfe, 13, Cornhill.

This Volume, in addition to Thirteen splendidly Engraved Plates, contains nearly One Hundred Original Articles, in Poetry and Prose, by Forty of the most eminent Writers of the age; including Robert Southey, Esq.; Rev. H. H. Millman; Lady C. Lamb; Lord Porchester; James Montgomery, Esq.; W. Jordan, Esq.; Rev. T. Dale; Rev. W. L. Bowles; Horatio Smith, Esq.; L. E. L.; Mrs. Opie; Mrs. C. B. Wilson; Miss Jane Porter; J. Bowring, Esq.; Bernard Barton; H. Neele, Esq.; Miss Mitford; J. Galt, Esq.; W. Sotheby, Esq.; Lord Dillon; A. Cunningham, Esq.; the late Lord Byron; Rev. C. Maturin; R. L. Edgeworth, Esq.; James Thomson, Author of "The Seasons," &c.

The Large Paper Edition, with Proof Impressions of the Plates, on India Paper, will be ready in a few days.

A New Work, part I, price One Shilling,

THE WIT'S ALBUM, or Pine-Apple of Literature, printed on a fine paper, and embellished with a beautiful Portrait, engraved on steel, by Kennerley, of R. B. Sheridan, Esq., from an original drawing expressly for this work, from the celebrated painting of Sir Joshua Reynolds; and three exceeding humourous copper-plate etchings, by Cruikshank, and a untinted by Gleadah—1, La Police, the Farmer's Wife, and the Gascon—2, Odds and Ends, a delicate morsel—3, The Cambridge Examination; it contains also 128 columns of highly entertaining matter, and hot-pressed. Published by Dunscombe, 19, Little Queen Street, Holborn. Sold also by Sherwood, Gillut, and Piper, Paternoster-row, and by all Booksellers.—Second Edition, the Secret Memoirs of Harriet Pumpkin, a celebrated actress, from her infancy, including her marriage with a certain London banker, price 3s. 6d. extra boards.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St. Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Chablis	63s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

WINTER INDISPENSABLES for the POOR, at CRAIG and D'OYLY'S Family Linen Warehouse, 77, Oxford-street, not in any way connected with any other house in London.

Twenty Thousand Pair of Blankets, first size, 6s. 4d.; next size, 8s. 6d.; superior quality and extra size, 9s. 6d. the pair; good Rugs, 2s. 6d. each; extra size, 3s. 6d.; a very superior article, 4s. 6d.; Bath Cloaking, full two yards wide, 2s. 3d.; excellent, at 2s. 6d., two yards wide; Pelisse Cloths, 2s. 6d. to 5s. a yard; 892 pieces stout Calico, 7d. a yard; a nice article at 6½d.; 2s. 6d. to 5s. a yard; 892 pieces stout Calico, 7d. a yard; a nice article at 6½d.; Flannels, 8d. a yard; good yard wide Welsh and Lancashire, from 10d. to 12d.; with a great variety of other articles for charitable purposes.

Damask Napkins, 6s. 11d. a dozen; Dinner Cloths, 7s. 2d. each; Russia Sheetings, full width without a seam, 1s. 10d. a yard; Towelling, 4½d. a yard; ten boxes of the best Irish Linens ever imported; French Cambrics at a great reduction: a good assortment of Town-printed Furnitures, 1s. a yard, warranted fast colours; Linings in every shade, 6d.; Moreens, 15d. to 21d. a yard; Marseilles Quilts, three yards long, 13s. 6d; next size, 17s. 6d., worth 25s.; Counterpanes, 3s. 11d. to 12s. each; Diapers, Huckabacks, Muslins, Gros de Naples, Norwich Crapes, Family Mourning, and every other useful article in Linen-drapery, Mercery, Hosiery, &c. &c.

Country orders executed with dispatch. All letters must be post paid.

Five Thousand Imitation India Shawls, full two yards square, 2s. 11d. each.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

From the Supplement to the Madras Government Gazette, July 12.

"His Majesty's ship Liffey, from Rangoon, the 16th ultimo, has anchored in the Roads since our last report.

"Our intelligence from Rangoon, by the Liffey, is similar to that received in Bengal—operations were suspended, but no prospect of peace. There was a report that Sir Archibald Campbell was about returning to Rangoon for a short time. It was also said that 300 hackeries and their cattle had been captured; possibly the old report which had reached Calcutta. The Nerbudda being considered out of time, two ships had been sent in quest of her.

"A report, it appears, had reached Calcutta, that Sir Archibald Campbell was leaving Prome, with some light troops, in order to effect an interview with General Morrison."

From the Calcutta John Bull of June 29.

"The latest letters we have seen from Prome, come down to the 7th instant, at which time the troops under Sir Archibald Campbell were in great health, with abundance of all necessaries, but no prospect of a very speedy employment in the field. It was said that the Burmans had strongly stockaded themselves at some distance above Prome; but that there was no intention on the part of the General to disturb them, until the force could move to its ulterior destination. Captain Snodgrass, the Military Secretary of Sir Archibald, is hourly expected in the Carron, and is reported to be coming round, in consequence of some important points connected with the command of the naval branch of the armament which required adjustment."

From Calcutta Papers.

"We have seen letters from Rangoon to the 5th instant. They are extremely meagre o intelligence. They mention the receipt of letters from Prome, of the 1st instant, adding—'No news—abundance of bullocks for slaughter and draught to be had in the country—no chance of peace.'

"In this day's report the arrival of his Majesty's ship Tamar was announced. She left Rangoon the 18th inst. We have waited till the last moment in expectation of being favoured with some accounts from the army under Sir Archibald Campbell; but with the exception of every thing being quiet at Prome, and elsewhere in the vicinity of that position, nothing particular has transpired." —Calcutta Gov. Gaz.

"His Majesty's sloop Sophie, Captain E. Blackney, has arrived in the river, in a very leaky state. She sailed from Rangoon on the 16th inst. in company with his Majesty's store ships Liffey and Tamar, whom she parted with on the 18th in the Gulf of Martaban, in a heavy gale of wind."— alcutta John Bull.

"We have heard nothing of importance from the force at Arracan by the Highland Chief. The European troops are said to be in better health than the native, and less affected by the climate. A severe gale of wind had been experienced on the coast of Arracan."

JUNE 30.—We are happy to announce the safety of the transport ship Nerbudda. She sailed from Madras with troops bound to Rangoon; but apprehensions were entertained from her having been over due. Accounts have been received from Brigadier-General Morrison, announcing her arrival in distress, at Cheduba. We understand that a ship is about to be despatched forthwith with provisions, to carry the troops to Rangoon.

"A duel was this morning fought between Captains K——y and B——s, of his Majesty's 87th Regiment, now in Fort William. Captain K.'s fire took effect, and Captain B——s was wounded in the head: we understand, not dangerously. The dispute, we hear, originated about some regimental arrangements."

From the Prince of Wales Island Gazette, May 14.

MALACCA, April 24.—Yesterday being the day appointed for the celebration of his Majesty's birth-day, the same was observed with every demonstration of joy and respect towards our beloved Sovereign. The Acting Resident, W. S. Cracroft, Esq. arrived on St. Paul's Hill, where the troops were drawn out a little before sun-rise, and was received with the usual compliments. At sun-rise the flag was hoisted, and a Royal salute fired from the saluting battery; after which a feu-de-joie was fired by the troops on the Hill, followed by three cheers. It was very gratifying to observe, that a large concourse of natives had assembled to view the ceremony, and to join in the cheering.

At ten A. M., the Acting Resident received a respectable assembly of the principal inhabitants of the settlements at the Old Government House, when the oath of allegiance was administered to each individual. At one P.M. another Royal salute was fired in honour of the day.

At five o'clock, a party, consisting of about seventy persons, to whom cards had been issued some days previous, sat down to an elegant and sumptuous banquet, at the Acting Resident's.

The Netherlands Commissioner, Mr. Van Son, was received with appropriate honors, the band playing "Wilhelm van Nassau." After the repast, the health of his Most Gracious Majesty with three times three, was succeeded by that of his Netherlands Majesty, with similar honors, when the ladies retired; and after the Royal Family, and the usual toasts of the day (not omitting Prosperity to Malacca) had been drunk, they were joined by the gentlemen, and a lively dance, consisting of about twenty couples, commenced, the ball being opened by the Lady of Mr. Secretary Van Angelbeek and the Acting Resident. The dancing continued until a quarter before twelve, when the party adjourned to supper, and on the approach of Sunday morning, separated to their respective homes, to the solemn and appropriate music of our Grand National Anthem.

CALCUTTA.—The Lady Campbell has reached the Bengal river. The Hon. the Chief Justice Sir Charles Grey landed in the forenoon of the 29th June at Chandpaul Ghaut, and in the afternoon his Lordship took his seat on the Bench under the usual salutes.

BOMBAY.—The Hon. Company's ship Farquharson, Captain Cruickshank, arrived on the 23d of June, at Bombay, having left England 22d February.

MIRAMICHI, OCT. 11.—The north side of Miramichi is now a heap of ashes. It is not ascertained to what extent the fire reaches, some say 80, some 300 miles back. For about 20 miles up and down the river nothing is seen but stacks of chimneys, they being built of stone; the houses, which were of wood, are all burnt, and I am sorry to say a great number of men, women and children, cattle, &c. My stower helped to bury 30 yesterday in one small settlement; some they had to put into coffins with spades, so many as six in a coffin, according to the number of the family. Three ships are totally burnt, viz. Canada, of North Shields; Concord, of Whitby; and Jane, of Alloa. The Canada was all load, the others were discharging ballast at the same heap as the James. The James was on fire at three different places, at three different times; but, thank God, we got it out before it got to any great height. We have our jib, mainmast, and trysail burnt. The fire broke out about eight in the evening of the 7th instant, at the river side. All the afternoon we heard a roaring away to the northward of us, accompanied by smoke and soot; but no one supposed it would be so instantaneous, for before we could distinguish any flame, the fire flakes came off the land on board thicker and faster than ever I saw a snow storm in my life, branches of trees and burning leaves, and so for the same distance up and down the river already mentioned, and all at the same instant, accompanied by a hurricane. It must have come through the woods at a great rate, for people who went to see if they could see any thing like fire, could not, although the smoke was very thick; they ran back as fast as they could, and before they got down two minutes, the fire was at their heels. Those that are saved was by their running into the river up to their chins, and keeping their heads constantly wet. Many children who were in bed were snatched up by their mothers, and carried down to the river; but before they got them down, their shirts had caught, which were torn off; in this state they were lain on the beach, their parents keeping them continually wet, the father with his hat and the mother with her shoes, until morning, when they were taken on board the shipping. I have now a family on board, a man, woman, and four children, who were in that state.

People, who were in the woods, as far as can be heard, were dreadfully off. Whole camps of them, from ten to forty in a camp, who were gone in for the winter to make timber, are consumed, together with the cattle. People are coming in,—some have lost a wife and children, some a husband and children, some more, some less, some naked and burnt. One woman in particular, finding the fire too hot for her to bear as she was running with her two children, laid them down, and lay upon them; she is burnt from her heels to the crown, so much, that not a bit of flesh is on her; the children not hurt: she still lives, but in great agony—some who could get into boats were upset and drowned. Gilmore and Rankin's stores are all burnt, except about 70 barrels of pork, which they got out of the fire yesterday. The stores of Mr. Abrahams, the merchant we load with, are all burnt down; I sent my carpenter to say I should be happy to see them on board should they think proper. Mrs. Abrahams said "For God's sake take them out!" When the carpenter went into the house, the children were taken out of bed in blankets, and Mrs. A. without a bonnet, with eight children, were coming to the ship, when the fire met them in the face like a furnace; they were obliged to return. By that time the house was all in flames; they then made for a small schooner, which lay at the wharf, and my cook, who had gone with them, got his hand hurt; one of his fingers has since been cut off. The second mate and carpenter have been ill since the fire; the chief mate fell down the hold, and cut his head this morning.—One man takes ill whenever any hard work comes, and the two men who ran, I don't expect much good from. Hoping we shall have a good loading, I am, &c.

BRUSSELS, NOV. 15.—The Canton of Appenzell (Rhodes exterior) has just prohibited its citizens from engaging in the military service of any foreign power except the Netherlands. The great Council of Soleure has ratified the convention with Naples. This is one of the few cantons which have troops in the service of three foreign powers.

GHENT, NOV. 17.—"While the French Government is losing its popularity by institutions and measures which are unsuitable to the spirit of the times, and the actual state of civilised society, ours continues to advance in the knowledge of man, and of his physical and moral wants, and in the judicious employment of means to satisfy them. The Government begins to understand the Belgic nation. It has already made a great progress in securing its prosperity, and seems not likely to stop in so noble a career. It has still much to do before it attains its object, but at least we have the satisfaction of seeing that it never loses sight of it. Among the means which it employs, there are some which, though hardly perceived by the mass of the population, are not the less adapted to afford it powerful assistance in attaining its ends.

"It is well known what fetters were imposed on the periodical press at Brussels. Violent, illegal, arbitrary measures, were not indeed employed against it; but, placed as we are, under two systems of laws which are incompatible with each other, namely, under the rod of iron of the French penal laws, and the just and liberal empire of our constitution, it was impossible that there should not be men too accustomed to the one, entirely to comprehend the spirit of our fundamental law, and who would see faction and conspiracy wherever they discovered contradiction or criticism of some Ministerial errors. The torch of public opinion was in a manner extinguished in the province where the nature of things had necessarily placed it; that natural right which was a crime under the despotism that formerly oppressed us was still considered and punished as a transgression in a constitutional Monarchy, of which it ought to be the firmest support. It is true the famous decree of the 20th April, 1815, issued under the influence of Count de Thiennes, was no longer employed against authors. It was become too absurd to think that there could be a single writer who was an enemy to the existing order of things; but there were still other French laws, the severe application of which was much less inconvenient. It is now affirmed that the Government has just broken this last instrument in the unskilful hands which might make an ill use of it. It is affirmed (and there are certain symptoms which induce us to believe it) that most positive orders have just been given, that the greatest toleration shall be exercised towards writers who shall confine themselves to pointing out public abuses and criticising the measures of Government, without attacking the reputation and individual rights of the citizen. It is too great and too strong to desire to revenge itself for an unjust censure, which meets its punishment in the general disapprobation, and too much the friend of the people not to desire to be enlightened by a criticism which is always salutary when it is reasonable and well founded.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1.—We think that we may venture to assert, without the shadow of contradiction, that at no previous season has New Orleans been more healthy than during the present; in the early part of it, it is true, some cases of yellow fever occurred—these were confined to the few strangers who had remained among us; but now, when the epidemic is usually at its height, general health almost pervades every quarter of our city and the deaths do not average over three per day.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

NEWRY, Nov. 15. This town has, within the last few days, been distinguished by the presence of two personages, whose flowing beards, devout aspect, and measured gait, proclaimed their importance, and arrested no small share of public attention. On inquiry, we have learnt that they are actually disciples, or followers of "Mother Johanna"—that they are from Yorkshire, and that their object in this country is to expound the doctrinal tenets held by their prophetess, and to announce the coming of Shiloh—the real, genuine Shiloh! These zealous missionaries of the deluded Southcotian sect appear to belong to the humbler class of tradesmen; they are rather decently clad, and seem to be about the age of 30.

DARLINGTON, OCT. 31.—The locomotive engine is now at work on this line, and I am rejoiced to say she excites the astonishment and admiration of the country; she performs her work well, and carries from the coal-pits to Stockton, a distance of 25 miles, a greater burden than was calculated. During the making of the railway, and up to the very day of the opening of it, the public voice was decidedly against us: 'no one advantage could be anticipated from it; coals would be dearer, land-owners would derive no benefit from it, and loss to the proprietary would be the inevitable consequence;' but now we have been at work for a month, the aspect of things is entirely changed, the reverse of every anticipation is actually the state of the case, and I have no doubt but this railway will be a proud monument of the firmness and perseverance of those who undertook the completion of it, amidst all the difficulties which surrounded them.

REPRESENTATION OF THE COUNTY OF YORK.

From the Leeds Intelligencer.

It is rumoured, that in consequence of the great change lately perceptible in the aspect of the Catholic question, Mr. Wortley does not consider himself warranted in supporting it in future.

We can this week exultingly refer to several lists of resolutions, advertised in a preceding column, as demonstrative proof of the concordance of opinion which prevails in this and the surrounding towns, relative to the necessity of efficiently supporting the Protestant cause at the next election. The meeting, which we stated was to be held last Thursday, at Wakefield, accordingly took place, and was most respectably attended, and the determination to co-operate with the inhabitants of Leeds, unanimously adopted. The only difference of opinion was an anxiety on the part of some of the gentlemen, to couple Mr. W. Duncombe at once with Mr. R. Fountayne Wilson, as a second candidate, to be forthwith put in nomination. The meeting which we likewise announced would be held at Bradford, took place on Monday, and by the numbers and character of those present, clearly showed that the sense and intelligence of that town are decidedly adverse to Catholic claims. The forcible terms in which the sentiments of the meeting are expressed upon this point, we cannot deny ourselves the satisfaction of re-inserting here. The first resolution, which was carried unanimously, is as follows:—

"That, convinced that our boasted and enviable freedom is mainly to be attributed to the overthrow of Popery, and the establishment of Protestantism in this country; and viewing with a jealous eye the persevering and restless endeavours of certain dissatisfied Roman Catholic subjects, as well as the silent, though constant, encroachments which are making on our Constitution by the granting of privileges to the professors of Popery; and, moreover, seeing that in proportion to privileges granted their demands increase, we consider it our duty hereby to support, by our votes and interest, that candidate for the representation of this large and important county, who, in addition to the other requisite qualifications, will promise to prevent, as far as in him lies, the granting of what is commonly, though erroneously, called Catholic emancipation."

At Halifax, the circular from the friends of the Protestant cause in Leeds has had a most inspiring effect. A meeting was held there on Saturday, as will appear from the following requisition and notice; the former of which contains names of such paramount respectability and influence, as to defy the calumnies of the basest enemies of our establishment in Church and State:—

"TO THE CONSTABLES OF HALIFAX.

"Gentlemen—We, the undersigned, beg leave to request you will call a meeting of the town and neighbourhood of Halifax, for the purpose of furthering the election of Mr. R. F. Wilson, as one of the Members of the county of York, at the ensuing general election:—

"Wm. Rawson	Ralph Younger, Clerk
Dr. Paley	Richard Hudson, Clerk
Wm. Mitchell	John Ashworth
S. Knight	John Milner
John Waterhouse	Joseph Sunderland
Thomas Greenwood	Wm. Emmet
Wm. Henry Rawson	Wm. Emmet, jun.
Wm. John Norris	Samuel Crowther
Gervase Alexander	Edward Wainhouse
Samuel Farrar	Christopher Rawson
George Shaw	James Thompson
John Watson, Clerk	George Dixon

"In compliance with the above requisition, we do hereby appoint a public meeting for the purpose above-mentioned, at the Magistrates' Office, in Halifax, on Saturday next, the 25th inst., at three o'clock in the afternoon.

"WM. HOYLAND, } Constables."
"Halifax, Nov. 17. JAMES FARRAR, }

The adjourned meeting of the friends to the Protestant cause in Leeds, which was held at the Court-house on Monday last, was extremely crowded. It appeared that, with one or two exceptions, the answers from all parts of the county breathed the most ardent zeal, promised instant and powerful co-operation, and anticipated the complete fulfilment of the wishes of every lover of his country and the established Constitution.

As a demonstration of the true feelings of the county of York at present on the Catholic question, we may state, that the advocacy of emancipation is almost limited to one Leeds newspaper. The Sheffield Iris, which for a long course of years supported the Catholics, now speaks of their conduct in these terms:—"The attention of the whole kingdom is turning to the Catholic question; and, as might be expected, the more noise the Catholics make, the less likely they are to obtain the object of their wishes. The conduct of some priests and orators has recently made a powerful impression to the disadvantage of the cause; and it is now the universal opinion of all parties, that there is not the least chance of success, in the event of the subject being brought before Parliament next Session. Some, who have been the most zealous advocates of what is called Catholic emancipation, appear to be hesitating. The fact is, Popery, by the proceedings of its members, is justifying every thing which has been said against its principles and tendency; and those Protestants who have long headed in its favour, are beginning to be ashamed of the cause which they have advocated."

DREADFUL STORM AND SHIPWRECKS.

From the Ayr Courier of Tuesday.

Since Friday afternoon we have had a continuance of the most boisterous weather ever experienced on this coast, and which has been productive of very serious losses both of lives and property, as the following details will shew:—

About three o'clock on Friday afternoon it came on to blow a most tremendous hurricane, and a little before five, a sail was discovered through the haze of the storm, making for this harbour, when the most intense anxiety was manifested by a crowd of spectators, as the sea was then running so high as entirely to prevent the possibility of tracing the line of the sea walls on either side of the river. The vessel, in a few minutes after being discovered, was violently dashed on the south beach, a short distance from the wall, when she was discovered to be the schooner Unity, of this port, from Dundalk, with a cargo of oats and butter for a house in town. She continued to strike very hard for about an hour and a half, when her foremast went by the board, and shortly after her hull became so much damaged, that her cargo was washed on the beach: the butter, we believe, will be only slightly injured, but not a single handful of the grain was preserved. The vessel now lies a complete wreck. It is satisfactory to add that the crew got safe on shore, although in a state of great exhaustion, and we feel pleasure in bearing testimony to the daring recklessness with which the spectators, (some of them females) dashed amid the turmoil of the waves to render assistance in conveying to the shore the enfeebled seamen.—Some heartless miscreants availed themselves of the darkness and confusion which existed, and unfortunately succeeded in carrying off a variety of articles, chiefly wearing apparel and bed-clothes, washed ashore from the Unity. Although a search was made, we believe none of the articles have been recovered.

In less than an hour after the Unity struck, a second vessel was perceived off the mouth of the river, attempting to take the harbour, and, although running at the rate of not less than ten knots, it was thought she would come in in safety; however, when within little more than a cable's length of the pier head, a heavy sea struck her with such force as to carry her considerably to the leeward of the north wall, where she took the ground. She proved to be the brig Enterprise of this port, from the bay of Chaleur, with a cargo of timber. Should the weather prove favourable, it is hoped she will be got off without sustaining much damage.

The south sea-wall of our harbour, we are concerned to state, suffered a very serious injury on Friday night, a great breadth of it having been swept into the bed of the river; and it is feared that it will be impossible to repair it during the boisterous season of winter, so that it is probable it may remain as it is, till spring.

It gives us pleasure to state, that the smack Three Sisters, of this port, Robert Paton, master, arrived here from Liverpool, all well, yesterday morning, at ten o'clock, although out in the dreadful gale of friday night, deeply laden with a valuable cargo of general goods for the merchants of this district. The circumstance of this tight little smack weathering the storm of Friday, is a striking instance of what a worthy sea-boat and skilful master can achieve amid the "war of elements," and cannot fail to obtain for her owners the confidence of shippers of goods between this port and Liverpool.

The brig Greenfield, of Irvine (in ballast), came to anchor in Troon Bay, about two o'clock on Friday afternoon, but the wind blowing so hard, she was driven from her moorings, and forced upon the rocks about a mile to the N.E. of Troon, and soon after became a total wreck. The crew, we are glad to learn, effected their escape on shore before she broke up; but two soldiers belonging to the 26th Foot, passengers, who had got upon the mainmast for safety, were drowned when it went overboard.

Same evening, about five o'clock, the harque Avon, of Ayr, broke from her moorings in Troon harbour, in consequence of her windlass and stern knees giving way. She drifted ashore a short distance from the Greenfield, and we are afraid will sustain considerable damage before she can be got afloat. Considerable apprehensions were felt lest she should sink while driving across the bay, as both her stern and bow ports were open for the purpose of discharging her cargo. The mate, a Custom-house officer, and two of the vessel's apprentices, with difficulty made their escape, by leaping on board the Dundonald, of Troon, just as the Avon left the Quay.

On Thursday morning, about one o'clock, the sloop Janet, of Port Glasgow, supposed to be from Dundalk, with a cargo of butter and oats, was driven ashore at the back of the Store, Troon, and was speedily dashed to pieces, when we regret to add, all on board perished! The body of a boy was found on the beach about five o'clock in the morning; the corpse was warm when found, but in consequence of a severe contusion on the forehead, it was found impossible to restore animation. Mr. Wilson, the Resident Engineer, with the most praiseworthy alacrity, lost no time in employing men to collect and lodge in a place of safety such parts of the cargo and wreck as came ashore. From 70 to 80 firkins of butter were picked up in the course of Saturday morning.

Saturday forenoon, a smack, the Jean, of Brodick, without any person on board, went ashore near the same place as the brig Greenfield. It is feared she will not be got off without sustaining much damage, should the weather continue as unsettled as it is at present. The Jean broke from her moorings on the other side of the Frith while the master and crew were ashore.

The Ailsa Craig steam-packet put into Troon on Saturday, in great distress, her engines unserviceable, with four feet of water in her hold.

The brig Catherine, of Greenock, M'Alpine, master, with oats and butter, was put on shore in Troon Bay on Saturday morning, with the loss of some spars, &c. The vessel is now so much damaged that the water ebbs and flows in her with the tide.

The whole of the coasters in the Clyde betwixt Dumbarton Castle and the Broomielaw were driven on shore, where some of them lie high and dry, the tide having been unusually high from the force of the storm, although in the neaps. At Dumbarton, where a shipwreck was never heard of before, a new launched brig was driven upon a bank in the Leven, and laid on her side. The vessels which came ashore in the river, are not supposed to have received much damage, but it will require a good deal of labour to cut a track for two or three of them into the water. One of them has got into a garden.—Glasgow Herald.

During the gale the following vessels were driven from their moorings in the Clyde, and went on shore:—The Manchester, Mersey, and Sim, Liverpool traders; the three Sisters from Malaga; the Rob Roy from Ireland; and two sloops, the names of which we do not know. Some of the vessels are discharging their cargoes into lighters, and it is expected the whole will be got off without damage.—Idem.

EARTHQUAKE.

From the Trinidad Gazette of Sept. 21.

The visitation occurred, according to the time on the town clock, at a quarter past nine o'clock last night, and according to the mean time, by Captain Lawrence, of his Majesty's ship Eden's Chronometer, at a quarter of an hour before ten. The direction of the shock appeared generally to be from East by North, to West by South, although in many places it would seem to be almost due North and South. It came on with little if any grumbling noise or other usual indication of earthquakes.

As to its duration, there appeared to be almost as many opinions as there are persons; thirty seconds appear to be the shortest time ascribed to it, but we have heard many well-informed persons contend that it lasted three minutes. We have not heard that any chasm or opening of the ground was caused; nor does the pavement of the streets appear to be in any instance disjointed.

It appeared not to have arrived at its full strength until some seconds before it entirely subsided. Had it continued with the same violence a few seconds longer, we are persuaded that few stone houses in the town of Port of Spain would have stood the shock. Scarcely a house in town has escaped damage—many are rent to such a degree as to render them uninhabitable without considerable danger. The upper part of the gable ends of several houses fell down. In every part of the town sheds and walls are levelled, and accounts of clocks fallen from their stands, bottles, china, and glass ware, broken, are innumerable. In many instances, tables, bedsteads, and other heavy articles of furniture, were removed from their places, or turned round.

The seat of his Excellency the Governor, at Ann's, has suffered severely, and it is said to be rent and disjointed in several places. The servants' apartments are also greatly injured, and a considerable quantity of glass ware, &c. is broken.

That neat and elegant building, our Protestant Church, is considerably damaged. The top of the N.W. pinnacle of the north tower was precipitated to the ground, and fell several yards to the westward of the foot of the tower; a part of the S.W. pinnacle fell on the roof of the church, and forcing through, dislodged one of the rafters, which, falling into the building, destroyed three of the pews. The two pinnacles to the eastward are completely shattered, and appear only to be prevented from falling by the strong iron bars in their centre, which are fixed in the battlements. The tower itself is completely rent through in several places, and the town clock is so much injured that it must undergo a thorough repair. The pinnacles of the south tower are also very seriously injured, and some of the buttresses are cracked.

The buildings intended to be converted into a new Court House are considerably damaged, and the present Court House has also received several trifling rents.

The chimney of the "Rookery," the residence of Henry Fuller, Esq., his Majesty's Attorney-General, fell down, together with many others in town.

The new Roman Catholic Church appears to have escaped entirely; and in the east end of King-street little damage has been sustained. In the market-place several galleries were thrown down, and the house of the clerk of the market seriously injured.

The house of Mr. Ciprianl, and that occupied by Messrs. Walrond, Johnston, and Co. are rendered uninhabitable, and, we understand, that both must be partially taken down and rebuilt. The upper part of the gable of the house occupied by Dr. Anderson, sen. in Frederick-street fell on the roof, and shattered the whole of the extensive shed in the Vendue-yard. The south gable of the adjoining house, occupied by John Edmondson, Esq. also fell. In the same street the roof of Mrs. Fell's house experienced a like fate, by the falling of part of the gable of the adjoining house. In the two Apotheeary Stores in Frederick-street, considerable damage was sustained by breakage; and the roof of a large back store of Messrs. Corrie, M'Allister and Co. entirely fell in.

So far as the accounts which have been received from the country go, the shock appears to have been general throughout the Island. A gentleman resident at Chaguanas, was shaken out of his bed; and the chimney of the boiling-house, on the Streatham Lodge Estate, Tacarigna, was shaken down, and also several of the negro-houses. It appears to have occasioned very considerable alarm among the negroes on the estates.

No lives were lost, and we are only aware of two persons being seriously injured. One of these is a Mr. Boss, who resides in the market-place; he was in bed when the shock took place, and one of the rafters which supported the roof having given way, it and the left-hand side of the wall fell on the bed; he was very seriously bruised on the head, breast, and limbs, but as no surgeon had been called in when we saw him, we cannot say whether any bones were broken. Several persons leapt from the windows of their houses. Mr. Tholozan, jun. was seriously injured on the side and head, although fortunately no bones were broken, having sprung from his gallery, about fifteen feet to the ground. Had the event taken place in the day time, we are convinced that many serious accidents would have been occasioned by the materials of the falling buildings.

The shock was felt as severely in the harbour as on shore. We are informed, that several persons on board the vessels in the harbour were thrown out of their births. We are assured by some of the oldest inhabitants, that this is the severest shock which has been felt in this island since their residence here, and, we repeat, that we cannot be sufficiently grateful that it subsided at the moment it did, and was unattended with storms, and the other usual accompaniments of earthquake, which generally occasion more damage than the earthquake itself.

A gentleman who was on horseback on his way from St. Joseph, was not aware of the event until informed of it on his arrival in town, when he recalled to his recollection that his horse had started, at the time which corresponded with that of the shock. As animals are by instinct particularly susceptible of these occurrences, we have little doubt that the horse was aware of the shock which escaped the notice of the rider; and a person who was crossing Brunswick-square at the time, describes that he felt the same sensation as is caused in a boat, by the motion of the waves. He also states that the houses on the north side of the square appeared to undulate and rock with great violence.

The shock of last night appears to have occasioned more damage than any former one with which this island has been visited since it was settled.

This visitation was preceded by very hot weather, and a slight shock is said to have been felt by many at four, and another at eight o'clock yesterday morning. We are not of a foreboding disposition, and still less inclined to infuse dread or apprehension in the minds of the public, but we cannot help remarking that the weather during this day, and the state of the atmosphere, which is always remarked to have a close connection with this description of convulsions of nature, corresponds very closely with what is recorded to have intervened between the shocks of earthquakes in other places, which have been attended with much more disastrous consequences.

We shall feel considerable anxiety until we hear from St. Vincent's and the neighbouring islands, and opposite continent, where these catastrophes are much more frequent and destructive than in Trinidad.

On the whole we cannot but attribute the comparative small extent of the damage in town to the intervention of Providence, and the strength and solidity of the buildings.

We cannot conclude this subject without an appeal to the feelings of the public; and the philanthropy which the inhabitants of Trinidad have upon every occasion shewn, not merely by empty professions, but by active benevolence, encourages us to do so, by the certainty that our appeal shall not be made in vain. We are informed that many persons of limited circumstances have suffered by the earthquake, and that amongst the number are several, the recollection of whose early days, or the respectable rank in which they have been accustomed to move, precludes the idea of their making known the difficulties of their situation. We cannot imagine a more grateful employment to the wealthy and respectable gentlemen of Trinidad, than that of inquiring out among the sufferers of last night those on whose scanty means the repairs of even the trifling damage they may have sustained, will make a considerable inroad; and who will be found not only in the usual abodes of poverty and distress, but in the dwellings of the respectable widowed mother and bereaved orphan.

ACCIDENTS, &c.

Wild Beast.—On Saturday evening a boy went with his father to Mr. James's menagerie, at Stafford, and took an opportunity while there to tease a ring-tailed leopard, which soon gave him full proof of its displeasure, by darting its paws through the bars of the den, and tearing up part of his left eye-brow. With such force did the animal strike, that the boy fell to the ground as though he had been shot. No blame could be attached to the proprietor, as every necessary precaution had been taken.

On Sunday evening last, between the hours of seven and eight o'clock, a burglary was committed by a gang of thieves, who have, for a considerable time past, infested the neighbourhood of Somers-town; who broke into the dwelling-house of Mrs. Day, No. 7, Hertford-street, Somers-town, and stole eight sovereigns, all the silver tea and table spoons, together with a large quantity of wearing apparel. It appears that Mrs. Day had gone to the Rev. Benjamin Rayson's chapel, Tonbridge-place, New-road, having previously locked her street-door and left a candle and a lamp burning on the table in the front parlour. On her return from chapel, to her utmost astonishment and distress, she found her street-door wide open, and, on examining the premises, she found all the locks in the house picked, her cupboards and boxes emptied of their contents, the lights, as well as four boxes, removed into the back parlour, and all her wearing apparel strewed about the house.

A robbery of a description often practised in the neighbourhood, was committed on Sunday last, at the house of Mr. Nicholls, grocer, Islington-green. The family had gone to morning Divine Service, and left the house secured. On their return there was no difficulty in getting ingress, for the door had been scientifically opened, and every lock within was broken open, and linen, a few articles of plate, and other articles worth conveying away, were stolen. One of the thieves walked out of the house with Mr. Nicholl's drab great coat. A clue has been obtained which will, we hope, lead to the apprehension of the parties.

On Wednesday last a miserable-looking vagrant presented himself at the Mayor's house, Dover, and by a tender tale of woe, excited the charitable feelings of his Worship, who gave him 2s. As he was about to leave the house, he stole the gloves of his benefactor, who caught him in the act, and committed him to prison. —Kentish Gazette.

Alarming Fire.—Tuesday evening last, about half past nine o'clock, a fire broke out at the house of Mr. Ford, baker, Bridgwater-gardens, Fann-street, Aldersgate-street; and in a short time the whole of the premises were enveloped in flames. The engines were prompt on the spot, and, aided by a plentiful supply of water, the firemen commenced operations, but owing to the nature of the building, which was chiefly composed of wood, the flames communicated to the adjoining house, occupied by Mr. Lancelott, and great fears were entertained that the devouring element would extend its ravages to the houses in Bridgwater-square; but by the praiseworthy exertions of the firemen, the flames were confined to the above houses, the one Mr. Ford occupied being reduced to a heap of ruins, the other so much damaged that it is feared it must come down. The fire originated by some shavings becoming ignited in the cellar.

Loss of the Comet.—In consequence of the violence of the weather, it was found necessary yesterday morning to suspend the operations that were going on for lifting the Comet, and to take the vessels employed for that purpose into Gourock Bay. The following, however, has been the result of the operations for some days past:—On Sunday she was moved near the shore 15 feet, Tuesday, 18, Wednesday 50, Thursday 60—in all 143 feet. In the place where she sunk the water was 17 fathoms deep; in the place she now is at is about 13 fathoms; so that she is now about four fathoms nearer the surface. The weather, in the latter part of yesterday, became more moderate; and it was intended, if it continued favourable, to resume operations this morning; but we understand nothing has since been effected.—Greenock Advertiser of Friday se'nnight.

Yesterday morning, at about half-past four o'clock, the town was thrown into the greatest consternation by an alarming fire, which broke out in the extensive coach-manufactory (built principally of wood) of Mr. Aslatt, near the Weigh-bridge. The building, from one end to the other, appeared one mass of flame, which was for a length of time confined to the interior; but, by five o'clock, the flames, which had spread to an alarming height, communicated to the dwelling-house adjoining the manufactory, and to the brewery, coach-house, and stables of F. L. Beckford, Esq., which were soon enveloped. At this time it was thought that the range of buildings to the Weigh-bridge, and those fronting the road, would fall a prey to the devouring element; but from the wind afterwards taking a contrary direction, the safety of another extensive coach-manufactory (Mr. Callaway's), the back of which was adjacent to the premises on fire, was considered uncertain. The progress of the fire in this direction was stopped by pulling down part of the house occupied by Mrs. Sawkins. One of the town engines now arrived, and commenced playing on the buildings—this was succeeded by that from the Military Asylum, kindly sent by Colonel Evatt. The other town engine followed, and was conveyed through the gateway at Mr. Beckford's to the coach-house, and assisted materially in stopping the flames in the direction of Mr. Callaway's manufactory. At about half-past five the fire was at its height, and the whole of the varnish and turpentine having ignited, the pale blue flame of the spirits presented an awfully sublime sight. Many of the carriages were dragged out from the burning building, which by six o'clock presented nothing but a heap of ruins, the roof and floors having fallen in about a quarter of an hour previously. The engines were now successfully directed to Mr. Beckford's stables, which were furiously raging, and the fire was prevented from spreading further. The engines have continued playing on the smoking pile of ruins throughout the day. The alarm at one time was so great, that many persons in Marland Place commenced moving their furniture. The fire had been raging nearly an hour and a half before the town engines were brought properly to play, and then for some time they had but a scanty supply of water, which was conveyed in buckets from pumps in the neighbourhood, an inconvenience having been felt in opening the plugs. The engines' hose, too, were out of order, and burst repeatedly. The gentry, and inhabitants generally, exerted themselves with much energy on this dreadful occasion, and amongst the foremost was Hollingsworth, of our theatre, whose exertions were beyond all praise; and whilst women were seen handing buckets for the supply of the engines, a few sturdy vagabonds resisted all applications for assistance, and remained sullen spectators of the dreadful scene. No lives were lost.—Southampton Herald.

Determined Suicide.—Tuesday a Coroner's Inquest was held at the Jacob's Well, in Barbican, before Thomas Shelton, Esq. on the body of William Woods, who destroyed himself in the following manner:—Mr. John Williams, a surgeon, stated that he had known the deceased nearly twelve months, during which time he attended him professionally, and that he had latterly laboured under a great depression of spirits, and his mind appeared considerably affected. Witness advised him to go into the country, thinking a change of air might do him good; but he refused, and said he had no wish to live. On Saturday afternoon he was called in to attend him, when he found him sitting in a chair, with his throat cut, and bleeding profusely. Witness examined the wound, which appeared to be a dangerous one, and advised his removal to the Hospital. He repeatedly exclaimed, "Let me die!" and endeavoured to tear open the wound; and it required the united exertions of four men to prevent him from doing so. His arms were then pinioned, and some persons endeavoured to remove him from the house, but he expired whilst they were carrying him down stairs. He had examined the body since, and found he had completely divided the windpipe, and cut several of the principal veins in the neck. There was a chisel lying by his side, with which the wound appeared to have been inflicted.—Mary Wilson said she had known the deceased about six months, during which time she attended him as nurse. She had considered him to be of unsound mind during the last six weeks.—The Jury returned a verdict, "That the deceased committed suicide while in a state of temporary derangement."

Melancholy Catastrophe.—A melancholy and distressing occurrence took place on board one of the packet ships, on her recent voyage from Liverpool to New York. Whilst on her way thither, she met with another packet vessel coming from New York to Liverpool. The inquiries usually made on such occasions were interchanged; and amongst other intelligence, the failure of a mercantile house of some eminence in America was mentioned. The communication was observed to produce a sensible and instantaneous effect on a gentlemen who was going out to New York as a passenger; and it afterwards appeared that he was one of the partners of the house in question. So afflicting a circumstance could not fail to excite a deep feeling of commiseration in the breasts of his fellow passengers, who endeavoured, as far possible, to soften and alleviate the anguish occasioned by a communication so abrupt and distressing. The next morning, when the cabin-party assembled to breakfast, the gentleman did not appear amongst them as usual; and, on the steward entering his state-room to call him, he was not to be found, but a short note was left on the dressing-table, requesting the Captain not to persevere in an unavailing search for him. We need not add, that the unfortunate gentleman had, under the influence of paroxysm, consigned himself and his sorrows to a premature grave.

Dreadful Accident in Lord Liverpool's Family.—We are sorry to state that a dreadful accident happened at Lord Liverpool's residence, at Walmer Castle, on Wednesday night. A servant of the name of Hawkins, who was a cook in the family, had been out during the evening, and returned home in a state of intoxication. Upon returning to his own room, one of his fellow servants, of the name of Christopher West, followed him, and observing him take a gun from the closet of the room, he endeavoured to get it out of his hands, and, in the struggle, the gun went off, and lodged the contents in West's head, whereby he was immediately killed. There is not the least ground to suppose that Hawkins bore any malice or ill-will towards his unfortunate victim. They were always considered in the family as particularly friendly towards each other, and there is every reason to believe that Hawkins did not even know that the gun was loaded. The coroner's inquest was to assemble Thursday afternoon. C. West was brought up in Lord Liverpool's family, and had recently been promoted to be his Lordship's own servant, for his good conduct. The sad event has deeply affected Lord and Lady Liverpool and all the family.

(For Promotions, see the last page.)

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The favour of several valued Correspondents must remain unnoticed until next week.

We have received the annual offerings entitled the Literary Souvenir, Forget me not, and Friendship's Offering; but from unexpected press of matter, we are prevented noticing the many beauties they contain, until next week.

THE SPIRIT of THE AGE NEWSPAPER.—Preparing for publication, a Volume of the Songs, Epigrams, and different Whims which have appeared, and may appear, in this Journal, from its commencement until the end of the year, with alterations and additions.
BY THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.
The earliest notice will be given of its publication, and orders for it will be received at the Office in Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 27.

The greatest affliction that can possibly fall to the lot of any man is to be, beyond any doubt, an established fool—the next calamity to that is, the exposure of his folly, by himself or his friends, to the world. In the first of these positions Mr. JOSEPH HUME has stood, in such undoubted possession, for so long a time, that the fact does not require even comment; but whenever any exhibition, in evidence of the latter, comes under our observation, we think it but right to give the public the benefit of the amusement it naturally holds out, and the DOCTOR himself all the justice he is entitled to. A dinner has been given to our modern COCKER by the "Citizens of Edinburgh," on which momentous occasion LEONARD HORNER, Esq. figured away as Chairman; and with a view to pay proper respect to the host as well as the guest, we shall begin by an examination of the said HORNER's principles—a better sample of which we cannot at first submit than the following:—

"They had already testified their respect for the Royal Family, but, after his Majesty, there was one member of that august House who was entitled to a particular notice—the Duke of Sussex. (Applause.) His Royal Highness was the strenuous supporter of those principles which placed his family on the throne of these realms—the steady friend of the rights and privileges of the people—and the zealous advocate of liberal opinions; and who, on every occasion, was always ready to stand forward, with his high rank and character, in the cause of benevolence and enlightened philanthropy. "Duke of Sussex." (Great applause.)"

By this account it would seem that the Duke of SUSSEX is the man in the kingdom most entitled to our respect, next to His MAJESTY; and really, all things considered, we don't know but such is the case, although it must be admitted that respect is a term on which no people ought to differ, although they invariably do—for certainly in our opinion it is not very respectable to try to make a woman your wife who legally cannot be so, to bastardize her children, and then avail yourself of the law to get her off your hands—in our opinion it was barely respectable even to name the late Queen, and certainly not so, to toast her at a public dinner—in our opinion it is not respectable to manifest, through life, OPEN REBELLION against one's own family, and against the best interests of the country which pays you—in our opinion it is not respectable to smoke and pot with any low company that ask you out—to be spokesman at every radical dinner—first fiddle at players' routes, and tom fool on all water parties—none of these pursuits, in our opinion, are entitled to respect; but it seems the "Citizens of Edinburgh" think otherwise. From this specimen of HORNER's genius we come to his speech introductory of HUME's health, and sincerely regret we have not room for the whole of its contents—he began by very modestly speaking of his own unfitness for the office, which he fully exemplified throughout the evening—talked about his being in embarrassment, and then entered upon the task of entertaining those TERRIBLE WORDS (vide Edinburgh papers) "Joseph Hume," which he did by making the following flourishes:—

"I will not deny myself and you the satisfaction of dwelling for a little while on some of those more prominent parts in the public life of our distinguished countryman, which entitle him to the lasting gratitude of every one, whatever his political opinions may be, who is alive to the best interests of his country (loud applause); and as what passes here will go forth to the public, I am desirous that those who, from prejudice or misapprehension, have formed an erroneous estimate of his character, should know why it is that the citizens of Edinburgh have considered Mr. Hume entitled to this tribute of respect. In reviewing the history of Mr. Hume's political life, the first thing that occurs to every man's mind is that wonderful persevering industry—that ardent spirit with which he has employed himself in the service of the country, in the great work of economical reform. (Applause). Among the many important services he has rendered, what he has accomplished in this respect may be selected as his greatest achievement, and that upon which is founded his first and greatest claim to the applause and gratitude of his fellow citizens."

Again:

"When Mr. Hume first began his Parliamentary career, and entered upon his long course of arduous duties, he was a new man, unknown to Parliament or to the country, coming forward under no patronage, and possessing no advantages either from the influence of family, or from a reputation already established, in the eyes of the public at large. But he came armed with irresistible weapons; a proud consciousness of the rectitude and purity of his motives, a strong practical understanding for the work he had undertaken, a patient inexhaustible industry, and a temper which no provocation could disturb; and amidst all the revilings and obloquy that were cast upon him, he went fearlessly forward, knowing full well that, in due season, and at no very distant period, his country would do full justice to his integrity and disinterested patriotism."

Then again:

"But it is to take a very limited view of Mr. Hume's usefulness, to consider only the advantages we have derived by the diminution of the public burthens. His exertions have had a far wider and more important influence; for every reduction of wasteful expenditure, every useless place that has been abolished, has in so much diminished the power of Government to exercise corrupt influence. (Applause.) And such is the vigilance with which every branch of the public service is now looked after, that if there exist any public officer, who, lamenting those golden days when his salary formed but a small part of his emoluments, and, relying upon the supineness of Government, would still willingly try to clip the coin as it passes through his hands, from the pockets of the people to the coffers of the Exchequer; if such a design should enter into his mind, these terrible words "Joseph Hume" instantly sound in his ears (peals of applause), and warn him, that though he may escape the eye or the punishment of Government, there is a sentinel who is ever at his post, who never slumbers, and who will certainly bring him to shame."

It may naturally be asked, whether HORNER was drunk or not; that fact, however, the Edinburgh Courant does not directly state, and it, therefore, being very early in the evening when this speech was made, we are inclined to believe it was not the case: and, assuming this position, it becomes our task to examine the matter herein submitted to us. The best opinion that can be adduced of the "rectitude and purity" of HUME's motives, when "he first began his Parliamentary career," is, from the fact of his having sat originally on the Ministerial side of the House, and as obsequiously voted with the members of the Cabinet, as now he votes against them; and every one knows that it was only when he saw no chance of profiting by them, owing to the extraordinary dulness they gave him credit for, that he eventually ratted; and this circumstance alone, is the very best of all vouchers for the "integrity and *dis*interested patriotism of JOSEPH HUME;" while, as far as his utility goes, it is only necessary to recur to the various controversies on our national expenditure in which he has been concerned, and the issue on his part, while it shews his own amazing stupidity, will testify that he was thus far useful, in proving, what no one ever doubted before, the general correctness of our Government's public accountants. Mr. HORNER goes on further to observe, that in the question of docks, "the inhabitants of Leith had found in Mr. HUME a sure, steady, active, and powerful ally;" and although it is not for us to deny, in the face of the inhabitants of Leith, how "sure a-lie" Mr. JOSEPH has been to them, yet this we can easily determine, that at any thing in the shape of docking, he is by no means such a bad hand. We now come to the grand finale and wind up of HORNER's harangue; wherein he thinks it necessary to allude to the combinations now formed throughout the country, and in the subsequent sublime light does he place the terrific HUME:—

"There is one question of great public interest, in which Mr. Hume's labours have been very conspicuous, which deserves more particular notice, as it has lately occupied so much of the public attention. I speak of the Combination Laws. Very shortly after his coming into Parliament, this subject was brought forward by Mr. Hume, and we find him upon every occasion pressing upon the attention of the House of Commons, the injustice and impolicy of those Laws which, making a distinction between one class of people and another, in violation of the most valuable and essential principle of the Constitution, interfered with the free disposal of a poor man's skill and labour, and only property, and reduced him in so much, to the condition of a slave. Having matured his previous inquiries, Mr. Hume last year moved for and obtained a committee, to revise these laws, and after minute and laborious inquiry, the committee reported it as their opinion, that the restrictive laws had proved productive of the most injurious effects, both upon the morals of the people, and the interests of trade, and recommended that they should be immediately repealed. Mr Hume accordingly brought in a bill with the sanction of Ministers, founded upon those resolutions, which passed through Parliament, not only without opposition, but without discussion, so indisputably had the truth of the case been established by the evidence before the Committee [applause]. This bill removed all those penalties to which workmen were liable, when they peaceably assembled to regulate their common concerns, or if they attempted to go to another country, when they thought they could thereby improve their condition. Unfortunately, those who were more benefitted by this wise enactment have, in too many instances afforded by their misconduct to plausible arguments to those who, upon a narrow view of the case, would seek to remedy the temporary evils that have arisen from the repeal by a re-enactment of the restrictive laws. I am persuaded, that in a great proportion of instances, the misconduct of the workmen has arisen from their ignorance, that all that the Legislature has to do is to prevent them from making any encroachment upon the property and rights of others, and that if left to the operation of those natural causes which regulate the price of wages between master and labourer, all combinations, that are not perfectly reasonable and legitimate, will speedily cease [applause]. There have not been wanting persons, you are well aware, who have represented Mr. Hume, upon this subject, as a willing and premeditated disturber of the public peace. To those who know him, no refutation of such a calumny is necessary; but, in the dignified and most judicious addresses which he delivered upon a recent occasion, to the deputies of those workmen who, in their ignorance, supposed him to be the peculiar champion of the labouring classes, and that, in obtaining the repeal of the Combination Laws, he was consulting their interest only, will be found a complete and triumphant answer to all the malice of his enemies" [applause].

In another speech, delivered some hour or two after, by Mr. JEFFREY, the Rhadamanthus of Edinburgh, better known as the subject of a matchless satire by Lord BYRON in the English Bards, it is asserted that the repeal of the COMBINATION LAWS by Mr. HUME, was "the proudest triumph of the many triumphs he had won," and concluding, therefore, that such is the universal idea entertained by these people, it may not be improper to state, in defiance of all contradiction, that the repeal of those statutes has been the sole and exclusive cause of the misery with which the manufacturing part of the country is now deluged; the examination of the Bill is enough to convince any one of the truth of this assertion, and if that were not sufficient testimony, the AMENDMENT effected in it by Parliament at the termination of the last Session, (in a determination to put some stop to the daring excesses of which the REPEAL has been the cause), would be ample evidence. We have already taken an opportunity, in some preceding numbers, to comment on the almost awful nature of these alarming combinations, and have dilated on the ruin of which Mr. HUME stands the recorded promoter, and it will therefore be sufficient for our purposes, to place before him an instance of the dreadful consequences of that measure which Messrs. HORNER and JEFFREY have been "applauding to the very echo:"

DISTRESS OF THE BRADFORD "TURN-OUTS."—We stated last week, that about 1700 of these misguided men found it impossible on any terms to obtain employment, and that the resources of the Union were entirely drained. It now appears that, embracing the wives and children of the unfortunate beings, the total number at present in a state of the most abject destitution is nearly 3000! All hope, too, we believe, of collecting from the working classes sums capable of affording this vast mass of sufferers as much as one penny a week each in future are vanished.—Leeds intelligencer.

After perusing such a dreadful visitation on the miserable classes of society to whom it refers, it would be a much more decent and respectable thing for these very people to set about some subscription, to relieve the victims of their political measures—for while we for ever set our faces against the issue of the slightest assistance from any portion of the people not immediately connected therewith, and above all from the very persons whom the combinations of these desperate vagabonds have partially ruined, our feelings of charity would induce us to suggest that Messrs. HUME, HORNER, JEFFREYS, and Co., one as the mover, and the rest as the seconders of this precious measure, are the proper persons to afford redress to the sufferers by its adoption. We shall not enter into any examination of HUME's speech, or rather speeches, which are but the echo of all the nonsense he has so repeatedly delivered before, nor into those of the different blockheads by whom he was surrounded; but after a very impartial examination of the address of Mr. HORNER, we have little hesitation in concluding, that he must belong to that redoubtable family whose ancestor, JACK HORNER, is the very earliest associate of our youthful days.

THE AGE OF MONKIES,*
AND
THE MONKIES OF THE AGE!

AIR—Here's to the Maiden of bashful fifteen.

In these days when no one but monkies you see,
To fill up our streets and our stages,
We venture to trace, of each kind and degree,
Who the monkey in chief of the age is,
That every ass may see in his glass
As thorough a monkey as any that pass.

At the different theatres they who carouse
Every evening, are in such a bother;
They're intoxicate, half, with apes at one house,
And, half, drunk with Punch at the other.
But every ass, &c.

They may talk of Chimpanse at new Drury-lane,
Or MAZURIER at Covent-garden;
But I'll show you a list unto which, it is plain,
When compared, they are not worth a farden.
And every ass, &c.

From men and from manners we gather our tale,
From your monstrous, down to your mild man;
And the first we present you, is Lord LAUDERDALE,
The orang-outang, alias wild man!
Thus every ass, &c.

The next is the monkey they christen Malbrouc,
A dangerous fellow to play with;
For while some dirt a plate that's just cleaned by the cook,
This monkey the plate MAKES AWAY WITH.
So every ass, &c.

Another odd tribe you will find on the card,
And whenever you're anxious to view one,
You are certain to meet with, the day he's on guard,
My Lord BILLY LENNOX—the blue one.
For every ass, &c.

It is also apparent the name Lord KINNOUL
Of the common baboon justly makes his,
And 'tis equally evident, by the same rule,
The uncommon one TOMMY RAIKES is.
As every ass, &c.

For MICHAEL FITZGERALD, (who surely was meant
For one of the Mico's to pass well),
Declares from the Hospital TOMMY was sent
As ugly—and incurable as well!
Thus every ass, &c.

Then IRBY and PETRE are Barbary Apes,
With feature and limb not a fault in,
And DANIEL MACKINNON, for antics and shapes,
Is properly christened the Faulting!
While every ass, &c.

The tribe of the Mustache Lord PETERSHAM's like,
And admitted to be a well bred one,
While the fancy of most folks it clearly must strike
Lord WILTSHIRE's a capital red one!
So every ass, &c.

Of the order-named Callitrix, otherwise Green,
The true representative HAYNE is,
And then that King ALLEN's the Long-nosed, we mean
To observe it most certainly plain is.
For every ass, &c.

The white eye-lid monkey is DICKY GLENGALL,
Who for tricks all the others before is,
And every person you meet with, will call
Sir FRANCIS—the old slender LORIS!

Lord TANKERVILLE's one of the horned SAJOU,
And famed ROBERT WILSON a night one,
And in Mr. GEORGE WOMBWELL you'll fail not to view
Of the black SAKI order a bright one.
So every ass, &c.

Colonel COCHRANE, as Man-drill, is very well known,
On parade when his countenance they see;
The Pinche my Lord DEERHURST's the person to own,
HARRY WOMBWELL the LORIS, or Lazy!
Thus every ass, &c.

The fawn-coloured Coaita NORMANBY more
In his manner resembles than any;
And though Negro monkies you have by the score,
Tea-pot CRAUFORD's more like them than many!
For every ass, &c.

* The precise names of the different orders of the Monkey tribe, as printed in the SONG in Italics, will be found in Baron CUVIER's "Animal Kingdom," published by WHITTAKER.

In addition to others set down in this page,
You'll find, when you've leizure to con it,
Nothing equal to BERKELEY, the Ape of the stage,
Or the tricks he has played when upon it.
So every ass, &c.
Having run through the list now, excepting but one,
Of every Ape that the rage is,
Though we differ, some say that the great monkey BUNN
The Monkey-in-Chief of the AGE is,
Like every ass who will see in his glass
As thorough a monkey as any that pass.

By a reference to our Law Report, it will be seen that Mr. WILLIAMS appeared yesterday, to show cause against a rule nisi, which Mr. ADOLPHUS obtained last week on the part of Mr. BUNN, against the Printers and Publishers of some Weekly Print, and the cause adduced by this gentleman is an affidavit of the defendants, stating their belief that the plaintiff was concerned in the conduct of this Paper, and as having been the propagator of repeated libels himself, he was not entitled to such an extraordinary jurisdiction of the Court—in another part of our Paper will also be found an advertisement addressed to Lieutenant-Colonel FAIRMAN, relative to his imputation of a charge something of the same nature against Mr. BUNN, which appears to have led to a violent dispute between the parties concerned. It would be ridiculous to affect an ignorance of the opinion that has in many quarters prevailed of this gentleman's connection with our Journal, but it would have been equally so, to have bestowed on such vague and curious rumours the least attention, until the announcement of the nature of those in question appeared: and silence now would be very properly construed into an admission of the truth of all the assertions contained in them; and it is with a view therefore to counteract these statements, we deem it right to observe, that, for the satisfaction of those parties who may consider themselves at all aggrieved by any opinions which have appeared in THE AGE, our Publisher has always been ready, and now is, to make oath that Mr. BUNN is not, and never has been, the Editor of this Paper; but, for the purpose of gratifying the curiosity of any of those low people who have on all hands assailed us, or for the advancement, by our notice, of any humble contemporary, only jealous of the great prosperity which public favour has shewn our publication, he has always declined to deliver any opinion. We cannot withhold a smile at the sheer nonsense contained in the affidavit by which Mr. WILLIAMS opposed the rule, wherein, it is asserted, that the establishment of our paper was projected and carried into effect on the decline of a distinguished contemporary; but without any disrespect to that journal, the ability of which is estimated by none more than by us, we distinctly avow that the statement is false. The principles on which THE AGE started, and on which it will ever act, were those of upholding to the utmost the established laws and religion of our land, and of displaying, in their strongest and truest lights, the characters of those who are her open and professed enemies. If we are the defamers which these infuriated people state us to be, why have we not, as well as they, come under the hand of the law—why is not the judgment, dealt out so justly to others, visited upon us? The reply is obvious; because we have never given reason to incur such strong responsibility—but while we have thought it necessary, for the protection of morality, to speak our sentiments in the strongest manner of those who hourly invade it, we have avoided that grossness which, in its excess of vulgarity, always weakens veracity. We have certainly called men and things by their proper names, but in no instance in a manner by which the advantages of public society might not be materially forwarded. In the instance of Lieutenant-Colonel FAIRMAN, both of whom and his paper we were hitherto ignorant, we are really at a loss to know wherein we have given cause for him "to wreak his vengeance upon us;" but time, we conclude, will let us into these secrets—and with reference to Mr. BUNN, we can only say, that, having seen in the columns of these journals he has become mixed up, with the most extraordinary defamation both of himself and his lady, from a suspicion of his association with this Journal, we have no hesitation in declaring, only on that particular account, that our columns shall be at his service, at any time, to rebut any insinuations arising out of such charges; and that when, while labouring under such imputation, any praise of ours on the public performances of Mrs. BUNN might have been without the effect they would have been intended to convey, and on which account we have been studiously silent on any display of her abilities, we fearlessly say that our eulogiums will be passed in the proportion they may be deserved, with a perfect contempt for any opinions their delivery may give rise to; and with this assurance we take leave of Mr. BUNN and his assailants. It is at all times a most ungracious task to speak of ourselves, and nothing but the determination of others to speak of us should have induced us so to do; but having once entered on the subject, we distinctly and fully state, that neither the spleen nor the envy of any low contemporaries—neither the threats of offenders, or their attempts to injure our property, will induce us for one instant to suspend the severity of those remarks we may think it necessary to make, or obstruct the fulfilment of that duty THE UNBOUNDED LIBERALITY OF PUBLIC PATRONAGE has imposed on us.

ODD TRICK.

Lord BEAUCHAMP and Mr. A. STANHOPE set-to
One night at BLIND HOOKEY, between me and you,
And viewing th odds, I do think you will find
That STANHOPE was "hookey!" and BEAUCHAMP was blind!
Their manner of play differed much—BEAUCHAMP felt
'Twas proper to shuffle before that he dealt;
But STANHOPE observed, "why, wherever I can,
To shuffle AS SOON AS I've dealt, is my plan."
The moral of this is—he wished to contrive,
Though most packs have four knaves, that his should have five;
And therefore 'twas settled in future to call
Him who dealt all the others—the greatest of ALL!

The following article appeared in the Morning Chronicle of Friday last:—

"Our beloved Monarch has made a terrible mess in the Park. It is miserable to see his loving subjects struggling through the mud and mire, slipping and sliding, climbing up and tumbling down the loose mounds of earth, from Chesterfield to PICCADILLY GATE! What is to be the end of all this fuss, we have not the remotest idea; but from what we see, and have seen for months, we should say that effect is being given to Lord Castlereagh's brilliant idea, of employing the wealth and industry of the country in making holes in one place and filling them up again from another, for there are an abundance of very fine holes, and of proportionately large mounds, which not only exercise the industry of labourers, but also the activity of passengers. There is this to be said of all our gracious Sovereign's improvements, that the process of them is uncommonly disagreeable, and the completion of them equally costly and unsatisfactory!! Let no man here cry treason! Nothing is more distant from our thoughts than to raise a question touching the Royal taste, which is just a proverb for excellence, for the best of Kings has notoriously the best of tastes, and the responsibility of any miscarriages must constitutionally fall upon his architectural advisers. The fact is, that his Majesty, Heaven bless him! has about him such a breed of architects as the world never before saw; and whose doings are the shame of England, and the scoff of the whole world. These gentlemen, who should be suffered to build nothing but wings to their own names (the only process by which they can make them great)—rilles (vile would be more apposite) to their proper monosyllables, are incessantly devising some unlucky scheme or other for the ornamenting of the metropolis. The strongest evidence that can be adduced of the demerits of these worthies who have the undoing of our public works, is the fact that the House of Commons has never been so unanimous on any subject, as in execration of their abominations. In that place, where every jobber finds an advocate, they alone found none. Even Mr. Bankes testified against the iniquities of their trowels, and Mr. Croker shot out his tongue against them, saying, this thing, and this thing have they done. The abomination, however, that is now being perpetuated exceeds any that has yet been committed—we allude to the building of the new Palace on the site of Buckingham House, If it is true, that a city, built upon a hill, cannot be hid, it is no less certain that a Palace built in a hole cannot be seen, and in such a situation is the new Palace to be built. If a man had climbed to the top of St. Paul's, and had cast his eyes over all London, and considered in his mind which was the most improper place for a Palace, he would certainly have said, without hesitation, Buckingham House; but the main objection against it, that it is in a hollow, has, we make no question, never been discovered by his Majesty's architectural advisers, and never will be discovered by them, till the Palace is built, when they will suddenly find out that nobody can see it, that it can never be an object, and that another Palace must be built fit for a King, on a high hill, where it cannot be hid. This is the very best plan on which a public work can be commenced. Begin it where it should not be, and build it over again where it should be—thus you have two good jobs instead of one. When it was the wish of Government to construct some wet docks between Woolwich and Gravesend, a careful survey was made of the banks of the river, and a hill (the only one on the Kent banks, ingress at Greenhithe) was chosen as the fittest place in the world for the construction of wet docks. A fine park and property, belonging to Mr. Calcraft, was purchased, and when nothing remained to be done but to cut the docks, it was suddenly recollected that the hills were not proper for wet docks. As we have been treating of palaces, things very much in our way—we should like to know what is to be done with that Palace which our beloved Monarch had built last summer in Hyde-park, and dedicated to the Fine Arts. It looks to the naked eye very like a gingerbread booth at a fair, but it is, in fact, a Royal House, though a little one, and was especially hammered together for the exhibition of a huge piece of painted canvass purporting to represent the Battle of Waterloo, which has never been seen, we believe, by any body except ourselves, and the secret of what we saw shall never escape us."

It is quite impossible to conceive a more miserable attempt to excite public controversy than the effusion of this drivelling Cockney—a desire to be droll without the slightest ability to support the character, and a determination to be impudent and ignorant, with every prospect of complete success. The tirade against our GRACIOUS MONARCH is in the usual style and feeling of the redoubtable driveller who edits this Journal, and therefore does not excite those sensations of surprise which the writer fully calculated upon; but the impulse of indignation and contempt which it calls forth is something beyond any thing, we should think, that its author could for a moment have imagined; for no one but the most besotted fellow in existence—the most prejudiced twaddler that ever learned to write and exercised his calling, can be blind to the NATIONAL IMPROVEMENTS which have already taken place, and are hourly in progress, by command of GEORGE THE FOURTH. They have elicited the admiration of every one—our own citizens, and the citizens of other countries who have visited our shores; they have added incalculable beauty to a metropolis that was before the wonder of all who have seen it; and to the thousands of foreigners who inhabit it by courtesy it has at once conveyed the very proudest assurance of the interminable glory and inexhaustible wealth of GREAT BRITAIN. But the wretched scribe of the Morning Chronicle has no idea of any thing of this kind, and therefore at this period of the year, when the fashionable world (which is only to be seen by the citizens in the Parks) is to a soul out of town, or, if in it, only incog., and when, consequently, this identical time is pitched upon for the prosecution of those improvements now going on there, this fellow sports his figure in HYDE PARK, and, floundering about between the new ground and the heavy rains we have lately had, becomes naturally enough chin-deep in the very best London mud—this of course is laid to his MAJESTY'S account; for if a fool like this fell into the Serpentine, he would expect the KING, as the owner of the place, to pull him out. There is no argument by which you can convince a person, who reasons as this man has done; because any one who could by possibility, in the present state of the weather, and the operations there proceeding, enter the Park, unless in the capacity of a labourer, is only a fit inmate for Bedlam—he might just as well take, and begin to furnish, one of the many houses building in London, that is not at present even roofed, or commit any other of those amusing excesses which people who take leave of their senses, or rather have no senses to take leave of, do now and then commit. But the spring will come, and the spring will bloom; and when all this wilderness of dirt becomes covered with verdure—when the walks and the rides are apportioned and laid out, and the Cits and the Grandees are seen occupying their respective stations—when the thing, in fact, assumes that feature it is obviously intended to assume, we shall have all this puling tone suddenly altered; there will be once per day "a sonnet to the early primrose"—"Thoughts suggested by a Ride from Cumberland-gate to Hyde-park-corner"—"Ode on the new Turnpike-gate at Knightsbridge"—and "a familiar Epistle from the new iron railing to the old dead wall:" till then, of course, our SOVEREIGN is the most horrible creature in existence—Buckingham House, the residence of so many Kings, is quite unfit for a Palace—the battle of Waterloo, a piece of painted canvas—and the Editor of the Morning Chronicle, no blockhead!

LYRICS OF TON, No. 3.

THE *Valét AT SPA!

BY THE HON. H. G. BENNETT, M.P.

AIR—There is not in the wide world a VALLEY so sweet.

There is not in the wide world a valley so sweet,
As the one I in Germany happened to meet;
Oh. feeling and sense from my heart must withdraw,
'Ere I cease to remember the Valley at SPA!
'Twas just at that hour, so lone and serene,
When evening her mantle had flung o'er the scene,
That, wandering along by the flowered hawhaw,
I caught a FULL VIEW of the Valley at SPA!
The stars, with their first glimpse of tremulous light,
Were begiuning to stud the grey bosom of night,
And the dews had sunk on me, all chilly and raw,
While standing—behind—the fair Valley at SPA!
Not the passionate feelings which GERTRUDE first bred
In my heart, 'ere her hand to the altar I led,
Nor the feelings on entering the church, gave such awe
As those, when I entered—the Valley at SPA!
They say, "FELLOW-feeling makes us wondrous kind,"
And I dare say it's true—for indeed to my mind
No heart ever felt, and no eye ever saw
Its "fellow" I felt in the Valley at SPA!
Not the fixed joys of manhood—the fleet ones of youth,
Not the bright scenes of love, or of friendship and truth—
And the pleasures spent in them—surpass the eclat
Of the moments I spent—in the Valley at SPA!
I once TRANSPORTATION LAWS put to the rout
In a book, which MACQUARIE for truth seemed to doubt;
But no man e'er felt in a transport by law,
The transport I felt in the Valley at SPA!
I gazed with a rapture I cannot express,
—'Twas of feeling, Oh, surely, the soul and excess—
When my eye all the charms in its glance seemed to draw
From thy top to thy bottom, Oh, Valley at SPA!
There is not a happiness mortal can own,
But, almost as soon as enjoyed, is flown;
So my wonder and pleasure both soon seemed to thaw,
When myself I withdrew—from the Valley at SPA!
I may rove on to Italy's bowers, but yet
The bowers I now quit I shall never forget,
And nothing can heal in my PEACE the deep flaw,
'Till again I repose—in the Valley at SPA!

* Surely a misprint for Valley.—EDITOR.

DUEL
BETWEEN A JUDGE AND A GENERAL!

In Woodville (Mississippi) a duel was lately fought between Judge CHILDS and General JOUR. The former was shot in the hea , and of course not materially injured. He was armed with a DOUBLE barrelled gun, the General with a rifle!—American aper.

On referring to the weapons used on the occasion, it would seem that the gentlemen were of Bob Acre's opinion—of "bringing each other down with a long shot."

MR. IRBY versus THE AGE.

Dirty IRBY to all most indignantly says,
That our Paper has managed "his choler to raise,"
So his shirts ought to feel much oblige l to our Song,
Which has managed to raise—what they've wanted so long.

THEATRICALS.

We have been beset by letters, in every direction, for even a single omission of a dramatic criticism, and what's more, we are likely to incur nearly the same degree of censure this week, for our columns are occupied with so much more important matter, that we must crave indulgence till our next number, when things shall be set to rights a little. It will therefore only be sufficient to say, that a new comedy has appeared at Covent-garden, a little better written than the critiques by the same author in the Morning Post; and beyond that, and CHARLES KEMBLE'S matchless acting in it, we do not see any claim it has to our notice. POOLE'S piece of the Scape Goat has succeeded; no one can handle such a subject better. At Drury-lane they have introduced some songs into the Midnight Hour, by way of novelty. Miss KELLY plays Flora inimitably, and attracts nightly at this theatre—Mr. ARNOLD.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—Wednesday.

WARD OF COURT.

Mr. Ching applied to the Court for an injunction to restrain Mr. Wm. Wells, a medical student, from having any intercourse, by letter or otherwise, with Miss Adams, an infant ward of this Court, of the age of 17 years, now residing at a boarding-school in the neighbourhood of London. Mr. Wells, it seems, having been smitten with the attractions of this young lady, made proposals, but his addresses were rejected by her friends. Yet he continued to persevere, and therefore the lady's guardian deemed it advisable to apply to this Court.

Injunction granted.

CONST V. HARRIS.—COVENT-GARDEN THEATRE.

Mr. Heald applied to the Court to hear a motion upon this subject out of its turn, because by transactions now going on in the Master's office, the receiver was prevented from having access to the means which were necessary to carry on the concern.

The Lord Chancellor expressed his utter disinclination to take upon himself the management. He had before now taken the hearing of the case out of its turn, and it produced him no good will. He would not now take it out of its course without some good reason for so doing.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH—Thursday.

Mr. Scarlett moved for a rule calling on Mr. William Innel Clement, sole proprietor of the Morning Chronicle, to show cause why a criminal information should not be exhibited against him. He made this application at the instance of Mr. Hullett, a gentleman who was member of a most respectable commercial firm in Throgmorton-street, and who had been consul (as we understood the learned counsel, who was almost inaudible in some parts of his statement) at Buenos Ayres. In the year 1822, he had contracted with the Government of Chili to raise a loan for them of one million sterling. This loan was to be repaid by the issue of ten thousand bonds of 100l. each, secured by a mortgage on the estates of Chili deposited in bankers' hands. The money was raised, and, with the exception of the commission agreed on, was paid over to the agents of the Chilian government, in strict conformity to the orders given. The accounts sent in were approved; they were regularly settled; and a formal and unqualified confirmation of all the acts had been received from the proper authorities. Throughout the whole of these transactions, Mr. Hullett had nothing to reproach himself with; he had been regularly authorized, and had honourably fulfilled his trust. The pretext for the libel, of which he now complained, was to be found in a report professing to give an account of a speech delivered by the Secretary of State for the Foreign Department some time in the last session, when the propriety of recognising consuls from the New South American states became the subject of discussion. On that occasion, Mr. Canning was reported to have said that he could not receive a communication as official through a person who turned out to be a mere commercial agent—a remark the justice of which would be universally admitted, but which in no way applied to Mr. Hullett, who had never professed to be other than he was. Upon the extract of this speech, a correspondent of the Morning Chronicle had founded observations imputing to Mr. Hullett that he had enriched himself out of the transaction improperly, and that his whole conduct in respect to it was dishonourable and unjust. The learned counsel proceeded to read a copy of the article complained of (the date of which he did not mention); but before he had concluded,

Mr. Justice Bayley asked if all the imputations were denied?

Mr. Scarlett replied, that all were denied in the most positive terms.

Mr. Justice Bayley said the learned counsel had stated enough to entitle him to a rule to show cause.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.

THE KING V. GEO. WEYMOUTH.

Mr. Adam moved for a rule calling upon the defendant, who was formerly a merchant residing at Exeter, to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for having published several libels upon the character of Lord Rolle. The Learned Counsel stated that those libels were each written upon both sides of a leaf of paper, folded up in the form of a letter, and in that shape sent through the post-office to several persons of all ranks in Devonshire, some of whom formed part of his Lordship's household. He held in his hand one of these letters, which was sent to the Bishop of Exeter, and another to Lady Rolle. In one of the letters, dated the 3d of this month, addressed to Mrs. Elizabeth Durant, Lord Rolle's housekeeper, the defendant denominated Lord Rolle, "a thick-headed, cold-hearted tyrant," and charged him with having attempted to suborn a man to swear falsely that the defendant had said, "There goes Lord Rolle; I will do for him."

Mr. Justice Bayley —Does Lord Rolle's affidavit deny that he has asked any person to swear so?

Mr. Adam.—Positively, my Lord. But there was another letter; which he should beg leave to read to their Lordships. On the 17th of this month Lady Rolle received a letter from the defendant, in which, after a considerable share of abuse of his Lordship, was this passage—"I hear from your maid servant that you are with child, but I hardly think God could be so cruel to the world as to let any of Lord Rolle's blood exist after his death." Rule granted.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.—Yesterday.

BUNN V. COMMON SENSE NEWSPAPER.

Mr. J. Williams appeared for the defendants in this case, to show cause why a criminal information should not be granted against them, at the suit of the plaintiff. The grounds upon which he was prepared to resist the rule, were grounds of recrimination against the plaintiff. He was aware, that as a lawyer he could not ask the Court to set off one libel against another, when an application of this nature was made for their interference; but when it was sought to do that by the strong hand of the Court, which could be done by another process of law, he thought the Court would be disposed to require that the party applying should come before them with clean hands. Now he was prepared with an affidavit to prove that Mr. Bunn was himself a libeller, and had, in fact, by his unwarrantable attacks, provoked the resentment of Common Sense in the manner in which he now complained to the Court. This affidavit stated, that the plaintiff, Mr. Bunn, was proprietor, or conductor, of a Sunday paper, called the Age. Of this paper he (Mr. Williams) professed to know nothing, never having read one line in it, or even so much as heard of it before the present application; but he understood it was established upon very singular principles. He was informed that this print was set up as a sort of recompense to the reading public of the metropolis, during church hours upon the Sabbath day, for the falling off and tameness of John Bull. (a laugh.) John Bull was considered as having greatly degenerated from his former boldness and violence; and whether it was true or not that there was any remarkable difference between John Bull "as he was" and John Bull "as he is," oft is there could be no doubt, that he was very far behind the Age in the spirit of virulence and invective. Indeed, the extreme heat of John Bull was no more than the temperate medium of this new Journal. John Bull having lost all his fire, and being now, in a manner, completely burnt out, the Age, as a new light, had burst forth from his almost expiring embers, and was destined entirely to eclipse him. The affidavit he possessed went on to recite certain passages from the Age, chiefly in notices to Correspondents of a most offensive and libellous character. These could be submitted to the Court, if their Lordships thought necessary. This affidavit also stated that Mr. Bunn described himself as formerly the respectable Stage Manager of Drury-lane Theatre, whereas there was ground for believing that he was no more than the manager of a band of strolling players appearing upon the boards of a country playhouse. So far his affidavit went; and upon this he was prepared to shew cause why the Rule should not be made absolute against his client. He did think their Lordships might leave the plaintiff to his remedy by the ordinary course of law, viz.—a bill of indictment before the Grand Jury, seeing that he was himself a libeller.

The Lord Chief Justice said, that the affidavit of the Learned Counsel did not go further than to state the knowledge and belief of the deponent, that the plaintiff was connected with the Age newspaper, No direct evidence of the fact was produced, and it was impossible the Court could act upon any thing so vague in a case of this kind. Neither was he prepared to say that if direct evidence were tendered it would be accepted. In obtaining the rule to show cause Mr. Bunn had distinctly negatived the truth of the libels; and if it were permitted to oppose that rule by a new statement of this description, the judgment of the Court must be further postponed until Mr. Bunn had time to answer that statement, and so on ad infinitum, new matter being upon each occasion introduced. He knew of no precedent for such a course, and he had no hesitation in saying it would be a very dangerous one to establish.

The other Judges concurring, it was then ordered that the rule be made absolute.

The Court was amazingly crowded, probably with reference to the cause of the Marquis of Hertford against the Hon. Augustus Stanhope, in which the defendant was this day required to put in bail.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, Tuesday, Nov. 22.

CONTEMPT OF COURT.—SHARP, ESQ. V. GISBORNE.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff for the keep of race horses, and was tried before the Lord Chief Justice at Westminster, in Easter Term, and the verdict was for the defendant. Mr. Sergeant Wilde, in the course of the present term, obtained a rule nisi, calling upon Captain John Hunter to show cause why an attachment should not issue from the Court against him for contempt. The contempt complained of was, his not attending at the trial of the cause. The affidavits stated that the individual in question was duly subpœnaed on the race course at Epsom, on the 17th of May, and that when the man gave him the subpœna, he handed it to a third person, who said, "Why this is a subpœna to attend on the Derby day." It was also sworn that a sovereign and a shilling were offered him, which he refused, saying, "D—n your money—I would not attend for one hundred pounds;" and requested the person to say he had not seen him.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan this day showed cause against the rule, upon the affidavits of the applicant, and contended that the witness had not been duly subpœnaed; that the original writ was not shown to him; that the person making one of the affidavits had only sworn that he caused the witness to be duly subpœnaed, whereas the man who did serve him, if served at all, had made no affidavit. He also put in an affidavit of Mr. Hunter, stating that a person of loose character, an idle attender of races, did give him a paper which he returned to him without reading, and denying that he offered him any money with the subpœna, or that he, deponent, used the offensive words sworn to, or any to that effect. The Learned Counsel also stated that a John Hunter was examined at the trial of the cause, and argued that the parties ought to have come to the Court in the following term.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde was heard in support of the rule, and contended that a grosser contempt was never brought before the Court, and that the individual was attempting to get rid of it by quibbles, and to draw the attention of the Court from the contempt in attempting to get the person serving its process to say he had not seen him; and argued that the affidavits contained sufficient proof of the facts, and that the affidavit of the agent, who had sworn that he "caused him to be duly served," was sufficient.

Chief Justice.—That part is what I disapprove of. He could know nothing about it.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde was further heard in support of the rule.

The Chief Justice said he was sorry that this matter was brought before the Court in the imperfect manner it was. The affidavits were not complete, but a grosser contempt never occurred; and had the affidavits been correct, the Court would have taught this gentleman what it was to tamper with a person serving the process of the Court. The Learned Judge adverted to the imperfect mode of serving, by not showing the original process; and said that had it at all come out that the party complained of had admitted that he knew it was a process of the Court, that would have been enough. If the service had been regular, there were facts enough for the Court to have shown him that the 100l. he had talked of would have been nothing. In all cases of contempt, the service must be distinctly and clearly made out. The rule must be discharged, but most certainly without costs.

Mr. Justice Park coincided with the Chief Justice, and in very strong terms reprobated the conduct of the individual.

The other Judges assented, and the rule was discharged without costs.

The Court intimated, that in future all motions for contempt must be made in the Term following its taking place.

CONSISTORY COURT, Friday.

THOMAS BLIGH, ESQ. V. HELEN, HIS WIFE.

This was a suit instituted for a divorce, by reason of adultery.

Mr. Bligh and his wife, about two years since, visited the Continent, and while at Naples, as is alleged in this suit, Mrs. Bligh eloped from her husband, and went to reside with Mr. Wellesley Pole, with whom she is alleged to have cohabited some time there, and afterwards at Paris, and to have there continued to reside with him up to the present time.

This suit was commenced in 1823, and a citation in the course of that year left at the residence of Mrs. Bligh, but to which she had put in no appearance.

Dr. Jenner therefore prayed the Court to pronounce her in contempt, and in support of this motion, produced affidavits to show that Mrs. Bligh was conscious of the existence of the citation, and had, in speaking of it, declared her intention of not attending to it, unless Mr. Wellesley Pole should advise her so to do.

Dr. Lushington followed on the same side, and observed, that unless the Court acceded to their motion, it would be impossible to proceed with the present suit.

Sir C. Robinson, after having ascertained by inquiry that the plaintiff had not been guilty of laches in this suit, pronounced the party in contempt, as prayed.

EARL OF PORTSMOUTH, BY HIS COMMITTEE V. HANSON, FALSELY CALLING HERSELF COUNTESS OF PORTSMOUTH.

The Proctor on behalf of the Earl applied to the Court to admit the libel in this cause on the present Court day.

The Proctor on the other side, hoped the Court would not proceed with the matter till the ensuing Court day. The libel was very voluminous, and they had not yet had time to fully prepare an answer thereto.

Dr. Lushington, as Counsel for the Earl, had no objection to granting the delay prayed, provided it was understood that they were to be allowed to have an issue during the present Term.

Sir C. Robinson—That must rest with the parties themselves.

Dr. Jenner—I have no instructions to give any such consent. I can only say, that the libel will be opposed, and I certainly did understand that it was not to have come on till the fourth Session of this Term.

Dr. Lushington—I do not know how you could have so understood it. The libel was ordered by the Court to be admitted and argued on the third Session, and here am I in attendance for that purpose; and I must say, that if we are not allowed to have an issue during this Term, great injustice will be done. It is a most important case, and has been sent here by the Lord Chancellor.

Dr. Jenner—Of that we know nothing.

Dr. Lushington—It is so, though, and I contend that we are entitled to have the case argued to-day, according to the order of the Court.

Dr. Jenner—The papers have only been delivered a fortnight, and it is impossible that in a case of so peculiar and voluminous a nature, that we should be prepared to go through the whole libel at present.

Dr. Lushington—According to strict practice, the libel ought to have been admitted on the 2d day of Term.

Dr. Jenner—And according to strict practice, we ought to have had the papers a week sooner than we did.

Sir C. Robinson—I certainly understood the case was to have stood over by consent till the fourth Session.

Dr. Lushington—I was no party to such arrangement; and if it is to be permitted, the consequence will be, that we shall not be able to examine a witness before next January, and in the mean time some may die or disappear.

Sir C. Robinson—I cannot help that. The case must stand over, as I have not yet myself looked at the allegations; and in a case like the present, I could not consent to admit any part of the libel, without the most careful examination.

Dr. Lushington—Well, Sir; I have done my duty, and am not responsible for the delay.

Sir C. Robinson—And the Court has done its duty. Why was not the suit brought here sooner?

Dr. Lushington—We could not get the papers till after last Term; and since they were obtained, every exertion has been made to prevent delay.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

Bow-street.—Covent-Garden Market—The accumulation of waggons and carts, not only bringing vegetables into this part of the metropolis, but remaining in the carriage-way until the whole of their cargoes are disposed of, is so great, that the parish of St. Paul, Covent-garden, has determined to endeavour to put a stop to the nuisance; for which purpose a number of persons, owners of the carts, &c. have been served with summonses to attend at this Office, to answer the complaint of the parish.

The proprietor of several of the taverns and coffee-houses under the Piazzas have had occasion frequently to complain, but hitherto such complaints have proved fruitless, and the nuisance still remains unabated. Several meetings of the parishioners have been held, and it was eventually resolved to summon all the offending parties.

It appears that round the market is a "denter-stone," and all persons selling without that stone, or detaining their waggons, &c. longer than is actually necessary for unloading, are liable to a penalty of 40s. under Mr. M. A. Taylor's Street Act. Under this Act the parties in question were summoned by the parish.

Wednesday being the day appointed for the different cases to be heard, the office was crowded to excess with gardeners, some of whom had been summoned, and others to ascertain the result of the proceedings.

Mr. Adolphus appeared for the parish.

The first defendant called on was John Hines, a market gardener at Acton, in Middlesex.

John Stephens, surveyor to the Committee of Pavements, proved that on the 17th instant, a waggon belonging to the defendant was standing in the carriage-way outside of the stone, from about seven o'clock in the morning until nine; the interim was occupied by the driver selling part of the load to various customers; and he was confident that the nuisance to the inhabitants was very great

Sir R. Birnie—You may go farther than that, for I was obliged the other day to turn back in consequence of the obstruction.

The defendant said he had paid the customary toll to the clerk of the lessees of the market.

Mr. Adolphus—They have no right to demand toll of you, when outside of their "stone," as that part does not belong to them.

Defendant—If I was not to pay them they would take my waggon to the Green-yard,

Mr. Adolphus—They have no right to take any money from you, and if they seize your waggon, you have your remedy by an action at law.

The defendant was then fined in the penalty of 40s. and costs.

The other cases stand over by consent, till a future day of hearing.

Marlborough-street.—In the watchhouse book of charges for St. James's parish, brought before Mr. Roe, the sitting magistrate, Thursday, at this office, there appeared a charge against J. Sweet, one of the officers of the sheriffs of Middlesex, who keeps a lock-up house at No. 4, Cursitor-street, Chancery-lane, for the following outrage in the house of Messrs. Bourne and Co., wholesale woollen merchants, No. 46, Regent-street, Piccadilly, and assault upon Mr. William Bourne, one of the partners of that firm.

Mr. William Bourne being sworn, stated, that about half-past ten o'clock on Wednesday night, while sitting in his parlour, in company with Mrs. Bourne, and a small party of friends, who were spending the evening, consisting of a gentleman named Britton, of Bristol, Mr. Lothian, a builder, Mr. Peachy, an ironmonger in the Quadrant, his brother, Mr. George Bourne, and another gentleman, a professor of languages, the female servant came up stairs, and said there was a gentleman wanted to see Mr. Bourne, and on the instant the defendant Sweet entered the parlour. Complainant rose from his seat, said his name was Bourne, and begged to know the defendant's business: defendant said that he had a warrant to arrest him for debt, and at the same time gave him the usual familiar and professional tap on the shoulder. Mr. Bourne said, that surely he must be under some mistake, for that no man living could claim any right to arrest him for debt, and desired to see the warrant for this proceeding. Defendant then took the warrant out of his pocket, and holding it fast between both hands, gave Mr. Bourne an opportunity of reading it, and on doing which he said to the defendant, "I knew, Sir, you were acting under some mistake: that warrant is for the arrest of a person named Bunn: my name is Bourne," spelling it for him, B o u r n e. "That's all very fine talk," said the defendant; "but I am not to be 'done' out of my prisoner in that way, Mr. Bunn. I know you are the person I want. Pray, Mr. Bunn, where is your wife? Is she at the theatre?" Mr. Bourne assured the defendant that he was persisting in a very great error; that all the gentlemen present could satisfy him that he (the complainant) was Mr. Bourne, the proprietor of that house; and that the lady present was Mrs. Bourne, and, as he might perceive, was not gone to any theatre; and moreover, if he would take the trouble only to look at the name on the street-door, he would see that it was Bourne, and not Bunn. The defendant, however, was not, as he said, to be bamboozled by a fine story of that kind. Mr. Bunn, the person he wanted, he had got hold off, and Mr. Bunn he would keep in his safe custody until delivered by due course of law; and, suiting the action to the word, he seized Mr. Bourne by the collar, determined to convey him away to that delightful retreat, No. 4, Cursitor-street, Chancery-lane. The whole of the gentlemen present remonstrated with the defendant, using every effort to explain to him his error; but explanation he was decided upon not listening to, and error he was determined not to acknowledge himself in. Mr. Bourne then told him that he had given him the most ample opportunities of being undeceived, and let him, at his peril, now proceed further.

The defendant, whether from some inward monitor hinting to him something about future consequences, or some other cause, seemed suddenly to have a new light break in upon him; and after hearing repeated, over and over again, the assurances which he had given to him by all present at the commencement, that he was taking a headlong leap in the dark, for that Mr. Bourne was not Mr. Bunn, he at length reluctantly consented to suspect the possibility of his being in error, and acknowledged that he now verily believed that Mr. Bourne was Mr. Bourne, and that Mr. Bunn was somebody else; and with this change of opinion he was willing to wish the whole party a good night, and take his leave.

"Hold, hold, a little, my good friend," said Mr. Bourne; "you have taken a very great liberty with my house and person, and persisted in doing so in defiance of every explanation, and the most satisfactory evidence that you were doing so without authority; and before you now retire, I must insist upon knowing to whom I am indebted for this visit, and the disturbance of my family at this unseasonable hour."

The defendant said, that if he wanted to know his name, and what he was, he might take it from the warrant, and handed Mr. Bourne that document for the purpose.

Mr. Bourne, in order to take down the name of the defendant accurately, called for pen and ink; but no sooner did the defendant perceive than he was going seriously to work in writing down the name, that he made a snatch at the warrant to get it out of the hands of Mr. Bourne. The latter, however, put the warrant in his hand behind his back to secure it, upon which the defendant made another attempt to grasp it: but failing, he made a violent snatch at Mr. Bourne's watch, the chain of which was suspended from his fob, and tearing it from his person, dashed watch, chain, and all, with all his force against the floor, and was proceeding to further violence towards Mr. Bourne, when Mr. Lothian, one of the gentlemen present, seized hold of him to prevent his doing further mischief. Upon this, the defendant flew towards the fire-place, and snatching up the poker, flourished it over the heads of the whole party, swearing destruction to them all, until he cleared the apartment for his own sole accommodation, when he was shortly after secured by the "nightly watch," whose assistance it was deemed prudent on the part of Mr. Bourne to call in, who lodged Mr. Sweet in a lock-up-house not so expensive, and some distance westward of his own—namely, St. James's watchhouse.

In corroboration of this statement, Mr. Bourne called for the evidence of Mr. Lothian.

"I bar that," said Mr. Sweet, "for I charge Mr. Lothian with assaulting me in the execution of my duty."

Mr. Roe, the Magistrate, said, that as there appeared to be a charge of assault by the defendant against Mr. Lothian, he could not take his evidence until that charge should be disposed of.

Sarah Aust, the servant-girl, was sworn, and said that she opened the street-door on the night before for the defendant when he knocked, and he asked her if Mr. Bourne, as she understood him, was at home. She said he was in the parlour, and on her going to apprize her master that a gentleman wanted to see him, the defendant followed close at her heels, and entered the room at the same time that she did herself. Mr. Bourne asked the defendant his business with him, upon which the defendant touched him on the shoulder, and said he had a warrant to arrest him. This witness continued in the room, and went on to describe in her evidence all the particulars as stated by Mr. Bourne.

Mr. Peachy, and all the other persons present on the occasion of the outrage, except Mrs. Bourne, attended, and entirely confirmed the account given of the transaction by the complainant, and said that such was the violence with which the defendant snatched the watch, which was a valuable gold one, from the fob of Mr. Bourne, and dashed it against the floor, that the glass was broken, and the bowels of it so disarranged that it has never since shown any signs of life or motion, nor is it likely it ever will again utter a sound until it undergoes a regular course of doctoring.

Now comes Mr. Sweet, the sheriff's officer's version of the transaction. He said that having been employed in the line of his business, to secure, if he could, the person of Mr. Bunn, the late stage-manager of Drury-lane Theatre, in his own or some other body's lock-up house, upon a warrant for debt, he proceeded on the evening in question to the house, No. 46, Regent-street, where Mr. Bunn lodges, and the servant-girl, who had given her evidence, having opened the street-door, he asked her if Mr. Bunn was at home, and she replied, that he was in the parlour. He, defendant, then followed her, and was introduced, as he understood, to Mr. Bunn, whom he touched in the usual mode of arrest, and said he had a writ against him, and showed him the warrant. On reading the warrant, Mr. Bourne, for the first time, said that his name was not Bunn; but he, the defendant, being up to this sort of trick, which is constantly put in practice by debtors, of denying names, he certainly, at first, refused to believe that he was in error; but the moment that it was satisfactorily shown to him that he was under a mistake, he was about to retire, when Mr. Bourne insisted on knowing his name and address; he held the warrant to him to copy the name from, but Mr. Bourne violently snatched it out of his hand; and upon this it was that he struggled with Mr. Bourne to get the warrant back again, and in the struggle the watch was, by accident, pulled out of Mr. Bourne's pocket; but not by him (the defendant), as stated, while struggling to get the warrant back from Mr. Bourne. Mr. Lothian came behind and struck him, and on this it was, that seeing himself surrounded by enemies, he flew to the poker for protection, but he did not threaten to make any use of it except in his own defence; and for assaulting him in the manner described, he now charged Mr. Lothian.

Mr. Lothian declared in his defence, that he never attempted to strike Sweet: he merely held him to prevent his repeating his attack upon Mr. Bourne.

All the witnesses confirmed Mr. Lothian's defence, and declared that so far from the watch having fallen out by accident from Mr. Bourne's fob, that the force used by the defendant to drag it out was most violent, and that he systematically dashed it against the floor.

Mr. Roe, the magistrate, said that there was no pretence whatever for charging Mr. Lothian with an assault on the defendant Sweet; for if he even had used more violence than was even stated towards Sweet, he would have been justified in doing so, if by no other means he could preserve the peace, which he saw Sweet, as appeared clearly by all the witnesses, commit a very gross breach of. Mr. Lothian was therefore discharged from the imputed assault, and if his evidence was at all necessary, which it was not, to substantiate the charge against Sweet, he, Mr. Roe, was ready to receive it. The case of assault on Mr. Bourne was, however, so decidedly made out, that the defendant Sweet must find bail

---

[We have received the following letter from Mr. Bunn, respecting the above].—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

SIR,—Having seen a report in the Morning Papers to-day, whereby an assault appears to have been committed, by the mistake of the name of a Mr. Bourne for mine, I request the favour of your allowing me to say, that I have made every necessary inquiry as to the cause of it, and cannot at present trace the proceeding stated to be against me; but, to prevent the possibility of any such mistake re-occurring, I think it right to give the utmost publicity to my address.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your very obedient servant,

A. BUNN.

No. 88, Quadrant, Regent-street, Friday Morning, Nov. 25, 1825.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A letter has been received in this city, from respectable authority in Cornwall, giving an account of a woman supposed to be dead. As the bearers were carrying the corpse to the grave, they fancied that a groan was heard proceeding from within the coffin, and a little time after another groan was heard; the coffin was immediately opened, and the woman discovered to be alive, and she is now perfectly recovered.—Bexley's Exeter News.

THE WELLINGTON TREE.—We are informed by a literary gentleman, to whom his Majesty lately condescended to shew some of his curiosities, that the King has at Windsor a royal chair, composed entirely out of the trunk of the famous elm by which the Duke of Wellington stood at the battle of Waterloo. We may say of it that it would not shame any Monarch to be crowned in such a seat. The history of the tree is curious:—When Mr. Children, one of the Curators of the British Museum, visited the plain of Waterloo, about seven years ago, he found the tree in question marked for destruction by the proprietor of the soil, who told him that so many people came to visit it, that the produce of half an acre of land was annually lost in consequence. A bargain was soon struck, and Mr. C. became the owner of the precious piece of timber, which yields in value only to the Shakspeare mulberry-tree. Mr. C. we understand, has supplied the cabinets of several of his literary friends with choice slices from this arbor Vellingtoniensis.

The fate of the Vigo Bay Company is about to be decided. The Enterprise arrived at Vigo on the 25th ultimo. The agent, accompanied by the English Consul and the King's pilot, proceeded on the 28th to Redundela Bay, and on the first day's search found three vessels, two in ten fathoms water and another in two fathoms water. At the date of the dispatches, the 29th ult. the Enterprise was under sail to make the necessary attempt with the diving bell and other implements

At the meeting of sportsmen with the Hayes harriers on Monday, a dispute arose between two gentlemen of the names of Broadhurst and Henderson, and some personal applications took place which led to a meeting. The parties exchanged two fires, in the second of which Mr. Broadhurst was wounded in the left arm, but not dangerously; and the business thus ended amicably, and the parties retired from a field contiguous to Smallberry Green to dinner.

Wyndham Lewis, Esq. Member for the Glamorganshire boroughs, has announced to his constituents his determination of again offering himself for the representation at the next election.

GRAND SOLAR ECLIPSE.—One of the most remarkable occurrences in our celestial hemisphere will take place during the approaching year. Wednesday, the 29th day of November, 1826, there will happen a total and visible eclipse of that distinguished luminary, the sun, which will not only be palpable, but also the largest we can expect for another ten years in this country. Amongst the places where this eclipse will be seen, besides England, are France, Spain, Italy, Germany, Norway, Sweden, the greater part of Russia, and also in Turkey. It will begin at about a quarter of an hour before ten o'clock in the morning, and terminate at about seven minutes past one o'clock, p. m.

HYDE PARK.—The projected improvements in this quarter begin to assume a definite appearance. From Stanhope-gate to Hyde Park corner, the spot of marshy ground which adjoins the gardens at the back of Hamilton-place and Apsley House, is now laid out in gravel walks and parterres, after the most approved fashion of modern plantations. For its better preservation it is inclosed by a handsome iron railing; and thus is exchanged for a useless and unsightly portion of ground, an object in the highest degree ornamental to the park. In place of the dull brick wall, which has hitherto excluded all view of the park from Park-lane, an open railing now enlivens the scene, and the carriage-road having been removed higher up in this quarter, the intervening space will form a plantation. The opening at Stanhope-gate is considerably enlarged, and presents a pair of handsome gates, with lodges for the park-keepers on each side, built in the most appropriate style of architecture. On the side of Kensington Gardens the new carriage drive, making a complete tour of the park, is in a state of great forwardness.

On the night of Sunday last, the ship Hercules, of Whitehaven (300 tons burden), Kerr, master, from London to Liverpool, in ballast, was run foul of, off the Smalls, by a large smack bearing up for the Bristol Channel; and, from the injury the Hercules sustained by the concussion, she sunk shortly after the accident. The crew, 16 in number, finding that no human effort could save the ship, took to the boats just before the vessel went down. With respect to the fate of the smack, nothing with certainty is known at present; but it is fearfully conjectured that the shock was too great for her, and that, with the unfortunate persons on board, she went to the bottom. The crew of the Hercules were next morning descried by Capt. Cox, of the Mary Simpkins, of Youghall, taken on board his vessel, treated with the greatest kindness, and landed on Monday night at the Mumbles, near Swansea.—Gloucester Journal.

WESTERN LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC INSTITUTION.—On Thursday evening, in pursuance of a Resolution entered into on the 10th instant, a General Meeting of the Members of the Western Literary and Scientific Institution was held at the Freemasons' Hall, Great Queen-street, for the purpose of taking into consideration the Report of the Provisional Committee, and the laws proposed for the regulation of the Institution.—At half-past seven, Thomas Campbell, Esq. having been called to the Chair, congratulated the meeting on the progress that had been made since the last time he had the honour of addressing them.—The Secretary then read the Report, from which it appeared that the subscribers already amounted to upwards of three hundred; that donations of books had been received—one from Mr. Peter Moore, M.P. of 150 volumes, and a subscription of 50*l.* from Mr. Drummond, together with smaller donations of books and apparatus for experiments from other quarters. It contained a list of Gentlemen who kindly offered to give Lectures on various subjects, gratuitously. At the head of the list was the Chairman of the present Meeting, who is to deliver the first lecture on the best means of prosecuting literary studies. It was also announced that spacious rooms had been taken in the house occupied by the Society of British Artists in Suffolk-street, for the purpose of following up the objects of the Institution.—The laws for the regulation of the Society were then read and adopted, with some slight variations suggested by the different persons who attended.—The laws having been adopted, it was proposed and agreed to, that a subscription should be opened for a Building Fund.—The Thanks of the Meeting were then voted to Mr. Peter Moore, M.P. and the other Gentlemen who had favoured the Society with donations and subscriptions, and it was agreed that another General Meeting should be held on the 6th of December, for the election of a permanent Committee.

CHARLES WRIGHT and his Champagne have received additional notoriety from a dramatic sketch now performing at the Coburg Theatre; and we understand Mr. Wright was so well satisfied with his representative, that he has made him a present of a dozen of his best Champagne.

CARROLL begs to remind his friends, that his farewell Scheme is now before the public; and also that it is the first Scheme in the annals of Lotteries which contained Four Prizes of 30,000*l.* all to be drawn in one day. Carroll's luck in the sale of 30,000*l.* prizes, induces him to hope that his Offices 19, Cornhill, 7, Charing-cross, and 26, Oxford-street, will be equally successful on Tuesday week, when the four grand Prizes of 30,000*l.* will be drawn.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-street, every Morning, at a Quarter past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, Bristol, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside....2*l.* 5*s.* Outside..... 1*l.* 1*s.*

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1*s.* 6*d* per head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3*s.* per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-st., at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, Melksham, &c.

FARES.—Inside....1*l.* 18*s.* Outside.... 18*s.*

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2*s.* 6*d.* per Head, including Waiters.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

The Directors will not be answerable for the safety of any parcel exceeding 5*l.* in value, unless the amount be stated when booked.

ROEBUCK IRON FOUNDRY, Stove Grate Manufactory, and general Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—CRUNDALL and HALLEN acknowledge the liberal support they have received from the Nobility and Gentry, and, in consequence of the very considerable increase of business, they have found it expedient to enlarge their premises to a great extent, which has enabled them to offer for sale a most extensive and elegant ASSORTMENT of DRAWING ROOM and other STOVES, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage, of the most superior workmanship and design to any house in the kingdom. Fenders, fire irons, and kitchen ranges on the most improved principles, and every description of furnishing ironmongery, a saving of full 30 per cent. for the approaching season. A large assortment of patent warm air stoves, ascending or descending flues, adapted for halls, offices, warehouses, and shops. Also the admirable economical patent French table lamps in the greatest variety, diffusing a light equal to 6 wax candles, from 28*s.* upwards. Manufacturers of every article of fence work for parks, balconies, verandas, entrance gates, hurdles, &c., and from the extensive machinery and convenience of their premises, including the late reduction of iron, they are enabled now to offer the above considerably under in price to any house in the kingdom. Orders of any magnitude executed with promptness, by addressing a line to Crundall and Hallen, Roebuck Iron Foundry and Stove Grate Manufactory, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—N. B. Every description of castings made to order or model. Prompt payment, and no abatement.

FASHION, ELEGANCE, and ECONOMY COMBINED. Oxford-House, Furniture Magazine, 376, near Exeter Change, Strand. A clear saving of £25 per cent.—The Upholsterers and Cabinet Makers' Company, established May, 1821, is the only manufacturing depot in the Kingdom, where the public are allowed to select their own woods of every description, and inspect the progress of completion, thus preventing the possibility of their being deceived by the use of unseasoned coarse materials and bad workmanship. The Public are also invited to view the choice stock of Rose, Zebra, King, and other scarce woods suited to the purposes of Manufacture, and prepared for the choice of purchasers. This establishment has, since its commencement, received the sanction and support of some of the first characters in the kingdom; and the conductors will have the greatest pleasure in referring to their numerous patrons for the honour and probity of their transactions. A draftsman of taste and experience is attached to the concern, and the newest designs of modern elegant furniture always ready for inspection. The conductors beg leave to add, that their extensive means affords them facilities in the economical dispatch of orders, which no private manufacturer can equal. In proof of their determination to deserve support, they very respectfully submit the following list of low prices:—

Second class of Furniture.—Solid mahogany wardrobe, fine Spanish wood, 13*l.* 13*s.*; Drawers, from 3*l.* 3*s.* to 5*l.* warranted; chamber-chair, japanned in oil, at per chair, 4*s.* 6*d.*; rich carved mahogany four-post bedsteads, 4*l.* 4*s.* to 6*l.* 6*s.*; seasoned beds equally cheap; mahogany pembroke tables, 1*l.* 15*s.* to 6*l.* 6*s.*; good tent bedsteads any size, 1*l.* 7*s.*; a suite of four rich rose-wood tables, French polished, 25 guineas; French bedstead with rich hangings, lined, pole complete, 5*l.* 5*s.*; do. with palliass, mattress, 7*l.* 7*s.*; mahogany rich carved four-post bedstead, with rich town chintz, lined, silk fringe, drapery, &c. 14*l.* 14*s.*; drawing-room chairs, newest patterns, from 29*s.* to 30*s.* per chair; real rose and zebra equally cheap; couch, sofas, chaise lounges, from 5*l.* 5*s.* to 10*l.* 10*s.*; pedestal side-boards, from 8*l.* 8*s.* to 21*l.* and upwards; French bedsteads, japanned in oil, any size, 2*l.* 2*s.* Every article in the above trade equally cheap. Ship-tables, drawers, sofas, and sofa-bedsteads.—Goods carefully packed and shipped for any part of England or the continent.—No charge for packing.

THE ROYAL FAMILY, Nobility, and Ladies and Gentlemen may rely on it although there are various Articles for the Hair now selling, but it is proved by thousands who have given it a fair trial, that Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, through the Aromatic Oils it is now prepared with, is the wholesomest, pleasantest, and best article for dressing, preserving, and promoting the Hair, and if used constantly, not a hair will fall off or turn grey, and is such a nourisher to the Hair, that if it has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour; hundreds of Ladies have experienced. Is the pleasantest for Ladies to dress their own or false Hair; will make it look elegant, and will curl beautifully any way; clears the scurf, and keeps the head and hair clean, and by using it regularly for a few months, will restore the hair on the bald part, if the least sign of roots are remaining, has been proved by hundreds. Ask for Prince's Russia Oil! The ounce bottle, five shillings; a large bottle containing five ounces, one pound, is a saving. Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders. Be particular, and observe his address, "A. Prince, 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London," on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. ☞ Purchasers ought to be particular, as counterfeits are in circulation; and some villains, to deceive the public, put the original proprietor's name on their counterfeits.—Good allowance for exportation.—Merchants and Captains ought to be particular, as impostors are going about to countinghouses with Counterfeit Russia Oil, and saying it is the genuine.

CAUTION.—Proved by affidavit on the 24th of November, 1814, before the Lord Mayor of London; that A. Prince is the Original Proprietor in the universe of the Russia Oil, and therefore, if any Perfumer, Medicine Vender, Hair Dresser, or any one else, in Great Britain, or any other country, sell, under any pretence whatever, an Oil called Russia Oil, and is not A. Prince's, of 9, Poland-street, London, they are here publicly pronounced impostors, as they not only impose upon the Public by selling them counterfeits, which do not answer the purpose, but also injure A. Prince, the Original Proprietor, who has a large family, and has spent, within this last twenty years, above Fifty Thousand Pounds in advertising to make it known.

FEATHER BED, MATTRESS BEDDING, and FURNITURE WAREHOUSE, 69, HIGH HOLBORN, nearly opposite Great Turnstile.—E. SLATER (from 40, Oxford-street) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that having removed to the above Spacious Premises, he has now an opportunity of offering for sale an entire new and extensive Stock of Bedding, Upholstery, and Cabinet Furniture of the best manufacture and most modern style; comprising elegant Wardrobes, Chests of Drawers, Pedestal Sideboards, sets of Mahogany Dining Tables, Rose-wood and Mahogany Card and Pembroke ditto, Chairs, Sofas and Couches of every description, Glasses, Dressing Tables, Stands, &c. Houses completely furnished by this Manufactory on the shortest notice and most advantageous terms.—Feathers and Feather Beds well seasoned and fit for immediate use.

FEATHERS.

Capital Feathers	1*s.* 4*d.*
Best Grey Goose	1*s.* 6*d.* and 1*s.* 9*d.* per lb.
Excellent White Goose	2*s.* and 2*s.* 6*d.*
Real White Dantzic	3*s.*
Hudson Bay, Mecklenberg, &c.	3*s.* 3*d.* and 3*s.* 6*d.*

All the above Feathers are warranted to be sweet, clean, and free from any smell, as they are stoved by a new process, and not sold in that undressed state which is too often the case.—Bed Ticks sold at prime cost to purchasers of Feathers.

BEDDING.	l.	s.	d.		l.	s.	d.
Feather Beds, from	2	5	0	to	3	3	0
Best Grey Goose Beds	3	10	0	to	5	10	0
Best White Dantzic Beds	4	10	0	to	6	10	0
Full size Bed, bordered and welted Tick, only					8	10	0
Flock Bed and Bolster	0	15	0	to	1	4	0
MATTRESSES.
Mattresses	0	10	0	to	1	8	0
Real Horse Hair, Woo. Ditto, made in the French style, equally cheap.
Palliasse	0	14	0	to	1	4	0

BEDSTEADS—A great variety of Bedsteads always on hand, with curious French and other Fancy Cottage Tops; also elegant Four-post in Honduras and Spanish Mahogany.

BEDSTEADS WITH FURNITURES—Four-post with Moreen and Chintz Furnitures, full draperies, fringed, remarkably cheap! Tent, Waterloo, French, and other curious shapes, equally cheap and ready for inspection.—Bedsteads, with or without Furniture, made to any size, and Bedding to fit them.

A large assortment of Blankets, Counterpanes, and Marseilles Quilts—Brussels, Kiddermin-ter, and Venetian Carpeting, made up and laid down to any dimensions.—Feather Beds dressed.—Old Mattresses re-made and purified of the Moth by a new process.—Shipping, Hotels, Schools, Lodging Houses, and the Trade, supplied on very low terms, for present Cash only; as also at his Manufactory, No. 22, Queen's-buildings, Brompton, (below Sloane-street, and directly opposite the half mile stone from Hyde Park Corner.)

☞ Please to observe the name of SLATER.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

WAR-OFFICE, NOV. 25, 1825.

1st, or Grenadier Regiment of Foot Guards, Brevet Col. A. Lord Saltoun to be Major, by purchase, vice Jones, who retires; Lieut. and Capt. P. Clarke to be Captain and Lieut-Colonel, by purchase, v Lord Saltoun; Ensign and Lieut. G. Johnstone to be Lieutenant and Captain, by purchase, v Clark; Ensign John William Jodrell, from the 62d Foot, to be Ensign and Lieutenant, by purchase, v Johnstone; Captain Francis Venables Vernon to be Adjutant, v Clarke, promoted.—6th Regiment of Foot. Lieut. C. D. Allen, from h p 96th Foot, v P. D. Holme, who exchanges; Lieut. W. Dunne, from h p 25th Foot, v W. Scott, who exchanges—to be Lieutenants. 15th Ditto, Lieut. H. Clinton, from h p 17th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v F. D. Radford, who exchanges.—19th Ditto, W. Bernard, Gent., to be Ensign, without purchase, v Robinson, promoted.—21st Ditto, Capt. C. Campbell to be Major, by purchase, v Thomas, promoted; Lieut. J. C. Peddie to be Captain, by purchase, v Campbell; Second Lieut. J. G. Beet to be First Lieutenant, by purchase, v Peddie; Gentleman Cadet A. Webber, from the Royal Military College, to be Second Lieutenant, by purchase, v Beet.—23d Ditto, D. R. Smith, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v Gough, promoted.—33d Ditto, Capt. W. Fenwick, from the h p, to be Captain, v W. Rentoul, who exchanges, receiving the difference.—24th Ditto, Hon. C. Preston to be Ensign, by purchase, v Robinson.—30th Ditto. —— Wright, Gent., to be Ensign, v Battley, dec.—33d Ditto, Lieut. A. Robertson, from the Ceylon Regiment, to be Lieutenant, v Whannell, promoted.—42d Ditto, Ensign C. K. Macdonald to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Hogarth, promoted; A. Campbell, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Macdonald.—46th Ditto, Ensign P. Legh, from h p 61st Foot, to be Ensign, v F. W. Martin, who exchanges.—55d Ditto, Ensign E. B. Phlipps to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Carpenter, promoted; J. St. Clair Doyle, Gent., to be Ensign by purchase, v Philips.—55th Ditto, Ensign B. H. Cumberland to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Mackay, who retires; G. Bowles, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Cumberland.—58th Ditto, Ensign J. B. Mann to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Stephenson, promoted.—62d Ditto, F. Leeky, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Jodrell, appointed to the 1st or Grenadier Foot Guards.—64th Ditto, C. S. Barker, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Draper, promoted.—73d Ditto, Ensign A. L. T. Wodrington to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v Wigley, promoted.—77th Ditto, Ensign A. Dillon, from 93d Foot, to be Lieutenant, without purchase, v Corfield, promoted.—81st Ditto, H. S. Jones, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Hope, promoted. 87th Ditto, R. Dudley, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase, v Doyle, promoted.—91st Ditto, Ensign D. Williamson, to be Lieutenant, without purchase, v Buchan, promoted in 77th Foot; N. Kane, Gent., to be Ensign, v Williamson.—93d Ditto, J. H. Smith, Gent., to be Ensign, v Dillon, promoted in 77th Foot.—98th Ditto, Lieut. E. Hunter, from h p 60th Foot, to be Lieutenant, without purchase.—99th Ditto, Brevet Major J. Johnston to be Major, by purchase, v Dodgin, who retires; Lieut. P. Mair, from 64th Foot, to be Captain, by purchase, v Johnston.—Rifle Brigade, Capt. R. Fergusson, from the h p, to be Captain, paying the difference to the h p fund, v E. Coxon, who exchanges.—2d West India Regiment, Lieut. W. Morgan, from h p 37th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v John Manby, who exchanges.—Cape Corps (Cavalry), Ensign G. S. Brown, from 74th Foot, to be Cornet, by purchase, v Sheppard, promoted in 6th Dragoons.

UNATTACHED.—Brevet Lieut. Col. H. Thomas, from 21st Foot, to be Lieutenant-Colonel of Infantry, by purchase; Ensign E. Newton, from 8th Foot; Cornet J. E. Alexander, from 13th Light Dragoons—to be Lieutenants of Infantry, by purchase; G. W. Tireman, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

J. H. CHAPPELL, Hamilton-row, Battle-bridge, smith.
J. GREGORY, Kemp-town, Brighthelmstone, Sussex, victualler.
T. DEPDNEY, Regent-place, Brighton, coal-merchant.
R. JARDINE, Wigan, Lancashire, linen-draper.
F. FURLEY, Minchinhampton, Gloucestershire, cooper.
S. SOTHEBY, Wellington-street, Strand, auctioneer.
J. MILWARD and J. G. LYNCH, Upper Thames-street, dealers.
T. ELLIOTT, Nottingham, cabinet-maker.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

J. JARVIS, Brompton, tailor and draper.
W. WHEELHOUSE, Norwich, linen-draper.

BANKRUPTS.

J. MAIDLOW, Portland-town, Regent's-park, builder. Sol. Mr. J. Calton, High-street, Mary-le-bone.

J. HANSELL, Clare-street, Clare-market, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. T. Minchin, No. 3, Verulam-buildings, Gray's-inn, Holborn.

T. B GREGORY, Drummond-street, Euston-square, painter and glazier. Sol Mr. Bostock, George-street, Mansion-house.

R. ASTLEY and E. HICKMAN, Shrewsbury, smiths. Sol. Mr. Moseley, Burton-upon-Trent.

R. S. ASBURY, Lombard-street, engraver, printer, and stationer. Sol. Mr. Cottle, Aldermanbury.

S. FRUER, Upper Fountain-place, City-road, builder. Sols. Messrs. Clarksons, No. 29, Essex-street, Strand.

D. KNOWLDEN, Store-street, draper. Sol. Mr. T. Gates, 38, Cateaton-street.

W. HARGOON, St. John-street, Clerkenwell, grocer. Sol. Mr. Partington, Change-alley, Cornhill.

H. SHEA, Dowgate-hill, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Barrow and Vincent, Basinghall-street.

N. di T. RALLI, Suffolk-lane, merchant. Sol. Mr. J. Wilks, 13, Finsbury-place.

J. JARVIS, Brompton, tailor and draper. Sol. Mr. J. J. Tanner, No. 5, New Basinghall-street.

A. SWEET Button, Gloucestershire, coal-dealer. Sol. Mr. Clahon, Mark-lane.

F. DRAKE, New-street, Covent-garden, baker. Sol. Mr. Fawcett, I, Jewin-street, Cripplegate.

J. PEARCE, Church-passage, Guildhall, warehouseman, Sol. Mr. Robinson, Walbrook.

R. TURNER, London-road, Surrey, blacking-manufacturer. Sols. Jay and Byles, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn.

A. GIBBON, W. F. GIBBON, and R. GIBBON, Old City Chambers, merchants. Sol. E. L. Ogle, Clement's-lane, Lombard street.

B. M. NIAS, Berger's-street, Marylebone, upholsterer. Sols. Saunders and Bailey, Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square.

J. R. de ALZEDO, Bank-buildings, merchant. Sols. J. and S. Pearce, Saint Swithin's-lane.

G. YORKSON, Mary-street, Hampstead-road, potatoe-salesman. Sol. Mr. Coleman, Tysoe-street, Spa-fields.

J. K. WOOSTER, Middle-row, Holborn, straw-hat-manufacturer. Sol. Mr. Roche, Charles-street.

J. PEACOCK, Blackfriars-road, grocer. Sol. Mr. Partington, Change-alley, Cornhill.

W. CULVER, London-wall, harness-maker. Sol. D. Richardson, Cheapside.

I. WHITE, Isleworth, schoolmaster. Sol. Mr. Young, Poland-street, Oxford-street.

J. KNIFE, jun. Harp-alley, Fleet-market, broker. Sol. D. Richardson Cheapside.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTS.

W. Lee, Charing-cross, hosier. Sols. Messrs. Pearce, St. Swithin's-lane.—T. Maltby and H. Buckland, Gutter-lane, lace-manufacturers. Sols. Messrs. Pearce, St. Swithin's-lane.—P. Barker, Cambridge, grocer. Sols. Messrs. Tate and Johnson, Copthall-buildings.—J. Nutting, High Holborn, umbrella-manufacturer. Sol. Mr. Courteen, Lothbury.—J. Sheppard, Frome Selwood, Somersetshire, clothier. Sol. Mr. Hartley, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.—W. Lambert, Sudbury, Suffolk, linen-draper. Sol. Mr. Jones, Size-lane.—R. Seward, Bullo Pill, Gloucestershire, coal-master. Sols. Messrs. Scott and Son, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry.—H. Benattar, Hewford-buildings, Fenchurch-street, merchant. Sol. Mr. Hindmarsh, Crescent, Jewin-street, Cripplegate.—H. Stratton, Chapel-place, Stratford, wine-merchant. Sols. Messrs. Kearsey and Spurr, Lothbury.—L. Crown, Monkwearmouth-shore, Durham, ship-builder. Sols. Messrs. Holme and Co. New Inn.—T. Milligan, Hanway-street, Oxford-street, haberdasher. Sols. Messrs. Smith and Buckerfield, Red Lion-square.—A. H. Chambers, sen. and A. H. Chambers, jun. of New-Bond-street, bankers. Sol. Mr. A'Beckett, Golden-square.—L. Thompson, Birmingham, bookseller. Sols. Messrs. Norton and Chaplin, Gray's Inn-square.—C. Murray, Bath, hardwareman. Sol. Mr. Smith, wardrobe-terrace, Doctors' Commons.—J. Lund, Dutton, Lancashire, sizer. Sols. Messrs. Blakelock and Plowman, Serjeant's Inn, Fleet-street.

{ADVERTISEMENT}

TO THE EDITOR OF THE AGE.

"SIR,—LIEUT.-COLONEL FAIRMAN, being accessible only through the public press, I beg leave to trouble you with the following statement and short address to him. He has thought proper, in a weekly journal under his direction, to issue the grossest and most unwarrantable calumnies against me; and, giving him credit for some little portion of the courage, which he has assumed the public, through the medium of his own paper, he is possessed of, I called on him for that satisfaction one gentleman is entitled to demand from another; but this he has positively refused, although I am ignorant on what grounds, excepting those of personal apprehension. LIEUT-COLONEL FAIRMAN has vowed, for the last two months, that the instant he could find out the Editor of the AGE, he would wreak on him his personal vengeance. He states, in publishing a private letter received from me, that he has found him out, and that I am the man. If, therefore, I am the person, he is bound, by his own showing, to give me the redress I seek and he has so long threatened; if I am not the man, he is still, more than ever, bound so to do, as the only reparation he can make me for the most outrageous calumnies I certainly ever perused. Since he does it not, on either position, I must consider him a confirmed coward.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your very obedient servant, A. BUNN.

88, Quadrant, Nov. 24, 1825."

R. W. EVANS, 16, STRAN (near Somerset House) LONDON.

PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices. Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violincello and Flute 17 6
Or, in Parts ..... Evans ..... each 3 6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib) ..... R. W. Evans...
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha... 5 0
No. II.—Introduction—Romance—Danza de Village—Fandango 5 0

DUETS.

All Idea, Duet ..... Moss 3 0
Santo Oh Dio! ..... ditto 2 0

OVERTURES.

Cherry and Fair Star ..... Ware 2 6
Cinderella ..... ditto 2 0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments ..... Evans 3 6
Gil Blas ..... Moss 2 0
Il Tancredi, with Accompaniments (arranged by Evans) ..... Rossini... 3 6
Mother Bunch ..... Ware 2 6

FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.

*Di Tanti Palpiti, a Romance ..... R. W. Evans.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove ..... ditto 2 6
*My Lodging is on the Cold Grounds Fantasia and Waltz, ditto 3 6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz ..... ditto 2 0
This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.
*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of "Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo ..... ditto 3 6
* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.
Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars ..... ditto 2 6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1 6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1 6
Away, those Doubts	Mr Foster	Torri	1 6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2 0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr Bellamy	Evans	2 0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1 6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1 6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1 6
Deserted Cottage	ditto	ditto	1 6
Fain would I marry	ditto	ditto	1 6
My Lady hath a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1 6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1 6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1 6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1 6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1 6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr. Pearman	Evans	2 6
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2 0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1 6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1 6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Mis Kelly	Moss	1 6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1 6
The Moon will flake the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1 6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1 6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1 6

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.
Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet) .. Miss Povey and Mr. Broadburst .. Moss 2 0

QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.

The Cadets ..... Ware 3 6
The Freischutz ..... Moss 3 0
The Royal York ..... Ware 3 0
The Midlothian ..... Evans 3 0
Les Moissonieurs 3 0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star 1 0
Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

BREWING UTENSILS & SEASONED CASKS, in great variety, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s. 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 15s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes. Bathing and Turtle Tubs Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, and Utensils Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER and PERFUMER, No. 181, Fleet-street (Two Doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished: in fact they are Hostes humani Capitis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain pre-eminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Ornamental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perruques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

PATRONIZED by His MAJESTY, and the ROYAL FAMILY; their Imperial Majesties, the EMPEROR and EMPRESS of RUSSIA; the EMPERORS of PERSIA and CHINA; Their Serene Highnesses the DUKE and PRINCE of BRUNSWICK, and most of the Nobility and Gentry.

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL,

the ORIGINAL and GENUINE, which has for many years been universally admired; also acknowledged pre-eminent, for nourishing the Hair, preventing it from being injured by illness, change of climate, study, travelling, accouchment, &c.; removes scurf, harshness, and dryness; renders it soft and glossy; prevents its falling off or turning grey; creates a thick growth on the baldest places; produces a beautiful effect on natural or artificial hair, rendering it

ADMIRABLY SOFT AND ELEGANTLY FLOWING,

producing BEAUTIFUL CURLS, adding a most incomparable, transcendant, and beautiful lustre, rendering the head-dress truly enchanting. Ask for "ROWLAND'S" MACASSAR OIL, at 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s, 6d. and 21s. per bottle. Also

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR,

which resists the attacks of inclement weather, and immediately allays the smarting irritability of the Skin produced by cold winds; prevents the skin from chapping, and renders harsh and rough Skin soft; and even removes Freckles, Pimples, and all Cutaneous Eruptions; in arts luxuriant and matchless beauty to the complexion; affords soothing relief to Ladies during their accouchment; and is of so harmless a nature as to be administered to Infants with perfect safety. To Gentlemen after Shaving, it allays the irritating and smarting pain, and renders the Skin smooth and pleasant.—Price 8s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per bottle, duty included.

CAUTION.

In consequence of the high popularity of the above articles, flagrant impostors have counterfeited each; copying Advertisements, Labels, Bills, &c. To prevent fraud, ask for "ROWLAND'S," and observe the new label (engraved by Parkins and Heath) on the Oil; strictly observing the label of each article has the signature and address in red—"A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-Garden."

Sold by them and by most respectable Perfumers and Medicine-venders in town and country.

FOREIGN WINES.

CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant, next to the KING'S, and opposite to the HAYMARKET THEATRE, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, has made a still greater and the greatest possible reduction in price of the following Wines, which he warrants genuine as imported.

FINE OLD PORTS, Vintages 1819, 1820, and 1821, high-flavoured, fruity, full-bodied Wine, 60 Guineas per Pipe.

SHERRY, pale and brown, shipped by the first houses in Spain, same price per Butt, permitted from the London Docks to the purchaser direct.

FINE OLD PORT, excellent SHERRY, and good and superior direct MADEIRA, all at 24s 6d per dozen, by way of sample. Fourteen dozen of any of the above Wine, full-sized bottles, package, &c. well packed in a good Port Pipe, all included for a remittance of 20l. or half the quantity in a Sherry Hogshead, at 10l.

CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.

OLD COGNIAC BRANDY (Otard and Martell), 23s 6d per gallon. Fine Old PINE-APPLE RUM, 15s 6d per gallon.

C. W. begs to announce that he has just returned from CHAMPAGNE, where he selected a large quantity of the very best Wines from the Vignerons of Ai, Avize, and Pieny, so long celebrated for their richness, body, and flavour. This importation is confidently warranted as of the finest quality; Mousseaux non Mousseaux, rouge et blanc, 63s to 72s per dozen; Claret, Sauterne, Vin de Grave Chabli, and all that character of French Wines, 36s per dozen; the finest imported, 63s to 72s per dozen. Lisbon, Mountain, Madeira (W. I.), Teneriffe, 27s per dozen. Fine old crusted Port, 30s per dozen.

All other Wines, Spirits, &c. in proportion. Remittances must be sent with orders, and postage paid (or not attended to), and if the greatest satisfaction is not given, the whole of the money will be returned.

P.S. Portugal Grapes, now lauding in Jars, in the finest condition, at 25s. per Jar, and retail at C. Wright's Depot, Regent-street, at 10d per lb.

THE great Celebrity of the late Dr. WM. ROBERTSON, of Edinburgh, both as a Physician and Botanist, is too well known to require expatiating upon. He was eminently successful in applying the virtues of herbs and roots, as a radical cure for various disorders of the human body.

Dr. Robertson's VEGETABLE MEDICINE has never failed effecting a cure in all scorbutic and chronic disorders, bilious complaints, nervous diseases, and fevers in general. Innumerable documents, from persons of the highest respectability, attesting astonishing cures, are in the hands of the proprietor for inspection.

The medicine is sold in pint bottles, at eleven shillings each, and in quart bottles, one pound. Orders, inclosing a remittance, to be addressed to Dr. Robertson, No. 7, Bloomsbury-square, where it is sold by the sole proprietors; also by Messrs. Barclay and Sons, 99, Fleet-market.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly so ieit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE.

THE Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is,—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear, smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for MRS. VINCENT'S GOWLAND'S LOTION, and see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor:—

"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating, that, by the use of two quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing Virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."

Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's, 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Bow Church Yard; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers, and Dealers in Genuine Medicines, in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.

 To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the Genuine.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.—General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—HOLYHEAD, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—LIVERPOOL, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Cole-hill, Lichfield Newcastle, and Congleton—BRISTOL, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—BATH and EXETER, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Collumpton—EXETER, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—MANCHESTER, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield—BIRMINGHAM (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—CARLISLE and EDINBURGH, through Cherley, Preston, and Garstang—CHESTER, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—KIDDERMINSTER, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—NORWICH, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—MILFORD HAVEN, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted

POST COACHES—MANCHESTER (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—HOLYHEAD (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—CARLISLE, GLASGOW, and EDINBURGH (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four, o'clock—SOUTHAMPTON coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—LIVERPOOL (the Royal Champion) in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—WINDSOR and ETON coaches daily—MANCHESTER (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—EXETER (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—EDINBURGH and GLASGOW (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—BRISTOL (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afternoon at a quarter before four—BIRMINGHAM (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—FALMOUTH and PLYMOUTH light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—WEYMOUTH and DORCHESTER Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—COVENTRY light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—NOTTINGHAM post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—CHESTER and PARK-GATE new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—WORCESTER coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—WARWICK and LEAMINGTON SPA post coach, every evening at half-past five—TAMWORTH, ATHERSTONE and HINCHLEY coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—DERBY post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—TENBY, MERTHYR, and PEMBROKE post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—DUDLEY and STOURBRIDGE four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—DOVER coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—PARIS new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—TAUNTON, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—BIRMINGHAM and HOLYHEAD new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—CHELTENHAM and GLOUCESTER light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—ROYSTON and BUNTINGFORD post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—NORWICH new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—CAMBRIDGE Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—CANTERBURY fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—BRIGHTON coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—MILFORD HAVEN new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narheth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom.

W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

On the 22d instant, the Lady of Mr. H. Hendricks, of a daughter.
The Lady of Edward Bevill, Esq. of a son.
The Lady of Robert Harvey, Esq. of a son.
The Lady of George Blair Hall, Esq. of a daughter.
The Lady of Lieutenant-Colonel Power, R. A., of her fourth son.

MARRIED.

On the 22nd instant, Stephen Hobson, Esq. of the Crescent, Minories, to Mrs. Wm. Taylor, of Hackney.
Edw. Peale, Esq. to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the late Philip Wyatt Crowther, Esq.
J. C. Wright, Esq. to Theodosia, eldest daughter of T. Denman, Esq. M. P.

DIED.

On the 17th instant, Lady Robert Spencer.
On the 22d instant, Richard Mountford Wilkinson, Esq.
On the 18th instant, Peter Ilbert, Esq. of Horswell House and Bowringsleigh, in the county of Devon.
On the 19th instant, Lady Eyre, widow of the late Lord Chief Justice Eyre.
On the 18th instant, Louisa Harriet, the wife of Sir George Garrett.
On the 18th instant, Anna, wife of Mr. William Cozens, banker, Watlington Oxon.
On the 21st instant, at Knightsbridge, Mrs. M. Perks, relict of the late Mr W. Perks, of St. Martin's-lane.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

"THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 30. SUNDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1825. Price 7d.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW Evening, the Tragedy of BRUTUS, with Amoroso, King of Little Britain, and De La Peronse.

Tuesday, Der Freischutz, The Camp, and the Comedy of The Panel.

Wednesday, The Rivals, and The Wager.

Thursday, The Jealous Wife.

Friday, Faustus.

Saturday, The Hypocrite, Maw-worm, Mr. Liston; with Love, Law, and Physic. Luhin Log, Mr. Liston.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—For the BENEFIT of Mr. MAZURIER.—The public are respectfully informed that on TUESDAY next, the 6th instant, will be performed, the Comedy of the BIRTH DAY; after which, the DESERTER of NAPLES, the character of Simkin by Mon. Mazurier. To which will be added, ALADDIN, in which Mon. Mazurier will introduce the admired Pas Chirioso. Tickets and Places to be had at the Box Office, Hart-street.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

MONDAY, December 5, and during the week, THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. After which, ALL at COVENTRY. To which will be added, DON GIOVANNI, or, A Spectre on Horseback. Don Giovanni, Mrs. Fitzwilliam.

An entirely new Burletta, which has been some time in preparation, will be produced on Monday next.

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal. 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Messrs. Campbell and Kirkham.

BONAPARTE'S CASUALTIES, &c.—Great Room, Spring Gardens.—Marshall's Original Peristrephic Panorama (with new additions lately made) illustrative of all the events that happened to Bonaparte from the battle of Waterloo till his Death; displaying 13 Views of St. Helena, the Battle of Genappe, Trafalgar, &c. The figures, ships of war, &c. being on the largest scale, each view properly described, and accompanied by appropriate Music, from a full military band, give a complete sensation of reality. Day Exhibitions from 12 to 5—Evening ditto, by gas, at 7 and half-past 8 o'clock

ROYAL SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY and READING-ROOMS, Opposite St. James's Palace.

Terms to the Library 5l. 5s. the year; 3l. 3s. the half-year; or 1l. 16s. per quar.

In addition to the right of selecting from the catalogue, Subscribers are entitled to the perusal of every new book as soon as published, and have the privilege of directing the purchase of any work of general interest not previously in the collection.

Terms to the Reading-room, which possesses superior accommodations, 3l. 3s. he year; 2l. 2s. the half-year; 1l. 1s. the quarter.

☞ Subscribers to the Circulating Library are admitted to all the privileges of the Reading-room for an additional 2 guineas per annum.

Is entered Outwards,

FOR VAN DIEMAN'S LAND and NEW SOUTH WALES, the fine new fast-sailing Snow, FAIRFIELD, A. 1, coppered, burden 300 tons. JAMES WORK, Commander. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodation for Passengers. For freight or Passage, apply to Buckles, Bagster and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

TURKEY COFFEE, of Fine Quality, at the following Reduced Prices:—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.; Roasted, 3s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having REDUCED the DUTY on TURKEY COFFEE, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of fine quality, at Messrs. MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

WANTED, by a Tradesman in an established business, as a Carver and Gilder, a YOUTH of good address, and respectable connexions, not under 15 years of age. Every attention will be paid to his morals and improvement in the business, and he will be treated as one of the family. Premium 40 Guineas. Address Letters (post paid) to W. A. at Mr. Webb's, perfumer, 20, Great Surrey-street, Blackfriars-road.

SULPHATE OF QUININE.—Just Imported, a Fresh Supply of this invaluable Medicine, manufactured by one of the first Chemists in Paris. The above Parcel is well worth the attention of Druggists and the Medical Profession in general, as the Importer is but seldom enabled to offer so fine an article on the advantageous terms he can at present. —Apply to J. C. HOSE, successor to the late Mr. KINNARD. Druggist, 309, High Holborn.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—TO BE LET, To-morrow, and every other Evening, during the Season, TWO PRIVATE SPLENDID STAGE-BOXES.

Eight persons to each Box, 2l. 2s. (the most economical and commodious in the Theatre). Covent Garden Box, for Six persons, 2l. 12s. 6d.—Several Personal Admissions for the present Season, admitting to all Benefits, Oratorios, &c. 5l. 5s. Boxes, Tickets, &c. for all the Theatres, bought and sold by CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, who has just returned from the Vineyards of Ay, Avize, and Piery, with a parcel of the finest Champagne, 63s. and 72s. per Dozen.

THE RURAL DIVAN, No. 5, CATHARINE-STREET, STRAND.—The Proprietor of the above, J. LORIMER, begs respectfully to acquaint Gentlemen, that he has fitted up the above Divan at a considerable expense, which forms a snug retreat for those Gentlemen who wish to retire from the bustle and fatigues of the town, to enjoy their Cigar, and a cup of excellent Coffee, Lemonade, &c. The Proprietor returns his sincere thanks to those who have favoured him with their patronage and support, and trusts their favours will be continued, and also their future recommendations, as nothing shall be wanting on the Proprietor's part to render every comfort, and keep the concern respectable.

PERRING'S PATENT DOUBLE EDGED

NEWLY INVENTED WATERPROOF BEAVER HATS, of a peculiar fabric, having a short rich nap, that will not injure by rain or exposure in warm climates, possessing lightness and durability, in a variety of modern shapes, at 23s. and 26s., may be had at PERRING'S Manufactory, 413, Strand, and at Hammersmith. Also, the Patent Double-edged Silk Hat, warranted to resist all weathers, light and elastic to the head, will wear twice as long as those made in the usual way, price 17s. An extensive assortment of Ladies' Beaver Bonnets of the newest shapes, elegantly trimmed, from 20s. to 50s. Children's Hats of every description. Gentlemen's Waterproof Travelling and Forage Caps, in great variety.—Wholesale and Shipping Orders attended to, with punctuality and dispatch.

UNITED EMPIRE LIFE ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION, 10, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, for the Insurance of Lives, Contingent Assurances, and Survivorships, Endowments for Children, for the Purchase and Sale of Annuities and Reversions, and to grant Annuities.

HONORARY DIRECTORS.

Those marked thus * are also Trustees.

His Excellency Count Munster	Right Hon. Lord Blaney
*Right Hon. Earl of Elgin and Kincardine	*Right Hon. Sir Gore Onseley
Right Hon. Lord Viscount Torrington	M. G. Prendergast, Esq. M.P.
*Right Hon. Lord Robt. Fitzgerald	*Charles Tennyson, Esq. M.P.
*Right Hon. Lord Geo. Seymour	Lieutenant-Gen. Wetherall
	Major Moor, F.R.S.

DIRECTORS.

Sir E. Colebrooke, Bart. Chairman.

Lieutenant-Colonel M. Shawe, Deputy-Chairman.

J. R. Birnie, Esq.	John Kingston, Esq.
Harry Cook, Esq.	Nugent Kirkland, Esq.
H. T. Colebrooke, Esq. F.R.S.	Sir John Scott Lillie
Sir Francis Desanges	Sir James M'Grigor, F.R.S.
W. D. Fellowes, Esq.	Capt. W. A. Montagu, R.N. C.B.

Bankers—Messrs. Drummond.

Standing Counsel—Lancelot Shadwell, Esq.

Solicitor—Christopher Godmond, Esq.

Physician—Dr. Hume, No. 9, Curzon-street.

Surgeon—Phineas Coyne, Esq. No. 41, Welbeck-street.

Persons effecting Life Assurances with this Society will not merely derive immediate benefits by the Rates and Conditions, but extensive ultimate advantages, as it is one of its leading principles that the Assured for the whole term of life shall eventually possess the entire Funds and Resources of the Association, participating also, in the interim, in each periodical division of Profits.

The Association continues to advance Money on Reversions and Annuities satisfactorily secured.

Board-days are on Wednesdays at Three o'clock, and on Fridays at Eleven.

Attendance daily, from Ten till Five o'clock, to receive Proposals, and to furnish every information that may be required.

The Half-yearly Dividend of Five per Cent. Interest on Shares may be received by Proprietors during the same hours.

By order, JOHN RATRAY, Registrar.

NEW MUSIC, Number 1, of a Selection of Original Spanish Melodies. With Symphonies and Accompaniments, and arranged for the Pianoforte and Harp. By W. West. The Poetry by Lord Nugent. The Embellishments from the Designs of the first-rate artists, 12s. 6d. Published by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand.

NEW and SECOND-HAND PIANO-FORTES.—New Piano Fortes, comprising Square, Cottage, Harmonic, Rosewood, and Mahogany Cabinets, warranted of the best manufacture, and which for quality of tone cannot be excelled, are now offered by W. PINNOCK, 267, St. Clement's Churchyard, Strand, at 20 per Cent. below the usual Prices. Also the following Second-hand Pianos:—a Six-Octave Rosewood Cabinet, price 45 guineas; a Six-Octave Mahogany Grand Cabinet, 45 guineas; a Five-and-a-half-Octave Cabinet, 26 guineas; one Upright Grand, 20 guineas; a Five-and-a-half-Octave Horizontal Grand, by Tomkinson, 20 guineas; and two Squares, 6 and 18 guineas each; a Pedal Harp, price 13 guineas.

NEW MUSIC.—Il Crociato in Egitto, arranged for the Pian forte (with Flute Accompt. ad lib.) in 3 Books, by Thomas Valentine, price 4s. each. New editions of the following popular Airs, with Variations, for the Piano-forte, by ditto:—The Sicilian Air, on which is founded "Home, sweet Home," 2s. 6d.; The Bridesmaid's Chorus, 2s. 6d.; Isabella, a Spanish Air, 2s. 6d.; Ronssean's Dream, 2s. 6d.; Cease your Funning, 2s. 6d.; Sul Margine, 2s. 6d.; Auld lang Syne, 2s.; We're a' Noddin, 2s.

Published at FALKNER'S Opera Music Warehouse, 3, Old Bond-street.

Also, just published, Divertisementi di Saloni, a Series of a Selection of Italian Airs, for the Harp and Piano-forte, by W. H. Steil, in 8 Nos. each 4s.

THE LOVER'S MISTAKE, a Ballad, the Words by T. H. BAYLY, Esq. the Music by M. Balfe, price 2s.

CHERRY RIPE (Second edition) a Cavatina, the Music by C. E. Horn, price 2s.

The above songs are now singing by Madame Vestris, with the most rapturous applause, in r. Poole's new and popular comedy of Paul Pry.

Published by J. WILLIS and Co. Royal Musical Repository, 55, St. James's-street, London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin; where may be found every variety of Grand, Cabinet, Cottage, Square, and Circular Piano-Fortes: also Harps, by the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

☞ Piano-Fortes, &c. let out on hire.

CHERRY BOUNCE, New Song, written by a Young Gentleman, Seven Years of Age, on his hearing the celebrated Song, "Cherry Ripe," the music by a professor of eminence.

"To you dear Maid," New Song, the words by J. B. Thompson, Esq. the music arranged by J. Lamhley, price 1s. 6d.

This song is founded on a beautiful Venetian Air, which, for elegance and simplicity, may vie with the popular air, "Sweet Home;" likewise, by the same Author, "Love breathes in every plant and flower," 1s. 6d. Second Edition, of a selection from the vocal compositions of Rossini, united to original English words, the Poetry by Jas. Mackenzie, Esq., the Airs, arranged by J. R. Stevenson, Esq. price 12s.; may be had single. "Giovinetto Cavalier," by Holst, price 2s.—Published by Wm. Rose, 53, Strand.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

LONGMAN and BATES, Organ and Pianoforte Manufacturers, 6, Ludgate-Hill, solicit the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, to an inspection of their extensive stock, among which will be found a variety of small Finger Organs, Cabinet Pianofortes, of the most superior description, in plain and elegant cases. Improved Square Pianofortes, with circular corners, in great variety. Spanish Guitars with the improved machine heads; also every article in the Musical line.—L. and B. beg leave to assure purchasers that where the most perfect satisfaction is not given, the Instrument will be exchanged by paying the expenses of removal.

An Organ suitable for a place of Worship, two rows of Keys, in an elegant mahogany case, Long Octaves G G to F in alto; the great Organ contains eight stops, the swell four stops, to F below Fiddle G, three shifting movements, Octave of pedals, &c.; and several second-hand self-performing Pianofortes to be sold cheap.—All the new Publications.

NEW MUSIC for the Pianoforte, by CAMILLE PLEYEL. A Melange on the Opera Il Crociato in Egitto, introducing Giovenetto and six other popular Airs, 4s.; also as Rondos, by Ditto, "Zitti Zitti," 4s. "Di Piaeer," 3s. "Cruda Sorte," 3s. "Amor possente Nome." 4s. "March from Mose," 2s. "La Gazza Ladia, Rondo," 2s. "Aurora che Sorgerai," 3s. A Melange on the celebrated French Opera, the "Mason," 3s. Two Polonaises, each 2s. Three French Rondos, each 1s. 6d. "Di tanti palpiti," 2s. And by Pipis, Mozart's "Giovenette che fate," from Don Juan, as a Rondino, 4s. "Fratante Angoscie," 3s.; and Hungarian Rondo, dedicated to Kalkbrenner, 7s. Moscheles's Spanish Rondo, 2s. Hertz's Studies, (revised by M. Moscheelles), dedicated to Hummel.

The above elegant works are allowed, by the first Professors of the day, to be the most useful compositions ever offered to the Amateur of Music.

London: published by R. Cocks and Co. 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square. —N.B. A liberal discount for cash.

MUSICAL NOVELTY.

Just published by T. LINDSAY, 217, Regent-street, and CLEMENTI and CO. 26, Cheapside.

THE MELOGRAPHICON, an entirely new and highly interesting Musical Work, by which an INTERMINABLE NUMBER OF MELODIES may be produced, and Amateurs who have a taste for writing Poetry enabled to set their verses to Music, in a variety of Measures, for the VOICE and PIANO-FORTE, without the necessity of a scientific knowledge of the Art. Price One Guinea, complete, in boards; or separately, in two books, at 12s. and 10s. 6d. each.

This very ingenious work requires no preparatory study, and being equally adapted to juvenile or matured capacities, it is strongly recommended as an eligible CHRISTMAS PRESENT, or NEW-YEAR'S-GIFT to young people, by whom (during the long nights of the approaching Winter,) it will be found an endless source of amusement for Winter evenings.

Five Specimens, composed from "The Melographicon," are published separately, as a test of its capabilities, price only 2s. for the five.

☞ Prospectuses gratis.

 T. Lindsay has recently published a great variety of New Flute Music.

Just published.

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangements of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chorusses, from the celebrated opera, "Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home! with variations, 2s. ---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, 2s.---Canone from Tarrare, 2s. As a Duet for two Violoncellos, The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane

NEW VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC.

Published by J. B. CRAMER and Co., 201, Regent Street.

PIANO FORTE MUSIC.

"Useful Extracts," consisting of Scales and Exercises, intended as an Introduction to the celebrated Studies of Clementi, Cramer, &c. Arranged and Fingered by J. B. Cramer, 5s. Twenty-five Characteristic Diversions, by ditto, 14s. Impromptu on Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto. 2s. 6d. Melange on Airs from Crociato, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Capriccio on the favourite Round in Tarrare, by do. 3s. 6d. Overture de Jean de Finlande, as Duet, by Hummel, 4s. Impromptu, Op. 62, by Moscheles. Le Petite Babellarde, Brilliant Rondo, Op. 66, by ditto, 3s. Variations on Giovinetto Cavalier, by Pixis, 4s. Ries' Third Polonoise Duet. 5s.

HARP MUSIC.

"Roslin Castle," arranged by Bochsa, 3s. 6d. Che faro senza, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Favorite March, by ditto, 3s. 6d. Bridesmaid Chorus, arranged by Chipp, 2s. 6d. Mary's Dream, by ditto, 3s. Ye Banks and Braes, by ditto, 3s. Giovinetto Cavalier, by ditto, 2s. 6d. Dizis' Variations on La Jeune et Sensible, 4s. Huntsmen Chorus, arranged by Wright, 2s 6d.

VOCAL MUSIC.

"As the Tree seems more bright," "Fair Geraldine," and "What is Love," composed by Barnett, 1s. 6d. each. "Jock o'Hazeldean," and "My Heart is sair for Somebody," arranged by Chipp, 1s. 6d. each. "My own dear Maid," and "To welcome Jamie Hame," by Rawlings, 2s. each. "Wandering Willie," and "When Delia on the Plain," by Dr. Carnaby. 1s. 6d. each. Also an elegant Edition of Handel's Songs, arranged by Wm. Horsley, Mus. Bac. Oxon.; the following of which are published, viz. "Angels ever bright," Lord to thee," "From mighty Kings," and "Pious Orgies."

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, by WELSH and HAWES, Musicsellers to the Royal Family, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Moscheles—Martial Impromptu, on the celebrated song REVENGE	3 0
——— Brilliant Polonaise, in F	4 0
——— Rondoletto, on the favorite Notturno, by Paer	3 0
Hummel, P. N. Variations on a celebrated march from Cendrillon	4 0
——— Variations and bodo, on a favorite Air by Gluck	2 6
——— Do. on an Austrian Melody	3 0
Mayseder—Polonaise, in A.	3 0
——— Serenai vaghi rai, an admired Air from Rossini's Opera of Semiramide, variations	4 0

Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variations, 2s. 6d.	4. Kelvin Grove, Rondo, 2s. 6d.
2. Irish Melody, ditto, ditto, 2s. 6d.	5. Love, good night, var. 2s. 6d.
3. Down the burn, ditto, 2s. 6d.	6. Green grow the rushes, O! 2s. 6d.

Weber—Selection of Airs from 'Der Freischutz, with Flute, ad lib. in 4 books, by S. F. Rimbault, each 3 0

HARP MUSIC.

Boehsa, N. C.—A Selection of the most popular Airs from Sor's Ballet of Cendrillon	5 0
——— Cease your Funning .....Variations	4 0
——— My lodgings is on the cold ground ..... Do.	3 0
——— Fall of Paris (a Russian Air) ..... Rondo	3 0
——— Dipiacer my belzo chere .....Variations	4 0
Chipp, T. P.—Charlie is my darling ..... Do.	2 6
——— Love Good Night ..... Do.	2 6
Meyer, C.—We're a' Noddin, at our house at hame ..... Rondo	3 0
Ye banks and braes .....Variations	5 0
Croteh, Dr.—Specimens of various styles of Music, referred to in a course of Lectures read at Oxford and London (a new edition, with a supplement to each) Vol. 1, 2, and 3	25 0

NEW MUSIC.

ON Wednesday next will be published, all the Music in the Operatic piece of 'TWAS I, performed at Covent Garden Theatre, consisting of the Overture, Choruses, Songs, March, Finale, &c. composed by J. Watson. The following Songs and Ballads in the Opera, sung by Madame Vestris. Price 1s. 6d. each.

Where's the harm of a Little Kiss.

When my Sweetheart away from me flies.

The truth we know is not at all times to be spoken.

LAVENU and CO. 21, Edwards-street, (corner of Duke-street,) Manchester-square; and W. CARD, 94, Quadrant, Regent-street.—Where may be had, the popular Song, "Ah Maiden, Gardez vous," sung by Madame Vestris, at the Haymarket and Covent Garden Theatres. Price 1s. 6d.

A CHRISTMAS PRESENT AND NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

FRIENDSHIP'S OFFERING for 1826, Edited by T. K. Hervey, Esq. is published this day. price 12s. by Lupton Relfe, 13, Cornhill.

This Volume, in addition to Thirteen splendidly Engraved Plates, contains nearly One Hundred Original Articles, in Poetry and Prose, by Forty of the most eminent Writers of the age; including Robert Southey, Esq.; Rev. H. H. Millman; Lady C. Lamb; Lord Porchester; James Montgomery, Esq.; W. Jordan, Esq.; Rev. T. Dale; Rev. W. L. Bowles; Horatio Smith, Esq.; L. E. L.; Mrs. Opie; Mrs. C. B. Wilson; Miss Jane Porter; J. Bowring, Esq.; Bernard Barton; H. Neele, Esq.; Miss Mitford; J. Galt, Esq.; W. Sotheby, Esq.; Lord Dillon; A. Cunningham, Esq.; the late Lord Byron: Rev. C. R. Maturin; R. L. Edgeworth, Esq.; James Thomson, Author of "The Seasons," &c.

The Large Paper Edition, with Proof Impressions of the Plates, on India Paper, will be ready in a few days.

In post 8vo. price 8s. 6d. boards,

THE MIRROR OF THE MONTHS.

"Delectando pariterque monendo."

Printed for GEO. B. WHITTAKER, Ave-Maria-lane.

In post 8vo. price 8s. boards,

VARIETIES of LITERATURE; being Selections from the Portfolio of the late JOHN BRADY, Esq. the Author of the "Clavis Calendaria," &c. &c. arranged and adapted for publication, by JOHN HENRY BRADY, his Son.

Printed for GEO. B. WHITTAKER, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just Published, the Eighth Part, embellished with Eighteen superior Engravings Price in demy 4to, with Proofs on India Paper, 24s; in royal 8vo. price 18s. or carefully coloured, 24s; and in demy 8vo. 12s. of

THE ANIMAL KINGDOM Described and arranged in conformity with its Organization. By the Baron Cuvier, &c. &c. &c. With additional descriptions of all the Species hitherto named of many not before noticed, and other original matter.

By EDWARD GRIFFITHS, F.L.S. Assisted by several eminent Zoologists.

Published, in Quarterly Parts, by GEO. B. WHITTAKER, Ave-Maria-lane, London.

The translation of the "Regne Animal" of the Baron Cuvier, with its supplementary additions, has now extended with regularity to the Eighth Number. The conductors of this work, while they acknowledge their sincere obligations to the subscribers and the public for the approbation and success with which it has been honoured to an extent far exceeding their most sanguine expectations, take the same opportunity of again pledging themselves to a completion of this laborious and expensive undertaking within the time proposed.

Zoology, confined in this country for a long period to a few scientific and professional men, was either a sealed science to the majority, even of the best educated, or was known in a very imperfect manner through the medium of obsolete and suspicious authorities. The modern discoveries and arrangements in Zoology were not thought of, and every thing on the subject which was popular, might be considered as little better than an agreeable romance, with no ulterior view, and calculated simply for the gratification of curiosity, or the occasional occupation of an idle hour. The final causes of material and immaterial nature were almost altogether neglected, and no scientific principles of classification, or characters, deduced from internal structure, were at all made known in any way that could render them extensively useful and popular.

That this was really the case with the majority of the reading public, twenty years ago, at least, will hardly be denied; indeed, we might say, that it was not until very lately, that any general spirit of inquiry on the subject has been set afloat among us. While a neighbouring and rival nation, though distracted by internal discord, and foreign universal war, were developing this science with unexampled assiduity and success—while it constituted one of the essential elements of general education among them; we, involved in the noisy strife of politics, or the important avocations of commerce, disregarded the pursuit of this and other peaceful sciences which were unconnected with these universal objects of attention. Mathematics, we cultivated as subservient to navigation and the military art; chemistry, as connected with commercial and mechanical purposes; metaphysics and the belles lettres, as auxiliaries to that reasoning and eloquence which open the road to the first political and legal distinctions in the country. But the calm and peaceful study of organized creation was put aside; the philosophy which teaches us "to look through Nature up to Nature's God" exerted her persuasive voice in vain, amid the turmoils of faction, the pursuit of wealth, and the shouts of war,

But this agitated feverish state of things is now changed, and the cultivation of every natural science has been resumed with progressive spirit. At this particular crisis, a work like the present was thought by its projectors a desideratum—a work which would put the modern improvements and discoveries in Zoology in a popular and abridged form, and unite all that was amusing but authentic in the history of animals, with what was instructive and important in zoological science.

That this presumption was well founded, the success of the undertaking sufficiently evinces. Of any presumed merit in its execution, it would be indecorous in its conductors to speak; of its demerits, they are conscious. Some of these arise from circumstances over which they have hitherto had no control, but which their prospective arrangements will, they trust, prevent in future.

The graphic illustrations, so essential to every zoological work, will be conducted under very favourable circumstances. The plates will be engraved by Mr. Landseer, and other eminent artists in this department, partly from drawings by Major Hamilton Smith, F.R.S., &c. &c. (to whose liberality and friendship the editor is thus largely indebted), partly from drawings in the editor's own collection, and partly from such living subjects as may be now exhibiting in this country, and are not before well figured, drawn by Mr. Landseer.

In a subject of such vast extent as the Animal Kingdom, it is no easy task to limit the space in which a sufficient general review of the whole may be taken without running into an inconvenient and expensive extent. The Subscribers, however, may be assured, that the work will not exceed forty-five parts, and it is confidently hoped that the whole will be completed considerably within the period limited of Quarterly publications.

A translation of the great work of the Baron Cuvier, on Fossil Osteology, is also in course of publication, in Ten Parts, quarto, to correspond with the quarto edition of the Animal Kingdom.

London, December 1, 1825.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 4.—We learn, that before setting off for Taganrog our Emperor transmitted to the Chevalier de Mintziaki an order to make a last effort with the Porte, to obtain from it a positive declaration, whether or not it would re-establish the ancient state of things in Wallachia and Moldavia, as fixed by the Treaty of Bucharest. Our Court has obtained the most exact information, from which it results, that, notwithstanding all the promises previously made by the Porte, things have not been placed in the situation in which they ought to be, according to the articles of that Treaty; and, further, that there are still in the two Principalities a considerable number of Turkish troops, and not merely guards, to enforce the police; that the authority of the Hospodars was wholly disregarded by the Turkish military Chiefs, who assumed the most arrogant pretensions; and, lastly, that the police troops, who ought to be under the orders of the Hospodars, in the present state of things, looked only to their own officers.—We now learn that the Chevalier has fulfilled the orders which he received, and that, before taking any step with respect to the Porte, he communicated them to the Ambassadors of the Allied Powers, who are ready to support the demand of the Russian Charge d'Affaires. We are assured that the Notes presented were very energetic, and that they produced a strong impression on the Turkish Ministers, so that the latter were eager to convoke the Divan, which has promised to concede all that was demanded. Orders for the march of the troops have been actually transmitted to the Principalities, and the Ottoman Government has, on this occasion, manifested its good disposition. But the execution of these measures will be rigorously watched; for experience has proved that very often such special orders have been rendered illusive, by secret instructions, and the carrying them into effect has been first postponed, and then given up altogether. It will not be so this time, for the Agents of the Allied Powers in the Principalities have positive orders to make exact reports on every thing which may occur relative to this subject.—At this moment there is no question in our country of the speedy departure of M. de Ribeaupierre for Constantinople.—However, nothing will be decided with respect to Turkey till after the return of his Majesty, which is expected by the end of this month.

Lisbon, Nov. 15.—The Treaty between the Brazils and Portugal was not delivered until the arrival of the packet on the 13th, which brought the copies of it from England. It has been published here in the usual manner, with every demonstration of joy; three days' illumination, bands playing, and various rejoicings; but many people here regard it as a great sacrifice on the part of Portugal.—Exchange, 52¼.

Rome, Nov. 16.—The celebration of the Jubilee has brought to light the facts of a frightful crime, which perhaps would otherwise never have been discovered. A young lady, of the city of Assize, having inherited a large fortune from her mother, was sought after in marriage by several persons, but her father, knowing that if she were once settled in matrimony, he would lose the usufruct and administration of her property, conceived the resolution of effecting her disappearance. Aided, therefore, in his horrible project by a mason and servant, he conducted the lady to a lonely house in the country, and shut her up in a room, the door of which he had built up, leaving only a small aperture, through which the said servant occasionally served her with the coarsest kind of food. In this situation the unfortunate young woman had been for ten years, subsisting on the most wretched and scanty allowance. But, on the approach of the Jubilee, the wretched father found himself the victim of the most excruciating remorse, and, as the best atonement for his wickedness, he made a public declaration of his diabolical proceeding. The first care on the part of the authorities of justice, on hearing the affair, was to send immediate relief to the young lady. The first words she uttered, on being released from her dreary confinement, were, "Do not injure my father."

Petersburgh, Nov. 8.—The Empress Elizabeth has performed her journey in the most agreeable manner possible, from which her health has derived the best effects. The sojourn of the Emperor and Empress at Taganrog affords them much pleasure. They pass through that city almost every day on foot or on horseback. It is elegantly built, and enjoys the most salubrious air. There are the most magnificent houses and gardens; one of the latter, which is very large, is open to the public. Excellent grapes can be purchased for thirty copper kopecks a pound; but foreign fruits are scarce, dear, and of bad quality. Some persons are therefore to be sent from this to make establishments which will supply the city's wants in this way. The environs of Taganrog, refreshed by sea breezes, enjoy the most healthful and temperate climate of any part of Russia. During autumn, winter, and spring, however, great storms and thick fogs proceed from the sea of Azof. The latter generally concentrate about the Gulph of the Don, or at farthest do not extend more than thirty wersts into the country. A great quantity of snow falls some winters; during others none at all. From the 1st of December till March, frost covers the sea from the mouth of the Don up to Taganrog with an ice so strong that people pass with the greatest safety from Azof to Zseharkask. The country all round Taganrog is so fertile that four or five crops of wheat may be had successively, producing from twenty to thirty, and, in a good year, thirty-eight times the quantity sown. All sorts of fruit trees grow there prodigiously fast, and produce excellent fruit without much cultivation, particularly apricots, cherries, apples, and peaches; mulberries also grow very well. The city was formerly a fortress, but its fortifications are now in ruins; yet it is every day becoming of importance because of its commerce, and being a place of quarantine. According to the most authentic accounts, the imports from the years 1810 to 1820, amounted to 47 millions and a half of rubles, and the exports to 67 millions and a half. In 1823 the inhabitants were reckoned at 14,000, the greater part Greeks.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Leeds.—We have the pleasure to state, that on Wednesday last, a numerously attended meeting of the respectable inhabitants was held at the Court-house, in that place, the Rev. Henry Heap, Vicar, in the Chair, to take into consideration the distressed state of the unemployed workmen and their families, and the best mode of affording them relief. The Rev. Chairman, in opening the business of the Meeting, said, that it having been doubted by some whether the alleged distress prevailed to any great extent, he had that morning visited fifteen families, and could assure the Meeting that he had found a degree of suffering even beyond what he had anticipated—among other cases, he had found a family of five, which for a fortnight had only had the means of support to the extent of 5s. 6d. In this state of matters, he thought there could be no doubt that it was the duty of the humane to devise some means for the relief of the suffering poor. Mr. Maud, whose exertions in favour of the distressed have been unremitting ever since the men, who could obtain employment, returned to their labour, stated that no fewer than 2,755 men, women, and children, were at present out of employment, or dependent upon the unemployed, and among these there prevailed a great degree of suffering, as every person who had interested himself actively in the alleviation of their distress could testify.—Mr. Beaumont said, no doubt existed but that a large degree of suffering prevailed, and he complimented very justly the masters who had come forward so soon after their struggle with the men, to relieve that distress. He anticipated the happiest results from this generous magnanimity, which bestowed relief instead of reproach.—Mr. John Rand, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. John Wood, and Mr. Thompson, all concurred in the propriety of extending relief to the distressed, now that they saw their error and acknowledged it. The only subject on which there was any material difference of opinion related to the extent of the distress, to ascertain which it was resolved:—

"That as many families are at present labouring under extreme suffering, in consequence of the present depression in trade, aggravated by the ruinous effects of the Union amongst the Combers and Weavers in this town and vicinity, a Committee be now formed for the purpose of inquiring into their actual situation."

The Gentlemen constituting the Committee for the different districts of the town were then named, and it was further resolved—

"That they should make their report to an adjourned Meeting to be held on Saturday."

Liverpool.—Two persons, who gave their names Philip Lucas and James Wynne, of respectable appearance, have been apprehended in Liverpool, in consequence of suspicion attached to their conduct, by which 3000l. in Exchequer Bills, lost by a gentleman in London, have been fortunately recovered through the instrumentality of Messrs. B. W. and A. Franklin, bullion brokers. The name of the gentleman we are not acquainted with; but a few weeks since he lost his pocket-book, containing, among other things, three Exchequer Bills of 1000l. each. Notices were sent to the various banking houses, &c. throughout the country, and every means adopted for making the loss known, together with a proper description of the property, but no tidings could be heard of it, and in fact the loser had given up all hopes of ever recovering it. However, on Friday week, a man called at the office of Messrs. Franklin, in Dale-street, and offered some local notes to be exchanged, at the same time asking him if he could be accommodated with cash for an Exchequer Bill for 1000l. Mr. B. W. Franklin replied that he could, by giving a respectable reference. Monday morning, during the absence of Mr. B. W. Franklin, Lucas called at his office and ordered 500 doubloons to be ready by a certain hour, in part payment for which the Exchequer Bill was intended, and between twelve and one o'clock he met Mr. F. in the Exchange News Room, and asked the day's price of Exchequer Bills; Mr. F. told him, and he accompanied him to his office, when he said he had been to Mr. Simpson, who told him he would have no objection to receive the Bill in part payment of dues. Lucas then took the bill out of his pocket-book, and Mr. Franklin immediately recognized it to be one that had been advertised as lost by a gentleman in London. Mr. Franklin closely interrogated Lucas, and these interrogatories, with a request to walk into the inner office, evidently confused him, and induced him to ask "whether any thing was the matter?" Mr. F. told him it was necessary for his own sake to give every information, for that he had not become properly possessed of the bill. Lucas declared that all he said was true, and hoped Mr. F. would not detain the bill. Mr. F. said, he certainly must detain both him and the bill, and instantly dispatched his brother for Mr. Miller, the superintendant of police in this town. During this interval, Lucas said he saw no necessity for detaining him, for he had a particular engagement with a gentleman on 'Change, and he attempted to go, but Mr. F. detained him until the arrival of Mr. Miller, who took charge of him. On Lucas being taken before John Wright, Esq. at the Town Hall, he said he came from Coventry, and received the letter inclosing the bill on Tuesday, the 15th inst. in payment for an old account. He was a merchant, but had no place of business, nor did he know any person in Liverpool. He was then remanded until the owner of the property should be informed of what had taken place.

In consequence of the above information Mr. Miller proceeded to find out where Lucas lodged, and he found it was at a cook shop in Dale-street, and that Lucas had a companion, who also lodged with him, but this companion was not then at home. He therefore left an officer in care of the place, with directions to send for him whenever this person should arrive. However, in the course of the day (Monday) a person respectably dressed called at Messrs. F.'s office, and inquired if that was Messrs. Moss's bank; he was answered in the negative, and directed to that place. He shortly returned and inquired for Mr. Lucas. Suspicion was in consequence excited that he might know something more of the lost property, and he was traced home to his lodging. Mr. Miller was speedily informed of this circumstance, and he went to the apartments, where he saw this person, who gave his name James Wynne. There was a portmanteau in the room, which Mr. Miller desired Wynne to give him the key of; Wynne delivered up the key, and while Mr. Miller was searching it, he observed Wynne trying to secrete something in a waistcoat which was in the room, and had undergone the operation of a search; he instantly seized Wynne's hand, which he found contained a paper. Mr. Miller and Wynne struggled very hard, until the latter was thrown down, and upon his getting up, Mr. Miller found on the ground where Wynne had fallen, the other two Exchequer Bills for 1000l. each. Thus the whole of this property has been recovered after a lapse of several weeks, and after all hopes of ever recovering it had been abandoned. Wynne was conveyed before the Mayor and Mr. Alderman Wright, who questioned how he became possessed of these bills. He denied all knowledge of them, and declared he did not throw them on the ground. He said he was a resident near London, at Greenwich, and upon being further interrogated, he politely begged to decline answering any further questions. He was also remanded.

We since learn that one of the parties had applied to Mr. Joseph King, stock-broker, to negociate one of the bills, and that he was in treaty for the sale of it. Lucas had also presented one to Mr. Simpson, our collector of Excise, who would have received it had any duties been payable.

Wanton Assault on the Civil Power.——Limerick, Nov. 26.—The following we received from a person who was witness to the transaction:—"The lawless practice of fighting at fairs has assumed an alarming appearance in the western districts of Upper and Lower Connelloe, in this county. The organization of a new race or clan, under the character of Two and Three Years' Men, has of late rapidly increased in these districts. The infatuated operative classes of the peasantry, who are sworn on oath to attend the different fairs (as auxiliaries) for the alleged purpose of fighting the battles, or what is termed an 'old spleen,' between the most wealthy farmers, have, when stimulated by the effects of ardent spirits and porter, for which they have such a propensity, and to whom it is freely administered by their secret leaders, generally plunged headlong into the most gross and daring scenes of outrage and murder. No doubt there were most evident symptoms of such outrages wantonly exhibited at the fair of Ardagh, on Monday last, where a party of the police from Newcastle and Rathkeale, attended by two active and zealous Magistrates and a chief constable, were pelted with savage fury out of the fair with showers of stones, by a lawless faction of at least four hundred men; and what aggravates this assault the more is, the opposite party having made no appearance; therefore the attack on the civil power, who attended for the purpose of preventing these factions from committing murder on each other, has left an indelible stain along with its former atrocities, on the character of Ardagh. It appeared on the arrival of the magistrates and police, this faction which exhibited its hundreds in battle array, was placed on an eminence, exulting in its strength, several of whom were insulting peaceable persons, and disturbing the business of the fair, when the police were ordered to apprehend them; no sooner had the order been executed, than a shout and shower of stones instantly followed—the magistrate, chief constable, and mounted police were obliged to fly and leave the few dismounted men, who were knocked down and desperately wounded, to the mercy of the savages. One of the magistrates before this left the fair from a heavy shower of hail, being unwell; subsequently the other magistrate and the scattered police formed and took up a position contiguous to the fair, which, no doubt, was a masterly manœuvre. At this time the few dismounted men were in a deplorable situation, their arms taken from them, cut and beat in a shocking manner themselves, not daring to fire even in their own defence, as no Riot Act was read. Were it not for the timely interference of the Rev. Wm. Fitzgerald, P.P. of Newcastle, and his coadjutor, Mr. Cussen, who attended the fair to assist in preventing a general riot, in all probability the dismounted men would have been murdered on the spot. Much praise is due to those Reverend Gentlemen on this, as well as on every other occasion where the peace of his Majesty's subjects is required. A recruiting party belonging to the 62d Regiment, was also insulted and beat, and a recruit rescued from them."

Guernsey, Nov. 26.—Miss Laura Horne was found on Saturday morning, 19th inst. at Mr. J. Brock's residence, Upland-cottage. It appears that she had been concealed until the preceding evening at Mr. Louis de Campourcy's. She was immediately delivered up by the Court to Mr. John Ozanne, who had a special authority from the father to take her to England. The Court were engaged yesterday, from noon until six o'clock in the evening, in examining several individuals who are supposed to have assisted in the concealment of this young lady. They are to resume the examination this morning.

"The various and false reports in circulation induce me to give you a hasty sketch of what I have been at some pains to collect, of the causes which led to the capture of Miss Laura Horne, and which may be deemed authentic, inasmuch as they are collected from those who have had a share in the drama. Mr. J. D. after various letters, messages, and threats, was admitted to an interview with Mrs. Horne, the unfortunate mother—when, finding that his proposals to marry Miss Clementina Horne met that undisguised contempt which they so well deserved, left her with an assurance, that unless she acceded to his terms, his friend Mr. C. would deliver Miss Laura into the hands of the constables in less than three hours. Alarmed and agitated at the villany of such proceedings, which threatened so sudden a separation from the child of her fondest affections, she despatched a message to a gentleman who is well known to have shown a decided interest in favour of this ill-used family.

"It then appears, that on his arrival, late on Friday night, she begged of him to accompany her to her daughter's place of concealment, the house of Mr. C., and to stand at the gate, solemnly invoking him, if she did not soon return, to demand instant admission, for she did not expect to return alive from the united villany of those leagued against her. On her entrance, she exclaimed, there is Mr. De J. at the window, and shut the garden gate. Soon the mother's apparently stifled cries urged Mr. B. to force the garden gate, and rush to her rescue. On his reaching the room, the mother's agonized feelings surpassed all description. Not seeing the child, he exclaimed, 'My God! where is the child?' not knowing what to think of the horror and dismay expressed on Mrs. Horne's countenance; the child at that instant threw herself on her knees, crying, "Save me! save me!' This was done by throwing a great coat over the child's head. Mr. B. hastening away, left her in security with her sister. The object of security to the darling of her fond mother being attained, Mr. ——— returned, took Mrs. Horne under the arm, (having left her under the charge of a worthy artilleryman), she seeming lost to every other sense but that of her infant, kept crying. 'Oh, my child, my child!' This passed in the presence of a number of people, the neighbourhood having been roused by the mother's cries; and, much to their credit be it said, one and all seemed to partake and feel for Mrs. Horne's distress. In the morning Mrs. Horne sent her daughter to Mr. B., requesting to see him. When on his way to her residence, he fell in with the posse comitatus, who civilly desired him to return, having an order from the Royal Court (from certain information) to seize Miss Laura, then in his house. Mr. B. protesting against such arbitrary proceedings, found himself compelled to submit, when Miss Horne was once more taken to Court by the police, and delivered to her father's attorney. * * *."

Miss L. Horne was delivered up to Mr. Horne by Mr. J. Ozanne, yesterday, (Friday,) Nov. 25.

Birmingham, Nov. 28.—It is a circumstance of very rare occurrence for the acting High Bailiff of Birmingham to be nominated for the situation of High Sheriff; this year, however, presents the singular anomaly of both the High and Low Bailiffs being on the list of gentlemen from which the Sheriffs for this county are to be picked.

VARIETIES.

Launch of the New Ship George IV.—On the 26th ult. a fine new ship of the largest class, built for the East India Company's service, at Northfleet, was launched from Messrs. Pitcher's dock at that place. Campbell Marjoribanks, Esq. the Chairman, and Sir George Abercrombie Robinson, Bart. the Deputy Chairman, accompanied by the other Members of the Court of Directors, arrived at Northfleet at twelve o'clock, and proceeded to the yard, where a platform had been erected for their reception. The necessary arrangements having been completed, and the slips removed, the launch took place. As she is the first ship which the East India Company have built since the King's accession to the throne, it had been determined that she should be named George the Fourth, after his present Majesty.

A few days since, the Lords of the Privy Council assembled at the Cockpit, Whitehall, to decide upon an appeal respecting a claim to compensation made by the heads of certain Roman Catholic Colleges in France. It appeared that in 1791 and 1792, when the Ecclesiastical Establishments in France were destroyed, they excepted those in St. Omer, Rouen, Douay, and Paris, which were Catholic Establishments belonging to English residents in France; but by the confiscatory decree of 1793, they, in common with all other religious institutions in France, were abolished and their property confiscated. By the treaty made between England and France in 1814, all the property of foreigners which had been confiscated was ordered to be restored. The professors, and others belonging to the Roman Catholic Colleges, who were English, or were the descendants of English persons, applied to the Commissioners who were appointed to investigate the claims, for compensation for the destruction of those Colleges. The Commissioners, in consequence, after a full consideration of the case, made an award, in which they decided that those Colleges had been established in France for the furtherance of the Roman Catholic religion, and that the English Government would not allow them to be established in England; they therefore awarded, that the claimants had no right to the compensation. From this appeal the Rev. John Daniel, and other heads of those Roman Catholic Seminaries, appealed to the King, in Council, and the matter was argued in July last by Sir Jas. Mackintosh, Mr. Fonblanque, Mr. Carr, and several Civilians. At the meeting of the Council, Lord Gifford gave judgment, which confirmed the award of the Commissioners, and of course rejected the appeal.

Late Fire at Miramichi.—Friday, the 25th ult., the Diana, Lookup, from Miramichi, bound to Dumfries, put into Whitehaven, after a passage of twenty-eight days, having left that settlement on the 22d of October. She brought home sixteen passengers, all Scotch, who escaped the dreadful conflagration. Stoddart, one of these passengers, says that his father, mother, eldest brother, and three sisters, were all burnt to a cinder. Another says that he made his escape from his bed, and got into the water for safety, where he remained several hours, and with difficulty saved himself, even in that opposite element; that during the time of his immersion, the hurricane and fire raged with most frightful violence, and so rapidly did the flames run from place to place, his bedfellow did not succeed in making his escape, and was burnt; indeed, the fire in some places, it is said, literally flew upon the wings of the wind, travelling at least twelve miles an hour. Cows, horses, pigs—in fact all kinds of cattle, were seen, after the fire, floating down the river in large quantities, having sought the water for safety, but there perished. It is impossible, however, another passenger observes, to convey an adeqnate idea of the destruction. The names of several hundreds supposed to have perished had been given in; but no correct and complete account could be obtained up to the time of the sailing of the Diana. It is thought that a great number had perished in the woods. The Diana had a stormy passage, and was ten days in the Channel. The seventeen passengers on board of her who escaped the fire lost every thing. A man and his wife, and three sons and three daughters, belonging to Dumfries, came here on Sunday from the Diana. They say that Captain Lookup's behaviour to them was kind indeed. He not only gave them a free passage, but made them a present of half a guinea to help them home.

Late King of the Sandwich Islands.—Captain F. Arthur, of the American ship Swift, on his return from the coast at Japan, touched at Atooi, one of the Sandwich Islands, about the 20th of June last, and left there on the 26th; a short time prior to which former date, the British frigate commanded by Lord Byron, despatched for the purpose of conveying from England the remains of Rhio Rhio, had arrived at Oahu. The corpse was landed at that island, and immediately deposited in the house of Billy Pitt, prime minister, which house was thereupon strictly taba'd. After having duly lain in state, the funeral was solemnised in the European style—a long and splendid procession was formed, consisting of Europeans, Americans, and natives, who attended the body to the place of sepulture. For the first time, the natives were prohibited, by their chiefs, from exhibiting the customary evidences of grief on such occasions. Of this regulation the natives complained sadly—saying, that if they were not to be permitted to "cry," or utter audible lamentations, their late King might as well have been buried in England. Many European customs had also been introduced, through the influence of Lord Byron, and those chiefs who had visited England. Among the new laws was one allowing to every native the privilege of procuring a market for the produce of his own labour, without first being compelled, as formerly, to bring his commodities to the chiefs. The utmost tranquillity prevailed at the islands. George Tamoree, the late disturber, was going at large, perfectly harmless; though the chiefs cherish a determiuation to destroy him, as soon as the protection of Billy Pitt shall be withdrawn. The young Prince Regent is very much beloved.—American Paper.

Newcastle Colliers.—The differences between the coal-owners and pitmen at Newcastle-on-Tyne is on the size of the measures. A correspondent in the Tyne Mercury gives the following account of the dispute, which the editor says is correct:—"The fact is, at Jarrow Colliery, the peck by which the coal is measured is two quarts above measure; which makes an increase of labour without remuneration to a very great extent. The pitman has threepence-halfpenny for hewing or excavating a corf of coal containing twenty-nine pecks, but in reality the present corves contain twenty-two and a half pecks, as the peck is made to hold 18 quarts. In referring to the table of dry measure, we learn that eight quarts make a peck; now when that is doubled, (which is the custom of the coal-trade), it will make the peck 16 quarts; to this two quarts have been added, and this is the sole and real cause of the present disturbance at Jarrow. I agree with you in condemning the men for leaving their work when under a bond, yet as the masters have set them the example of breaking through the bond by enlarging the measures, how ruinous this is to the workmen will appear by the following calculation. If a pitman hew twelve corves, or 240 pecks, of coals, per day, and every peck is two quarts above measure, he has hewed 480 quarts of coal for nothing. The number of days that a pitman works in the year may amount to 286, at the rate of 11 days a fortnight, which makes at the end of the year 137,280 quarts, 8,580 pecks, or 422 corves, which, at threepence-halfpenny a piece, amounts to six guineas per year, or nearly 2s. 6d. a-week, for which the pitman does not receive one farthing! In a colliery containing upwards of 100 hewers, the owner gains by this method 600l. per annum."

STATE OF THE FUNDS OF THE GWENNAPPE COMPANY.

To amount received on distribution of 1,330 shares, on which deposits of 3l. were paid up	£3,990
To 470 shares allotted, but not yet paid up	1,410
	£5,400
By cash in banker's hands	£2,999
By residue left in the hands of the agent at Cornwall, by order of Directors there. to make the necessary purchases as agreed on by the Directors	1,691
By travelling charges of the deputation sent down to Cornwall	21
By balance in hands of the bankers of Cornwall	79
Deduct for 470 shares not paid up, but for which the funds can be allowed	1,410
	£5,400
 To amount of subscriptions not called for on account of advertising, printing, &c	£120

Transaction rather Suspicious.—A person assuming the title of a baronet, lately sojourned for a few days at an hotel in Cavendish-square, where he hired a carriage from a neighbouring job-master, and made altogether a highly fashionable appearance. In a few days he found it necessary to take an excursion into the country, and for the discharge of some little pressing demands drew a check upon his bankers, which he gave to his host, with a solicitation that it should not be presented for payment unless he did not return in two or three days. After he had left, the landlord, perhaps having some uneasy misgivings, thought he would make inquiries at the bankers', where, to his surprise, he found there were no effects. He immediately called upon his neighbour, and informed him of the transaction. This information was by no means acceptable, as the "baronet" had had for some days in his possession, a carriage and pair belonging to the job-master. He directly commenced an inquiry, and found that his equipage had been taken to Hounslow, from whence his horses had been returned. After the visit to Hounslow, the "baronet," it appeared, had gone to Windsor, and back to Kingston, where he had assumed the character of a foreigner of distinction, unable to speak English sufficiently intelligible for the ordinary business of life, and had therefore employed a youth (supposed to be his son) to act as an interpreter; from thence he was further traced to town, where he stopped in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, and had the horses taken off in the street, and sent home. Here all traces of him were lost. The most minute inquiries have been made at the job-masters' in the vicinity of Bridge-street, but no account of the mode in which he removed the carriage could be learned. We understand a full description of his person will be immediately advertised.

THE ARMY.

Head-quarters, Quebec, Oct. 28, 1825.

GENERAL ORDERS.

The Commander of the Forces has great pleasure in conveying to Lieutenant-Colonel Burer an expression of the high opinion he entertains of the 37th Regiment, on its embarkation from Canada to England.

Some unpleasant circumstances having occurred within these last few years, Lord Dalhousie adverts to them on this occasion, only for the purpose of recording in General Orders, that while these circumstances did exist, they never interfered with the discipline and soldier-like conduct and appearance of the regiment; but these circumstances (he hopes and believes) have now passed away; and the Commander of the Forces feels, on the departure of the 37th, the loss of one of the best disciplined and most efficient regiments under his command. Such are the terms in which he shall report to his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief.

Lord Dalhousie has only to assure Lieutenant-Colonel Burer, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, of the 37th, that they carry with them his cordial good wishes for the happiness and honour of the regiment, wherever it may be called to serve.

(Signed) C. Foster.
Acting Deputy Adjutant-General.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH.

KELLY V. WOOD.

This was an action of assumpsit by the plaintiff, as clerk in the office of a defunct newspaper, called the Nation, against the defendant, as printer and proprietor of it, to recover damages for his services while in that capacity.

Several witnesses were called for the plaintiff, who proved that he had been employed in his office, but could not prove either any express agreement, or how long he had been in his employment.

The Lord Chief Justice, after observing to the Jury that persons so employed, were usually paid from week to week, held that this evidence was not sufficient to charge the defendant.

The plaintiff was therefore nonsuited.

CRIM. CON.—AMBRIDGE V. JAMES.

This was an action to recover damages for criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife.

The parties were persons in the middle class of society.—Ambridge is a butcher in Bloomsbury-market, and James, a publican in the same neighbourhood. The defendant was on terms of intimacy with the plaintiff and his wife. In the month of October, in the year 1824, the defendant about nine in the evening paid a visit to Mrs. Ambridge, and was received by that lady in the absence of her husband. They sat in the parlour upon one chair, and certain familiarities caught the eye of Stephens, the plaintiff's man, which finally led to the discovery of the plaintiff's dishonour. Stephens, who had all the qualities of Peter Pry, had occasion to go into the parlour with some a-la-mode beef, and his curiosity was deeply excited by the unique appearance of his master's rib. He determined to watch, and leaving the room, made a noise to induce the clandestine lovers to believe he had gone up stairs to bed. He then returned softly to the parlour blinds, exalted himself upon a block of wood, and peeping into the parlour, saw the defendant and his mistress in an improper situation.

Mr. Brougham addressed the Jury for the defendant, and contended that the case was unworthy their serious attention. The common tell-tale of the family had told an incredible story, and, under all the circumstances, it was not a case for more than nominal damages.

The Jury retired from the box, and, on their return, found a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, 25l.

THE KING V. SPENCER.

This was an indictment for perjury against the defendant, a painter and glazier in the Hackney-road, preferred at the instance of James Edwards, of Margaret-street, Hackney-fields, a builder. The perjury was assigned on an answer of the defendant to a bill preferred in Chancery by the prosecutors, for the specific performance of an agreement for a lease of land. By that agreement, which bore date on the 25th of March, 1822, the defendant stipulated to grant to the prosecutor a lease of a piece of land, on which he was to build two houses, and give him a right of way across the ditch; and the question was, whether the following words, which had been originally inserted, qualifying this grant, "as long as the same belongs to Mr. Spencer, by paying Mr. Pritchard for the use thereof," were struck out before or after the execution of the agreement. The defendant swore, that they were not erased till after the agreement was executed; and on this perjury was assigned. A former indictment had been tried for the same cause, but the defendant was acquitted on a matter of form.

Mr. Scarlett and Mr. Hutchinson, for the prosecution, called Vaughan, a publican, and who had been an attorney's clerk, one of the subscribing witnesses to the agreement; Ewel, a labourer, the other witness; and Edwards, the prosecutor. Vaughan and Edwards swore that, after the matter had been discussed, the words were erased by Vaughan before the agreement was signed by Spencer; but Ewel stated that Edwards did not put his mark to them till after the erasure, but he did not see Spencer sign at all, or go to the table. The name of Spencer was signed before that of Edwards. There were two parts of the agreement, and that left in the possession of Spencer, being produced by his counsel on notice, exhibited a similar erasure. It appeared that offers had been made to refrain from pressing the criminal charge, if Spencer would execute the lease and pay the costs of the suit in Chancery.

Mr. Gurney, (with whom was Mr. Lawes) addressed the Jury for the defendant, commenting on the discrepancies in the evidence for the prosecution; on the improbability of the defendant granting an absolute right, which he had not to convey; and on the difficulty of giving credit to a case sustained by persons who had used an indictment for perjury as an instrument of torture, to extort from a party a surrender of his civil rights.

Three witnesses of respectability were called, who gave the defendant an excellent character.

The Lord Chief Justice left the case to the Jury, desiring them to give the benefit of any doubt to the defendant.

The Jury, after deliberating for twenty minutes, returned a verdict of Guilty.

IN THE MATTER OF JONATHAN WOOLLER.

The Lord Chief Justice addressed the Bar, and said, that as Mr. Wooller had been waiting several days for an opportunity of being heard upon a motion of some importance, if the Bar had no objection, the Court would now hear him. No objection being offered,

Mr. Wooller came from the Jury Box, where he had been sitting, to the floor, for the purpose of making his motion,

Mr. Wooller stated, that the application he had to make was, for a rule to show cause why a Writ of Mandamus should not issue, directed to the Treasurer and Masters of the Bench of the Hon. Society of Lincoln's-inn, commanding them to admit the individual who had the honour of addressing the Court, as a Member of their Society, for the purpose of qualifying himself to be called to the degree of a Barrister at Law. This application arose out of circumstances, which being verified by affidavit, he would state to the Court. He then stated the following facts, from the affidavits which he held in his hand. In Michaelmas Term, 1824, he made application at the Steward's office of the Society, to have his name enrolled as a member of the Society, and he left a paper containing his name, &c. conformably to the regulations of the Society. He was told to call in a few days, when he would be informed of the result. When he called again, he was told at the office that the Benchers had postponed the consideration of his application till the last day of Term. In a few days after the end of the Term he called again, and was informed that the subject was further postponed until the first council day in the then ensuing and now last Hilary Term, for the purpose of inquiring into the particulars of a similar application which had been made at Gray's-inn. On the second day of Hilary Term he called again, and was then informed by the Steward that his application had been rejected, but he, the Steward, was ignorant of the reasons for such rejection. On January 27, however, he received an official letter from Mr. Lane, the Steward, informing him that he, the Steward, had been directed by the Treasurer and Masters of the Bench of Society to transmit him the Copy of an Order, which was as follows:—"Lincoln's-inn. At a Council held on the 24th of January, 1824, upon a further consideration of the application of Mr. Thomas Jonathan Wooller, to be admitted a Member of this Society, it is ordered, that a letter be written by the Steward to the said Mr. Wooller, informing him that his application to the Society is rejected by the Treasurer, Masters, and Benchers." No reason being assigned for this rejection, and not being aware of any sufficient reason, and he (Mr. Wooller) being anxious to afford every information to the Benchers respecting his character and conduct, as well as to remove any imputation upon his character which such refusal was calculated to cast upon it, on the 27th of January, presented a petition to the Society, praying to be heard upon the subject on his own behalf. In consequence of being unable to procure any answer to his petition, although he was informed by the Steward that it had been duly presented, and deponent despairing of a hearing on the part of the Benchers, he, on the 9th April, addressed a petition to the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer, and the remainder of the 12 Judges, setting forth the circumstances of his case, and praying their Lordships, as visitors of the said Inn of Court, to afford him such redress in the premises, as to their wisdom should seem meet. On the 20th of April last, he received a letter signed "J. Waters," to the following effect:—"The Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench has desired me to inform you, that the Judges have no power to interfere on the present occasion." It appearing, from this note, that the twelve Judges had no power to interfere in his case, he, on the 17th May, addressed another petition to the Benchers collectively, and addressed a copy of it to each, individually, praying an opportunity of being heard upon the matter of his former application; or that the Society would assign their reasons for the refusal to admit him a member. He was subsequently informed, verbally, by the Steward, that his second petition had been rejected by the Council, without any reason for such objection being assigned. Under these circumstances, deponent having sustained serious injury, and being likely to suffer still more grievously in his future prospects in life, from the rejection of his application in the manner stated, he felt that the only legal mode of redress left him was to apply to this Honourable Court for a Mandamus.

Mr. Wooller then argued, at some length, in favour of the right of the Judges to interfere.

As soon as Mr. Wooller had concluded, the Lord Chief Justice told him that he had addressed the Court with great propriety, and in a manner which was highly creditable to him.

After remaining in deliberation for a few minutes, the Judges delivered their opinions seriatim, that they had no jurisdiction to grant a Mandamus. As the reasons given by all the Judges were the same, it is unnecessary to give them in detail. The Judges were all of opinion, that the Society being, in the language of Lord Mansfield, "a voluntary Society," this Court had no jurisdiction to compel them to admit members against their own inclination, even supposing their refusal should be perverse. The very character of "voluntary," implied a negation of the right of this tribunal to interfere in the proceedings of such a Society. It was true that the twelve Judges were the visitors of the Inns of Court, but that was only in matters relating to actually admitted members. The words "submission to government," as used by Lord Mansfield, meant submission to such rules and regulations as were ordained for the internal government of the Society; but did not mean a submission to any ordinances of a foreign jurisdiction. If, indeed, a person had an inchoate right to be admitted a member, that might be perfected by the twelve Judges as visitors. But Mr. Wooller had no inchoate abstract right to be admitted a member of a voluntary Association, and therefore he had no locus standi to insist upon being admitted. The same rule applied to corporations. A stranger, wishing to become a member of a corporation, had no inchoate right to be admitted to trade, or for any other purposes. The cases cited had no analogy to the present, for in all of them the persons applying to the Court were actually members of the Society, and sought something to which, as members, they were entitled. But it was never heard of, that a mere stranger had a right, abstractedly, to be admitted a member of an Inn of Court, of an University, or of a Corporation. If, indeed, the applicant had been admitted a member of the Society for a particular purpose, and had conformed to its government, then he would have an inchoate right, which, in the absence of any satisfactory reason to the contrary, might be perfected; but here no ground of that kind had been laid before the Court, and therefore a mandamus would not lie. Rule refused.

Sittings after Michaelmas Term, before the Lord Chief Justice and a Common Jury.

CONSPIRACY.

THE KING V. VICTOR BERTRAND, AND ELIZABETH VIRGINIE PERROTT.

This was an indictment against the defendants, for having conspired together to prefer a false and malicious indictment against the prosecutor, James Askew, for felony.

The circumstances, which had established and maintained a business connection between the plaintiff and the female defendant, and the subsequent differences, were proved by witnesses. We decline going into particulars, the whole having been brought before the public in the trial which led to the present action.

The record was put in and read; it stated that an indictment had been preferred against the present prosecutor, for having stolen several articles of jewellery and plate, and also some notes of the Bank of France, the property of Virginie Perrott.—Askew was acquitted.

Mr. Brougham having been heard for the defendants,

Mr. Jessop replied.

His Lordship summed up very minutely, and contrasted the evidence on both sides as he went on. If the Jury believed that the articles mentioned in the indictment preferred against Askew had been stolen from Miss Perrott's drawers, no matter by whom, the defendants would be entitled to an acquittal; but if the Jury should be of opinion that such articles had not been left in the drawers, then the defendants must be found guilty.

The Jury having retired for a few minutes, returned a verdict of Guilty against both defendants.

Mr. Baron Graham has been so unwell, as not to be able to attend the Court of Exchequer for the last week. The Hon. Baron is now in the 82d year of his age, and has gone through the laborious duties of a Judge nearly twenty-seven years. It is said he will retire before the next term, he being the first Judge that will enjoy the liberal salary allowed by the country to Judges on retiring from office. Mr. Tindal is spoken of among the bar as likely to succeed him.

The Plymouth Chronicle of Saturday last says—"We are much concerned to state that the banking-house of Sir William Elford, Bart. and Co. stopped payment yesterday. From the high respectability of the parties, it is to be hoped that the creditors will not be eventually losers."

The failure of the highly-respectable firm of Messrs. Davison and Dowsland was announced on Tuesday at the Foreign Stock Exchange. The circumstance caused much regret, these gentlemen having established, by their general transactions, a character for the greatest honour and integrity, and by having, in a recent instance, voluntarily discharged large debts, with the accumulated interest, for which no legal claim could be made on them. We understand that the present difficulties, which have been principally brought on by the rapid depreciation in foreign securities, are likely to be adjusted in a satisfactory manner to all concerned.

(For Promotions, see the last page.)

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS.

W. J.'s communications are of too general a nature, and the contents of that on the DUKE OF ST. ALBAN'S was forestalled in the first Number of our Paper. They are left for him at the Office; but we shall, nevertheless, be glad to hear again from him.

DURHAM informs us that LAMBTON, in the late alterations at his Hall, has filled the passages of the house with niches, so that when his august presence meets the menials, they can retire out of the way. He moreover intends to make up 201 beds, to outtop the DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE. We hope the odd one is for his particular friend MR. JOHN MILLS.

PAUL PRY, JUNIOR, came too late for insertion.

We know nothing of the person to whom that impudent fellow STOCKDALE addressed a communication at our Office.

Other favours are under consideration.

THE AGE.

LONDON, DECEMBER 4.

Whenever any of that curious, industrious, and money-hunting class of labourers, the Society of Friends, travel any distance, or for any length of time, out of their grain and discount districts, the sensible and discerning persons of the world look out for CANT. The fair inference or suspicion, if not the ipso facto proof, is, that the pious missionaries are seeking some equivalent for the neglect of their ordinary vocations;—nor is the object in view always to be detected on the surface of the transactions; for the English Quaker, like that little creature the mole, is ever working under ground,—the Quaker is taught no catechism in his early years, and is therefore unused to answer queries: a sect separated from mammon, by the insurmountable barriers of their own peculiar manners and opinions, they naturally consider the world at large as an enemy; and their assaults for a portion of the good things of life are always under masked batteries. Ask the Quaker a certain question, and it is a hundred to one that, like the barometer with its consulters, it answers one totally different. "Friend, does the sun shine this morning?" will be rejoined to by "Friend, did the moon shine last night?" Their language also is peculiar—the words spiritual and temporal with them are synonymes, only they prefer the use of the former from its popular effect. All their parts of speech are secundum artem.

These reflections have occurred to us on reading in the provincial prints an account of the proceedings of various public meetings at Birmingham, Stourbridge, Kidderminster, and other towns in the midland counties, (not forgetting PEEPING TOM of Coventry,) on the subject of the equalization of the duties on East and West Indian sugar, and on accomplishing the entire abolition of the Slave Trade. The worthy persons, the Dramatis Personæ at these motley groups of Quakers, Presbyterians, and Church-Evangelicals, have been chiefly got into a common pound by a wandering Quaker, one JAMES CROPPER, the son and partner of a Liverpool East Indian merchant of a similar persuasion. It is undeniably a singular and unlucky coincidence, only a coincidence, that "JAMES CROPPER" should be a member of a family extensively interested in the East India trade—but reader, indulge not in unholy suspicions; it is impossible that the member of a religious community, notable for its contempt of wordly traffic and self-interest, can have any sinister end in these righteous perambulations. No ingenuous, simple-minded persons can for a moment suspect that friend JAMES CROPPER is scheming how to turn to better account the next crops of his East India sugar cane: whoever indulges in such impure suspicions, verily deserves to be well caned for his trouble—but here is an ugly fact staring us in the face—the connection of CROPPER SENIOR, and all the little CROPPERS with the East Indies; and it naturally induces us to advise friend JAMES to divert his philanthropy from the West to the more orthodox point of the compass, the East, and for which we shall give him some goodly reasons.

Now what do these country folk, the babbling echoes of the Society of Friends, know of the subject of their "resolutions" and "petitions?" No more than the Old Times affects to know of the parlour gossip of the Directors of the Bank of England—nothing but what a few female missionaries in mob caps and bombazine garments, deposit in their morning calls from door to door, in the shape of tracts, and extracts from old ZAC. MAC. and SON. "As you value your souls," say these pious women, "discontinue the use of West India sugar; it will otherwise embitter thy future taste and prospects. Discontinue its use, that is the title to salvation, and that the mode of totally abolishing the wicked slave system, which tears husbands from the embraces of their wives, and infants from the breasts of their mothers!" So the wind and cant of Public Meetings rises in the bustle of these stiff pieces of primitive simplicity. The country husbands are then inoculated with the virus of philanthropy. Requisitions for public meetings are put about: JACOB, the tanner, signs the requisition, because OBADIAH the banker has, and JACOB would not that OBADIAH should be a greater man than himself. Then all the town orators seize the favourable opportunity of exercising their powers and propensities; thousands of fools afterwards, following the leader, then sign the parchments, because they never before executed a deed! and because Magna Charta has guaranteed to them a right of petition, which would grow rusty if not occasionally used. "All the country rises," as old Major CARTWRIGHT, deceased, was wont to exclaim. Such are the humbug consequences of the exertions of a few crimp widows, and stiff reputed old maids—Quakeresses—Oh, would to Heaven that his present MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY would renew the proclamation of one of our early Monarchs against the gossipping of women. But to be serious. We will give our promised reasons to our friend JAMES CROPPER on the advisableness of his future silence, and for his turning his itinerant exertions into another channel, or, at all events, being consistent with the habits of a Quaker's meeting—mum. Now we shall say nothing on the absurd and pure ignorance of the petitioners as to the relative interests of the Planters and Negroes, or on the practicability of any immediate emancipation of the slave population; of course the murder of a few hundred thousand Whites would be comparatively unimportant with the emancipation of the Black men; but Mr. JAMES CROPPER'S great argument for the reduction of the bounty on West India sugar is, that East India sugar is the produce of free labour, and West India sugar of Negro labour! Now let JAMES CROPPER read the following extracts from the work of Dr. BUCHANAN, as quoted in the able pamphlet by JOSEPH MARRYAT, Esq. M.P. in reply to the Saints. Dr. BUCHANAN'S authority is unimpeached. He was employed by the Marquis of WELLESLEY, and from his official character and great acquirements, travelling throughout India, is the best possible evidence on the subject. His publication appeared in 1807, and not only proves the existence of slavery, but that the greater part of the agricultural labour of the provinces through which he passed, and where SUGAR is an important article of cultivation, is performed by SLAVES!

"LOWER CARNATIC.

"Their farms they chiefly cultivate by slaves of the inferior castes, called Sudra and Panchum Bundum."—Vol. i. p. 19.

"MALABAR.

"From an enumeration of the inhabitants in one of the districts of Malabar, given by Mr. Baber, the number of persons in each house is three 6755-10,000 parts. This would reduce the number of free persons in

Mr. Warden's circle to	78,925
Add slaves	16,574
Total inhabitants	95,499

—Vol. ii. p. 3.

"By far the greatest part of the labour in the field is performed by slaves or churmar. These are the absolute property of their devarus or lords; and may be employed in any work that their masters please. They are not attached to the soil, but transferred in any manner their masters think fit; only a husband and a wife cannot be sold separately, but children may be separated from their parents, and brothers from their sisters. These are their modes of transferring the usufruct of slaves."

The author then proceeds at considerable length, and concludes thus:—

"These two tenures are utterly abominable; for the person who exacts the labour and furnishes the subsistence of the slaves, is directly interested to increase the former and diminish the latter, as much as possible. In fact, the slaves are very severely treated; and their diminutive stature and squalid appearance, show evidently a want of adequate nourishment. There can be no comparison between their condition and that of the slaves in the West India islands; except that in Malabar there are a sufficient number of females, who are allowed to marry any person of the same caste with themselves, and whose labour is always exacted by their husband's master; the master of the girl having no authority over her, so long as she lives with another man's slave."—Vol. ii. p. 370—372.

"MANAPURAM.

"At Manapuram a slave when thirty years old, costs about 100 fanams, or 2l. 14s. 7d.; with a wife he costs double; children sell at from 15 to 40 fanams, or from from 8s. 2½d. to 21s. 10d. A working slave gets daily three-tenths of a poray of rough rice, or about 36½ bushels a-year. He also gets annually one fanam for oil, and 1¼ fanam for cloth, which is just sufficient to wrap round his waist. If he be active, he gets cloth worth two fanams; and at harvest time from 5 to 6 porays of rough ice. Old people and children get from one to two-thirds of the above allowance, according to the work they can perform."—Vol. ii. p. 406, 407.

"KERAKUM-PURAM, KADAKUM-PURAM, AND PORAWAY.

"There are 4765 slaves, making the population in all 31,097."—Vol. ii. p. 485.

"NORTH MALABAR.

"The yearly allowance here established for a slave is, of rough rice, to able-bodied men, 148½ cubical inches; to able-bodied women, 103½; to old persons and children, 74¼. The average will be 18 4-10ths. bushels, of which one half is husks."—Vol. ii. p. 491.

"CURUMBARA NADA.

"In Curumbara Nada almost all the farmers (cudians) have slaves; there are a very few only that are reduced to the necessity of labouring with their own hands. Male slaves sell at from twenty to sixty old vir-raya fanams, or from 9s. 6d½. to 28s. 8d.; women sell at only one half of this low price. A male slave lets at four fanams a-year, and a woman at half as much; the persons who hire them providing for their maintenance."—Vol. ii. p. 495.

"CANAMORE AND CHERICAL.

"The number of houses is 10,386, and there are 4,600 slaves. The panicars (or hired men) are frequently flogged; and as their masters are not bound to provide for them in old age or during famine, they seem to be in a worse condition than the slaves. They work from morning till noon, when they are allowed an hour for breakfast; then they work until evening, and all night they watch the crop."—Vol. ii. p. 56.

"TULAVA.

"The cultivation is chiefly carried on by culiaber, or hired servants; but there are also some maladalu, bought men or slaves."—Vol. iii. p. 35.

"Having assembled some of the corar or coraivar, who, under their chief Hubashica, are said to have once been masters of Tulava; I found that they are now all slaves, and have lost every tradition of their former power."—Vol. iii. p. 100.

"HAIGA.

"In the farms of the Brahmans, most of the labour is performed by slaves."—Vol. iii. p. 148.

"SOONDA.

"Farmers, who are not Brahmans, unless their farms be large, work the whole with their own families; but rich men must hire servants, or keep slaves. Men slaves receive yearly an allowance of rice, clothes, and money, equal to 2l. 8s. 7½d., the women 8s. 1d."—Vol. iii. p. 243.

"BIDDERURU.

"There are very few hired servants, but a good many slaves, by whom, on the farms of the Brahmans, all the ploughing is performed."—Vol. iii. p. 280.

Not only does slavery prevail here, as above described, but Mr. MARRYATT and Dr. BUCHANAN show that the condition of the East India slaves is far worse than that of the West India negroes! And the detail of the horrors that happen in the above districts would be sufficient to cast friend CROPPER'S convex aquiline nose concave, and to turn him black in the face, if the circulation which originally went through his heart has not too long been diverted through his pockets! His own molasses are thus kneeded by the toes of slaves, and thickened with their sweat. If friend CROPPER be consistent, let him cross the ocean, and labour for the mitigation of East India slave horrors—let him prove his text by doffing his broad black brim and his skin-fitting indescribables, for the white straw hat and folds of chaste nankeen—let him bestow his bounties and labours there, or let him go home, and attend to his PRIVATE duties.

We have the Statute of Limitations, the Statute of Frauds, the Statute of Uses, and the Swindling Statute; we cannot however but suggest that in the intended consolidation of the laws there be speedily framed a Statute against HUMBUG. We consider this a most important subject for the Parliamentary enquiry of a Committee—we recommend it to the attention of JOSEPH HUME: he would doubtless make a figure on that subject, with PETER MOORE, MICHAEL ANGELO TAYLOR, F. BUXTON, and other able Committee men. Dr. EADY, Dr. CONQUEST, GOFF and Co., and the Directors of the Joint Stock Companies, with Lord NUGENT, will afford the necessary evidence for a good report.

But, not to forget the subject of this excessive long paragraph, we recommend the Quakeresses to desist from their tract-dropping, or they will doubtless get the character of street-walkers. We warn our amiable readers that part of this scheme (and indeed of every thing of the sort) is subscription. We remind them of the vulgar but true adage, "that when the Devil fishes for men he baits his hook with women." And thus we have pointed out, to the best of our ability, how his MAJESTY'S liege subjects are pigeoned, to use a cant phrase, or, as old ISAAC WALTON says, in the Angler, "there be tame and wild pigeons; and of tame, there be croppers, carriers, runts!"

A gentleman, who was congratulating Sir W. CURTIS, a day or two ago, on the beauty of his yacht, his residence at Ramsgate, and other of the worthy BARONET'S expenditures, remarked, "Altogether, Sir WILLIAM, you manage to astonish the NATIVES!" To which the ALDERMAN replied, "Yes, my friend, I do—for I sometimes eat four dozen of them for LUNCHEON!"

DIURNALIA.

We have been prevented for the last week or two from "culling the beautics" of our contemporaries, to make room for a display of our own; but a full examination of the respective merits of each induces us to yield the palm to some of our brethren, and we accordingly introduce a few of their late lucubrations. Before we enter into particulars, we beg to quote the following paragraph from yesterday's Morning Chronicle:—

Speaking of the Press, the CHIEF JUSTICE said, that in this country "it is the child of the Government, and it gives the most valued, the most effectual support to its parent, which cannot well exist without it." We do not very exactly comprehend all this, but if the Press is the child of the Government, Government has certainly of late begotten some very naughty children. ALL the licentious offspring are Government's own boys!! There is the John Bull, the Church and State's own pet; and there is also, for nice Sunday reading, a Ministerial Paper, whose staple is a mixture of the most revolting loathsome obscenity and malignity, which has more vice than the John Bull, and not one particle of its smartness. In the periodicals, monthly and quarterly, again, it will also be observed, that those attached to Government are the most distinguished for seurrility and grossness!!!

Without entertaining the question of the licentiousness of John Bull, the other nameless Sunday Paper, or "the periodicals attached to Government," it will be sufficient to examine the purity of the Chronicle—the result of which will be, an universal admission, we are inclined to believe, that "all the licentious offspring of the Press are" not "Government's own boys." If any one, but the Editor of that Paper, can be found bold enough to differ with this opinion, he has only to look through its columns for the last twenty years, and he will see a compilation of language that will almost paralyze his intellect—he will meet, in almost every one of its publications, libels of the filthiest nature—a series of the grossest attacks, by that little low monkey TOM MOORE, and other of its scribes, on his Most Gracious MAJESTY and the principal characters in his Court and Cabinet—inroads made into the very chambers of its political antagonists, and the most outrageous calumnies published thereon. But in case the reader might wish to select any particular specimens, let him peruse the pages of that Journal in the year 1812, especially those of Feb. 6, March 12, and March 27; then again, particularly the Paper of Oct. 11, 1821; and "last not least," that of the 27th of last August, and he will then agree with an adage, proverbial in the land which gave birth to the obscene Editor of the Morning Chronicle, (and now and then quoted by him) that "the GREATEST THIEF cries fastest fie." Now then to our task. In a late number of the Times appeared the following touch, as to the proper mode of meeting the late advance on Porter:—

"We maintain, that in order to meet this combination, by which porter is raised one part in ten, workmen and labourers of every description ought to have one shilling in every ten added to their wages."

According, therefore, to this Cockney calculation, a workman who may gain 1*l.* 10s. per week, is entitled to an extra three shillings, because porter has risen about a half-penny per pot—a specimen of arithmetic by which every labourer is made to swallow seventy-two pots of porter in a week, or something more than TEN pots per day!

From this display, we come to our inexhaustible friend The Morning Post, from whose pages of Tuesday last, we glean this passage:—

"The small-pox has of late carried off several children in London, not very much to the credit of their parents."

We are not prepared to decide how far it may be creditable in parents to allow the small-pox to "carry off several of their children," but there can be no doubt, surely, that children are very often carried off in a way not half as much to the credit of either party, as the said unfortunate disorder. In another number of this paper has appeared the following remark, which for sagacity, and, above all, research, is far beyond any thing we have met with, for a considerable lapse of time:—

"A fishing boat of Boulogne has picked up at sea three anchors marked with the years 1470, and 1660. They were covered with rust, and appeared to belong to some vessels of war which had perished in a naval conflict."

Most people have heard of their fellow-creatures perishing in all situations, and under all circumstances—but the idea of a ship PERISHING, is at once a novelty of the most agreeable nature—poor thing! With the subjoined passage we terminate our gatherings from the Post:—

"NATIVE POLITENESS.—A servant girl at a little inn in a very obscure part of the country, was asked how it happened that the house was so full, it not being assize time. She replied, "I suppose I must not say it is the goodness of the house, therefore it must be the goodness of the gentlemen."

It appears by this servant-girl's account, that the gentlemen are what is familiarly termed "good-natured" at the little inns in a very obscure part of the country, as well in the crowded streets of the Metropolis, and on that account are, as the Post says, specimens of NATIVE POLITENESS. We regret extremely that our limits will not admit of our inserting all the good things which the Morning Herald daily submits to the perusal of mankind, but we should be wanting in common respect to its genius, if we omitted to introduce the following:—

LINES WRITTEN BY A HIGLY-GIFTED AND TALENTED YOUNG LADY ON QUITTING BOARDING SCHOOL!!!

Farewell, companions of my early hours,
With whom I've sipp'd life's fresh and morning dew;
Though coming years may strew my path with flowers,
No friends can e'er be half so dear as you.
Oft in one basin have we wash'd our hands;
Conn'd from one page the History of Rome;
Search'd in one map for undiscover'd lands;
Or plough'd our sheep-walks with a COMMON COMB!
In lowly tone together, half afraid,
Oft have we curs'd our governess's reign;
Or, in some hidden corner's private shade,
Skulk'd from the scare-crow scolding of Miss Jane.
Ah! sacred sorrows, welcome woes, adieu!
Lighten'd by fondest ties of sympathy;
If WHIPPING came to me, it came to you;
If you had double lessons, so had I.
Farewell to writing, ciphering, and themes!
Blest be the hand which taught each useful art!
Still his sweet visage smiles upon my dreams,
Still his LOV'D FORM is treasured in my heart!!!
But, hark! the bell. I dare not venture more;
Fresh duties call me, and new scenes await.
I come, I come! Mamma is at the door;
Another stanza now might make me late.
Yet hold: companions knit in friendship's bond,
Poll, Patty, Bet, Georgina, Rose, Maria,
Let's swear eternally to correspond,
And put each others letters in the fire.—E. ætatis 16.

What particular boarding-school this "highly-gifted and talented young lady" has just left, does not appear on the cards; but considering that, by her own account, the scholars all "washed their hands in one basin," used a common comb for their hair, cursed their governess, and "skulked from her scarecrow scolding" into some private shade; got whipped, and indulged in other ladylike propensities, we should conclude it must be one of the leading and most respectable seminaries of the metropolis, or its environs. Nor is the talent of this YOUNG LADY below her refinement, for in addition to her companions, "POLL, PATTY, and BET," we find MARIA pressed into the service for the purpose of rhyming with fire, to which devouring element it is proposed that the future correspondence of these "school-fellows" shall be consigned—and, all things considered, we deem such a proposition highly creditable to the parties concerned. The name of this lady is not disclosed, which is a circumstance much to be lamented; but, as far as a guess may be ventured, we should imagine her to be some near RELATIVE of that splendid genius who edits the Morning Herald!

(To be continued ad libitum.)

DREADFUL CALAMITY AT BATH.

There are but one debtor and four prisoners charged with misdemeanours, in Bath City Gaol at this time; a circumstance which has not occurred for many years past.—Morning Post.

Mr. STANHOPE has been very foolishly advised to publish what he styles his statement, relative to the late preferment against him by the Marquis of HERTFORD; and, in case the truth of it might be at all called in question, has affixed to it the verification of his brother. By this "statement," the interference of Sir RICHARD BIRNIE, taking into consideration the oath made by him to the Court, becomes somewhat questionable; and, indeed, we have no hesitation in saying, that we consider it incumbent on this Magistrate to step forward immediately, and by another affidavit, embracing the main points contained in Mr. STANHOPE'S account, to contradict those assertions, on the present view of the case so derogatory to the proper conduct of Sir RICHARD, and decidedly at variance with the facts, as detailed by Lord HERTFORD, in his late appeal to the Court of King's Bench—while, with reference to the peculiar situation of Mr. STANHOPE, we really think, by his own shewing, that, it is fully proved to be as despicable, as it was before believed to be, and, as far as any reference it may bear to Lord HERTFORD, it distinctly shews throughout a kind feeling, on his LORDSHIP'S part, to the open and established enemy of himself and his family. The COURT MARTIAL assembled to try Mr. STANHOPE, under authority of the Duke of WELLINGTON, was composed of men on whom all the influence of Lord HERTFORD and fifty equally powerful peers could not have had the slightest effect—they were congregated by their honour, to try a fellow soldier for an outrageous breach of his; and we have reasons to know that they were disposed, at their onset, in the most favourable manner towards the peculiar situation of this person; but when the particulars of his fault came under their scrutiny, it was too glaring to be for an instant compromised; and Mr. STANHOPE must now be as devoid of reason, as he was then of principle, to suppose any nobleman able, even were he so inclined, to counteract the fiat ot such a distinguished tribunal, and restore him to that rank in the army, the splendour of which he has so fatally sullied. There is a most contemptible and unworthy juggle in this statement, wherein it will be seen Mr. STANHOPE consented to discontinue fall insult to LORD HERTFORD, at the united intercession of his father and the DUKE of WELLINGTON—while a few months after this promise, he violates it by offering another indignity, which he palliates to SIR RICHARD BIRNIE, by saying it was not the "particular insult," he had given his word to forbear: and on reviewing, therefore, the whole transaction, as detailed by Mr. STANHOPE, we are induced again to direct SIR RICHARD'S attention to the immediate filing of an additional affidavit, wherein this "statement," will be rendered nugatory, and the original offence, on which it is founded, as firmly established, and much more fully developed.

GENEERAL MACQUARRIE AND MR. HENRY GREY BENNETT.

Some persons were lately perusing the book*,
GREY BENNETT about "Transportation" once wrote,
When MACQUARRIE chanced over its pages to look,
Thinking, now, 'twas a SUBJECT its author might quote.
When the GENERAL said, "It is clearly a pack
"Of falsehoods, on every view of the case,
"And its writer has just done behind a man's back,
"What I'm certain he would not have done to his face!"

* See Mr. BENNETT'S "Letter to Lord BATHURST," published by RIDGWAY, and General MACQUARRIE'S reply thereto, published by REES.

With a degree of the most consummate quackery imaginable the Morning Herald has increased the size of it columns, till its appearance resembles a large dirty table cloth, and being quite at a loss how to fill up the space of its enlargement, resorts to every species of shift to eke out its matter. In furtherance of this plan, we find the subjoined statement in that Journal of Wednesday last:—

"The book trade was never known to be in so depressed a state as at the present time. The Bank of England has refused for the last three weeks to discount any bookseller's bill. Nothing can be more confirmatory of the falling off in the bookselling business than the fact of the two principal booksellers, Constable and Murray, having become number publishers. This state of things has no doubt been brought about by the refusal of the respectable newspapers to put into the newspapers paragraphs puffing off books except the word "Advertisement" was prefixed to such puffing paragraphs."

The real cause of the insertion of such a mischievous and false assertion, is the projected establishment of a new Morning Paper, under the favourable auspices of Mr. MURRAY; who, unable any longer to contend with the impertinences of the Times, and other Journals enriched by the advertisements of himself and the different booksellers, has entertained the very spirited idea of introducing a new Ministerial print, of the success of which the most flattering hopes are indulged; but even this consideration is no cause for the publication of any report so very atrocious. The statement of the Bank refusing to discount any bookseller's bill is A ROUND LIE—for no such refusal has ever been made; but on the contrary, their bills to a very considerable amount have been regularly discounted every Wednesday during the last year; and as to the decline of their business, it is universally known, that the Printers are now unable to accept all the different orders offered them, owing to the prodigious quantity of business already on their hands. The wealth of such houses as the two in question, and of Messrs. LONGMAN, HURST and ROBINSON, WHITTAKER, LACKINGTON and others, is sufficient evidence against the attacks of such a miserable driveller as this; but while it falsifies the assertion, it does not render its malice one jot less apparent—for even if there had been the shadow of a reason for any such remark, it should have been scrupulously withheld by a paper in the receipt of at least 2,000*l.* per annum from the advertisements of these respectable tradesmen whose credit it has dared thus wantonly to assail—nor is the reason assigned by this Journal the least insolent part of the opinion it has disseminated, for not a day passes but the Morning Herald (to say nothing of any other paper), either by long extracts or paragraphs, without affixing the word advertisement, attempts to raise an interest for any publication, the publisher of which will pay for the insertion of such preliminary puff. The reference to that eminent bookseller, Mr. MURRAY, being about to publish numbers, is one of those pretty blunders which only a confirmed Cockney could commit. The fact is, Mr. MURRAY has had ready for publication, for the last fifteen months, numbers detailing the travels of our countrymen to the Polar Seas, and if this ignorant scribe could but see the splendid manner in which the work has been prepared, he would blush for appearing in the light of such a fool, who could for an instant arraign the credit and prosperity of the most eminent tradesmen in the empire.

THEATRICALS.

Whether instigated by the appearance of MOORE'S late libels on SHERIDAN, or, with the usual temporary foresight of Managers, by an expectation of attracting public attention by acting his plays, in the same degree little TOMMY lately has by writing his life, we are not quite prepared to decide; but certain it is, that the directors of our two theatres have made an effort this week to give effect to the two fine comedies of this writer—the School for Scandal and The Rivals; the first of which was represented at Drury-lane on Wednesday last, in a manner entirely unworthy of the play or the theatre, and smacking altogether of that dangerous system of management, on the ruinous effects of which we have dilated repeatedly during the present season. The cast of the DRAMATIS PERSONÆ was a perfect burlesque on the talents of the representatives; for, in the first place, although we had been prepared by prefatory puffs, in most of the daily papers, for Miss KELLY'S appearance in Lady Teazle, we felt assured she was unequal to the task, and the persuasion turned out precisely what we anticipated, nor could it possibly be otherwise—the range of character which this delightful actress has made exclusively her own, is so opposed to the one assumed on this occasion, that the actress was combating human nature, and consequently standing up against the exercise of her own great knowledge of life. It is no disparagement of Miss KELLY'S abilities to say, that her Lady Teazle was a total failure—her success in such a part would have negatived her excellence in that walk of her profession she has rendered so illustrious; but the fault has been in the Manager's allowing the mummery to occur, while such a representative as the Theatre possesses was acting another character in the same play, and further, in Miss KELLY'S allowing herself to be made the instrument of such a monstrous blunder—she never could act a fine lady, and it is a very old saying about her, that "FANNY KELLY is an angel, and Miss KELLY—the devil." We have almost the same fault to find with DOWTON'S Sir Peter—he cannot act the character, while his Sir Oliver Surface is a perfect picture—we are, consequently, compelled to sit him out in a part he is totally unfitted for, and, what is even worse, "a miserable sinner" in the very part with which he has become identified. It is not our purpose to examine the exact quantum of merit among the other male representatves on this trying occasion, inasmuch as it would bother us to find it out; but with reference to one other individual, we mean Mrs. DAVIDSON, we cannot avoid expressing our perfect satisfaction at her performance of Mrs. Candour, though, at the same time, we must record our regret at the unnecessary insult offered her, by the substitution of another name for hers in one of her very finest pieces of acting; and the offence is even aggravated, when we know there was no real necessity for so doing. The union of two such names as hers and Miss KELLY'S, in one play, is doubtlessly highly desirable; but it ceases to be so, when, by so doing, they are both removed from their proper and peculiar sphere.

On the same evening the Rivals was performed at COVENT GARDEN, and in many respects quite as inadequately—for, as in the other instance, the trumpery puffs that had been circulated, day after day, relative to its revival, induced the press-ridden blockheads who adjudge a play by other people's opinions, to expect from this representation effects that were sure not to be realized. The Sir Anthony of WILLIAM FARREN, and the Captain Absolute of CHARLES KEMBLE, are perfect performances; but, with those exceptions, and the Mrs. Malaprop of Mrs. DAVENPORT, the whole thing was a sad mess—for although, through JONES'S indisposition, BLANCHARD was something amusing in Acres, yet the part is totally out of his way, and, as in Miss KELLY'S case, his perfection in opposite characters rendered his failure in this more conspicuous; and then, nothing can be conceived more insipid than COOPER'S Falkland; he is an actor, in most respects, dependent for effect on a fine voice, and this is a part that admits of no opportunity for its exercise; and of the other gentlemen it will be only necessary to observe, that POWER would have played Sir Lucius infinitely better than CONNOR did, and the bill-sticker would have enacted David better than that worst of all horrors, Mr. MEADOWS. It hath pleased Mr. KEMBLE to take under his especial patronage two ladies of the name of JONES, and to introduce them on all occasions—we do not pretend to divine the reason, but it must be something highly commanding that could authorize the announcement of MISS A. JONES for Julia—it was, as may be well imagined, a pretty good sample of the bathos, and was only kept in countenance by the personation of Lydia Languish by MADAME VESTRIS—sad work all this. Mrs. CALCRAFT, who is the best actress of the bunch, should have played the one part, and MISS LACY have acted the other. While on the subject of this latter lady, we perceive that although Love's Victory is withdrawn, its author is taking proper care of MISS LACY for her protection of the principal character in it, and accordingly, in a copy of verses to her in Wednesday's Post, we find the following complimentary lines:

"Thy skill
Could in thy cause each feeling so employ,
That while they mocked thy former folly, still
All felt themselves partakers of thy joy."

The subjoined advertisement also appeared in the Post of Wednesday :—

ACCADEMIA DI CANTO, 21, DOVER-STREET, PICCADILLY,
(LATE RESIDENCE OF MR. GARCIA.)

Signor VELLUTI has the honour to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry that the above Ladies' Singing Academy will re-open on Monday, December 5, under his immediate direction, and on a method EXCLUSIVELY his own. In the acquirement of a perfect knowledge of the Art of Singing, of Musical Pronunciation, of Recitative and Expression, in which the chief beauty and excellence of that art consist, he will be assisted by Mr. GRAHAM, late with Mr. GARCIA.

Particulars may be known every day from One till Three, at No. 21, Dover-street.

Although a great many people have translated ACCADEMIA DI CANTO—the School of Cant, yet we need hardly say such translation is incorrect, while we may safely recommend its pretensions to the attention of Ladies, and assure them that Signor VELLUTI's method of doing business, as his advertisement implies, is exclusively his own. There has been a monstrous to do in America, as appears by the papers just arrived, on the subject of Mr. KEAN's expected appearance in that refined country, and from the many pro's and con's which have been squibbed about from one end of the United States to the other, this selection from a paper called the Democratic Press, is certainly the most amusing :—

"Mr. Binns.—In the American Sentinel I read an article abusing Kean, the tragedian, in a style of bitterness and wantonness, which was to me unaccountable, until looking at the head of the article I found it was taken from a London newspaper, called the John Bull, which is the most decided ultra-monarchical print in England. This print has, it avows, always been the enemy and opponent of Mr. Kean. It does not now oppose him for any belief in his criminal conduct or immorality, but it opposes him, as it always has done, from other considerations. What are those considerations? Ought they to have influence in the United States? I will tell you, Sir, what the considerations are, and then the people and you may determine whether they ought to influence the conduct of the people of this country.

"Kean is an ardent, and in England an intemperate opposer of the Government. He does not love monarchy—he does not admire a church establishment—but he does love republican principles, and admire republican Governments; and it is for these things that he is hated by the John Bull, and other high-toned monarchical prints. Let these facts be known and remembered.

"AN ENGLISHMAN."

Who the devil Mr. BINNS is, we have not the remotest idea; but if he, or any brother Yankee, imagine for one moment, that it ever enters our heads what principles a strolling player professes (probably because we are aware they, for the most part, have no principle at all), or what he is, beyond his art, unless he mixes up his private circumstances in the exhibition of such art, he must be a greater lout than we ever fancied his countrymen, for the most part, to be. The affectation altogether of Jonathan is the most diverting thing which has lately manifested itself in that bright country

Our limits will not admit of our enlarging on the merits of a most successful piece, entitled Hans of Iceland, at the Olympic Theatre, or the attraction created by the engagement of Mr. WILKINSON and Mrs. WAYLETT; but we shall do so hereafter. The scenery here is a perfect treat to look at.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS, MONDAY.
JUDGMENTS.

RENNELL V. THE BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

The Court delivered judgment in this case this morning.—The argument on the case occupied the Bar for a long time during the two or three last terms, and their Lordships took nearly three hours this morning in delivering their judgments seriatim. The question was whether the wife and administratrix of the late Rector of Weldon and Prebend of South Grantham, in the Cathedral Church of Salisbury, had the right of presentation to the living of Weldon.

The Judges, in giving their opinions, took a retrospective view of the history and constitution of the Church for upwards of 600 years.

Mr. Justice Park observed that Archbishops appeared to be anomalous in ecclesiastical history, having been first set up as an encroachment on the legatees of the Popes; but after the reformation, the encroachment, though an anomaly, was continued down to the present day.

Mr. Justice Gaselee was of opinion that judgment ought to be given for the plaintiff, thereby giving the widow the right of presentation to the vacant living.

The other three Judges were of a different opinion, and judgment was therefore given for the defendant.

Judgment for the defendant.

FRIDAY, DEC. 2.—CRIM. CON.

This case excited great interest. Notwithstanding the heavy rain, the Hall was crowded as early as nine o'clock. The action had been put off for the last two terms, on account of the defendant's praying for time to get witnesses material to his defence from the West Indies, where the scene of action was laid. The parties were—

DANIEL THORNDIKE, ESQ. V. THE HON. GEORGE HERVEY.

Mr. Justice opened the pleadings, saying that the action was brought by the Plaintiff to recover compensation in damages from the Defendant for criminal conversation with his wife. The Defendant pleaded—Not Guilty.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan stated the case, and Mr. Brougham addressed the Jury for the defendant.

The Chief Justice, in his charge to the Jury, said the defendant, in case the verdict should go against him, and when he had paid the damages, would bitterly lament that he had not suffered his Counsel to use their own discretion, and abstain from such a defence as he had made in Court that day. His Lordship recapitulated the evidence, and commented strongly on those parts in which the defendant had endeavoured to palliate his misconduct by attributing to the object of his seduction an intimacy with other persons. The defendant had been the author of her first shame, and could not set her subsequent misconduct in palliation of his own. With regard to the witnesses called for the defence, not a tittle of evidence was offered to impeach the chastity of Mrs. Thorndike in any other instance than her intimacy with the defendant Hervey. On the subject of the rings and trinkets found in Mr. Welch's clothes, he, the Learned Judge, was sorry to say that it was too much the practice, and a most abominable one it was, for Gentlemen to possess themselves of Ladies' trinkets, and then boast that they had been presents, not that in this instance such had been the case. The rings could prove no act of criminality against the Lady, because she might have presented the rings as a mere token of friendship. The act of adultery between the Lady and Mr. Hervey was proved, and it only remained for the Jury to consider what damages were due to the Plaintiff for the injury he had received from the hands of the defendant.

The Jury retired rather more than half an hour, and on their return found a verdict for the plaintiff, with 4,000l. damages.

POPLETT V. STOCKDALE.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan stated the case to the Jury. The plaintiff is a printer, and brought his action for the sum of 96l. for the printing of a certain celebrated work entitled "The Memoirs of Harriette Wilson." According to the contract between the parties, Mr. Poplett was to print three sheets per week, and Mr. Stockdale was to advance 5l. per week, and give his bill for the remainder. The sale of the work increased so rapidly, that the thousand copies originally agreed for were at length increased to seventeen thousand. Mr. Poplett, after the seventh number, refused to continue the work, in consequence of the nature of some of the passages, and it was subsequently finished by other printers; but Mr. Stockdale never paid Mr. Poplett the balance due to him, for which the present action was instituted.

John Poplett, son of the plaintiff, proved the agreement between the parties; but a written agreement being put in by Mr. Sergeant Wilde, which was signed by the witness as a principal, although he stated that in signing it he acted for his father.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde objected to this evidence, as, if it were admitted, any person might get rid of an agreement, and become a witness in his own cause.

Mr. Chitty said, that in the City brokers constantly signed their names as principals, although acting for others, whose claims they were subsequently permitted to support by their evidence.

Mr. Sergeant Wilde said that brokers in the City are sworn not to act for themselves, and give security to the City that they will not do so.

The Lord Chief Justice felt the full force of the distinction drawn by Mr. Sergeant Wilde; and, notwithstanding Guildhall authority, entertained a strong opinion as to the propriety of admitting such evidence at all. As there was authority, however, he would permit the evidence to be received; reserving the power to Mr. Sergeant Wilde to have a nonsuit entered, if the Court should be of opinion that the evidence should not have been received.

The witness then proceeded, and stated the gradual increase of the work until it reached the number of 10,000. When he took away the printing from the plaintiff, there remained a balance against him of 96l.

Mr. Rogers, a printer, was called to prove the reasonableness of the charge.—This closed the plaintiff's case.

Mr. Sergeant WILDE addressed the Jury for the defendant. He had received no instructions from Mr. Stockdale, as to the line he was about to adopt; but unless he was restricted, he should think it his duty to call the attention of the Court to the nature of the work, which it was deeply to be deplored had ever issued from the British Press. The publication of the "Memoirs of Harriette Wilson" had reflected the highest disgrace upon the character of the country, from the eagerness by which it is sought for by vitiated appetites. Unless then he was restricted, he should ask a British Judge—

Lord Chief Justice Best—Brother Wilde, you have said enough to render it binding upon me, a guardian of public morals, to consider the nature of this work, and whether it is such as ought to entitle the printer to compensation?

Mr. Sergeant Wilde proceeded to comment upon the nature of the work in strong and forcible language. He contended that its object was to expose the parent to the child, and to render the son a disgrace to his family, and this for the purpose of extorting money, as might be gathered from the very first page of the wrapper.

Lord Chief Justice—Brother Vaughan, is not this work the history of a prostitute?

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan—My Lord, it is.

Lord Chief Justice—And does it not relate, or profess to relate, her amours with certain individuals mentioned therein?

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan—My Lord, it would be affectation to disguise it.

Lord Chief Justice—Then, from what I have heard, and from what I have read of the numbers which have been handed up to me, I think it is a work calculated to corrupt the morals of the public, and published for the purpose of extorting money. I hope that such works will not continue to disgrace the British Press, and I now direct that the plaintiff be nonsuited.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan said, he agreed in every observation made by his Brother Wilde, but he did think that they ought not to be heard from the mouth of Mr. Stockdale.—The plaintiff was then nonsuited.

COURT OF EXCHEQUER—TUESDAY.

[Sittings after Michaelmas Term, before Mr. Justice Garrow and a Special Jury.

THE KING V. BAZENACK.

This case, which has already been tried once, and a verdict found against the Crown, was fixed to come on again this morning. When the cause was called on, only five special jurors of those summoned appeared.

Mr. Jervis, who was engaged for the defendant, expressed his hope that the Crown would pray a tales.

The Solicitor-General refused to do so.

Mr. Jervis.—This is extremely hard on my client. He has been at the expence of bringing a large number of persons to give their evidence on the present occasion.

The Solicitor-General persisted in not praying a tales.

Mr. Garrow.—Well then, it will be impossible for us to proceed. Gentlemen (addressing himself to the jurymen who had appeared), it is most unfortunate, that when persons are summoned here for the trial of a particular case, they will not attend. It is productive of the greatest injury to public and private justice. The parties, you see, are put to very considerable expence, entirely without effect, from these gentlemen not attending.

Mr. Jervis.—We have brought one witness from Bordeaux, and this is the second time we have been obliged to do the same thing.

Mr. Justice Garrow.—It is extremely unfortunate. This case must now be deferred till the Sittings after next Term. If you should meet any gentlemen who are on the same panel, you will perhaps inform them of the consequence of their inattention.

No other cause being appointed for this day, the Court rose.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS' COURT—Nov. 29.

W. Wilding was opposed by Mr. Heath, on behalf of Messrs. Deacon and Banks, overseers of Standish in Lancashire. The insolvent was before the Court on the 1st of July last, when, upon its appearing that he had taken the benefit of the Act at Lancaster within five years preceding, his petition was dismissed, with liberty, however, to come up again at the expiration of the five years. Upon his present examination, it appeared that he had been employed by the opposing creditors as deputy overseer of the parish, and had a salary of 30l. a-year, together with the privilege of using the labour of some of the paupers for collecting the parish rates; and in 1824 he became a defaulter to the amount of 90l. He did not deny his misappropriation of the money; but he stated, in palliation of his conduct, that having a wife and six children, he had been led by necessity to apply this sum to his own purposes, and that it had been his intention, when he did so, to replace it.

Mr. Heath called upon the Court, seeing that a clear case of embezzlement had been established against the insolvent on his own admission, to pass such a judgment upon him as would have the effect of protecting public funds of this description in future. In cases of fraud or forgery, a man's intention to replace the money which he so obtained could not be admitted as an excuse for his offence: the case of Dr. Dodd had set that at rest, for no one could impute the absence of such an intention on his part, and yet it availed him nothing.

Mr. Pollock, on behalf of the insolvent, without attempting to justify his conduct, pressed upon the consideration of the Court his large family and his protracted imprisonment—ever since Easter, 1824.

The Court animadverted upon the insolvent's misconduct; but taking into consideration the circumstances that he had not aggravated it by attempting to deny the fact; as well as that he had a numerous family, and had already endured a long imprisonment, their judgment was, that he be remanded within the walls of the prison for ten calendar months.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—About a fortnight ago, Mr. Bebb, a solicitor in Furnival's Inn, Holborn, accompanied by Colonel Fairman and other gentlemen, friends of Joseph Hayne, Esq. of pugilistic and other sporting celebrity, came to this office and made application to Mr. Dyer, the sitting magistrate, for a warrant against one Mr. William De Burgh, residing at No. 6, Belmont-place, Vauxhall, upon a charge of detaining in his possession, or appropriating to his own use, a certain bill of exchange, the property of the above-named Joseph Hayne, Esq. Mr. Dyer, upon that occasion, said that he did not think the grounds laid in the statement of Mr. Bebb sufficiently strong to authorize him in issuing a warrant, particularly as it was stated that the bill had been negociated or converted.

Mr. Bebb, however, in still urging the magistrates to issue the warrant, said, that he had, the day before, made a similar application to Mr. Allen, the Magistrate, at Union-hall, within which district Mr. De Burgh resides, and that Magistrate did not at all hesitate about granting a warrant upon the statement made to him; but said that as the bill of exchange in question was given into Mr. De Burgh's possession in the parish of St. James, within the district of this office, he would advise the application to be made here.

Mr. Dyer said, that every Magistrate had a right to act upon any case of this description according to the view which his judgment dictated to him on the statement made to him: he was not of opinion that the case was of such a nature, as appeared at present, as required so harsh a proceeding as by warrant in the first instance; but he would grant a summons to require the attendance of Mr. De Burgh, to show cause why he detained this bill, and should he refuse to appear to that summons, it would then be time enough to consider about other proceedings.

A summons was accordingly issued, and Mace, the summoning officer, proceeded to No. 6, Belmont-place, Vauxhall, where, however, he had not the good fortune to find Mr. De Burgh at home; but he saw Mrs. De Burgh, who told him it was quite uncertain what time Mr. De Burgh would return home, for that he had gone a distance into the country on a shooting excursion. Mace, however, left the summons with the lady, to take the chance of its reaching Mr. De Burgh before the day on which it was returnable—yesterday.

The summons did reach Mr. De Burgh, or else Mr. De Burgh reached the summons, which answered the same purpose, for he yesterday appeared punctual to the appointed hour, accompanied by Mr. Harmer as his solicitor; and Mr. Bebb, accompanied by Colonel Fairman, was no less exact as to time and attendance.

The case having been called on before Mr. Dyer and Mr. Roe, the magistrates,

Mr. Harmer said that he attended there on the part of Mr. De Burgh, who was summoned upon some complaint about a bill of exchange, which he (Mr. Harmer) really did not understand, nor did he know whether or not the magistrates were about to try an action of trover, for it seemed something like it.

Mr. Bebb said that the question which the magistrates were called upon to decide in this case was one of a very simple nature, namely, whether or not Mr. De Burgh had a right to retain possession of a bill of exchange, which did not belong to him, and if they would not order him to deliver it up to Mr. Hayne, the proper owner. The case was,—Some months since, Mr. Hayne having had a pressing occasion for a certain sum of money, applied to his friend Colonel Fairman to know if amongst his acquaintances he could point out any person who would be able to procure case for his, Mr. Hayne's, acceptance for a given amount, for temporary accommodation. Colonel Fairman turned his eye towards Mr. De Burgh, of No. 6, Belmont-place, as a very likely person to oblige a friend in that way, and represented as much to Mr. Hayne; and accordingly an interview was had with Mr. De Burgh, and a bill of exchange was drawn upon the regular stamp, accepted by Mr. Joseph Hayne for the sum of 2000l. and handed over to Mr. De Burgh to have it sent into the market, and the necessary sum for Mr. Hayne's accommodation raised upon it. But this was not all Mr. De Burgh was to do. The bill, when delivered to Mr. De Burgh, was complete in every respect but one trifling point—namely, that it had no drawer, or at least no drawer's name to it, and this very necessary personage in bill transactions was left entirely to be supplied at the discretion of Mr. De Burgh, who was to make a drawer of whom he pleased to fill up the blank. Mr. De Burgh promised without delay to have all the needfuls done, and that the money or a great part of it should be forthcoming on a certain day. That certain day, however, and many other uncertain days, passed away without producing any of the proceeds of the bill to Mr. Hayne, and the consequence of those repeated disappointments on the part of Mr. De Burgh was, that Mr. Hayne was at length compelled to have recourse to other means and other sources to supply for him the necessary funds. He then, of course, wished to get back his 2,000l. bill out of the hands of Mr. De Burgh, and caused application to be made to that gentleman for that purpose; but notwithstanding that application had been repeated several times, Mr. De Burgh still keeps possession of the bill, and refuses to deliver it up, and it was now for him to show by what right he detained it.

Mr. Harmer, in reply to this case, said on behalf of Mr. De Burgh, that it was one in which the Magistrates had no power whatever to interfere, for various reasons. In the first place, allowing that a bona fide bill of exchange had been detained in an illegal manner from Mr. Hayne, his proper remedy to recover it must be by an action of trover; it was not pretended on the part of Mr. Hayne, that Mr. De Burgh had negociated or converted the bill, and therefore a Magistrate had no authority to interfere; but in point of fact, Mr. Harmer said, there had been nothing of any value delivered to Mr. De Burgh; for this bill of exchange, as it was called, was of no more value, when handed over to Mr. De Burgh, than so much blank paper; it had to be sure Mr. Hayne's name written across it; but there was another partner in the concern wanted, and a very material one—a drawer. Mr. De Burgh, seeing that he could do nothing with this skeleton of a bill until he had a drawer's name to it, made himself the drawer, and of course became responsible as well as Mr. Hayne for the amount of the bill. Mr. De Burgh was, according to his promise, doing all he could to procure the supply of money for Mr. Hayne, when he was informed that Mr. Hayne had procured the necessary supply elsewhere, and that he desired to have his bill returned. Mr. De Burgh having put his name to a bill as drawer for such an amount, naturally did not wish it to go out of his possession, considering that he had as good a right to the care of it as Mr. Hayne. this, Mr. Harmer said, was the whole history of the transaction' and he trusted the Magistrate would at once dismiss the complaint,

Mr. Bebb said that he was not, although he understood so, quite clear that there was no drawer's name to the bill when given to Mr. De Burgh.

Mr. De Burgh said, there was not any, and he therefore put his own name to it.

Colonel Fairman said, that he perfectly recollected that when the bill was given to Mr. De Burgh there was a blank for a drawer's name to be provided by Mr. De Burgh.

Mr. Dyer asked Mr. Bebb if they had cause to believe, or suspect, that the defendant had negociated or converted the bill.

Mr. Bebb said that they could not say: it was impossible for them to tell.

Mr. Harmer—The fact is, you know nothing whatever about the matter: if you think you have a right to get your bill back, bring your action.

Mr. Bebb said he most certainly should do so, in the event of the magistrates not deciding on the case, which, however he contended they had authority to do, upon the grounds laid before them.

Mr. Dyer said, that when the application was made in the first instance on this subject to him by Mr. Bebb, for a warrant, he refused it, being then, from what he had heard of the case, of opinion that he had not a power to interfere. He, however, told Mr. Bebb at the time, that, he might try the experiment of a summons; and the result was, that he (Mr. Dyer) was confirmed, in the first view he took of the case, that he had no power in the matter, and that the parties complaining must seek redress, if they required it, in another quarter.

The case was then dismissed.

MARY-LA-BONNE.—Wednesday, at one o'clock, Stanley De Courcy Ireland, and Mrs. Gravett, were placed at the bar. Mr. Ireland seemed much improved in appearance, and bowed with a very gentlemanly air on entering the office. Mr. John Price attended as the prisoners' attorney.

Mr. Rawlinson asked the attorney for the prosecution what line of proceeding he contemplated.

Mr. Goring answered, he intended fully to enter into the case of Mr. Danell, cutler, of Oxford-street.

The case was then gone into. The prisoner Ireland cross-examined one of the witnesses, but nothing favourable to him was elicited.

Mr. Rawlinson considered himself bound to commit Ireland to Newgate for felony; and should also order a detainer to be lodged against him for fraud. With respect to the woman, he would only hold her to bail upon the charge of conspiracy to defraud.

Mr. Price then addressed the Magistrate at some length on the part of Ireland, and contended, that he had no power to commit Ireland for a felony; the evidence did not warrant any such presumption of constructive felony as was supposed.

Mr. Rawlinson complimented Mr. Price upon the ingenuity of his arguments, and the great attention he had paid to the interests of his client; but under all the circumstances, he declined changing the resolve, and turning to Ireland, said, "I therefore commit you to Newgate for felony."

Mr. Price then submitted that no evidence was adduced against the female, and she was entitled to her discharge.

This gave rise to a long discussion, in which

Mr. Price very skilfully and pertinaciously argued his point, but was overruled.

Some letters of her's were produced, ordering linen for the house in Gloucester-place; but the order was afterwards countermanded by her.

The prisoners were removed.

Since the last examination every possible exertion has been made to discover the "Hon. Mr. Frederick Ponsonby," the principal in the swindling transactions, and up to a late hour on Tuesday night, the officers were industriously employed in searching after him at various places in the metropolis, where they had received information from anonymous writers, he was in the habit of frequenting, and it was not until the last moment that hopes were given up, of placing him at the bar yesterday morning with his friend Mr. Ireland. The Saloon, and other day places of resort, seem to have been his constant places of visitation, but latterly he has carefully avoided them, in order to elude the vigilance of the officers, who have "looked after him" in those places without success; and it is concluded that he has escaped from England, in order to escape the punishment due to his offence. He is said to be a young man of most accomplished address and manners, and of imposing appearance, with the exception of a trifling cast in the eye. Information was received at the office in the course of the week that an individual resembling Ponsonby had sojourned to Windsor, where he had been apprehended by a sheriff's officer for debt. The officers, however, made every inquiry, but it did not turn out to be the individual.

ALARMING FIRE.—Tuesday morning, about half-past two o'clock, an alarming fire broke out at the house of Mr. Cox, baker, Fulwood's-rents, Holborn. The engines were soon on the spot, and aided by a plentiful supply of water the firemen commenced playing upon the devouring element; but, notwithstanding every exertion, it continued to rage with unabated fury for a considerable length of time.

CORONER'S INQUEST.—MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.—A Coroner's Inquisition was taken on Tuesday night, before Thomas Stirling, Esq. Coroner, at the house of Mr. William Chater, the sign of the Guy Earl of Warwick, Belton-street, Long-acre, on the body of Mr. Alexander Newell, a confidential servant to Mr. White, of Broad-street, Bloomsbury, who hung himself. The Jury returned the following verdict:—"The deceased came by his death by hanging himself while labouring under a fit of temporary derangement."

STAGE COACH BURNT.—On Friday se'nnight one of the night coaches was accidentally overturned between Green-street and Canterbury, but fortunately none of the passengers were injured. The attention of the coachman being immediately directed to the horses, he did not observe that the lamp had been forced through the body of the coach without having extinguished the light, and that the lining of the coach had been so completely ignited, that the body was nearly consumed before the flames could be extinguished.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to every description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 14s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,
At J. ALBERT's, Tailor and Draper,
47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

TO FAMILIES.—CLARK'S WORK on NATURAL and ARTIFICIAL TEETH will be found a valuable acquisition, on account of the useful information it conveys with respect to the Management of the Teeth and Gums, from early infancy to old age; and the most modern and improved methods of supplying the loss of Teeth and Palates.—"If the length of this article should appear to our readers disproportioned to the bulk of the book reviewed, our apology must be, that it is not our system to consider the number of the pages or of the volumes of the work before us, but the importance of the subject and the degree of useful information we may hope to communicate concerning it."—Monthly Magazine. "We think the book a very useful one, and as such we recommend it to our readers."—Literary Chronicle. To be had of the Author, at 76, Lower Grosvenor-street; and of all the Booksellers in town and country.

GYMNASTIC EXERCISES—Professor VOELKER begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public in general, that he has opened a Gymnasium at the Riding-school of Mr. De Foutaine, Worship-street, Finsbury-square, besides that at his residence, No. 1, Union-place, New-road, near Marylebone Church. Days and hours of attendance at the former, on Mondays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the Evenings; at the latter on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Seven to Nine o'clock in the morning; or on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, from Two to Four o'clock in the Afternoon; and also for young Gentlemen, every Morning, from Nine to Ten o'clock. Ladies are instructed, on a well adapted plan, either by the Professor himself, or by a Lady under his direction.

Further particulars, prospectuses, &c., may be had at either of the Gymnasiums.

LONDON SILK ESTABLISHMENT, 294, HIGH HOLBORN.
Prices—25 per Cent. under any Retail House in the Kingdom.

THE Proprietors, who are real Manufacturers, as well as Wholesale Dealers, announce their having made the largest purchase of Broad Silks ever made in this country. Families requiring a general supply of real French or English Ducapes, Gros-de-Naples, Sarsnets, or Lustrings, may choose from the largest Stock in England, and save at the rate of 25 pounds in every hundred. Ladies of taste desirous of purchasing Silk Cloaks may always see from One Hundred to Two Hundred, Ready Made (the most splendid in Europe), and save from 15s. to two guineas each.

☞ Rich Double Sarsnets, full three-quarters wide, are selling at 2s. a yard; and elegant Figured Gros-de-Naples at 2s. 6d. Also the rich and beautiful Cashmere Satins, for Morning Dresses, at 1s. 6d. a yard; the regular price 2s. 9d.—GRAHAM and CO.—No credit given on any account whatever.

7000 PAIR OF STOUT WARM BLANKETS FOR THE POOR; AND 5000 PAIR OF STRONG SHEETS, AT 7s. 6d. PER PAIR.

MALLCOTT AND JAMES beg to call the attention of the charitably disposed, to the above articles, and the public generally, to one of the largest Stocks of LINEN DRAPERY in the Kingdom. Strong Russia sheeting, 6½d. per yard; wide ditto, 9½d.; 5-4 wide ditto, 1s.; 7-4 Irish sheeting, 10½d.; fine ditto, 1s. 6d.; 6-4 ditto, 2s.; fine Holland ditto, 2s. 9d. to 3s. 6d.; Russia sheeting, 2½ yards wide, without a seam, 10s. 6d.; fine ditto, 2s. 6d.; extra ditto, 3s.; 3 yards wide ditto, 4s. 6d., and some real Russia ditto, curiously fine, 5s. 6d.—Twenty thousand single and double damask breakfast and dinner cloths; 1500 breakfast ditto, 1s. 10d.; 1500 ditto damask, 2s. 9d.; large size, 3s. 6d.; 2000 double damask dinner ditto, 2½ yards long, 8s. 9d., worth 25s.; 1500 ditto, 3 yards long, 10s. 6d.; 1000 ditto, 4 yards long, 19s.; and some of the most beautiful Silesian ditto, 30s. to 2l. Cloths, 5, 6, and 7 yards long, in proportion; 3000 damask napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; fine double damask ditto, 12s.; Hambro' ditto, 16s. 6d. to 21s.; with an unbounded assortment of huckaback diaper glass cloths, and every article for family use. Marseilles quilts, 3 yards long, 15s.; counterpanes, same size, 12s. 6d.; 500 pair of large size blankets, a complete bargain: at the PANTHEON LINEN WAREHOUSE, 78, Oxford-street, exactly opposite the Pantheon.

WINTER INDISPENSABLES for the POOR, at CRAIG and D'OYLY's Family Linen Warehouse, 77, Oxford-street, not in any way connected with any other house in London.

Twenty Thousand Pair of Blankets, first size, 6s. 4d.; next size, 8s. 6d.; superior quality and extra size, 9s. 6d. the pair; good Rugs, 2s. 6d. each; extra size, 3s. 6d.; a very superior article, 4s. 6d.: Bath Cloaking, full two yards wide, 2s. 3d.; excellent, at 2s. 6d., two yards wide; Pelisse Cloths, 2s. 6d. to 5s. a yard; 892 pieces stout Calico, 7d. a yard; a fine article at 6½d.; Flannels, 8d. a yard; good yard wide Welsh and Lancashire, from 10d. to 12d.; with a great variety of other articles for charitable purposes.

Damask Napkins, 6s. 11d. a dozen; Dinner Cloths, 7s. 2d. each; Russia Sheetings, full width without a seam, 1s. 10d. a yard; Towelling, 4½d. a yard; ten boxes of the best Irish Linens ever imported; French Cambrics at a great reduction: a good assortment of Town-printed Furnitures, 1s. a yard, warranted fast colours; Linings in every shade, 6d.; Moreens, 15d. to 21d. a yard; Marseilles Quilts, three yards long, 13s. 6d; next size, 17s. 6d., worth 28s.; Counterpanes, 3s. 11d. to 12s. each; Diapers, Huckabacks, Muslins, Gros de Naples, Norwich Crapes, Family Mourning, and every other useful article in Linen-drapery, Mercery, Hosiery, &c. &c.

Country orders executed with dispatch. All letters must be post paid.

Five Thousand Imitation India Shawls, full two yards square, 2s. 11d. each.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St, Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.

Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, Loudon.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.

Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce; will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

H. MOSS, PRIZE HAIR CUTTER, PERRUQUIER and PERFUMER, No. 181, Fleet-street (Two Doors from Fetter-lane), has the honour of returning thanks for the brilliant patronage conferred upon him since he commenced Business, and begs to assure the Fashionable World, that his fanciful faculties are constantly devoted to the production of new inventions in his highly important Profession. Moss's destinies are inseparably connected with fashion, and the taste displayed in his Saloon of Artificial Hair, will sufficiently distinguish him from the rank of Plebeian Coeffeurs, who having no talent of their own, are compelled to assume French names to impose upon a generous Public. Hair Cutting being now reduced to science, Ladies and Gentlemen cannot be too particular in the choice of an Artist, as London abounds with Pretenders, who only destroy what ought to be preserved and embellished; in fact they are Hostes humani Capitis. Moss personally, and with a chosen few Assistants of sterling ability, operate, and in the Art of Hair Cutting they claim and will maintain pre-eminence. Ladies Head Dresses, and all the paraphernalia of Ornamental Hair in the highest style of fashion, and of Natural Curl, are ready for the approbation of the Elegantes. And in the manufacture of Gentlemen's Perruques and Scalps (secundum naturam) Moss challenges all the world. Hair Brushes upon Moss's peculiar construction, with an assortment of what is absolutely necessary for the Hair, will render his Establishment a desideratum of paramount importance, as Fleet-street has been long destitute of respectable Coeffeurs.

BREWING UTENSILS & SEASONED CASKS, in great variety, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s. 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 15s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes. Bathing and Turtle Tubs Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, and Utensils Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are particularly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street; and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 324, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's-court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Hollies-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, 1, and Yard, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom. Mr. Renard, 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of these Pills in Paris.

ROEBUCK IRON FOUNDRY, Stove Grate Manufactory, and general Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—CRUNDALL and HALLEN acknowledge the liberal support they have received from the Nobility and Gentry, and, in consequence of the very considerable increase of business, they have found it expedient to enlarge their premises to a great extent, which has enabled them to offer for sale a most extensive and elegant ASSORTMENT of DRAWING ROOM and other STOVES, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage, of the most superior workmanship and design to any house in the kingdom. Fenders, fire irons, and kitchen ranges on the most improved principles, and every description of furnishing ironmongery, a saving of full 30 per cent, for the approaching season. A large assortment of patent warm air stoves, ascending or descending flues, adapted for halls, offices, warehouses, and shops. Also the admirable economical patent French table lamps, in the greatest variety, diffusing a light equal to 6 wax candles, from 28s. upwards. Manufacturers of every article of fence work for parks, balconies, verandas, entrance gates, hurdles, &c., and from the extensive machinery and convenience of their premises, including the late reduction of iron, they are enabled now to offer the above considerably under in price to any house in the kingdom. Orders of any magnitude executed with promptness, by addressing a line to Crundall and Hallen, Roebuck Iron Foundry and Stove Grate Manufactory, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—N. B. Every description of castings made to order or model. Prompt payment, and no abatement.

ATKINSON'S BEAR'S GREASE—This approved article for restoring the hair, being in almost universal demand, some rival Perfumers have taken the advantage, and introduced an article of their own, got up exactly similar in pots and labels; only the importer's name is omitted. Many of these counterfeits are very deleterious, being generally a mixture of rancid animal fats, and alkaline oils. In appearance they approximate a good deal to genuine Bear's Grease, but the effect in use is diametrically opposite—they leave the hair harsh and dry, whereas genuine Bear's Grease retains its moisture a long time, leaves the hair beautifully soft and glossy, and independent of restoring the growth, is very pleasant for dressing it, as it does not dry so quick as the Huile's antiques, and is free from the unpleasant greasiness of pomatum, &c.—Sold by the Importer, James Atkinson, perfumer, 44, Gerrard-street, and by appointment by Messrs. Gattie and Pierce, 57, New Bond-street; Sanger, 150, Grange, 126, Firth, 45, Langley, 31, and Smith, 98, Oxford-street; Woodman, Piccadilly; Dobson and Mason, 38, Haymarket; Mattrass, Fleet-street; Gibbins, Fleet-market; Colley, 28, and Barber, 43, Bishopsgate-street; Montram, Burlington-arcade; Wakefield, Lamb's Conduit-street; and by most perfumers.

CAUTION.—The genuine is enclosed in a wrapper, with the importer's signature and address, price 2s. 6d, and 4s.; and in bottles, 3s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. and perfumed with Otto of Rose, extra price.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others. By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than

ROBINSON's PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS; they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, a Superior Beverage being produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.

Sold Retail by all respectable Druggists, Grocers, &c. throughout the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co., No. 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn, London.

 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words "Robinson's Patent," the Royal Arms, and the signature of MATTS. ROBINSON, are affixed to each package, as none others are genuine.

FASHION, ELEGANCE, and ECONOMY COMBINED. Oxford-House, Furniture Magazine, 376, near Exeter 'Change, Strand. A clear saving of £25 per cent.—The Upholsterers and Cabinet Makers' Company, established May, 1821, is the only manufacturing depot in the Kingdom, where the public are allowed to select their own woods of every description, and inspect the progress of completion, thus preventing the possibility of their being deceived by the use of unseasoned coarse materials and bad workmanship. The Public are also invited to view the choice stock of Rose, Zebra, King, and other scarce woods suited to the purposes of Manufacture, and prepared for the choice of purchasers. This establishment has, since its commencement, received the sanction and support of some of the first characters in the kingdom; and the conductors will have the greatest pleasure in referring to their numerous patrons for the honour and probity of their transactions. A draftsman of taste and experience is attached to the concern, and the newest designs of modern elegant furniture always ready for inspection. The conductors beg leave to add, that their extensive means affords them facilities in the economical dispatch of orders, which no private manufacturer can equal. In proof of their determination to deserve support, they very respectfully submit the following list of low prices:—

Second class of Furniture.—Solid mahogany wardrobe, fine Spanish wood, 13l. 13s.; Drawers, from 3l. 3s. to 5l. warranted; chamber-chair, japanned in oil, at per chair, 4s. 6d.; rich carved mahogany four-post bedsteads, 4l. 4s. to 6l. 6s.; seasoned beds equally cheap; mahogany pembroke tables, 1l. 15s. to 6l. 6s.; good tent bedsteads any size, 1l. 7s.; a suite of four rich rose-wood tables, French polished, 25 guineas; French bedstead with rich haugings, lined, pole complete, 5l. 5s.; do. with palliass, mattress, 7l. 7s.; mahogany rich carved four-post bedstead, with rich town chintz, lined, silk fringe, drapery, &c. 14l. 14s.; drawing-room chairs, newest patterns, from 20s. to 30s. per chair; real rose and zebra equally cheap; couch, sofas, chaise lounges, from 5l. 5s. to 10l. 10s.; pedestal side-boards, from 8l. 8s. to 21l. and upwards; French bedsteads, japanned in oil, any size, 2l. 2s. Every article in the above trade equally cheap. Ship-tables, drawers, sofas, and sofa-bedsteads.—Goods carefully packed and shipped for any part of England or the continent.—No charge for packing.

No Fees to Coachmen and Guards.

GENERAL STAGE COACH COMPANY.—BATH AND BRISTOL DAY COACH.

The Company's Bath and Bristol New Light Post Coach, carrying Four Inside and Ten Out, leaves the WHITE BEAR, Basinghall-street, every Morning, at a Quarter past Six, and the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at Seven o'Clock, precisely. Arrives at the CHRISTOPHER INN, Bath, at Half-past Seven, and the RUMMER TAVERN, Bristol, at a Quarter-past Nine, precisely.

Route—READING, MARLBRO', CALNE, AND CHIPPENHAM.

FARES.—Inside....2l. 5s. Outside..... 1l. 1s.

Breakfast at Maidenhead, at 1s. 6d. per head, including Waiters; and Dine at the Castle Inn, Marlbro', at 3s. per Head, also including Waiters.

Also, the Company's New Light Four Inside BATH and BRISTOL NIGHT COACH, on the Principle of the Mails, every Evening from the WHITE BEAR, Basingball-st., at Half-past Four o'Clock, and from the OLD WHITE HORSE CELLAR, Piccadilly, at a Quarter-past Five precisely, through Devizes, Melksham, &c.

FARES.—Inside....1l. 18s. Outside.... 18s.

Sup at the Bear Inn, Reading, at 2s. 6d. per Head, including Waiters.

In case of any incivility being experienced by the Passengers travelling by the Company's Coaches, from Servants of the Company, it is particularly requested that prompt notification will be given to the Secretary, as it is the anxious desire of the Company to render all the convenience to the Public in their power: they will therefore feel obliged by any communication or suggestion, which, on any occasion, may be considered deserving of report.

 A GUARD is appointed to each of the Company's Coaches. One regular pace is observed, time punctually kept, and no frivolous stoppages allowed on the road; whereby the Company's Coaches are enabled to maintain the same principle as is adopted by the Royal Mails, without the necessity of any galloping whatever.

The Directors will not be answerable for the safety of any parcel exceeding 5l. in value, unless the amount be stated when booked.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

PRICE OF BRITISH STOCKS YESTERDAY.

Red. Three per Cents. 83½	Bank Stock 217¾
Cons. Three per Cents. shut	Long Annuities, 20 1-16
Three and a half per Cents. 91½	India Stock,
3½ per Cents. Reduced 90⅞	India Bonds, par
Four per Cents. shut	Exch. Bills (1½d.) 6 dis.
Consols for Acc. 84⅝ ⅝ ¾ ½

Consols commenced at 84⅝¾, and almost immediately declined to 84⅝. The failure of the Ashburton Bank, and the scarcity of money, were the causes assigned for the depression.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Saturday.

Sittings at Nisi Prius, Westminster.

CRIM. CON.—PEDLEY V. BRACH.

Mr. Sergeant Vaughan stated the case to the Jury at great length. The facts are simply these:—The plaintiff is the proprietor of a shell-fish warehouse in High Holborn; the defendant was an opposite neighbour, and carried on business as a silversmith. This led to a friendly intercourse between the plaintiff and defendant, and the plaintiff's wife went out several times with the defendant, and in the month of June last it was proved that the defendant was seen to put his arm round Mrs. Pedley's neck, kiss her, and pay her several indecent attentions. To the same witness the defendant said that he was with Mrs. Pedley until three o'clock in the morning, and that "a slice off a cut loaf was never missed." Several other particulars were stated in evidence, which were of too indelicate a nature for the public eye.

Mr. Sergeant Spankie made a most lengthy reply, and attempted to turn the whole affair into ridicule.

The Jury in a few minutes returned a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, 350l.

Melancholy Death by Oxalic Acid.—On Tuesday morning a respectable young woman, residing at Earl's-court, Kensington, put a period to her existence, under the following melancholy circumstances:—It appears that the deceased had kept company with a young man, a market gardener, for about six months. She had spent the greater part of Monday evening in his company; they had some words, but when they parted the deceased appeared tolerably cheerful, For several weeks past she had at times been observed to be very low spirited; on Tuesday morning she again saw the young man who was paying his addresses to her; he asked her how she was, as she appeared ill? She replied she had only taken some salts; but he having a suspicion that something was wrong, asked her where she purchased them? She answered at Dr. Morris's, or Morrison's. Soon after she was heard vomiting in the washhouse. A female went to her, and asked her if she had taken any thing that had disagreed with her. She said she had only taken some salts, and which she thought was the cause of her vomiting; she asked to see her sweetheart; the young man went to her, and earnestly inquired of her what was the matter; she again repeated "that she had taken some salts, and supposed that they were not the right sort." She got much worse, and was removed from the washhouse into another room, and then, being in dreadful agony, was placed on a bed, and a surgeon sent for, who immediately attended, but just as he arrived she expired. A paper, containing a small quantity of oxalic acid, was found in her pocket, and a letter. An inquest was held on the body on Wednesday, at the Star and Garter, Kensington, when the above particulars were fully confirmed by the witnesses; and the surgeon stated, that the coats of the deceased's stomach were completely corroded and destroyed, so much so that he found part of them emitted on the carpet of the room in which she died. After a patient, but painful, investigation, the Jury returned a verdict, "That the deceased destroyed herself by taking oxalic acid whilst labouring under temporary mental derangement."

Elopement.—A Reverend Gentleman in the neighbourhood of Halifax, who took to himself a wife only on Saturday se'nnight, has had but a short trial of the married life; his Lady eloped from him (whether in company or not we cannot tell) the Wednesday following, taking along with her, not her own maiden paraphernalia only, but also a part of the most valuable of the goods in communion.—Leeds Mercury.

The Ordnance powder mills at Faversham, sold by auction by Stevens and Brenchley, on Friday week (lately let by Government at 510*l.*) fetched 14,560*l.* At the same time, less than three acres of garden ground sold for 1,425*l.* Three houses in the town of Faversham, and a house on Davington-hill, realized 1,950*l.*

Resurrection Men.—A young man, named John Flinn, was charged with having attempted to rob the burial-ground of a Dissenting meeting-house, in Upper Kennington-lane, Vauxhall. Some days ago three bodies were interred in this burial-ground. On Wednesday night, between eleven and twelve o'clock, as the watchman was on duty, three men accosted him, saying, "Master, we want the three stiff ones (bodies) that were put into the ground a few days back. You shall have a guinea for each of them." The watchman said something expressive of his indignation, when the man observed, "Come, don't make any scruples about the business; your betters have consented before you. Why, there was the watchman that you succeeded—that fellow has got many a pound from us; come, take courage; don't be afraid, for we are the boys that will never split. The watchman, however, withstood the temptation, and rejected the bribe, declaring, that if they attempted to enter the ground, he would fire on them. The three men then walked away, greatly disappointed; but the watchman, who observed them lurking about, informed the night-constable of what had occurred. This officer and one of his men went to the ground and concealed themselves behind a tomb-stone. They had not been long concealed, before they heard a pickaxe at work; the constable and his man then sallied out with their drawn cutlasses, and the three fellows scampered across the ground; two escaped over the wall, but the prisoner, who was the third man, was taken. They had dug about a foot in depth, and on the ground was discovered a pickaxe, shovel, &c., and a large bag. The prisoner said nothing in his defence, and in default of bail was sent to prison for trial.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 2, 1825.

6th Regt. of Dragoon Guards, Cornet J. R. Hay to be Lieutenant by purchase, v. Harvey, promoted.: G. A. F. Heathcote, Gent. to be Coronet by purchase, v Hay: Troop Serjeant-Major G. Dickson to be Quartermaster, v Kerr, deceased.—19th Regt. of Foot, Ensign A. G. Moorhead to be Lieutenant by purchase, v Berkeley, promoted.—25th Ditto, Lieut. C. F. Sweeny, from 48th Foot, v Small, promoted: Lieut. J. J. Pounden, from h-p 42d Foot, v Smart, appointed to the 52d Foot; to be Lieutenants.—26th Ditto, Lieut. A. Macdonald, from h-p 92d Foot, to be Lieutenant, v G. Sinclair, who exchanges.—34th Ditto. Lieut. Hon. G. Upton, from h-p, to be Lieutenant, v C. I. Tinling, who exchanges, receiving the difference.—39th Ditto, Hospital-Assistant R. M. Davies, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon.—16th Ditto, Lieut. G. Tarwell, from h-p, v Madigan, appointed Quartermaster: Ensign F. Ingram, by purchase, v H. Stuart, promoted; to be Lieutenants: J. Davies, Gent. to be Ensign by purchase, v Ingram: Lieut. J. Madigan to be Quartermaster, v W. Barefoot, who retires upon h-p: Paymaster J. Grant, from 89th Foot, to be Paymaster, v Anderson, who exchanges.—59th Ditto, Captain H. D. Courtayne, from h-p, to be Captain, v J. Doren, who exchanges.—62d Ditto, Lieut. J. H. Anstruther, from h-p, to be Lieutenant, v J. Mansell, who exchanges, receiving the difference.—64th Ditto, Ensign T. Kenyon to be Lieutenant by purchase, v Mair, promoted in the 99th Foot.—72d ditto, Lieut. T. A. Blair to be Captain by purchase, v Hall.—74th Ditto, C. Parcell, Gent. to be Ensign by purchase, v Brown, appointed to the Cape Corps Cavalry.—89th Ditto, Paymaster J. J. Anderson, from 46th Foot, to be Paymaster, v Grant, who exchanges.—92d Ditto, Ensign A. D. Morrison from h-p, to be Ensign, v A. Shaw, who exchanges.—94th Ditto, Ensign J. W' Randolph to be Lieutenant by purchase, v Gilleess, appointed to the 6th Dragoons: Gentleman Cadet H. Bathurst, from the Royal Military College, to be Ensign by purchase, v Randolph,—Royal African Colonial Corps, E. Miller, Gent. to be Ensign, v Hartley, deceased: Assistant-Surgeon W. Ferguson to be Surgeon, v Stewart, promoted: Hospital-Assistant J. Cahill, M.D. to be Assistant-Surgeon, v Ferguson.

Brevet.—J. F. Fulton, Esq. late Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel and Major of the 92d Foot, to have the local rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, on the Continent of Europe only.

Hospital Staff.—Surgeon A. Stewart, from the Royal African Colonial Corps, to be Surgeon to the Forces, v Barry, promoted: Hospital-Mate J. C. Barker to be Assistant-Surgeon to the Forces, v O'Reilly, deceased.—J. Thomson, Gent. v Morgan, appointed to the 55th Foot: M. J. Bramley, Gent. v Smith, appointed to the 98th Foot: M. Bardin, Gent. v O'Brien, appointed to the 28th Foot; to be Hospital-Assistants to the Forces.

Unattached.—Lieuts. C. B. Berkeley, from 91st Foot: C. Harford, from 34th Foot: J. S. Doyle, from 11th Foot: H. Stuart, from 46th Foot: J. W. Harvey, from 6th Dragoon Guards: R. Willington, from 25th Foot; to be Captains of Infantry by purchase.—Ensign P. Legh, from 46th Foot: Ensign R. F. Poore, from 19th Foot: Second Lieut. G. Mason, from 60th Foot; to be Lieutenants of Infantry by purchase.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY.

J. Stansfield. Hanroyd, Migley, Yorkshire, reed-maker and Prussian blue-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

B. Bennett, jun. Dukinfield, Cheshire, scrivener. Sol. Mr. R. Capes, 9, Holborn-court, Gray's-inn.

T. Hope, Darcey-Lever, Lancashire, merchant and cotton-spinner. Sol. Mr. Norris, John-street, Bedford-row.

J. Graham, jun. Brigham, Cumberland, inn-keeper and lime-burner. Sol. Mr. R. Fisher, 74, Watling-street, Cheapside.

J. Brandock, Macclesfield, silk-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Bell and Brodrick, Bow Church-yard.

J. Gay, Quadrant, Regent-street, engraver and printer. Sols. Messrs. Sarel and Son, 23, Berkeley-square.

T. Phillips and I. Phillips, Fenchurch-street, boot and shoe-makers. Sols. Messrs. Nind and Cotterill, Torogmorton-street.

Sir W. Elford, baronet, J. Tingcomb, and J. W. Clarke, Plymouth, bankers. Sol. Mr. Church, 1, Great James's-street, Bedford-row.

L. Sykes and T. Bury, Bucklersbury, warehousemen. Sols. Messrs. Burra and Nield, King-street, Cheapside.

R. Coopey, Gloucester, grocer. Sol. Mr. A'Becket, 7, Golden-square.

S. Sotheby, Wellington-street, Strand, auctioneer and bookseller. Sols. Messrs. Hurd and Johnson, King's-Bench-walk. Temple.

J. Buckley, Manchester, dealer in cotton twist and cotton-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Hurd and Johnson, King's-Bench-walk, Temple.

D. Morris, F. Robinson, and E. Watson, Liverpool, tar and turpentine distillers. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.

T. Swain, South Collingham, Nottinghamshire, miller. Sols. Messrs. Hall and Brownley, New Boswell-court, Carey-street.

J. Dawkins, Southampton, tailor. Sols. Messrs. Slade and Jones, 1, John-street, Bedford-row.

G. Johnson, Bristol, and H. H. Johnson, New Bond-street, Hanover-square, seal and copper-plate engravers and copper-plate-printers. Sols. Messrs. Bourdillon and Hewitt, Bread-street, Cheapside.

W. Smith, late of Broad-street, Ratcliffe, plumber, painter, and glazier. Sol. Mr. Baddeley, Leman-street, Goodman's-fields.

C. Dowding, Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, cooper. Sols. Messrs. Overton and Coombe, Tokenhouse-yard.

A. Fiestal, Blackfriar's-road, merchant. Sols. Jay and Byles, 5, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn.

W. Stewart, Pall-mall, commercial agent. Sol. Mr. Popkin, Dean-street Soho-square.

W. Oliver, Hamilton-place, Battle-bridge, builder. Sols. Messrs. Green and Ashurst, Sambrook-court, Basinghall-street.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

M. Booty, Nodehill, Isle of Wight, wine merchant.—S. Cooke, Beresford-place, Dublin, coal-merchant.—I. Titley, jun. Bath, salt-refiner.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

L. Crown, Sunderland, ship-builder.

BANKRUPTS.

T. Kay, Hulme, Lancashire, shopkeeper. Sols. Messrs. Milne and Parry, Temple.—H. and R. Davies, Hampton-Bishop, Herefordshire, corn-dealers. Sol. Mr. Robinson, Walbrook.—T. Brewster, Wade's-mill, Hertfordshire, miller. Sol. Mr. Weymouth, Chancery-lane.—N. Higgs, Duke's-row, Pimlico, brewer. Sol. Mr. Florance, Finsbury-square.—J. Schmidt, Ball-court, Cornhill, hill-broker. Sols. Messrs. Birch and Garth, Winchester-street, Broad-street.—L. Crown, Monkwearmouth-Shore, Durham, ship-builder. Sols. Messrs. Holme, Frampton, and Loftus, New-inn.—J. M. Oliver, Bishopsgate-street-within, shoemaker. Sol. Mr. Score, Tokenhouse-yard.—T. Towerson, Todholes, Cumberland, miller. Sols. Messrs. Helder, Clement's-inn.—S. Stephens, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill, coffee-house-keeper. Sol. Mr. Lang, Fenchurch-street.—H. Lewis, Newport, Monmouthshire, tallow-chandler. Sol. Mr. Platt, New Boswell-court, Lincoln's-inn.—T. Varley, Staningley, Yorkshire, cloth-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—G. Richards, St. Martin's-lane, dealer in watches. Sol. Mr. Nicholson, Percy-street, Bedford-square.—W. Horsfall, Wakefield, Yorkshire, spirit-merchant. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—J. Gardner, jun. Swallwell, Durham, victualler. Sol. Mr. Dunn, Prince's-street, Bank.—R. Fisher, Low Hesket, Cumberland, draper. Sols. Messrs. Helder, Clement's-inn.—J. and J. Parker, Manchester, cotton-manufacturers. Sols. Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and Faulkner, Bedford-row.—M. Barber, Morton-Banks, Yorkshire, malster. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane. W. Ford, Exeter, nurseryman. Sol. Mr. Brutton, Old Broad-street.—J. Lake, Broad-street, Golden-square, tailor. Sol. Mr. Jager, King's-place, Commercial-road.—F. Phillips and W. Cutforth, Goldsmith-street, Wood-street, Cheapside, warehousemen. Sol. Mr. Phipps, Weavers'-hall.

R. W. EVANS, 146, STRAND, (near Somerset House) LONDON.

PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices. Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

			s.	d.
DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violincello and Flute			17	6
Or, in Parts	Evans	each	3	6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib)	R. W. Evans
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha			5	0
No. II.—Introduction—Romanee—Danza de Village—Fandango			5	0

DUETS.

All Idea, Duet	Moss	3	0
Santo Oh Dio!	ditto	2	0

OVERTURES.

Cherry and Fair Star	Ware	2	6
Cinderella	ditto	2	0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments	Evans	3	6
Gil Blas	Moss	2	0
Il Tancredi, with Accompaniments (arranged by Evans)	Rossini	3	6
Mother Bunch	Ware	2	6

FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.

*Di Tanti Palpiti, a Romance	R. W. Evans.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove	ditto	2	6
*My Lodging is on the Cold Grounds Fantasia and Waltz,	ditto	3	6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz	ditto	2	0

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of "Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo	ditto	3	6

* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.

Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars	ditto	2	6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1	6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
Away, those Doubts	Mr. Foster	Torri	1	6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2	0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr Bellamy	Evans	2	0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1	6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1	6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1	6
Deserted Cottage	ditto	ditto	1	6
Fain would I marry	ditto	ditto	1	6
My Lady hath a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1	6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1	6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1	6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1	6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1	6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr. Pearman	Evans	2	0
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2	0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1	6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1	6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Miss Kelly	Moss	1	6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1	6
The Moon will flake the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1	6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1	6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1	6

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet)	Miss Povey and Mr. Broadhurst	Moss	2	0

QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.

The Cadets	Ware	3	6
The Freischutz	Moss	3	0
The Royal York	Ware	3	0
The Midlothian	Evans	3	0
Les Moissonieurs.		3	0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star		1	0

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's street, (opposite Jermyn-street) London, and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin, established under Royal Patronage, for the Sale of PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the most approved makers, at the lowest manufacturers' prices,

By I. WILLIS and Co.

Who have this day published the following New Vocal Music.

NEW SONGS.	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.	s.	d.
Ah, Maria	Miss Ashe	S. C. Esq.	2	0
The Birds are singing sweet, my love	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	2	0
The Bonnie wee Wife	Miss Ashe	Mrs. Miles	2	0
Charity	Mr. Braham	W. H. Cutler	2	6
Cherry ripe (new edition)	Madame Vestris	C. E. Horn	2	0
The Death of a Soldier	Mr. Braham	J. A. Wade, Esq.	2	0
The Death of Byron	Mr. Smith	J. Smith	2	0
Fairy Queen	Mr. Millar	T. Millar	2	0
Flora M'Donald	Miss Stephens	M. Kelly	2	0
Forget thee	Miss Paton	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
The Lord's Prayer (an Anthem)	Mr. Braham	Dr. Kitchener.	1	6
Love can be waked	Mr. Pearman	Ditto	2	0
La Petite Mendiante	Miss Ashe	I. Willis	2	0
The Land of the Stranger	Mr. Braham	Sir J. Stevenson	2	0
May thy lot in life be happy	Miss Tree	C. E. Horn	2	0
Morning around us is beaming	Miss Goodall	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0
Oh hear my sweet Guitar	Mr. Horn	C. E. Horn	2	0
Oh say not 'twere a keener blow	Miss Tree	H. R. Bishop	2	0
Rule Britannia	Madame Catalani	P. Cianchettini	2	6

(A striking likeness is given of that celebrated Vocalist with this edition.)

The Rose	Mr. Sapio	G. F. Stansbury	2	0
Sereny (with Spanish words)	Miss Ashe	Signor Rugato	1	6
Such tears are bliss	Miss Stephens	J. C. Clifton	2	0
Tell me no more	Mr. Braham	J. Braham	1	6
Truth and young Romance	Mr. Sinclair	J. Sinclair	3	0
Will you with me, my loved Mary	Mr. Sapio	J. A. Wade, Esq	2	0

UPWARDS OF A QUARTER OF A MILLION OF MONEY.

JOS. DUDLEY WEBB, New State Lottery Office, 158, Strand, near Somerset House, solicits the attention of his Friends and the Public to the Drawing on NEXT TUESDAY, when the above immense sum will be distributed in the following Grand Prizes:—

4 of £30,000! 14 of £1,200! £545! £200! &c. &c.

And No Blanks, as every Ticket will receive 5l.

J. & J. SIVEWRIGHT beg to remind the Public, that Lotteries must cease with the present Drawings.

FOUR PRIZES OF

£30,000! £30,000! £30,000! £30,000!

All to be Drawn in One Day!—TUESDAY NEXT, (December 6.)

Tickets and Shares are on Sale at J. and J. SIVEWRIGHTS' fortunate Offices, No. 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 38, Haymarket, London.

No. 1, STRAND, next door to Northumberland House.

SWIFT & Co. respectfully inform the Public that their New Office, No. 1, Strand, is opened in consequence of the improvements now going on in that part of the Town, which will require them to quit their old Office, No. 12, Charing Cross, in a very short time. Tickets and Shares for the FOUR Grand Prizes of £30,000, and other Capitals, all to be drawn in One Day, Next TUESDAY, are on Sale at No. 1, Strand, and at Swift & Co.'s Old Offices, No. 11, Poultry, and 31, Aldgate High-street; also for the present, at 12, Charing Cross, as usual. Capitals to an immense amount have been Sold by SWIFT & Co. particularly No. 1,062, a Prize of £20,000, drawn the 18th of last Month; also 7,034, a Prize of £20,000, besides Twelve other Capitals, within a few Months.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—Mr. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, his peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every Operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten till Four.

SWAN WITH TWO NECKS, LAD-LANE.— General Coach Office.—Dover, Deal, Ramsgate, Margate, and Canterbury Patent Coaches daily.

ROYAL MAILS—Holyhead, through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Llangollen, Corwen and Bangor—Liverpool, through Dunchurch, Coventry, Coleshill, Lichfield, Newcastle, and Congleton—Bristol, through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, Calne, and Chippenham—Bath and Exeter, through Devizes, Melksham, Bridgewater, Wells, Taunton, and Collumpton—Exeter, Plymouth and Falmouth, through Salisbury, Blandford, and Dorchester—Manchester, through Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Derby, Ashbourne, Leeke, and Macclesfield—Birmingham (in 13 hours)—through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, and Coventry (the nearest road by 10 miles)—Carlisle and Edinburgh, through Chorley, Preston, and Garstang—Chester, through Salop, Ellesmere, and Wrexham—Kidderminster, through Birmingham, Dudley, and Stourbridge—Norwich, through Chelmsford, Colchester, and Ipswich—Milford Haven, through Bristol, Cardiff, Swansea, and Carmarthen—The above Mails leave every evening at half-past seven, Sundays excepted.

POST COACHES—Manchester (the Regulator) through Dunstable, Woburn, Newport, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Loughborough, Derby, Ashbourne, and Buxton, at a quarter before four o'clock—Holyhead (the Eclipse) in 32 hours, through Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Shiffnall, Shrewsbury, Oswestry, Corwen, and Bangor, every morning at a quarter before eight o'clock—Carlisle, Glasgow, and Edinburgh (the Regulator) through Manchester, Garstang, Kendal, Annan, and Dumfries, every evening at four o'clock—Southampton coach, through Staines, Hartford Bridge, Basingstoke, and Winchester, every morning, at a quarter before nine—Liverpool (the Royal Champion) in 27 hours, and driven through by four coachmen only, through Stoney Stratford, Coventry, Lichfield, Stafford, Stone, and Congleton, every afternoon at half-past two o'clock—Windsor and Eton coaches daily—Manchester (Royal Defiance), in 24 hours, through Dunstable, Northampton, Harborough, Leicester, Cavendish Bridge, Derby, Ashbourne, Leek, Macclesfield, and Stockport every day at five—Exeter (the Regulator), through Basingstoke, Overton, Andover, Salisbury, Blandford, Dorchester, Bridport, Axminster, and Honiton, every day at half-past two—Edinburgh and Glasgow (the Champion), through Newcastle, Lancaster, Kendal, Carlisle, and Dumfries, at half-past two o'clock—Bristol (Regent), through Reading, Newbury, Marlborough, and Bath, every afteroon at a quarter before four—Birmingham (Balloon), through Stoney Stratford, Daventry, Coventry, and Stone Bridge, every afternoon at half-past five—Falmouth and Plymouth light post coaches, every afternoon at two o'clock—Weymouth and Dorchester Magnet day coach (in 15 hours), at five every morning, and from the Gloucester Coffee-house, Piccadilly, at a quarter before six—Coventry light four-inside post coach, every afternoon, at a quarter before six—Nottingham post coach (in 18 hours) through St. Alban's, Dunstable, Woburn, Newport Pagnel, Market Harborough, Leicester, and Loughborough, at four in the afternoon—Chester and Park-gate new coach, every morning at a quarter before eight, and evening at half-past five o'clock—Worcester coaches, through Oxford, Chipping Norton, Pershore, and Broadway, every morning at six o'clock—Warwick and Leamington Spa post coach, every evening at half-past five—Tamworth, Atherstone and Hinchley coach, every day at half-past two o'clock—Derby post coach (the Regulator), in 18 hours, through Northampton, Market Harborough, and Leicester, every day at four—Tenby, Merthyr, and Pembroke post coaches, every afternoon at four o'clock—Dudley and Stourbridge four-inside post coach, every afternoon at five—Dover coaches, through Rochester, Chatham, Canterbury, Margate, and Ramsgate, at seven every morning, and half-past six in the evening—Paris new light Diligence, by way of Dover, every morning at seven, and half-past six in the evening—Taunton, through Cross to Bridgwater, every afternoon at four o'clock, at reduced fares—Birmingham and Holyhead new and very superior day-coach (the Eclipse) through Stoney Stratford and Coventry, at a quarter before eight o'clock. Passengers have the privilege of resting one night at Birmingham, and proceeding the next morning, without additional expence: the Eclipse travels nine miles an hour, and is upon a new and improved plan of safety.—Cheltenham and Gloucester light post-coach, carries four inside, through Oxford, every evening at five—Royston and Buntingford post-coach, every afternoon at half-past two—Norwich new safety day Times post-coach (in 14 hours), and driven through by one coachman only, at five in the morning.—Cambridge Tally Ho! fast coach (in five hours), at a quarter past two o'clock every afternoon, and from the Flower-pot, Bishopsgate-street, at half-past two—Canterbury fast coach, Tally Ho! every afternoon at half-past two (in seven hours)—Brighton coaches at half-past eight, and half-past ten o'clock every morning—Milford Haven new post coach, through Newport, Cardiff, Neath, Swansea, Carmarthen, Narbeth, and Haverford West, every afternoon at four o'clock—Caravans upon springs to most parts of the kingdom.——N.B. Parcels and luggage conveyed daily to all parts of the North, and to every city and manufacturing town in the kingdom. W. WATERHOUSE and Co. Proprietors.

 The Proprietors of the above carriages beg leave to inform the Public, that they will not be accountable for any parcel or package whatever, nor for any passenger's luggage above the value of 5l. unless the same be entered and paid for accordingly at the time of the delivery of any such parcel, package, or passenger's luggage to them or their agents.—Goods insured at a moderate rate.

BIRTHS.

At Great Yarmouth, on the 27th ult the lady of Capt. R. H. Barclay, Royal Navy, of a daughter.

In Upper Bedford-place, Russell-square, the wife of Nathaniel Ellison, Esq. of a daughter, still-born.

DIED.

At his brother's house, in Upper Wimpole-street, Edward Calvert, Esq.

On the 29th ult. Mrs. Lodington, relict of the Rev. J. Lodington, late Vicar of Oundle, Northamptonshire, aged 70.

On the 29th ult. in the 85th year of his age, Mr. Watkinson, father of the Rev. R. Watkinson, of Charter-house.

London: Printed and Published by R. D. RICHARDS, at 343, Strand, corner of Catherine-street.

THE AGE.

" THE VERY AGE AND BODY OF THE TIME."

No. 32. SUNDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1825. Price 7d.

KING'S THEATRE.—Mr. EBERS most respectfully begs leave to acquaint the Nobility, Subscribers to the Opera, and the Public, that this Theatre will open on Saturday the 31st instant. The following principal dancers are en route, and will probably arrive in the course of to-morrow :—Mesdames Brocard, Evelina, Fleurot, Pauline, Rosalie, Delatre, Genevaux, Levasseur. Messieurs Coulon, Gosselin, and Theodore.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—To MORROW Evening, an Operatic Drama; The CAMP; and GIOVANNI in LONDON.

Tuesday—Der Freischutz; after which (in consequence of Mr. Liston's engagement, and who will perform on Friday) the romantic drama of Faustus.

Wednesday—The Hypocrite. Dr. Cantwell, Mr. Dowton; Maw-worm, Mr. Liston; Colonel Lambert, Mr. Wallack; Charlotte, Mrs. Davison. With Love, Law, and Physic. Lubin Log, Mr. Liston; Flexible, Mr. Harley; Andrew, Mr. Knight.

ADELPHI THEATRE.—Under the Management of the New Proprietors, Messrs. Terry and Yates.

MONDAY, December 19, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, (no performance on Saturday, bring Christmas Eve,) THE PILOT, or a Tale of the Sea. The Pilot, Mr. Terry. After which will be produced, for the first time, a Burletta, in one Act, called CHRISTMAS BOXES. To conclude with Success! or A Hit if You Like It.

On Monday, the 26th of December, A New Grand Christmas Pantomime. Clown, Signor Paulo.

Agent for the Private Boxes at the west end of the town, Mr. Sams, at the Royal Circulating Library, Pall Mall, opposite St. James's Palace.

Boxes, 4s.---Pit, 2s.---Gal. 1s.---Doors to open at Six, commence a Quarter before Seven.---Half-price, at Half-past Eight.---Box Office open from 10 till 4, where Places may be taken, and a Private Box had nightly, of Messrs. Campbell and Kirkham.

MASQUERADE and CARNIVAL, under the immediate direction of six Noblemen, will be given at the Argyll Rooms, on Thursday Evening, December 29. The high reputation which these Entertainments attained last year, has induced the Directors to arrange for the whole of the Masquerades to be given at the Argyll Rooms this Season, and under the sanction of the Noblemen who have honored them with their immediate patronage, a Series of Masked Fetes will be brought forward, exceeding all former occasions in brilliancy and magnificence. In appointing the first Grand Masquerade for Thursday, the 29th instant, the Directors have the pleasure to announce, that regulations have been made by which the Company will be rendered more select than hitherto, and the Nobility and Gentry are assured that Tickets will be disposed of to none but persons of Rank, Fashion, and Talent, Families of distinction who may wish to mix in the festive throng, or Ladies of "haut ton," desirous of partaking of the true spirit of the Entertainment, by assuming Characters, are also informed, that the annoyance and freedom of disorderly persons will be strictly guarded against, as Officers, in various disguises, will be stationed in the Rooms to secure ease and prevent interruption to the Masquers.

The Directors pledge themselves that the Masquerade on Thursday, the 29th instant, will be the most Select, Splendid, and Festive Entertainment ever produced, and worthy, in every respect, of the improved Taste, and the Fashion and Talent of the Metropolis.

 For Tickets, and Boxes to view the Masquerade, apply to the Sub-Committee, who sit daily at Mr. CHARLES WRIGHT'S, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket.

☞ Mr. CHARLES WRIGHT is appointed by the Directors, purveyor of the Champaigne and other Wines on the occasion.

By ORDER.—No person can be admitted without Mask and Domino.

THE TOMB of BONAPARTE at ST. HELENA, with the ceremony observed at his interment, displaying 2000 Figures, is added to Marshall's Original Peristrephic Panorama (in the Great Room, Spring Gardens,) of the Casualties of Napoleon, from his defeat at Waterloo; representing 13 Views of St. Helena, the Battles of Genappe, Trafalgar, &c. The figures, ships of war, &c. being on the largest scale, and accompanied by a full military band, give a complete sensation of reality. Day Exhibitions from 12 to 5—Evening ditto, by gas, at 7 and half-past 8 o'clock.

A LADY of most respectable connexions wishes to obtain a Situation, either as Preparatory Governess, HouseKeeper to a single Gentleman, or companion to a Lady; emolument not so much a consideration as a comfortable and permanent situation, (the country would be preferred.) Letters addressed to A. B. at Mr. Onwhyn's, Stationer, Catherine-street, Strand, will meet attention.

Is loading fast, and will sail shortly,

FOR VAN DIEMAN's LAND and NEW SOUTH Wales, the fine new fast-sailing Snow, FAIRFIELD, A. I, coppered, burden 300 tons. JAMES WORK, Commander. Lying in the London Dock. Has excellent accommodation for Passengers. For Freight or Passage, apply to Buckles, Bagster and Buchanan, 33, Mark-lane.

TURKEY COFFEE, of Fine Quality, at the following Reduced Prices :—Raw, 2s. 6d. per lb.; Roasted, 3s. per lb.—The Public are respectfully informed, that Government having REDUCED the DUTY on TURKEY COFFEE, they may now purchase that article at the above-mentioned reduced prices, warranted of fine quality, at Messrs. MARSHALL and Co.'s Tea and Coffee Warehouse, 12, Southampton-street, Strand.

INDIA SHAWLS.—Reduction of Duties.—The King's Ministers having adopted the wise and liberal policy of reducing the duties on foreign goods, cleared for home consumption, DAVIES, of Bond-street, ever anxious to pursue trade upon fair and liberal principles, begs to inform his friends, the public, he is now offering his valuable assortment of India Shawls, for the price of Scotch, at his warehouse, No. 71.

PORTUGAL HOTEL AND FOREIGN WINE ROOMS, 155, Fleet-street, opposite Bouverie-street. In this new establishment are provided excellent well-aired beds and accommodations peculiarly commodious, united with moderate charges, and the wines with which the tables of these rooms are supplied are of the very choicest description, whether from the wood or in bottle; and French Wines may be obtained in pint bottles. A separate well-ventilated room is appropriated to the smokers of the Havannah Cigar. Soups, Sandwiches, Dinners, and Suppers, are also provided.

PERRING'S PATENT DOUBLE EDGED

NEWLY INVENTED WATERPROOF BEAVER HATS, of a peculiar fabric, having a short rich nap, that will not injure by rain or exposure in warm climates, possessing lightness and durability, in a variety of modern shapes, at 23s. and 26s., may be had at PERRING'S Manufactory, 413, Strand, and at Hammersmith. Also, the Patent Double-edged Silk Hat, warranted to resist all weathers, light and elastic to the head, will wear twice as long as those made in the usual way, price 17s. An extensive assortment of Ladies' Beaver Bonnets of the newest shapes, elegantly trimmed, from 20s. to 50s. Children's Hats of every description. Gentlemen's Waterproof Travelling and Forage Caps, in great variety.—Wholesale and Shipping Orders attended to, with punctuality and dispatch.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—TO BE LET, To-morrow, and every other Evening, during the Season, TWO PRIVATE SPLENDID STAGE-BOXES.

Eight persons to each Box, 2l. 2s. (the most economical and commodious in the Theatre). Covent Garden Box, for Six persons, 2l. 12s. 6d.—Several Personal Admissions for the present Season, admitting to all Benefits, Oratorios, &c. 5l. 5s. Boxes, Tickets, &c. for all the Theatres, bought and sold by CHARLES WRIGHT, next the King's Theatre, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, who has just returned from the Vineyards of Ay, Avize, and Piery, with a parcel of the finest Champagne, 63s. and 72s. per Dozen.

ALBION FIRE AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS,

EMPOWERED BY ACT OF PARLIAMENT.

CAPITAL—ONE MILLION.

The Premiums of Fire Insurances effected with this Company, of the three ordinary Classes, have, with certain exceptions, been reduced as follows :—

In the first Class.....to 1s. 6d. per Cent.
In the second Class....to 2s. 6d. per Cent.
In the third Class.....to 4s. 6d. per Cent.

Fire Policies, the renewals of which become due at Christmas, will expire, unless renewed within fifteen days from that period.

The Company continues to undertake Insurances on Lives, on liberal Terms. No Charge is made on such Insurances, in the way of Admission Fine, or Entrance Money; and a large Commission is allowed to Solicitors, and others, by whom such Insurances are effected. WARNER PHIPPS, Secretary.

MUSIC just published by J. FENTUM, 78, Strand: "Why are you wandering here, I pray?" the celebrated ballad sung by Madame Vestris, in the operatic comedy of Sweethearts and Wives; arranged as Variations for the Pianoforte expressly for the young ladies at Mrs. Seward's Establishment, Rectory House, Hillingdon, by Mr. Nathan. Also, the 15th Edition of the celebrated Song, "Why are you wandering here, I pray?" by Mr. Nathan.—☞ The popular Song, "Remember, love, remember," sung with universal applause by Miss Love, may be had at the above warehouse.

NEW HARP MUSIC.—Published by J. Gow and SON, Music Sellers to his Majesty, 162, Regent-street.

Bochsa's Fantasia a la Russe, in which is introduced the Bells of St. Petersburgh, a Russian Waltz, and Cossack Song, 3s. 6d. "Comin thro' the Rye," with variations; and celebrated Chorus from Preciosa, by T. P. Chipp, each 3s. "Cease your funning," with variations by Challoner, 2s. 6d. And Six favourite French Airs, with variations by Noderman, single. All the works of Niel Gow and Sons, to be had as above.

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. for Hire in Town or Country.

NEW MUSIC.—Il Crociato in Egitto, arranged for the Pianoforte (with Flute Accompt. ad lib.) in 3 Books, by Thomas Valentine, price 4s. each. New editions of the following popular Airs, with Variations, for the Piano-forte, by ditto :—The Sicilian Air, on which is founded "Home, sweet Home," 2s. 6d.; The Bridesmaid's Chorus, 2s. 6d.; Isabella, a Spanish Air, 2s. 6d.; Rousseau's Dream, 2s. 6d.; Cease your Funning, 2s. 6d.; Sul Margine, 2s. 6d.; Auld lang Syne, 2s.; We're a' Noddin, 2s.

Published at FALKNER's Opera Music Warehouse, 3, Old Bond-street.

Also, just published, Divertisementi di Saloni, a Series of a Selection of Italian Airs, for the Harp and Piano-forte, by W. H. Steil, in 8 Nos. each 4s.

NEW AND POPULAR SONGS, composed by W. West, and published by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand.

CHERRIES Oh! sung by Miss Paton, 2s. "Come o'er the Stream, Charlie," sung by ditto, 2s. "Oh, happy loved Spain, 2s.;" and the celebrated Cavatina, "The Arrows of Love," 2s.—both sung by Madame Vestris. Also No. I. of a Series of Spanish Melodies, with embellishments, &c. the Poetry by Lord Nugent, 12s. 6d. New Piano-forte Music, composed by R. W. Evans, "Home, sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo, founded on the admired Sicilian air of that name, 4s. 6d. "Let us haste to Kelvin Grove," a Rondo, Second Edition, 2s. 6d.

NEW MUSIC.—The Music in the Operatic Piece, 'TWAS I, performed at Covent Garden Theatre, consisting of the Overture, Chorusses, Songs, March, Finale, &c. composed by J. Watson. The following Songs and Ballads in the Opera, sung by Madame Vestris. Price 1s. 6d. each.

"Where's the harm of a Little Kiss?"
"When my Sweetheart away from me flies."
"When at your feet a lover kneels."

LAVENU and CO, 24, Edwards-street, Manchester-square; and W. CARD, 98, Quadrant, Regent-street.—Where may be had, the popular Song, "Ah Maiden, Gardez vous," sung by Madame Vestris, at the Haymarket and Covent Garden Theatres. Price 1s. 6d.

PIANOFORTES.

ROYAL MUSICAL REPOSITORY, 55, St. James's-street, opposite Jermyn-street, London; and 7, Westmorland-street, Dublin.

J. WILLIS & Co. beg most respectfully to inform the Nobility and Gentry, that their Repository is constantly supplied with a splendid assortment of GRAND, CABINET, COTTAGE, SQUARE and CIRCULAR PIANOFORTES, with the latest improvements; also single and double action HARPS, by the most eminent makers, at the lowest manufacturer's prices.

Instruments let out on hire, and sent to any part of the kingdom.

☞ An assortment of French Quadrille Books, with elegant coloured engravings, suitable for Christmas presents.

MUSICAL NOVELTY.

Just published by T. LINDSAY, 217, Regent-street, and CLEMENTI and CO. 26, Cheapside.

NEW FOREIGN MUSIC, AS CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S GIFTS.

R. COCKS and CO. most respectfully inform the MUSICAL WORLD, that they have just imported from the Continent a most Splendid Assortment of all the Popular Works of every celebrated Foreign Composer (both Vocal and Instrumental), including Mozart's Operas complete, for the Piano and Voice, with Italian and German words, in 8 vols. price 6l. 6s.; also the same without the words, together with all Rossini's Operas, with and without the words, price each from 12s. to 22s.; and Meyerbeer's Il Crociato, with and without the words, price each from 20s. to 36s.

R. C. and Co. have likewise just published all the popular works of Camille Plevel for the Pianoforte with a Flute ad lib.

N.B.—A most liberal discount allowed for cash. No. 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square.

THE MELOGRAPHICON, an entirely new and highly interesting Musical Work, by which an INTERMINABLE NUMBER OF MELODIES may be produced, and Amateurs who have a taste for writing Poetry enabled to set their verses to Music, in a variety of Measures, for the VOICE and PIANO-FORTE, without the necessity of a scientific knowledge of the Art. Price One Guinea, complete, in boards; or separately, in two books, at 12s. and 16s. 6d. each.

This very ingenious work requires no preparatory study, and being equally adapted to juvenile or matured capacities, is strongly recommended as an eligible CHRISTMAS PRESENT, or NEW-YEAR'S GIFT to young people, by whom, during the long nights of the approaching Winter, it will be found an endless source of amusement.

Five Specimen Songs, composed from "The Melographicon," are published sepacately, as a test of its capabilities, price only 2s. for the five.

 T. Lindsay has recently published a great variety of New Flute Music.

CHERRY BOUNCE, Cavatina, written by a Young Gentleman on his hearing the celebrated Song, "Cherry Ripe," the music by a professor of eminence, price 2s.

"To you dear Maid," New Song, written by J. B. Thompson, Esq., the music by J. Laonbley, price 1s. 6d.

This Song is adapted to a beautiful original Venetian air; which, for chasteness and elegant simplicity, may vie with Song "Sweet Home."

"Love breathes in every Plant and Flower," by ditto, 1s. 6d.

"Light of my Soul, my Azza's dead," poetry by J. Goodwin, Esq., music by ditto, 2s.

The productions of this Gentleman were only intended for his own immediate circle; but from the solicitations of his friends, he has been prevailed upon to present the above Bagatelles to the public; the unprecedented success of which will induce him occasionally to offer further compositions, which he trusts will equally merit the patronage of the Musical World.

Shortly, by the same, "I'll buy a Heart," in answer to Mad. Vestris' Song, "Who'll buy a Heart."

Published by Wm. Rose, 53, Strand, near Buckingham-street.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, by WELSH and HAWES, Musicsellers to the Royal Family, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Moscheles—Martial Impromptu, on the celebrated song REVENGE.....	3 6
——— Brilliant Polonaise, in F.....	4 0
——— Rondoletto, on the favorite Notturno, by Paer.....	3 0
Hummel, I. N. Variations on a celebrated march from Cendrillon.....	4 0
——— Variations and coda, on a favorite Air by Gluck.....	2 6
——— Do. on an Austrian Melody.....	3 0
Mayseder—Polonaise, in A..	3 0
——— Serena i vaghi rai, an admired Air from Rossini's Opera of Semiramide, variations.....	4 0

Valentine.

1. Russian Air, variations, ...	2 6	4. Kelvin Grove, Rondo,	2 6
2. Irish Melody, ditto, ditto, ...	2 6	5. Love, good night, var.	2 6
3. Down the burn, ditto, ...	2 6	6. Green grow the rushes, O!	2 6

Weber—Selection of Airs from Der Freischutz, with Flute, ad lib. in 4 books, by S. F. Rimbault, each 3 0

HARP MUSIC.

Bochsa, N. C.—A Selection of the most popular Airs from Sor's Ballet of Cendrillon.....	5 0
——— Cease your Funning.....Variations	4 0
——— My lodging is on the cold ground ..... Do.	3 0
——— Fall of Paris (a Russian Air)..... Rondo	3 0
——— Fall mi belza il core Dipiacer .....Variations	4 0
Chipp, T. P.—Charlie is my darling..... Do,	2 6
——— Love Good Night..... Do.	2 6
Meyer, C.—We're a' Noddin, at our house at hame..... Rondo	3 0
——— Ye banks and braes.....Variations	5 0
Crotch, Dr.—Specimens of various styles of Music, referred to in a course of Lectures read at Oxford and London (a new edition, with a supplement to each) Vol. 1, 2, and 3.....	25 0

NEW MUSIC.—Just published by WELSH and HAWES, Musicsellers to the Royal Family, at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

Czerny C. Brilliant Rondo, from the Opera of Elisa e Claudia -	5s.
——— Brilliant Toccatta - - - - Op. 63 -	3s.
Hummel, I. N.—Scherzo - - - - No. 1.—Op. 107 -	2s.
——— Russian Rondo - - - No. 2.—Op. 107 -	2s. 6d.
——— La Contemplazioni - - No. 3.—Op. 107 -	2s.
——— Brilliant Rondo - - No. 4.—Op. 107 -	2s.
——— Ario con Variazioni - - No. 5.—Op. 107 -	2s. 6d.
——— Hungarian Rondo - - No. 6.—Op. 107 -	2s.
Ployel C.—Rondeau alla polacca - - - - - - -	3s.
Ries, Ferd.—The Night is rainy - - - - vars. -	3s. 6d.
Moscheles—Rondoletto on a favorite Notturno by Paer - - - -	3s.

N. B.—Preludes for the Pianoforte; to which is added the Rudiments of that Instrument, by Dr. CROTCH. Price 8s.

Just published,

NEW VIOLONCELLO MUSIC, arranged as Solos, with a Bass accompaniment (ad lib.) by J. PICKARD.

Sixty approved and fashionable Airs, selected from the works of the most esteemed authors, in two books, each 5s.

In offering this work to the notice of the young practitioners on the Violoncello, the Author flatters himself they will find it extremely useful; and as the general complaint with amateurs of this manly instrument is, that the arrangements of authors are mostly too difficult, affording little or no amusement to the student, he has in the above work endeavoured to blend amusement with instruction.

A selection of the most admired Airs, Duets, and Chorusses, from the celebrated opera, "Der Freischutz," 5s.---Home! sweet Home! with variations, 2s.---Isabel, ditto, 2s.---Aurora che sorgerai, ditto, 2s.---Jager Chorus, ditto, 2s. Gipsy March, from Preciosa, 2s.---Canone from Tarrare, 2s. As a Duet for two Violoncellos, The Battle of Prague, 3s.

This work is so arranged as to produce all those striking effects required in this celebrated composition.

London: Dover and Henderson, 68, Chancery-lane

In one vol. 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

"AN AUTUMN in GREECE," and "GREECE to the CLOSE of 1825." The former by H. Lytton Bulwer, Esq. in letters to C. Brinsley Sheridan, Esq.; the latter by a resident with the Greeks, recently arrived in England. Dedicated to the Right Hon. Geo. Canning.

Printed for JOHN EBERS, 27, Old Bond-street.

In a few days, in 2 vols. post 8vo.

NAVAL SKETCH-BOOK; or, the Service Afloat and Ashore. With characteristic Reminiscences, Fragments, and Opinions, on Professional, Colonial, and Political Subjects; interspersed with copious Notes, Biographical, Historical, Critical, and Illustrative.

By an OFFICER of RANK.

Printed for GEO. B. WHITTAKER, Ave-Maria-Lane.

Just published, Second Edition, with Twelve Plates and Map, 2 vols. foolscap 8vo. 16s.

SIX MONTHS' RESIDENCE and TRAVELS in MEXICO, containing Remarks on the present State of New Spain, its Natural Productions, State of Society, Manufactures, Trade, Agriculture and Antiquities. By W. BULLOCK, F.L.S.

Proprietor of the late London Museum.

Printed for JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

THE SKY LARK—Songs set to Music.—In one large volume duodecimo, embellished with a fine Engraving from a Drawing by Corbould, price 4s. 6d. boards.

THE SKY LARK; a Choice Selection of the most admired Popular Songs, Heroic, Plaintive, Sentimental, Humerous, and Bacchanalian. The whole arranged for the Voice, Violin, and Flute.

London: Published by THOMAS TEGG, 73, Cheapside; R. Griffin and Co. Glasgow; and M. Baudry, Paris.

MASON ON SELF-KNOWLEDGE—Chiswick Press—In one pocket volume, elegantly printed and embellished with an Engraving after Stothard, R.A. price 2s. 6d. boards,

SELF-KNOWLEDGE; a Treatise, showing the Nature and Benefit of that important Science, and the Way to Attain it; intermixed with various Reflections and Observations on Human Nature.

By JOHN MASON, M.A.

Chiswick: Printed by C. and C. Whittingham, for THOMAS TEGG, 73, Cheapside; Gosling and Egley, New Bond-street; and R. Griffin and Co. Glasgow.

HOWARD'S BEAUTIES OF SHERIDAN.—In one vol. royal 32mo. price 2s. 6d. boards,

THE BEAUTIES of SHERIDAN, consisting of Selections from his Poems, Dramas, and Speeches.

By ALFRED HOWARD.

"This work will afford to the reader a complete picture of the powerful mind of Sheridan, in all its varied forms. It contains the finest specimens of his poetry (in fact all his best poems); of his dramatic writings, and also of his orations. As a supplement and companion to the late excellent Life of Sheridan, by Mr. Moore, it will be found to be without a rival."

London: Printed by T. Davison, for THOMAS TEGG, Cheapside; sold by Griffin and Co. Glasgow; and Westley and Tyrrell, Dublin.

LITERARY SOUVENIR.—The Large Paper Edition of the LITERARY SOUVENIR, for 1826, edited by ALARIC A. WATTS, with Proof Impressions of the Plates on India Paper, is now ready, price 1l. 4s.

Printed for Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 5, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

Of whom may be had, the Small Paper Edition, price 12s. A few Proof Impressions of the Plates have been printed on India paper, any of which may be had separate.

ELEGANT CHRISTMAS PRESENTS,

Just published, by R. ACKERMANN, Strand.

THE FORGET-ME-NOT FOR 1826, price 12s.

CHRISTMAS TALES for 1825, in a neat volume, 12mo. price 7s.; to be continued annually. The pieces comprising this volume are partly original and partly translated from foreign writers of eminence.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL MEMOIRS of FERDINAND FRANCK, in one very neat pocket volume, price 4s. A portion of these Memoirs appeared in the first and second volumes of the "FORGET-ME-NOT," for the pages of which the whole was destined; but, in consequence of the length to which they have unexpectedly extended, the Publisher has printed them separately, in the same form as the "FORGET-ME-NOT."

Also, THE NEW DOLL; or GRANDMAMMA'S GIFT, with six plates, half-bound, price 4s.

A PLEASING APPEARANCE.

THE Grand Characteristic of Mrs. VINCENT'S CELEBRATED LOTION is,—that it is no repellant, but gently and kindly opens the Pores of the Skin, extracting and dulcifying the Morbid Virus lurking in it. The most tender Lady or Child may at all times make use of it with the greatest safety. It removes every kind of Coarseness, Eruption, and unpleasant Appearance, and renders the Skin clear, smooth, and transparent. Nothing has ever yet been found to compare to its effects and excellence; but its unexampled reputation having excited various Imitations, it is particularly recommended to ask for MRS. VINCENT'S GOWLAND'S LOTION, and see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the genuine.

The following is a letter from Lady Catherine Lennox to Mrs. Vincent, the Proprietor :—

"Lady Catherine Lennox has the pleasure of stating, that, by the use of two quart bottles of Mrs. Vincent's Gowland's Lotion, she is perfectly cured of a violent eruption upon her face and arms. She was recommended by her Physician to make use of the Lotion, which has exceeded her most sanguine expectations. Mrs. V. is at liberty to make use of her Name, as having experienced its healing Virtues; and Lady Lennox will also recommend it as much as possible within the sphere of her acquaintance."

Sold, by appointment of Mrs. Vincent, at Bacon's, 150, Oxford-street; Butler's 4, Cheapside; Newbery and Edwards's, St. Paul's; Sutton's, Bow Church Yard; Barclay's, Fleet Market; and by all the most respectable Perfumers and Dealers in Genuine Medicines, in every Town in Europe, in Quarts, 8s. 6d.; Pints, 5s. 6d.; Half-pints, 2s. 9d.

 To prevent Counterfeits, see M. E. VINCENT on the label of the Genuine

LONDON BANKS.

A Cabinet Council was held on Thursday at the Foreign Office, upon the present alarming state of public credit, and the result of the deliberations, we are happy to be assured, fully answer the expectations that have been formed by the Public upon this important subject. There were present the Lord Chancellor, the First Lord of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Secretary Canning, Mr. Secretary Peel, Lord Melville, Lord Bexley, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Wynn. The deliberations of the Council continued from three to five o'clock, when the Earl of Liverpool and the Chancellor of the Exchequer repaired to the Treasury Chambers at Whitehall, where the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank were in waiting, to whom the Financial Ministers communicated the result of the Cabinet discussions. The importance of this interview may be inferred from the length of its duration (for it lasted upwards of an hour and an half); and we think we may safely venture to congratulate the nation upon the eventual salutary effect of the measures agreed to be adopted on this most interesting occasion.

MEETING OF HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTERS.

The Earl of Liverpool and the Chancellor of the Exchequer returned to London Friday morning, about half-past ten o'clock, and in the course of the morning the Ministers were busily engaged with most of the Cabinet Ministers in London, and various public and official gentlemen. Messengers were dispatched in different directions, without any cessation. The consultations were held at the houses of the Chancellor of the Exchequer and of the Earl of Liverpool; but principally at the latter; in fact the Noble Earl's house was in a constant state of bustle during the whole day, and probably a more important subject never occupied the attention of any Minister, especially under such extraordinary and unexpected circumstances.

At two o'clock the Earl of Harrowby, the Lord President of his Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council, arrived in town in his travelling chariot and four, having travelled with great speed from his seat in Staffordshire. The Noble Earl alighted at the Foreign Office by the entrance in the Park, his carriage proceeding to the Noble Earl's house, in Grosvenor-square. The Noble Earl, after having had an interview with Mr. Secretary Canning for some time, went to the Earl of Liverpool's house, in Whitehall-place, and joined in the consultation with the Earl of Liverpool, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Viscount Melville, Mr. Huskisson, and Mr. Secretary Peel. The Noble Earl returned from the consultation to Mr. Secretary Canning, at the Foreign Office.

At four o'clock in the afternoon a very important meeting took place at the Earl of Liverpool's house, Whitehall, consisting of the Cabinet Ministers most conversant with Finance, viz. the Noble Earl, as First Lord of the Treasury, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Huskisson, Messrs. Herries and Harrison, the Secretaries to the Treasury, Mr. Secretary Peel, as Secretary of State for the Home Department, the Governor and Deputy Governor of the Bank of England, John Pearse, Esq. Samuel Thornton, Esq. and another Bank Director, some of the Commissioners for the reduction of the National Debt, S. Higham, Esq. Secretary and Comptroller General to the Commissioners. The meeting continued in deliberation till half-past five o'clock, when the Governor, Deputy-Governor, and Directors of the Bank, retired. The Cabinet Ministers and Official Gentlemen remained in consultation till near a quarter past six o'clock.

MEETING AT THE MANSION-HOUSE.

On Wednesday a meeting was held in a private-room in the Mansion-house, to take into consideration the existing agitation in the city, and to adopt such measures as should be deemed necessary. Only persons who had been invited to attend the meeting were admitted. The following is a copy of the letter of invitation:—

"The Lord Mayor presents compliments to ———, and by the desire of several merchants and bankers, requests the favour of his attendance at the Mansion-house, at half-past one precisely, upon urgent business connected with the present state of the city.

"Mansion-house, 11 o'clock, Dec. 14."

At two o'clock the Lord Mayor took the chair, there being then assembled about 150 of the most respectable merchants and traders in the city. Amongst others we observed, Messrs. Irving, Stephen Thornton, Baring, Bazett, Tooke, Larpent, Thompson, Macauley, Hart Davis, Rickards, Holland, the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the East India Company, G. Hibbert, —— Innes, M.P. Bonham, Fletcher, Alexander, M.P. Crawford, Bainbridge, Melville, Ralkes, Solly, Warre, Maclean, Gibson, Buckle, Lyall, C. Bosanquet, J. Bosanquet, Alderman Wood, Alderman Thompson, Alderman Garratt, Alderman Thorp, Alderman Atkins, T. Wilson, M.P. Longman, Hurst, Bonsor, Baldwin, and Sir C. Flower, and Sir James Shaw, &c. &c.

The Lord Mayor observed, that it was almost unnecessary to state, that the meeting had its origin in the alarm which prevailed in the city of London respecting Bankers. It would appear presumptuous in him to do more than request the serious attention of the meeting to whatever might be submitted to them. If the proceedings of an assembly derived weight from the character of the persons composing it, the result of the present meeting could not fail to be considered of importance, formed as it was of the highly respectable individuals whom he saw around him. It had been, at a late hour on the preceding night, determined that the meeting should be called. The proceeding did not originate entirely with himself; he had been guided by the advice of his brother magistrates, and other persons who were greatly respected in the city.

Mr. Yonge hoped that the projectors of the meeting were prepared to submit some resolutions to the assembly: it would, in his opinion, be a waste of time, and serve no good purpose, to enter upon the discussion of abstract principles.

The Lord Mayor stated that Mr. Wilson, the member for the city, had something to propose to the meeting.

Mr. Wilson said that he felt some diffidence in addressing the meeting, and wished that the task which had been imposed upon him had fallen into other hands. He felt, however, that as one of the representatives of the city of London, it was his duty at all times to obey the call of his fellow-citizens, and to render them all the service in his power. (Hear.) Every body must be aware of the difficulties under which the monied interest in the city of London at present laboured. It was hardly necessary that he should attempt to explain the way in which those difficulties had originated. They had their origin in an excess of riches. People found themselves a short time back overwhelmed, as it were, with money, and, as was always the case in such circumstances, did not make the most prudent use of it. Merchants and bankers were induced to lock up their money in securities, not always convertible on a sudden, and an alteration having taken place in the value of money, and certain changes in the nature of trade, in consequence of certain acts of Parliament, the present unfortunate state of things had thereby been produced. It was unnecessary to dwell upon the present unfortunate circumstances; it was sufficient to know that they were the natural result of the causes to which he had briefly alluded. The committee who had summoned the present meeting had found great difficulty in coming to any conclusion on the subject; but they had finally framed a resolution which it would be his duty to propose to the meeting for adoption. At the same time he felt it necessary to state that the committee would be most happy if any gentleman present would propose any thing which was in unison with their resolution or could be substituted for it. The resolution of the committee was perfectly simple: it would pledge no person who supported it to any particular theory. It consisted of no more than an expression of opinion that all that was now going on was for the best. The consequences of such a declaration proceeding from a meeting like the present would be most beneficial; it would convince people that more depended on themselves than on any body else. What was now chiefly to be complained of was, the want of confidence in each other which prevailed among the mercantile men. (Hear.) A more striking instance of the evils resulting from a want of confidence could not be adduced than the case of a banking-house which had lately stopped payment, although the individual at the head of the concern was as rich, or perhaps richer, than any person present, and was prepared to pay 20s. 30s. or probably 60s. in the pound. (Hear.) It was the duty of all, as members of a great community, to support one another, and by so doing confidence would be restored, and the present alarm would subside. He was happy to state that their chief magistrate had received an assurance from the Bank Directors, that they would do every thing in their power to remedy the existing evils both in the city and in the country. The hon. gentleman then read the resolution prepared by the committee, which was as follows:—

"That it having been stated to the meeting that the Directors of the Bank of England are extending their accommodation to the public, both in town and country, by every means in their power, the meeting, under all the circumstances, does not think it expedient that a public meeting should be called."

Mr. Yonge was desirous that the resolution just read by the hon. member should not be immediately proposed, because the question of the expediency of calling a public meeting would depend very much on what might be done at the present meeting. At present his opinion was against the calling of a public meeting; but before he came to a determination on the subject he wished to hear the declaration which was to be submitted to the meeting.

Mr. Wilson said, the hon. gentleman was mistaken in supposing that any declaration was to be read to the meeting. The committee, after giving the subject their fullest consideration, had determined not to draw up any declaration, because they were convinced that the principles it maintained on the facts it proclaimed would be supported by one party; they would, perhaps, be opposed by another; and that the unanimity which it was so desirable to preserve on such an occasion as the present would be destroyed.

Mr. Baring observed, that unhappily it was impossible to entertain any doubt that the state of things at present existing was as unfortunate and as pregnant with evil as it had been described to be. For his own part he had recently had little to do with business, and had not been in London for the last three months. Present circumstances, however, had made him feel that it was hardly fair, in any person connected with the city, to remain a passive spectator of the scene of distress and difficulties which surrounded him. (Applause.) If he had not attended the Committee for the purpose of assisting in drawing up resolutions to be submitted to the Meeting, it was because his mind was not made up as to the course which it would be proper to pursue—whether any thing should be done, and if any thing, what that should be—whether public interference was advisable, or whether the present evils should not be left to cure themselves. The same awkwardness which he had felt on this point had, he found, been participated in by others, and the consequence was that they were now assembled without any person being prepared to propose any thing very decisive for their adoption. What had been proposed by the member for the city was certainly consistent with truth, and calculated to do good as far as it went. There could be no doubt that it would be productive of benefit to make known the determination of the Bank Directors to act with promptitude and decision, in endeavouring to relieve the distresses which it was mainly in their power to alleviate. (Hear.) At the same time he had hoped that the merchants of London, having assembled together on such an occasion, would have put forth something like a general declaration of the substantial solidity of the banking establishments of their city, than which there were none in any place on the face of the globe which presented more real security. (Applause.) If it were true, as had been stated, that houses had been compelled to stop, which nevertheless were capable of paying 40s. or 60s. in the pound, it was a calamity which must be met by an expression of public confidence, and by acting upon that expression in a practical manner. Any person who witnessed the fever of last year might have anticipated the distresses of the present; not, certainly, to the extent to which they had proceeded, for they had gone beyond all calculation, and they were now prolonged by a panic—a mere noise and sound—which magnified the public misfortunes, and attributed to them greater importance than they merited. It was impossible that there could be two opinions on the primary cause of the present state of things, and therefore it was useless to dwell upon that part of the question. But was it proper or justifiable, that because the present misfortunes had their origin in folly and imprudence, persons should selfishly say, "It is their own fault that they suffer; let them take the consequence of their imprudence?" (Applause.) The consequences, unfortunately, fell upon those who had been perfectly innocent of the imprudence. The effects of the folly were felt by some of the most opulent and prudent among the community. (Hear, hear.) In looking at the constitution of the bankers of London, it was, he thought, impossible to entertain an unfavourable impression of any of them, because it should happen that they required assistance to enable them to carry on their transactions. Why should such a circumstance be matter of surprise, much less of alarm? Every body knew that it was the business of a banker to use the deposits which were placed in his hands, and therefore it was impossible for him to meet, at any particular moment, the claims of all his customers, although there could be no doubt of his capability to do so eventually. If a banker should say that he could at any particular day pay out of his house all that had been paid into it, he would consider him a very stupid person, and one very ignorant of his business. He knew not enough of banking concerns to undertake to determine what quantity of the money paid into his hands a banker should employ for his profit—whether it was one-third or one-fourth, he could not say—but of this he was convinced, that when in consequence of a panic—and it was a panic which prevailed at present, and nothing else—(loud cries of "hear,") a run was made upon a banker, there was no extent of sacrifice which could protect the most prudent and the most opulent. He was now speaking from his own observations, for he begged it to be understood that he had held no communication with any banker. He certainly could not undertake to say that there were not amongst the bankers who had lately failed one or two not perfectly opulent. But it was impossible for any one acquainted with the general character of the bankers of London not to be convinced that nineteen-twentieths of them were solvent, and as much deserving of public and individual confidence as any gentleman present. (Applause.) There was no city in Europe in which the banking system was founded so much on real property as in London. The great and desirable object was, to create a feeling of confidence towards persons who were deserving of it, by allowing their cash to remain in their bankers' hands. It was the timid who, by making double provision for their necessities, produced the present distresses. He, for his part, had made no provision against his banker. He had kept his account lately as it always stood; and if his banker should stop payment (of which he had not the slightest apprehension), he should be less ashamed to see the balance due to him in his books, than to have it said that he had distressed his banker by selfishly hoarding his sovereigns. (Loud applause). When it was considered that there were about 800 country banks, each drawing upon some bank in London, which, in its turn, drew upon the Bank of England, it was almost impossible to say what calamities might result from a panic, arising in most instances from ignorance, but sometimes, he was compelled to say, created by malevolence. (Hear, hear.) It was desirable, therefore, that some declaration should proceed from the principal merchants and traders of the city of London, who had been acquainted with the characters and transactions of their bankers for years, to put a stop to the present panic. (Cries of "Move.") The same thing might be done in the country in the banking districts. This course had been pursued on the occasion of the stopping of the house of Sir William Elford and Co., at Plymouth, and it had the effect of calming the minds of the timid, and thereby preventing further disasters. He anticipated the most beneficial results from a declaration proceeding from the centre—the very heart, he might say—of the kingdom, expressing entire confidence in the banking establishments, and stating that the present alarm arose from a mere chimera, and rested on no substantial foundation.

After a short conversation between the gentlemen near the Lord Mayor's chair, it was arranged that Mr. Baring, Mr. Irving, and Mr. Wilson, should retire and draw up some resolutions. Those gentlemen according left the room, and after a lapse of about 20 minutes returned with the following:—

"1. That the unprecedented embarrassments and difficulties under which the circulation of the country at present labours are mainly to be attributed to a general panic, for which there are no reasonable grounds; that this meeting has the fullest confidence in the means and substance of the banking establishments of the capital and the country, and they believe that the acting generally upon that confidence would relieve all those symptoms of distress which now show themselves in a shape so alarming to the timid, and so fatal to those who are forced to sacrifice their property to meet sudden demands upon them, which it is no imputation upon their judgment and prudence not to have expected.

"2. That it having been stated to this meeting, that the Directors of the Bank of England are occupied with the remedy for a state of things so extraordinary, this meeting will refrain from any interference with the measures of the Directors of the Bank, who, they are satisfied, will do their duty towards the public.

"3. That having the firmest confidence in the stability of the public credit of the country, we declare our determination to support it to the utmost of our power."

Mr. Irving said, it must strike every other person, as it did him, that in a country which exhibited every symptom of wealth and prosperity, a necessity should exist for such a meeting as the present. It was impossible to attribute it to any other cause than that pointed out by his honourable friend,—namely, a panic and unfounded alarm. (Hear, hear.) There could be no doubt that the prosperity of the country remained unshaken,—that the few fleeting clouds which at present darkened the else brilliant prospect, would speedily pass away. That even the best and most wealthy persons were suffering under the present pressure, could not be denied. "My honourable friend said, that solvent houses had fallen victims to the panic. That is, unfortunately, too true. I have been engaged in examining the affairs of the house of Sir Peter Pole and Co., the first which fell a victim to the panic, and can state, as the result of my examination, that after paying every claim upon them, the house possesses a surplus of 170,000l. besides the landed estates of Sir Peter Pole, and 100,000l. elsewhere." (Hear, hear.) The knowledge of this fact might have the effect of removing the anxiety which the creditors of that house must at present feel. (Hear.) He would not now do more than state, that he cordially seconded the resolutions, and trusted that they would, in some measure, alleviate the difficulties of the commercial interest. (Applause.)

The Lord Mayor put the resolutions, which were carried unanimously.

Mr. Alderman Atkins requested the attention of the meeting to a few observations. The house of Robert Williams, which had been compelled to stop payment in consequence of the extraordinary run upon it, was, he knew, at the present moment, capable of giving securities to the extent of half a million. (Hear, hear.) They would have been able to meet all demands, had they not been obliged to send 400,000l. to meet a run upon an establishment elsewhere. Every body who had the pleasure to be acquainted with Mr. Robert Williams knew him to be a most honourable man, and that there was none more deserving of credit. (Hear.)

A gentleman present then informed the meeting, that the house of Wentworth and Co. possessed assets abundantly sufficient to satisfy all demands upon them. (Loud applause.) Besides that, the house had been promised the greatest assistance, and it might be expected in the course of a few days to resume its payments. (Hear, hear.) One fact he would state, which was highly creditable to young Mr. Wentworth. The family estate was entailed; but Mr. Wentworth, jun. had proposed to cut off the entail, and throw all the property into the bank.

Mr. Baring then moved—

"That it is the opinion of the meeting that declarations of a similar description with the present, in the country towns, where the banking establishments may appear to deserve them, may be productive of much benefit in restoring general confidence."

Mr. Irving seconded the resolution, which was put from the chair, and carried unanimously.

The following resolution, proposed by Mr. Baring and seconded by Mr. Irving, was agreed to:—

"That the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor be authorised, and he is hereby requested, to sign the above resolution on behalf of this meeting, and to allow the same to lie for signatures at the Mansion-house."

Thanks were then given to the Lord Mayor, and the meeting broke up.

PROVINCIAL BANKS.

EXTRACT OF A PRIVATE LETTER.

LEEDS, Dec. 12.—Herewith I send you a document which has been produced in consequence of the run, which has been continued on all our Banks up to this afternoon. It subsided entirely towards evening, and although some of the banks remained open an hour after the usual time, no applications for cash were made, so that we expect their troubles are at an end. The applicants for cash were chiefly those who held one, two, or three notes, which consequently produced much bustle without much effect. Even Becketts have had a share in the good things. The respectable part of the community in our town never felt any alarm concerning our banks, as it is well known they have for some time been preparing themselves for such an event as has occurred.

A document of a similar nature to this has issued from Halifax in behalf of the Banks of that place, signed by upwards of 200 inhabitants. There is also one from Wakefield, in favour of Leatham, Yew, and Trueman, of Wakefield. It is expected that the country people who attend the market may to-morrow cause some demand for cash; but we calculate that this paper will check the effervescence somewhat.

There is a run upon all the Banks in the riding more or less. It is confidently stated by some that Earl Fitzwilliam has offered to advance Wentworth's 100,000l. and that they will consequently be enabled to resume payment, but no day is named.

The following is the notice referred to in the above letter:—

"LEEDS BANK NOTES—At a numerous Meeting, held this day, at the Court House, in Leeds, Henry Hall, Esq. Mayor, in the Chair, it was unanimously resolved—That we, the undersigned, foreseeing the ruinous effects upon trade which must be produced by withdrawing from circulation the Provincial Promissory Notes, think it proper to express our entire confidence in the stability of the Leeds Banks, and our determination to take their Notes, as usual, to any amount.

[Here follow upwards of 400 signatures of the principal firms and individuals in Leeds and its vicinity.]

BRADFORD BANK.

BRADFORD, DEC. 12, 1825—We, the undersigned, are desirous to express our entire confidence in the perfect stability of the Bank of C. H. and A. Harris, of this town, and are not only ready to accept in payment any of the Notes, but offer our united guarantee for the safety and responsibility of the firm.

[Here follow the signatures of 30 firms and individuals, whose joint property is estimated to exceed one million sterling.]

From the Manchester Mercury of Dec. 13.

At Leeds, on Saturday morning, the panic was excessive on hearing of the failure of Messrs. Wentworth and Co.; the doors of the banking-houses were instantly besieged by those who held any of their notes, but fortunately the London correspondents of the Leeds banks, perceiving the effects which the failure of Messrs. Wentworth and Co. would produce, had prudently sent them down large supplies, and they met every demand with the utmost promptitude, and kept open till twelve o'clock at night.

At Halifax, symptoms of a run manifested itself on Saturday, but a larger number of the most respectable commercial men signing a placard, which was generally circulated about the town, expressing their full confidence in the stability of the two banks to receive their notes in payment, the destruction of confidence was much less complete than it would otherwise have been.

From the York Courant of Dec. 12.

Courant Office, Monday morning, Eleven o'clock.

Messrs. Wentworth and Co's Bank.—The following particulars we think it our duty to communicate, and which must be very gratifying to the public:—

The London papers have, in some respects, exaggerated the circumstances of the case. It is a fact that Wentworth and Co. have not any other banks where notes are issued than those at York, Wakefield, and Bradford. At the other places alluded to, they have neither Branch Banks, as stated, nor any agent. It is also no less true, that the notes which have been issued by them, though stated in the London papers to be 400,000*l.* do not amount to half that sum. But the most pleasing part of the statement, which has been thus made to us, is relative to the almost certain result, viz. that the public will not lose any thing, and that the house will in a very short time be re-opened. Two of the partners are at present in London, making the requisite arrangements with the Bank of England, and individuals of the highest rank and respectability are forwarding this most honourable and desirable result.

Stoppage of Messrs. Wentworth and Co.'s Bank.—Great as the embarrassment has been in London for a long period, and also in other parts of the country, Yorkshire continued comparatively uninvolved in the consequences, till the unexpected announcement of the stoppage of the bank of Messrs. Wentworth, Chaloner, and Rishworth, on Thursday se'nnight, in the metropolis, and on Friday in this county. The shock was at the moment perfectly astounding, and persons after recollecting how the occurrence might affect themselves, involuntarily reflected upon the situation in which such an event must place the important and multifarious interests among whom the notes of that establishment formed a principal portion of the circulating medium. To estimate the extent and aggravation of panic and probable distress which so unlooked for a misfortune was calculated to create, it is necessary to bear in mind some local circumstances connected with the subject. In the vast manufacturing districts of Yorkshire, employing a population of great density, and containing, besides, a crowd of mercantile and manufacturing firms, an immense number of petty traders of all descriptions, to say nothing of the agricultural classes, there is ordinarily no currency but private bankers' notes of 1*l.* and upwards. Occasionally a few sovereigns may be met with, and there is, of course, a sufficiency of silver to render the smaller operations of business practicable. The effect, therefore, of the stoppage of Messrs. Wentworth and Co.'s establishments alone may be well conceived from the portion of the whole currency of the county which their paper formed. They had banks in York, Wakefield, and Bradford, and, besides, had houses in Leeds, Barnsley, Huddersfield, and Otley, where they weekly transacted business with their customers in these respective towns and neighbourhoods. We can say, with perfect truth, that notwithstanding the consternation and confusion necessarily resulting from such a sudden shock, the confidence on all sides in the ultimate solvency of Messrs. Wentworth and Co. has been, under the circumstances, as flattering to them as beneficial to the public. Various opinions are certainly entertained as to whether they will resume banking as heretofore or not; but in either case the prevailing impression is, that all demands upon them will sooner or later be satisfied. A fact corroborative of our statement is, that many persons in Leeds speculate largely in purchasing the outstanding notes of the bank—and that the lowest price at which we have understood them to be sold is 15s. per pound, while numbers have been bought at 17s. and even some so high as 19s. per pound note. When it is considered that the individuals mostly induced to dispose of their property so immediately after the stoppage of the bank, and before the real state of its affairs could be understood, must belong to the working classes, among whom so large a proportion of the notes circulated, it will be evident that even they have confidence in the resources of the establishment, or a glut of its paper would be offered for sale, and its price fall to some nominal sum. The scarcity of cash, too, in the trading community, at this moment, has a tendency to depress the price of these notes, and that, nevertheless, they maintain so high a value in the estimation of the public, as we have named, shows the actual depreciation to be but trifling.

The effect of the stoppage in the various towns in which Messrs. Wentworth's notes were circulated will appear by the following statements:—

Bradford.—In the early part of Saturday, and in the first paroxysm of alarm, notes were disposed of at a considerable reduction from their nominal value, as low in this town as 15s., and in Leeds and Huddersfield somewhat lower. Towards the afternoon of Saturday, several shopkeepers and tradespeople, probably for the most part, those who owed money to Messrs. Wentworth, exhibited papers in their windows, purporting that the notes of that company would be taken for goods; one firm received as much as 2000*l.*, and so great was the press upon those who made this offer, that their doors were besieged, and they were obliged to admit only one person at a time; and as it was better to get the full price of a note in groceries, drapery, &c. than sell it at an undervalue, this, and the handbill put forth by Messrs. Wentworth and Co. naturally had the effect of putting a stop to the sale of notes. During Saturday, there was but a partial run upon the bank of Messrs. C. H. and A. Harris and Co. On Monday it somewhat increased, as by that time the intelligence had reached the country towns, and the failure of Messrs. Dobson and Co.'s bank of Huddersfield, had also contributed to increase the panic; on the forenoon of Monday a placard was put out by the principal inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood, not only declaring their readinesss to accept the notes of Messrs. Harris, but offering their united guarantee for the stability of the firm. In this town and every where in the neighbourhood, the most pressing inconvenience has resulted from the want of any circulating medium available to the holders. Messrs. Harris having very prudently restrained the issue of their notes, there was in many quarters a perfect incapacity to pay the wages of workmen, and indeed an insurmountable impediment has been thrown in the way of almost all commercial transactions. Messrs. Wentworth and Co.'s notes we know to have in several cases within the last few days come into the market at a reduced value, not from their holders entertaining an unfavourable opinion of them, but from the mere circumstance of it being absolutely necessary to possess themselves of some available species of money.

Leeds.—The intelligence reached here on Friday evening. It quickly spread over the town like wildfire, and it was naturally anticipated that next morning a general run would commence upon the banking-houses: this expectation proved to be well-founded; upon the Union Bank the demand was great, and, indeed, upon all the Banks there was an eager demand for gold. In the market business was almost at a stand; the country people refused to take a single note in payment for their commodities; and as these constituted the circulating medium in that town, the apprehension and the temporary inconvenience were extreme. These were nothing, however, to what, under other circumstances, they might have been; for the London correspondents of the banks, foreseeing the effect which the failure of Messrs. Wentworth and Co. would produce, had prudently sent them down large supplies of cash; and they met every demand upon them with the utmost promptitude. In the course of the evening, the alertness with which their notes had been taken up, and the circumstance of their keeping their doors open beyond the usual time of closing, had the effect of greatly abating the alarm which had been felt during the earlier part of the day.

Wakefield—Here, as may naturally be supposed, the sensation created was indescribable; and not we fear without reason: the importance of the Wakefield Corn Market is well known, and the quantity of paper of Messrs. Wentworth's house, given in payment for consignments of grain, we have reason to believe is very large; an immediate fall in the grain market may be confidently anticipated. On Saturday a placard was issued at that place in the following terms:—"Apprehensive of the distress that must be brought upon this town and neighbourhood, by a total withdrawing of the local circulating medium, and being well aware that the known prudence of Leatham, Tew, and Co.'s Bank will, in the present crisis, restrain them from giving that accommodation which the public so imperiously require—we the undersigned, fully impressed with the injury that must result from the withdrawing of the circulating medium, do declare our perfect and complete confidence in the stability of Leatham, Tew, and Co.'s Bank, and do solicit them to continue this necessary accommodation to the public by the re-issue of their local notes to such an extent as their prudence may dictate; and we pledge ourselves to receive and pay the same in the regular course of business" The conduct of Messrs. Leatham and Co. has been honourable in the extreme, having transacted business on Saturday and Monday, until nine o'clock each evening, and having also met every demand in the most liberal and handsome manner, producing, we are most happy to say, a return of that public confidence which the events of the last few days had so unhappily interrupted.

Huddersfield.—From the circumstance of Messrs. Wentworth and Co. attending that town to transact business on market days, their notes were in extensive circulation, and the intelligence was received with much agitation—but was greatly aggravated from the fears entertained of the effect which might be produced upon the other Banks in that town, by the run which would certainly ensue—and these fears unhappily were too well grounded—for before eleven o'clock, Messrs. John Dobson and Son, stopped payment, and a docket was struck against them the same evening. Their debts are reported to be very heavy, and the general idea seems to be, that their affairs are in a very bad state. Some persons are of opinion that they will pay little or nothing. The failure of Messrs Dobsons will, it is feared, produce the most calamitous results among the woollen-manufacturers, many of whom must be deeply involved with them. As a commencement of the evil, a large number of workmen were discharged on Saturday night; and since there can be but little chance at present of their obtaining employment elsewhere, it is, we fear, inevitable that they must suffer great distress.

The large amount of the notes circulated by the house of Wentworth and Co. created a panic in the town and neighbourhood of Huddersfield, which expanded itself in an immediate run upon the Banks in that place, viz.:—Messrs. J. W. and C. Rawson and Co.; Messrs. B. Wilson and Sons, and Mr. Shakspear G. Sikes. These banks were severely pressed on Saturday and Monday, by the small holders of notes, which continued until Tuesday afternoon, when the crowd and pressure subsided, either from the notes having been generally carried in, or the return of confidence. The windows of almost every shop in the town contained papers, offering to take the notes of the three banks above mentioned, and, on Tuesday, a hand-bill was issued, signed by the most respectable merchants, manufacturers, and tradesmen, expressive of their confidence in them, and offering to receive and pay their notes as usual. There was a perfect suspension of business on Tuesday, (the market-day) the merchants, &c. being unwilling to increase the hurry of the bankers, who proved themselves fully prepared to meet every demand made upon them.

Halifax.—The consternation here was extreme; symptoms of a severe run upon both Banks speedily began to manifest themselves, and the town was in a state of great and universal commotion. A numerous body of the respectable inhabitants having, however, with great promptness sent out a placard expressive of their confidence in the stability of the two Banks, and their readiness to receive their notes, there was a considerable restoration of public confidence; the run continued notwithstanding during the whole of Monday, gradually diminishing indeed, and on Tuesday it had nearly subsided. Our latest advices represent matters as having resumed their wonted calmness; though there, as well as in the other towns of the West Riding, the embarrassment cannot but be severely felt, both as resulting from the suspension of Messrs. Wentworth's payments, and from the failure of Messrs. Dobson and Co.

When the information respecting the suspension of the Wakefield Bank arrived at Keighley, on Saturday morning, the greatest surprize and dismay were manifested by the holders of notes, issued by that firm; but the alarm was much increased when the news arrived that the Huddersfield Old Bank was in the same, if not in a worse situation; the fears entertained respecting the former Bank, however, were considerably diminished in the evening, in consequence of the favourable opinion expressed at Bradford and other places, and the cheering notice Messrs. Wentworth and Co. thought proper to publish. Handbills expressing the confidence of great numbers of wealthy individuals, in the responsibility of the Banks at Halifax, Leeds, and Bradford, arrived in the town on Monday evening. Actuated by the same motives, and with a view of imparting that confidence to the fearful in this neighbourhood, which they felt themselves, the principal gentlemen, manufacturers, shopkeepers, &c. in the town, spontaneously came forward to express their conviction of the responsibility of the Skipton Bank, and of their determination to receive them in payment as usual here; and subsequently the same subscribers circulated a similar hand bill in reference to the Bradford, Craven, and two Halifax Banks.

At the Rochdale market on Monday, (the great market, we believe, it is technically called) business was quite at a stand. The prices of wool, oil, &c. were almost nominal; and the commercial embarrassments of the neighbouring districts formed almost the only topic of conversation. There was, we understand, a run on the banks; but both firms are considered highly respectable; and amongst the commercial part of the community, no doubt of their solidity was entertained.

There was also, we learn, a considerable run on the Saddleworth Banks on Tuesday, but the demands upon them were regularly met.

To these accounts from our own neighbourhood, we have to add, that in more distant quarters, the difficulties and embarrassments are felt, and the suspension of Messrs. Wentworth's house has produced, or accelerated, runs to a certain extent through all the banks in Yorkshire and Lancashire.

Bristol.—Two banks in this city kept an account with Sir Peter Pole; and through the failure of that house, the public attention was directed towards them; but, from their great respectability, not a surmise was indulged, but that they were duly prepared: however, to render surety doubly sure, the mail on Tuesday night brought an immense load of gold; and, what was no less singular than true, the mail actually broke down, and was detained nearly an hour beyond its time. The detention of the mail drew an immense concourse of people to witness its arrival, and the sight of the bankers' clerks carrying their golden loads, was no unpleasant view of the spectators.

This circumstance, and the knowledge (which became general) that the two banks above alluded to were not involved in the smallest degree in the embarrassment of Sir Peter Pole and Co. dissipated all alarm; and we have the satisfaction to say, that, with the exception of general sympathy, and of course due anxiety for the credit of the country, there is not the smallest fear in this city.

Dorchester Bank.—The failure of Messrs. Williams and Co.'s bank, in Birchin-lane, has occasioned a temporary suspension of payments at the Dorchester bank. The public, however, seem not to be alarmed; the credit of the Dorchester bank stands on too firm a basis to be shaken by the failure to which we have alluded, and they will resume in a few days again.—Dorset County Chronicle, Dec. 15.

We are sorry to add, says the same Journal, that the Winchester bank of Deane and Littlehales, which drew on Sir Peter Pole, suspended payment yesterday.

Southampton.—About a quarter of an hour before the usual time of commencing business on Monday, a bill was posted up on the door of Messrs. Kellor and Pritchard's bank, stating, that owing to the failure of Sir Peter Pole's bank, in London, they were under the necessity of suspending their payments for a few days.

The banking-house of Messrs. Miller and Co., Gravesend, commenced business again yesterday morning.—Kent Herald, Dec. 15.

Peterborough Bank.—On Wednesday morning, the banking-house of Messrs. Simpson and White suspended payment of their notes, but from the known respectability of the parties, every confidence is entertained that they will shortly resume business. The inhabitants of Peterborough have published a declaration of their entire reliance on the sufficiency of the other bank in that town, and in Stamford, without any actual necessity with reference to any run on the bank, a very large number of the inhabitants have published their full conviction of the sufficiency of Messrs. Eaton and Cayles, and their readiness to take the notes of the Stamford and Rutland bank in payment, as usual. The stoppage of the Northampton bank has been succeeded by that of the Kettering, Gotch and Sons, and the Wellingborough banks in the same county.—Lincoln and Stamford Mercury.

Plymouth Bank.—A meeting of the creditors of the above bank took place on Monday last, at the Guildhall, preparatory to the election of Assignees, which was attended by an immense crowd. Edmund Lockyer, Esq. was loudly called to take the Chair, but he declined the honour, presuming that some of the requisitionists were present; none, however, stood forward, and Henry Woollcombe, Esq. was then named unanimously, and he accepted the Chair. The Chairman then read the requisition, and expressed himself ready to hear any one present on the subject on which they were met. Ed. Lockyer, Esq. rose, and went into detail respecting the unforeseen difficulties which had arisen in working the commission obtained by Mr. Tink, which he said did not reflect the least discredit on the solicitor or petitioning creditor. A very lengthened discussion afterwards ensued, respecting the number of the assignees that should be chosen. Mr. Lockyer objected to more than three being appointed, on the score that the more numerous they were, the less efficient would be their exertions. Mr. Prance suggested that, at least, five should be nominated, and in this opinion he was joined by a number of others present. The names of the Gentlemen proposed were Edward Lockyer, Esq., H. Woollcombe, Esq., W. Prance, Esq., G. E. Browne, Esq., of Box-Hill, and Mr. E. Govett. On the shew of hands whether three or five should be the number, the sense of the meeting appeared to be in favour of five. Mr. W. S. Harris wished to prevent the great loss that would arise to the creditors, by the expence of working a commission, and wished to know if an investigation could not take place, and an assignment of the effects be made for the benefit of the creditors. Mr. Jago, in reply to Mr. Harris's observation, said that a commission was indispensably necessary, and adduced the case of Messrs. Chambers, London, Bankers, when after twelve months' investigation of the accounts, they were afterwards obliged to resort to a commission although the estate was able to pay 25s. to the pound.

Windson Bank.—We are happy to state, that the Windsor Bank of Messrs. Ramsbottom and Legh continue their payments, amidst the universal confidence of the town and neighbourhood. The following declaration was circulated on Thursday:—

"We, the undersigned, having an unabated confidence in the stability of the Windsor Bank, notwithstanding the temporary suspension of payment of one of the London Agents, are ready to receive their Notes in payment as usual."

The above document was signed, in a few hours, by more than 200 of the principal gentlemen and tradesmen of Windsor and Eton.

Sheffield Bank.—At a very numerous and highly respectable meeting, held at the Town Hall, in Sheffield, Peter Spurr, Esq. in the Chair,

It was unanimously resolved, That we, the undersigned, are desirous of expressing our entire confidence in the stability of the three Sheffield Banks and the Rotherham Bank, and pledge ourselves, under any circumstances, to take their notes to any amount: our object in this Resolution being not to satisfy our own town, where the respectability of its banks is too well known and appreciated, to render such a step at all necessary; but rather to prevent alarm in the different parts of the country, where the same knowledge is not possessed.

[Here follow the names of nearly 600 inhabitants, &c.]

Placards of exactly a similar nature have been issued at Chesterfield and Loughborough Banks.

In the midst of the panic which at present so unfortunately prevails, the Bank of Messrs. Coutts and Co., has not been at all pressed upon. It is not known that a single draft has been presented for payment, which did not come in the ordinary course of business.

On Tuesday evening last, as William Maynard, a hackney-coachman, residing in Cromer-street, Gray's Inn-road, was driving a hackney-coach along Judd-street, Brunswick-square, the dickey broke down, and precipitated him to the ground, when the wheels passed over his neck. He was conveyed, apparently in a lifeless state, to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where he almost instantly expired. His poor aged mother, on being informed of the accident that befell her son, went immediately to see him; but before she arrived, he had expired. On her arrival at the hospital, the mournful intelligence was communicated to her, when she clasped her hands, fell down, and instantly expired.—The bodies remain at the Hospital, awaiting the Coroner's Inquest.

Murder at Birmingham.—Apprehension of Michael Ford.—This man, who is accused of the murder of Mr. Perry, at Birmingham, and who absconded from thence, has been apprehended at Liverpool. He was stepping on board a trading vessel when the police officers took him into custody.

The following melancholy affair occurred at the Western watch-house, Priory, Hastings, on Monday last:—A young man, named Bogg, a seaman in the Preventive Service, having just returned from off duty, put a period to his existence with a pistol at the entrance of a room in which his comrades were at dinner. The force of the explosion and the wadding dislocated the lower jaw, destroyed the left eye, and blew away a great portion of the unhappy man's skull: portions of the brain and its membranes were scattered in various parts of the building. A Coroner's Inquest was held on the body. The unfortunate man was of a reserved and serious disposition, and had latterly been in a desponding state. Verdict—"Lunacy."

The depot of the 5th (Northumberland) Regiment of Infantry is ordered to embark, from the Isle of Wight, on board the Zephyr transport, for conveyance to Tynemouth.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

(For Promotions, see the last page.)

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCY.

S. Bratt, Macclesfield, silk-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

R. W. G. Douglas, Woodcote, Sussex, coach-proprietor. Sol. Mr. F. F. Dally, Clifford's-inn, Fleet-street.

Juliana Keily, late of St. James's-street, Westminster, dress-maker. Sols. Messrs. Cooke and Hunter, Clement's-inn New-chambers.

W. Webb, Salisbury-street, Strand, wine and brandy-merchant. Sol. Mr. F. Lock, Arundel-street, Strand.

W. C. Harwood, Crown-street, Soho, grocer and tea-dealer. Sol. Mr. B. Hardwick, 19, Lawrence-lane, Cheapside.

J. Olivant and W. Cooper, Queen-street, Cheapside, warehousemen. Sols. Messrs. Watson and Broughton, Falcon-square.

R. Edmeads, T. Atkins, and G. Tyrrell, Maid-lane, bankers. Sol. Mr. Wildes, 62, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

J. Carmichael, Birmingham, dealer. Sol. Mr. D. Jones, Size-lane.

J. Dyer and J. Swayne, Gravel-lane, Houndsditch, wool-staplers. Sols. Messrs. Dawes and Chatfield, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street.

W. Done, Talkoth-hill, Stafford, manufacturer of ribbons. Sols. Messrs. Willis, Watson, Bower, and Willis, Tokenhouse-yard.

J. Horn, Liverpool, block and pump-maker. Sol. E. Chester, Staple-inn.

T. Bird, Liverpool, broker. Sol. Mr. E. Chester, 3, Staple-inn.

J. Smith, Bristol, cabinet-maker and upholsterer. Sols. Messrs. Home, Frampton, and Loftus, 10, New-inn.

J. Murgatroyd, Halifax, cotton-manufacturer. Sols. Wiglesworth and Ridsdale, Gray's-inn-square.

E. Pinnix, Emsworth, Southampton, cattle-salesman. Sols. Messrs. Bromley, Gray's-inn-square.

C. Jarrett, Bath, hatter. Sol. S. Fisher, Queen-street, Cheapside.

J. M'Crum and E. Ainsworth, Liverpool, common-brewers. Sol. E. Chester, Staple-inn.

J. Menzies, Charles-street, Manchester-square, tailor. Sols. Hallett and Henderson, Northumberland-street, Marylebone.

W. Coleman Essex-street, Bouverie-street, victualler. Sol. Mr. Rushbury, Carthusian-street, Charterhouse-square.

J. Milnes, Huddersfield, wharfinger. Sol. W. Rixon, Jewry-street, Aldgate.

C. Todd, Lisson-street, Lisson-grove, coal-merchant. Sol. Mr. Yeuuger, John-street, America-square.

T. Deacon, Trowbridge, clothier. Sol. Mr. Templer, John-street, America-square.

E. Osbaldeston, Hertford, grocer. Sols. Tate and Johnston, Copthall-buildings.

J. Nicholas and J. Nicholas, jun. (otherwise J. Ranger), Leatherhead, Surrey, common-brewers. Sol. H. Chester, Parsonage-row, Newington-Butts.

T. Harrison, Fleet-market, victualler. Sol. Mr. Harmer, Hatton-garden.

E. Hickman, Lombard-street, bill-broker. Sols. Robinson and Hine, Charterhouse-square.

T. W. Watson, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, merchant. Sol. Mr. Arnott, West-street, Finsbury-circus.

W. Tovee and G. Jeapes, Peckham, builders. Sols. Overton and Coombe, Tokenhouse-yard, Lothbury.

H. M'Guckin, Upper St. Martin's-lane, wine-merchant. Sol. Mr. Whittington, Dean-street, Finsbury-square.

H. Ochsenbein, Regent-street, silk-mercer. Sol. Mr. Yallop, Suffolk-street, Pall-mall East.

C. G. Cotterill, Peter's-lane, St. John-street, bacon, butter, and provision-merchant. Sols. Messrs. Nind and Cotterill, Throgmorton-street.

R. Allmond, Abingdon, Berks, grocer and cheese-factor. Sol. Mr. J. Hartley, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

E. Kenworthy and J. Bunnell, Liverpool, merchants. Sols. Messrs. Adlington, Gregory, and Faulkner, Bedford-row.

F. H. Rumboll, Walcot, Somerset, coach-maker. Sol. Mr. Hughes, 14, Clifford's-inn.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We really have to apologize to the parties concerned for two monstrous errors of the Press, in our last Number—in the account of the Hatfield Theatricals it should have been, instead of Lady Bankes

The school for rakes, by Lady Burke.

and our apologies are therefore due to the Lady—as also to our friend Rowland, for inserting the name of Miss Goward, in the talked of marriages, instead of Miss Goodall. We can assure the parties nothing personal was meant, or, if so, it must have been intended by the printers, who will commit these blunders now and then, do what you will.

Our especial thanks are due to our Correspondent for his excellent, and at this time opportune Song of "The Bursting of the Bubbles." and we can with much pleasure direct the attention of our Readers to a perusal of it.

The contribution of "A woman unhappy in solitude and misery," has been received, and though we do not avail ourselves of its contents, it is from no depreciation of them—the subject was forestalled last week—but we shall be most happy to hear again from her, inclosing the Masquerade, perceiving she has considerable ability—and are desirous, if she will favor us with the means of so doing, of privately addressing her.

We take this opportunity of recommending the Military Mountebank to desist from the system he seems so much bent on, of interfering with us, or attempting to trace (which he never can, for at this moment his conjectures are as far from the truth as it is possible to imagine any opinion to be) the parties with whom we are connected—if he does not, he may feel assured we shall submit for the inspection of his friends, and the digestion of his little Editorship, the particulars of his extraordinary army exploits, and every precious proceeding—pecuniary and otherwise—of his hitherto scamping life.

G. R. Easy came too late for insertion.

We shall take an opportunity next week of reviewing Mr. Bulwer's interesting work on Greece, just published by Ebers.

THE AGE.

LONDON, December 18.

The conviction entertained in our last, that the situation of the Money Market was far from having reached its crisis, has been this week realized even to a greater extent than the natural alarm in our minds had induced us to fear, and the disasters we have now to place on record exceed by many degrees those of any period in the annals of our commercial history. The view we were induced to take, in our last publication, of the general state of things, and the cause to which their desperation might solely be attributed, is more and more confirmed by reflection, and, above all, by those disclosures which the failures of the present week have necessarily made; and it is under this persuasion, that we are induced to direct the attention of our readers to the parallel position of affairs in the year 1721, and the year 1825, now closing,—first of all, that from the similitude herein presented, conviction may be brought home to the minds of the incredulous and unreflecting,—and secondly that, by a comparison of the cases, and an examination of some of the measures at that time adopted, the means may be pointed out of allaying to a certain extent those ruinous projects which have so mainly contributed to bring about the present dilemma. In consequence of the explosion of that monstrous adventure, the South Sea Scheme, and most of the bubbles to which it gave rise, public credit received a dreadful shock, and to such an extent had the general panic reached, that despatches were sent to the King, then in Germany, presenting to his Majesty the state of the nation, who immediately returned—the Parliament assembled on the 8th of December, and the general calamity, with its causes, and every possible suggestion for its removal, underwent the strictest investigation and deliberation of the senate; the scrutiny attendant on which involved the names and interests of some of the leading noblemen of the day, and the very members appointed to investigate the business. My Lord Chancellor Cooper, with the same energy which has characterized the conduct of the upright and learned Peer who now holds the seals, was the most strenuous opposer of the Joint Stock Mania which then visited the people; and, although he was unable to prevent the passing of those bills in which so much of the public money was involved, he protested against them in that memorable language, every syllable of which was prophetic, and on their eventual examination before the Lords, was eminently instrumental in disclosing the knavery by which they had been projected and at first established, and his exertions, and the perseverance of the Earl Stanhope (whose vehement defence of the Ministry from the imputations levelled at them by the Duke of Wharton, was the cause of his sudden death), Lord Carteret, and other Noblemen, finally produced the important discoveries that were made. On a minute inspection of these monstrous projects it appeared, that some of the Principal Servants of the Crown were interested, as well as many members of the Parliament, to whom large bonnisses had been presented by way of shares, with the view of retaining their services during the progress of the different bills through the two houses. 50,000l. stock was taken by Knight, Treasurer to the South Sea Comany, (who ran away), for the use of the Earl of Sunderland (first Lord of the Treasury), on which account he resigned his place—other fictitious stock was distributed amongst Mr. Aislabie, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was expelled the House, and committed to the Tower, Mr. Secretary Craggs, and Mr. Craggs, Senior, who died of a lethargy before he underwent the censure of Government—the Directors, in the persons of Sir George Caswell, Sir John Blunt, Sir John Lambert, Sir John Fellowes, and Mr. Grigsby, were taken into custody—Sir Theodore Jansen, Mr. Sawbridge, Sir Robert Chaplain, and Mr. Eyles, were expelled their Seats, and also apprehended—and having, in obedience to the order of the House, delivered in inventories of their estates, they were confiscated by act of Parliament, towards making good the damages sustained by the Company. By a comparison of this state of things with that which now agitates the public mind, a very trifling difference will appear, as respects either the origin or the formation of these fatal visions, excepting that they are more complicated in their nature, and far more fatal in their effects; and it is on this account that we consider the dignity of the Senate, and the integrity of many persons who occupy a seat in it, so materially involved, as to demand some immediate investigation of the different schemes to which their names are affixed—for it has been by the introduction of high-sounding titles, the nominal accession of members, of Bankers and Solicitors, that the generality of the community have been induced to depart from that system of regular profit, which their industry hitherto produced, for the purpose of embarking in those momentary designs which have brought about all this ruin. If this step were immediately taken, it would lead, unpleasant as the necessity might appear, to the exposure of several persons interested with the affairs of His Majesty's Government, and whose conduct now has the appearance of perfect dishonesty—it would, furthermore, include the names of the firms, lately failed, who appear as Bankers to most of these companies, and would altogether disclose a series of manœuvres of the most disgraceful and appalling nature—but we, nevertheless, say that the immediate issue of a scire facias on all these barefaced bubbles, would serve as one instantaneous mode of winnowing them of all the chaff in which they are now smothered.

The merits of many of these establishments is treated of at the termination of this article; but in scrutinizing others more closely, it is impossible to overlook the fact of a Baronet, a most distinguished officer in the King's service, acting as fugleman to some of them, the accounts of which, in one or two cases, present a very serious aspect—we further see my Lord Glengall, an almost pennyless Peer, Chairman to others; Peter Moore, the Member for Coventry, Trustee or Director to five or six at least; to others, such names as a Mr. Schneider, some German tailor, whom one never heard of, and who proved not to be in England, a Mr. Morgan, &c. appear attached—then Lieutenant-Colonel Fairman (an absolute pauper) is Director to another; George Farren, Esq.! brother to the actor, resident Director to two others, at No. 70, Cornhill, and No. —, Bridge-street—resident in two different places at the same time!—and, worse than all, we have seen His Grace the Duke of Buckingham, his fat-tailed brother Lord Nugent, and my Lord Dormer receiving a premium of 37l. on each share, the deposits of which they had never paid up!!! If these plain facts do not open the eyes and convince the understandings of the people, let them perish. From the papers of that day we subjoin two important and apposite extracts, and most seriously direct the attention of our readers to the comparison of them with the sentiments of the present day:—

"It was the observation of a very witty knight many years ago, that the English people were something like a flight of birds at a barn door; shoot among them and kill ever so many, the rest shall return to the same place in a very little time, without any remembrance of the evil that had befallen their fellows. Thus the English, though they have had examples enough in these latter times of people ruined by engaging in projects, yet they still fall in with the next that appears. Thus, after Neal's Lottery, how many were trumped up in a year or two's time, till the Legislature itself was fain to suppress them. Some time after this, there was a new project set on foot for the prodigious improvement of small sums of money, in which they who put in, for example 5*l.* must by the proposal make above 100*l.* of it in a year's time. People never examined how they could perform this proposal; but, blind with the hopes of gain, threw their money into the Denmark-court Office in so extravagant a manner, that, if the humour could have gone on, they must have had passed through their hands in a few months half the cash of the nation. The success of this office begot many more in all parts of the town, all which ended in the ruin of many families.

"Our cunning men are now carrying on a cause very much like these that are past, but infinitely more extravagant than all of them; though I believe it will prove less detrimental than any of them, because they are already multiplied to that degree that the sharpers, alias projectors, are infinitely too numerous for the bubbles; since the stocks they have proposed to raise, amounts to 28,000,000*l.*; above twice as much as the current coin of the nation, nay, more than the third part of all the payments the circulation of that current coin performs in the whole kingdom."—Original Weekly Journal.

"The destruction of the bubbles has been a very heavy blow to many families here, and some are entirely ruined by them. There appeared the utmost consternation in Exchange Alley, the day the Act for suppressing them took place, which, because of the confusion and terror it struck among those brethren in iniquity, they called the day of judgment. It might be well indeed with many of them, if no future inquisition would be made into their conduct in this matter, though, if so, they would not wholly escape; for many of those who have been the most assiduous in drawing other poor wretches in to their ruin, have, besides their wealth, acquired an infamy they can never wipe off; and as the rage of those who have drunk deep of the delusion is at this time pretty great, the others do not seem fond of appearing too much in public for the present; they being followed with the reproaches, threats, and bitterest curses, of the poor people they have deluded to their destruction. So that if all of them escape the resentment of the populace, it must be more owing to the care of the Magistracy, than the want of will or desperation in the injured."—London Journal.

Having taken this general view of the state of public affairs, the melancholy task now devolves upon us of enumerating those disasters which, in our unalterable opinion, are the result of this horrible detail of both gambling and swindling, and which will be found to comprise the failure of six London, and nearly twenty Provincial Banks, in addition to those we had to place on record last week, as well as some eminent and respectable firms in other branches of trade. On Monday last Sir Peter Pole and Co. suspended their payments, and as agents to forty-four country firms, have necessarily involved some of them; and amongst those are included the two Hinckley Banks, of the firms of Messrs. Sansome and Co., and Messrs. Jervis and Co.—the Leicester Bank, of Messrs. Clarke and Co. (mentioned in our last)—the Maidstone Bank, of Messrs, Edmeads, Atkins, and Tyrrell—and the Southampton Bank, of Messrs. Kellor and Pritchard—but the notes of some of the others, still solvent, will be taken up by other agents, for we find those of the Richmond and Leyburn, the Carlisle and Penrith Banks, honored by Sir John Perring and Co.—those of the Brecon, by Messrs. Barnetts, Hoare, and Co.—and of the Coventry, by Sir R. C. Glynn and Co. This calamitous event was followed on Tuesday by the stoppage of Messrs. Williams, Burgess, and Co., and Sir Claude Scott and Co.; on Wednesday by those of Messrs. Everett, Walker, Maltby, and Co., and Sikes, Snaith, and Co.; and on Thursday by that of Sir Walter Stirling and Co., involving, in their fall, that of Messrs. John Dobson and Son, at Huddersfield—Messrs. Benchley and Co. at Gravesend—of Messrs. Morton and Co. at Wellingborough—the Kingston (Surrey) Bank—of Messrs. Gotch and Co., at Kettering—of Messrs. Rawlings and Co., Bedford—of both the Banks at Romford—of Messrs. Simpson and White, at Peterborough—of Messrs. Piper and Co., at Dorking—of Messrs. Searle and Co., at Saffron Walden—of Messrs. Hill and Son, at Wisbeach—of Messrs. Fisher and Son, and Messrs. Hollart and Co. of Cambridge—of Messrs. Walkin of Daventry—Messrs. Garrett and Son, of Hereford—and Williams and Co., at Dorchester. But in the mean time the notes of those country Bankers, payable at the London Banks herein detailed, but who have not suffered by the stoppage of their agents, will be negotiated by other houses, viz.: those of the Hastings Old Bank, and the Reigate Bank, by Messrs. Jones, Lloyd, and Co.; those of the Bridgnorth and Wenlock Bank, by Grote, Prescott, and Co., of Simonds and Co. the Reading Bank, by Messrs. Fry and Chapman; of Seward and Co. at Salisbury, Messrs. Walker and Co. of Sheffield and Rotherham, and Messrs. Everett, Thring, and Co. of Warminster and Wiltshire, by Messrs. Barclay, Tritton, and Co.; of Hart, at Uttoxeter, by Whitmore and Co., of Dean and Littleholes at Winchester, by Mr. Bentel, Angel-Court, and of Breed's Bank at Hastings, at Griffin's Wharf, Southwark.

We are quite sure that our readers will readily pardon us for going into this long detail, because the present feverish state of the public mind requires all possible information, in order that a knowledge of the worst may effect an immediate recovery. There will be seen, in the foregoing list, the firm of Messrs. Morton, Rodick, and Co. at Wellingborough, the stoppage of which, it is understood, has been principally occasioned by the disappearance of Mr. Corbett, of the firm of Corbett and Co., the extensive linen house in Friday-street, who is related to one of this firm, and who has absconded with something like 80,000*l*., entrusted to him for remittance to meet the demands of the house. We have neither limit nor time to dilate on such an action—for men's misfortunes there is the pity of all—for their crimes the pity of none.

Having herein enumerated the disasters which have happened, it behoves us to look around and contemplate the various exertions which have been made to impede the further march of ruin, and to ascertain to what extent those measures have taken effect, and how bright is the prospect thereby held out. The very extensive and respectable house of WHITTAKER, the eminent bookseller, although its payments have been temporarily suspended by the failure of an embarkation in hops, will very shortly resume them, as on an investigation of its affairs they appear to present a surplus of nearly 100,000*l*.—and in the mean time its business proceeds under the surveillance of trustees—while the rumour which had gained such strong ground of the stoppage of Mr. HAMLET, the great silversmith, is without the slightest shadow of truth—indeed we were loth to believe, though bound to entertain the question, that a person so very rich as this gentleman, could be involved in the distress that surrounds others. In addition to these points, the house of Sir CLAUDE SCOTT and Co., agreeably to their announcement, has recommenced its payments, and the confidence in their stability is completely restored, while, on an investigation of their accounts and general affairs, it appears that Sir PETER POLE and Co., after paying every body twenty shillings in the pound, will have a surplus of ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY THOUSAND POUNDS on the partnership books, besides large landed estates, and ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND POUNDS in the private property of the partners—and in Mr. WILLIAMS's case there are no less than five hundred thousand pounds in solid securities, and in his landed property—while it appears by meetings of the friends of Messrs. SIKES, SNAITH, and Co. and Messrs. EVERETT, WALKER, and Co. that the most favourable results may be anticipated from the state of their concernments. In the meantime it will be seen, by a reference to our other columns, that meetings have been held in London and the Provinces, to adopt those decisive measures that may restore public confidence, and produce once again their wonted tranquillity to the people's minds; declarations have been issued throughout the country, confirmatory of the solvency of the bankers in the different towns, in pursuance of the example set, under the auspices of the LORD MAYOR, on Wednesday last, at the Mansion House; while a much more important and decisive step has been taken by the BANK, for the LORDS OF HIS MAJESTY'S PRIVY COUNCIL have met in deliberation, and in a subsequent interview with some of the Directors and Lord LIVERPOOL, their resolution of circulating one pound and two pound Bank-notes, for the more particular relief of Country Bankers, was submitted to his Lordship, and received his entire concurrence. By such prompt and decisive steps as these a partial relief has been effected, and some degree of that panic, which so lately prevailed, has subsided, although it was quite impossible to suppose its advantages can be otherwise than progressive; the blow has been too awful to admit of immediate recovery, but we feel that all which could be done has BEEN DONE; and in the same degree that we felt last week assured of the danger which was then impending, so are we now confident that danger has reached its zenith, and that a very few days will produce, in breasts the most agitated, a desirable and salutary relief. We cannot terminate these remarks without a comment on the disgraceful conduct of the Times particularly, which, in addition to the inflaming the public mind, at the onset, by inflated reports and false assertions, has positively stated the failure of some banks at Cambridge and elsewhere, a thousand times more solvent than the Cockney concern in Printing-house-yard; and at the same time on the disgraceful rumours relative to the security of Messrs. DIXON and Co. (whose very proper letter appears in our paper of this day) as well as the safety of other equally established houses. These statements are the fabrication of that horde of villains who, in the first place, projected those delusions, which led to all the mischief herein treated of, and who, now the madness they projected recoils on themselves, are endeavouring to shake the solidity of men of real property, with a view to equalize their own infamy and poverty.

It will not be necessary at present to enlarge upon the subject, and we shall therefore dismiss one part of it by celebrating in a SONG, to the very appropriate tune of "Over the water to CHARLIE," some of the machinations, in the dissemination of which the intellects of a very considerable portion of our countrymen have been so long and so unfortunately engaged:—

THE BURSTING OF THE BUBBLES.

"The earth hath bubbles, as the water has,
"And THESE are of them." MACBETH.

AIR—Over the water to Charlie.

The nation, at large, for a twelvemonth or more,
Has daily been blowing a bubble,
And now they are blown, and the mania is o'er,
They all have a squeak for their trouble.

So we'll furnish a number in which will be shewn
The objects for which they've been thirsting,
That people may see, when a bubble is blown,
It's the probable cause of its bursting.

A scheme of some divers stock-jobbers they call
The "Vigo Bay Company," divers,
Was formed, and to raise up SOME MONEY, was all
The aim of these precious contrivers.
Of every gull you will pick from the heap,
Sea GULLS the most common, they say, are,
And they'll find that the gold which they think in the deep,
Is a devilish deal deeper than they are.

An "Hibernian Hemp and Flax Company," too,
Mr. Alderman WOOD's party went for,
But they twisted the money subscribed by a few,
To a purpose it never was meant for.
So all that's now left to fulfil any hope
Entertained by its mighty projectors,
Is just hemp enough for entwining a rope
To hang up THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS!

A "London Fish Company" early was schemed,
To deluge our river with slaughter,
But it soon was made manifest each member seemed
In the business, "a fish out of water."
When, therefore, 'twas found that all which they caught
Were some GUDGEONS, some FLATS, and some flounders,
They abandoned the plan, lest it e'er should be thought
That the far greatest flats were its founders.

A "Gwennappe Mining Company" then was soon framed,
Considered a fine speculation—
And when a Director, Lord NUGENT, was named,
It, at least, had a famous FOUNDATION.
But BOTTOM resigned, and began to complain,
When he found he could get nothing by it,
And though COOKE swore the Mine was abounding in vein,
'Twas in vain that they asked him to try it.

The "Stannary"—"Mexican"—"Cobalt"—and then
The "Tywarnhale Association,"
Were got up and headed with names of some men,
Who pass for "the LORDS of Creation."
But DORMER and others thought fit to resign,
And so of the load were divested,
As their weal could not thrive by the wheel of a mine
Which so long "on its oars had rested."

An "Imperial Distillery" then was the plan,
And nothing could promise much fairer,
For it seems that all spirits they rectify can,
But those of each principal Sharer!
Though the shares are as low as a half-crown, d'ye see,
If some for a few of them hanker,
Let them know—PETER MOORE is a leading TRUSTEE—
And WILLIAMS, just failed, is the BANKER!

An "Imperial Foreign Wine Company" next
Was immediately agitated,
And every subscriber was monstrously vexed
If the scheme was the least underrated.
But at last all the Sharers as butts seemed to shine,
And what was considered more funny,
Notwithstanding they managed to pipe all their wine,
They'd to pipe and to whine for their money.

Then a "Dyeing and Printing" concern was prepared,
With one RICHARD TAYLOR, Director;
But the RICHARD TAYLOR, in Shoe-lane, declared
'Twas the type of some needy projector!
And he further observed, to banish the fears
Of his friends, and to render them pleasant,
Though he'd been in the "Printing" for several years,
He'd no thoughts of dying at present.

Then the "Bognor and Aldwick Improvement" as well,
Director—the rich Col. FAIRMAN!!
The "British Fish Company," too, cut a swell,
With Dicky GLENGALL as the CHAIRMAN!
But the hopes of the first were built on the SANDS,
As the Call of its Bankers each day meant;
And the funds of the last were in EVERETTS' hands,
Who, last Tuesday morning, stopped payment!

The "British Discovery" then took the field,
To discover the genius of BRITAIN,
And, amongst other bright ones, which long were concealed,
The old DUKE of GORDON it hit on!!
After many inventions, it seemed to the view
Of these stock-jobbing mania imbibers,
That the plan of the company never would do—
At least only do—the Subscribers.

The "Steam Washing Company" followed next day,
To scrub for their lives; but the sole thing
The Scrubs who compose it now wish, is, that they Could wash themselves clean of the whole thing!
The "National Stone Way" immediately rose,
Projected by FRY and Co., Quakers;
But it seems there are many more quakers 'mongst those
Who appear as its grand undertakers!

"Arigna Iron and Coal" then appeared,
But little now left to divide is,
Of all the pounds paid, as it's very much feared,
TWENTY THOUSAND at least misapplied is.
For CONGREVE, M'LEAN, Mr. BENT, and the rest,
Were bent on enriching their pockets,
And therefore the bubble went off, like the best
Of Sir WILLIAM's combustible rockets.

The "Patent Salt Company" then was designed
To take in the foolish and fickle—
Who, at least to preserve themselves, made up their mind,
But see they are now in a pickle.
A "Burial Company" came, but it went
A great hurry-skurry off in,
For its subject was grave, and it clearly was meant
To give all the people a coughing!

There was many a LOAN scheme appeared upon town,
The "Manchester," "Chili," and "Shipping,"
Which then, as has since been the case, soon went down
With those who had ventured a dip in.
So the sharers now wish, when their fate they deplore,
And tell you their pitiful story,
They had, as the song says upon Sir JOHN MOORE,
Just "left them a-lone in their glory!"

By wholesale and retail, each day came a lot,
The "Paper," the "Tea," and the "Gas-light,"
Whose Trustees no substance but paper have got,
In any which this moment has light.
But we've furnished enough, and by them 'twill be shewn
The objects for which they've been thirsting,
And the people may see now each bubble is blown,
'Tis the probable cause of its BURSTING!

Sir Wm. Curtis has been confined to the house, and partially to his bed for several days, at his Marine Villa at Ramsgate, in consequence of a violent inflammation of the lungs and chest; but it gives us sincere pleasure to state, that the highly-respected Baronet is fast recovering from this severe attack.—Morning Paper.

It gives us still greater pleasure to be enabled to state, especially at this particular moment, that the pain in the worthy Baronet's chest does not arise from his experiencing any difficulty in raising the wind!

A NEW WAY TO PAY OLD DEBTS!

BEAU versus DANDY.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM CALAIS.

A droll circumstance occurred here lately, which has occasioned much merriment among us emigrants. An English lady and gentleman lately arrived here, who had scarcely landed on the pier, when they were met by one of our exiles of fashion, whom the new comer rather uncercmoniously and ill-timedly reminded of a debt. The beau, undaunted by the attack of his brother dandy, with great sang froid, addressed him in the following words:—"Why, Jemmy, how can you say I am in your debt? Did I not introduce you into a class of society, in which, but for me, you never would have been suffered to appear? Did I not notice you, in the presence of Royalty, in Pall Mall? take you by the hand; nay call you familiarly 'Jemmy,' before guardsmen and elegantes, to give you importance in the world? Surely these kind offices were cheap at the few hundreds I condescended to borrow from you; but to cut the matter short, fork out two hundreds more, cry quits, and I will engage to make your cara sposa as fashionable and distinguished at Calais and Boulogne, as I did yourself in the circles of St. James's." This address being uttered on the quay, was heard by many, and the effect was irresistible. Poor Jemmy sneaked off to Quillac's, without any repetition of his demand, and proceeded the same evening to Paris.—Morning Post, Thursday, Dec. 15.

Our fashionable readers will easily recognise Mr. BRUMMELL and JEMMY BRADSHAW, as the heroes of this rencontre.

A MATTER OF OPINION.

Captain FORBES was remarking how hard was his lot,
That his Theatre had into Chancery got;
As it would have been better for both, if his head,
In CONST's firm opinion, had got THERE instead!

THEATRICALS.

The cause which operates against our devoting much space to this department of our journal has, we fear, operated against the persons mostly concerned therein, turning their traffic to any good account—for the public mind seems just now too much occupied on one point, to admit of much diversion from it. We have been to the theatres, however, nightly; but we must, for the cause herein mentioned, be brief on wh we have seen. The Three Strangers at Covent Garden are likely to remain so—the drama is a very bad one—deficient in every point but some well-written dialogue, and only saved from thorough damnation, by the matchless acting of CHARLES KEMBLE in the last act, and just rendered bearable, in the earlier parts, by the able performance of WARDE. Beyond this, and a terrible mess of the part of Susanna by Madame V— (as BALL HUGHES calls VESTRIS), on Tuesday last, nothing important has occurred—the music of MOZART is beyond the reach of this lady, who is avowedly a bad musician; and if she does at any time depart from its adoption, it should be in something she can sing:—a hint to her will suffice—at least we hope so.

Miss KELLY appeared last evening in a new piece entitled Leocadea, from the muse of Mr. BARHAM LIVIUS, but we shall reserve a corner next week to say a few words on the excellent acting therein of this most enchanting performer.

A very amusing piece by PLANCHE, has appeared at the Adelphi, entitled SUCCESS, and fully entitled to all the success it has met with. The follies of the day are very humourously and dextrously hit off, while the exertions of the author are rendered doubly telling by those of the performers. The appearance of TERRY in his own exclusive copyright of Mephostophiles, aided by the performance of Mrs. FITZWILLIAM, and the introduction, behind the scenes, of BISHOP's beautiful ballad of Come Love to me, was effective in the extreme, and at the same time the imitations of YATES and REEVE, and the identity of T. P. COOKE, made the thing complete. They have an excellent farce here yclept the Young Widow, and those who are desirous of seeing one of the best bits of acting of the kind, now on the stage, will find it in the Splash of WRENCH—and viewing the concern altogether, we cannot avoid congratulating both the public and the managers of this agreeable place of entertainment, the one for providing amusements so worthy of patronage, and the other for manifesting a due spirit and liberality by properly patronizing them. They are FULL nightly, and we wish them no better fun.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANKFORT, DEC. 5—The great changes which sometimes take place among the Ministers of Europe often afford a key to the politics of the day, and it is not surprising that people are at this moment very attentive to what takes place in the higher branches of the Administration of different Governments. Prussia has now at the head of its War Department Field Marshal Gneisenau, the same who was the chief of the staff of the Prussian army in 1814 and 1815, of whom it was said at that time, that he was general of the officers of that army, and Blucher general of the soldiers. The King of Prussia has also appointed him Minister for Foreign Affairs, a nomination which perfectly shews the character of the Prussian Government.

In Austria, the celebrated Count Bellegarde, Chief of the War Department, who, during the Imperial Government in France, was long charged with that immense burden, has been allowed to retire, and his successor is the Prince of Hohenlohe Hechingen, who is said to be an intimate friend of Prince Metternich. What especially exercises the sagacity of observers is, the removal of Prince Esterhazy from London to Paris, and his being succeeded by Count Apponyi, who has long been at Rome, and was lately sent by Prince Metternich on a mission to Naples. It excites surprise that Prince Esterhazy, who is fond of London, and enjoys the favour of George the Fourth, and who has much exerted himself to retain the Embassy at London, should be obliged to give up the post which he prefers. It is affirmed that Prince Metternich feels the necessity of leaving at Paris a great Nobleman, who, being very opulent, might live on a splendid footing; and being initiated in the diplomacy of the British Government, might, on occasion, be employed between London and Paris. As for Count Apponyi, he unites all the qualifications of a powerful Nobleman and an experienced Statesman—he enjoys besides the friendship of the Cardinal Secretary of State at Rome, and may thus intervene with effect in the affairs of the Catholics in Ireland, in which Leo XII. is said to have solicited the support of Austria. This latter circumstance explains how Count Apponyi, after being employed in secondary missions, has been raised at once to the first Embassy in Europe. In fact, Austria could not find a person better calculated to fill such a post, in delicate circumstances, and at a moment when the policy of Rome acts such a great part in the diplomacy of Europe.

ROME, Nov. 26.—PARTICULARS OF THE LAST MOMENTS OF THE TWO CARBONARI.—Seldom have two culprits beheld the approach of death, or its appalling apparatus, with greater indifference or intrepidity. To the very last moment both most obstinately refused to admit their criminality, or to receive the pious assistance of the ecclesiastics, who are employed for the purpose of preparing condemned criminals for eternity. Targhini was the first to be brought out. He walked to the scaffold with a firm step and unchanging countenance, exclaiming to the populace, that he "died a Carbonaro, without crime." When upon the fatal platform, he began to repeat similar declarations to the spectators, but the drums were ordered to beat a roll. His associate followed, evincing, if possible, still greater contempt of death. Upon ascending the scaffold he perceived his associate's blood, and actually compelled the executioner to cleanse the spot, "as he was about to make use of it." Even when his neck was confined for the purpose of receiving the final stroke, and the Priest was exhorting the mob to pray for his being even at that moment visited by compunction, he vociferously refused their intercessions, and actually clamoured for the descent of the axe. This obduracy or resoluteness has caused a considerable ferment among the pious as well as many others in Rome. As these men had rejected the spiritual aid of the Church, Christian burial has been denied to their remains. They have been buried outside the Porta del Popolo, near the overhanging wall at the entrance of the villa Borghesa, and their graves filled with quick lime. It is said, however, that on the second morning afterwards, two laurel crowns, and a quantity of white flowers, were found upon their graves. A most inflammatory placard, allusive to these wretches and the Government, is said to have been found on a wall near the church of our Lady de Monti, on the morning of the 26th.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 25.—The Assembly to be given yesterday evening by her Majesty the Queen was prevented by an unfortunate circumstance. Just as her Majesty was coming from her private apartments, the little Theatre was observed to be on fire. Happily it was not very full, so that the audience all escaped unhurt. All efforts to check the progress of the flames were in vain. The great Opera House which adjoins the little Theatre was for a time in great danger, but was saved by the exertions of the firemen, encouraged by the presence of his Majesty and the Crown Prince, who were on the spot all night. The loss is considerable. A workman belonging to the Theatre and two female servants perished in the flames.

PROVINCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

IRELAND.—A most barbarous murder has been committed (and for the honour of the North of Ireland, we lament its occurrence) in the town of Hillsborough. It appears that on Monday night last, Mrs. Stott, a most respectable Quaker lady, and her servant, were murdered by some persons unknown, and that the neighbours knew nothing of the horrible transaction until Wednesday, when, it is said, the plaintive lowings of a cow attracted the attention of some people, who got into the house, and there found Mrs. Stott lying dead at the parlour door, mangled in a most merciless manner, and the servant maid lying dead in the kitchen, with all the marks of the most barbarous treatment. It would seem as if the poor maid made a great struggle with the cowardly murderer. Her hair was torn and strewed over the kitchen. The dwelling-house was considerably in the rear of the shop, which accounts for the silence with which the horribly disgusting enormity was perpetrated. We understand there are three persons apprehended on suspicion.—Irishman.

SCOTLAND.—A dreadful homicide was perpetrated on Monday night at Barrowfield-road, in the house of a cotton-spinner, of the name of Thos. M'Gowan, who, being discharged from Barrowfield mill at the time he was mentioned in Kean's confession, lately took up a public-house in that vicinity, which was the general rendezvous of the cotton-spinners. A raffle was held in the house on Monday evening, for the purpose of enabling an old spinner to make up his rent. A number of persons were consequently collected, among them several females. The raffle was succeeded by a dance. There were several companies in the house, and Charles Campbell, who is charged with the crime, had been drinking with some companions. A person of the name of John Orr, a cotton-spinner, came into the house about ten o'clock, with Sarah M'Vica, Campbell's wife. He had gone to her father's house, and though she was in her shift, he had advised her to dress and go to the dance. Orr took her up to dance a reel, and Campbell took another partner, not knowing his own wife was there. In dancing the reel, Campbell saw his wife, and patted her on the side of the head, and they spoke a few words to each other. After the reel was over, Orr and some others retired into a back room to have some whisky. When Campbell went into the room, he saw his wife sitting on the knee of Daniel Orr, brother to John a ove-mentioned, both brothers being unemployed spinners, when he said it would be as proper for her to be sitting on his knee. She replied, "you have got nothing to do with me, go to your wife and family at Johnstone." Campbell denied this, and said, it was only a girl who had a child to him there. On this, he made two plunges at his wife with a knife, but was prevented doing her any harm. Some more high words having passed between them, while she kept sitting on the opposite side of the table, he watched the opportunity, and rising up, plunged the knife into her breast. She immediately rose, and screamed, "Get a doctor, for I am gone." She ran from the back room through the kitchen, holding her breast with her two hands, the blood streaming from it. She reached the pavement, but almost instantly fell. She was carried inside the shop opposite the counter, till medical assistance could be procured; the blood was spouting from her bosom, and flowing through the house. She cried, "I am gone; God be merciful to my soul." Dr. Callaghan was called, and requested that she should be removed to an inner room. There were several persons standing around her, some of whom lifted her up, took her into a room, and laid her on the floor. Dr. Callaghan saw clear arterial blood a few jets spring from the wound. A finger being placed on the wound, the bleeding ceased externally. The wound was situated in the front of the neck, immediately above the sternum or breast bone, and was about half an inch in length. The deceased spoke once or twice, but indistinctly; particularly she asked for drink, which was given her by the landlord. She wrought violently with her arms, which were held by some persons present, while Dr. Callaghan examined the wound. Every symptom of death was fast approaching. The pupil of the eye was dilated, the pulsation was imperceptible, the countenance was cadaverous, and the lower jaw fell. It might have been about 15 minutes from the time the Doctor first saw her till life was extinct. On the fatal deed being perpetrated, some of Campbell's companions let him out by the back-door. The toll-keeper of Barrowfield very properly watched at the close till he came out, when he seized him and thrust him into the house. He had to step over his wife's bleeding body into M'Gowan's house. A party of the Calton patrole arrived and took him to the office about one o'clock on Tuesday morning. The deceased was a good-looking young woman, aged eighteen years; Campbell seems to be about thirty. He appeared to be drunk when taken to the Calton Police-office. He slept on the floor, and when he awoke in the morning did not appear to know what he had done, and when informed that he had killed his wife, he wrung his hands and tore his hair, and said he had murdered the best of women: "We will not be long separate; I hope we shall meet in heaven. I will put an end to my own existence; you will never see me executed—(He said this several times)—I wish I had a dagger, I would put it into my breast;—where are you, my dear Sally; where are you, Sally? many a happy hour we have had together; you are gone, and I shall soon be with you. I have sent her to eternity in an unprepared state, and I must expect to lose my life as I have taken hers;" and striking his forehead with his hands, cried out in a distracted manner, "Oh, that the Lord may impute her sins to me, as I was the occasion of her untimely end." While they were conveying him from the Police-office to jail, he said to those around, "Farewell, I shall never see you more." He was one of the principal leaders in the Spinner's combination, and wrote letters for them. He had been married to the deceased about a year.—Glasgow Chronicle,

THE ARMY.

A detachment belonging to the 74th Regiment of Foot has arrived on board the Arab transport, at Portsmouth, from Halifax, and is ordered to Chatham, for the purpose of proceeding from thence to Edinburgh, to join the depot of that corps, which is at present stationed there.

The depot of the 42d (Royal Highland) Regiment of Infantry has arrived, on board the Susan transport, at Edinburgh, from Cork, where it is to be stationed.

The depot of the 91st (Argyllshire) Regiment of Foot has received orders to march from Edinburgh to Perth, where it is, for the present, to be stationed.

NAVY.

PORTSMOUTH, DEC. 10.—On Saturday his Majesty's ship Glasgow, 50, Capt. Hon. J. W. Maude, returned from Cronstadt, having landed there the Right Hon. Lord Strangford, who reached the Russian capital on the 16th ult. On Monday the Dotterel, 18, Captain Edwards, arrived from Woolwich, fitted for the North American station. On Tuesday the Dromedary arrived from Woolwich with 300 convicts, bound to Bermuda, intending to embark 100 from the hulks at this place; they are to be employed in improving the port and arsenal there.

On Thursday the Superb, 78, Captain Sir Thomas Staines, Bart., K.C.B., came into the harbour to be paid off, all standing; she will be recommissioned by Captain Henry Hill.—The Glasgow is put under orders to proceed to the Lisbon station, to relieve the Tribune, Capt. Guion, and will sail early next week.—The Spartiate is to be paid off and laid up in ordinary; such of her crew as have not served the usual period, will be distributed among the guardships at this port, and the remainder will be discharged.—The Harlequin, 18, Captain James Scott, is going to the West India station. The Surveying ship Mastiff, Capt. Copeland, will sail shortly for the Mediterranean.—The Royal Oak, Lieut. Allison, will sail in a few days for Bermuda, taking out Lieut.-Gen. Sir Hilgrove Turner, K.C.B. Governor of that Island, family, and suite.—Remain at Spithead, Glasgow, Harlequin, Dotterel, and Dromedary.

On Monday the Jasper, 10, Captain C. H. Fremantle, put into Falmouth with contrary winds, charged with dispatches from Mexico. She left Vera Cruz the 6th of October, and soon after fell in with the Mexican squadron, commanded by Captain C. T. Smith (nephew of the gallant Sidney Smith), in the Libertado frigate (formerly the Surat Castle) having a brig and five schooners in company, and in sight of the Spanish squadron, of two frigates and two transports, bound to the relief of the Castle of St. Juan-d'Ulloa. They were within gun-shot of each other, and were hourly expected to engage.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF KING'S BENCH, DEC. 16.

LIBEL.—BUCKINGHAM v. BANKES, M.P.

This was an action brought by the plaintiff, who is the proprietor of the Oriental Herald and the author of Travels in Palestine, against the defendant, who is a Member of Parliament for Corfe Castle, for having published a libel upon the plaintiff's character, in a letter written by the defendant, to Mr. John Murray, of Albemarle-street, the proprietor of the Quarterly Review. The defendant pleaded a justification.

Mr. Brougham and Mr. Hill appeared for the plaintiff; and the Attorney-General and Mr. F. Pollock appeared for the defendant.

As soon as the Jury was sworn,

The Attorney-General, for the defendant, said, that his client had withdrawn the justification pleaded by him, upon the understanding that the plaintiff, Mr. Buckingham, would take a verdict for nominal damages.

Mr. Brougham said, the object of Mr. Buckingham, in bringing this, and a similar action, a short time ago, against Mr. Murray, was to clear his character from the imputation cast upon it by this and other libels; and as the defendant now, by withdrawing his justification, admitted there was no ground for those imputations, Mr. Buckingham's object was attained, and he was, therefore, willing to accept a verdict for nominal damages, with costs as between attorney and client.

Lord Chief Justice—The costs must be matter of arrangement between the parties.

The Jury, under his Lordship's directions, found a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages, One Shilling.

The Lord Chief Justice expressed his satisfaction that this action had been thus terminated.

The following is, we understand, the libel for which the action was brought:—

"SIR—I have received a letter from my son, dated Thebes (Egypt) 12th June, which is the occasion of my troubling you. He informed me that a person named J. S. Buckingham, introduced himself to him some time ago at Jerusalem, under the pretence of being an intimate friend of Col. Missett, and also of the late celebrated traveller, Mr. Burckhardt; that in consequence of this supposed friendship with two so respectable men, and so well known to my son, he permitted Mr. Buckingham, whose destination was to India, to accompany him for some time, and to take a copy of that part of his Journal which was kept during this portion of his travels.

"This ill-placed confidence has been requited in the way that such acts of kindness usually are by ungrateful and worthless people. Mr. Buckingham announces his intention of publishing his own Travels, of which I have before me an elaborate and pompous Prospectus in a Calcutta Newspaper. I know not whether you have ever heard of this projected work; but as it is intended to be printed and published in London in a splendid manner, it is very probable that application may be made to you before it sees the light; in which case I wish to put you upon your guard against having any transactions with such an author as Mr. Buckingham, and also against laying before the public parts of a very extensive and curious Tour in an imperfect state, which I hope and trust my son will be induced to submit to them in the best and most complete form that he can put his valuable researches together whenever he returns. You will oblige me by making known what I communicate, with regard to the character of Mr. Buckingham and his intended work, in any way that you may deem proper, and I remain your obedient servant,

"H. BANKES."

"Kington Hall, Wimborne, Oct. 3, 1819.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS, DEC. 12.

Stanley de Courcey Ireland and Elizabeth Gravalt were indicted for a conspiracy to defraud certain tradesmen.

Mr. Alley having stated the case, proceeded to call his witnesses, the first of whom was Mrs. Marsh, and her clerk, and they proved that the prisoner Ireland obtained the house, 91, Gloucester-place, upon the reference of Mr. Martin. The hon. gentleman was then called, and he gave the same statement which has been detailed most fully in our police reports.

On his cross-examination, he said—The prisoner Ireland is a nephew of Sir Edward Stanley; he is not, as I now understand, the lessee of the marble quarry I spoke of; when I called at the house, the female prisoner appeared to be acting in the capacity of servant; 'pon my honour, I thought her a swindler directly I saw her.

Mr. Phillips—You have already admitted that Ireland humbugged you. Now don't you think he might possibly have humbugged the female prisoner also?

Mr. Martin—I thought her too keen to be humbugged.

Mr. Phillips—Did you think her keener than yourself?

Mr. Martin—I thought it impossible for her to live in the house, and not know the character of its master.

Mr. Danell, the silversmith and cutler, of Oxford-street; Mr. Vickery, the glass manufacturer, of Regent-street; Mr. Saxby, dealer in foreign china, of Albemarle-street; Mr. Miller, lamp-manufacturer; and Messrs. Harding, of Pall-mall, proved that Ponsonby ordered knives and forks, glass, tea and dessert services of china, table lamps, and linen, and which were sent home to Ireland, who promised payment.

Messrs. Tuckers, of St. Paul's Church-yard, also proved the attempt that was made to get from them 3,500l. worth of plate. The pawnbrokers proved that part of the goods were pledged by the female prisoner. The officer proved the apprehension of Ireland in an obscure lodging in the Borough, after his flight from Gloucester-place.

Thomas Gurney, ci-devant footman to Ponsonby, proved that his principal employment had been to follow Ponsonby on horseback when he went out of a morning, and that Ponsonby used to call at different places and order goods. At other times he would dismount from his horse near St. James's-square, and desire the witness to wait with it, while he went to his noble relative's in the square.

By the Chairman—The prisoner Gravatt was treated in every respect as if she had been a common servant.

Mr. Alley admitted he could not sustain his case against her; she was therefore, acquitted, under the direction of the worthy Chairman.

Mr. Phillips, in an ingenious reply, contended that there was no evidence to show any thing beyond swindling, and as his client was not indicted for that offence, but for conspiracy, he was entitled to an acquittal.

The Chairman, in summing up, declared his opinion that there was sufficient in the evidence to sustain the indictment, and, in allusion to the evidence of Col. Martin, said, that the explanation that gentleman had given, fully exculpated him from any charge of imprudence in what he had done.

The Jury instantly returned a verdict of Guilty.

The Chairman, after dwelling on the enormity of the prisoner's guilt, sentenced him to one year's imprisonment and hard labour.

OLD BAILEY.

SENTENCES OF THE PRISONERS.

The business of these Sessions, which has been lighter than any for some time past, concluded this morning at two o'clock, with the trial of Benjamin George Valois, for perjury. At a few minutes after eleven o'clock, the Recorder, in company with Mr. Alderman Ansley, and the Sheriffs, took their seats on the Bench in the Old Court, and immediately after the Learned Recorder proceeded to pronounce the dooms of the prisoners who had been convicted during the present sitting of the Court. The following wretched individuals received the awful sentence of Death:—

Thomas Gismore, for stealing in a dwelling-house; Michael Davis, for burglary; Frederick Felwell, for a like offence; W. Johnson, for stealing in a dwelling-house; Jane M'Avor, for a like offence; John Welch, for a like offence; Thos. Johnson, for do.; Mark Brooker, for do.; James Pinkett, for burglary; Cornelius Brisnaham, for stealing in a dwelling-house; James Edwards, for do.; John Williams, for do.; Wm. Dunn, for do.; John Lowe, for house-breaking in the day time, and committing a larceny therein; and Samuel Roberts for the same offence. (The two last named prisoners are those that were tried at the last Session for breaking and entering an apartment in Hampton Court Palace. A point had been reserved for the opinion of the Judges, who have decided against them.) Thomas Winter Preston, for stealing in a dwelling-house.

John Tyler, Mark Lyons, William Jones, Henry Brisner, James Allcock, Thomas Gorroquez, George Kelly, and James Green, otherwise Schofield, were severally sentenced to be transported for their natural lives.

For Fourteen Years—William Wallace, John Saunders, and James Weightman.

For Seven Years—William Moulds, William Chester, William Frances, William Housell, James Powell, Timothy Humbolt, Richard King, George Wilson, Michael Bryant, John Connor, Robert Thorn, Thomas Briggs, George Blackman, James Stevenson, James Bowman, Samuel Ferney, James Holland, Edward Jones, David Shepherd, William Shannon, W. R. Milward, Mary Cummings, Elizabeth Smith, Thomas Bronto, William Cross, Francis Jones, John Downs, Crighton Boyd, Henry

William Spears, Michael Brown, James Bellinger, Thomas Rayner, Ephraim Molighan, Timothy Riley, Rebecca Greenwood, and Judith Sullivan.

Imprisonment in the House of Correction and Hard Labour—One for two years, four one year each, eight for six months each, and numerous others for various shorter periods of confinement.

Several were ordered to be publicly whipped, and the judgments on two were respited.

The Recorder addressed the unhappy prisoners on whom the dreadful sentence of death was passed in a suitable manner.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BOW STREET.—A pair of well-dressed young men were brought before Mr. Halls Wednesday morning, under the surveillance of the nocturnal authorities of St. Martin's watch-house; to which place of damp and doleful durance they had been consigned on the preceding night, by Mr. Terry, of the Adelphi theatre.

It appeared by the evidence of Mr. Pshaw Pshaw, constable of the theatre, that the defendants obtruded themselves through a private door, opposite the pay-place, into an apartment not open to the public; and, when questioned by him as to their business there, they said that they wished to speak to Mr. Terry. Mr. Pshaw Pshaw told them that Mr. Terry could not be spoken with then, and advised them to apply at the stage door in the morning: but, instead of listening to this well-meant advice, they insisted upon remaining where they were just as long as they should think proper; and they even threatened Mr. Pshaw Pshaw with the vengeance of their attorney should he presume to interfere with them further. Now Mr. Pshaw Pshaw is a constable of the gentlest nature imaginable,—a man of peace and parts; and therefore, rather than incur the displeasure of the gentlemen, and the consequent vengeance of their attorney, he fetched Mr. Terry to them, as they had required to speak to Mr. Terry; but when Mr. Terry came to them, they had nothing at all to say to him; and as they still persisted in remaining where they were, orders were given for their removal vi et armis. This order Mr. Pshaw Pshaw proceeded to execute in the politest manner possible; but they resisted so vigorously, that eventually it became necessary to hand them over to the watch, and by a very natural process they were speedily deposited in the watch-house.

The Magistrate, having heard Mr. Pshaw Pshaw's account of the matter, which account was corroborated by Mr. Terry himself, asked the defendants what business they had in the private part of the theatre; and, as they seemed rather at a loss for a reply to that question, Mr. Terry answered it for them:—"They claimed an acquaintance with me," said Mr. Terry, "and made that an excuse for obtruding themselves; but, to the best of my recollection, I never had the honour of seeing either of them before."

"I beg your pardon, Sir," said one of the defendants; "We did not mention your name at all—Mr. Yates was the name I made use of."

"And are you acquainted with Mr. Yates?" asked his Worship.

"No further, Sir, than having dined at a theatrical fund dinner, at which he was present," replied the defendant.

"Then, for the same reasons, you might claim an acquaintance with the Duke of York!" said his Worship—"May I ask what you are?"

They answered, "in a joint and corporate voice," that they were "gentlemen attorneys" residing in one of the Inns of Court; and then they went regularly into their defence. In the first place they were not so sober as they would have been had they drank less wine after dinner. Secondly, being in the upper side boxes, one of them dropped his hat into the orchestra. Thirdly, they went down to the pit cheque taker to endeavour to get the hat. Fourthly, the pit cheque-taker went through the private door in question to fetch the hat. Fifthly, he was a long time in bringing the hat. Sixthly, they thought to themselves that it would be as well to follow him through the private door. Seventhly, they did so. Eighthly and lastly, they pleaded their gentility—knowing themselves to be gentlemen, they considered themselves entitled to be treated like gentlemen, and as they were not so treated, why, of course, they felt much annoyed.

The Magistrate was of opinion that the treatment they had received was perfectly justified by their conduct. "I do not know what may be your opinion of gentility," said his Worship; and perhaps my notions of it may be very old-fashioned; but I certainly think such conduct as yours is the very reverse of gentility, and I dare say Mr. Terry entertains the same old-fashioned notion of it as I do. The consequence has been your incarceration in the watch-house, which, in my opinion, was very proper, and you may now pay your fees and go about your business."

"One shiling each, gentlemen," said the gaoler; and, having said it, they slided out of the office with a bitter bow, and an angry "good morning to you—Mr. Terry!"

MYSTERIOUS AFFAIR.—A decent-looking young woman was brought before Bow-street Police-office on Friday, in the care of several persons, who stated that she had on the preceding evening attempted to drown herself off Waterloo-bridge. The circumstances related by them were the following:—About one o'clock yesterday morning, the young woman passed the toll-taker on the Strand side of Waterloo-bridge, apparently in very great agitation of mind. He watched her, and observed that she attempted to clamber over the balustrades of the bridge immediately behind the toll-house. He seized her, and prevented the accomplishment of her apparent design. Having remonstrated with her, he delivered her into the care of a street-keeper in the Strand, expressing a hope that she would go home quietly to the care of her family. Soon after a gentleman passed the toll-bar, and the toll-taker began to communicate to him the strange event which had just occurred. While thus employed, he observed the unfortunate woman, in company with another female, coming towards them. Having paid the toll, they passed through the bridge. The stranger desired the toll-taker to follow her, and bring her back. He obeyed, and she was placed under the care of a watchman, who took her to the watchhouse, and there she remained till she was brought before the Magistrate. When the toll-keeper was returning to his post, he saw the commotion of the unfortunate woman walking down the step towards the water. In a few moments he heard a noise like that of a person leaping into the water, and immediately that of struggles, similar to those of one drowning. He rushed down the stairs. All was silent—nothing but the murmurs of the tide, beneath the arch, reached his ear. He called—but no answer was returned. He looked in every direction for the female, but no trace of her could he perceive, except her bonnet and shawl. The dreadful certainty that she had committed suicide then shot across his mind, and he returned to his post with emotions of pity and horror. As early as possible he gave the necessary information, and the body of a female was found at the bottom of the river. An inquest was held on the body. The husband of the unhappy woman, who was prevented from destroying herself, heard of the events we have related, and came to the office. She accused him of unkindness. He expressed an anxious willingness to do any thing in his power to make her happy. By the advice of the Magistrate they retired from the office to endeavour to produce, by the intervention of their friends, something like a reconciliation.

GENUINE EAU DE COLOGNE.—Just received direct from Messrs. R. F. and M. FARINA, of Cologne, a fresh supply of this celebrated article, of the finest quality, and to be had of J. C. Hose, late Kinnard, 309, High Holborn, two doors from Chancery-lane.

GAME.—The Lovers of Game are respectfully invited to try GILBERT'S UNION SAUCE, which he has, after considerable expence, brought to that high state of perfection as must ensure the patronage of the Public, as it imparts such a rich and delicious flavour to eve y description of Game. GILBERT'S SUPERIOR ESSENCE OF ANCHOVY still continues to merit the attention of the admirers of Fish.—Fish Sauce and Italian Warehouse, 451, Strand.

ELEGANT COATS, cut and made to fit in a very superior manner, from the very best Saxony cloths, from 2l. 18s. to the finest Blacks and Blues, 3l. 15s. Trowsers, 18s. to the best double-milled Cassimeres, 30s. Fashionable Waistcoats, 7s to 11s. Merchants and Captains who export the best sort of gentlemen's clothes, will do well to inspect the cloths and garments made, warranted equal to any house in London, and orders to any amount executed with the greatest dispatch. A liberal discount for ready money. Boat Cloaks, Riding, Driving, or Box Coats, in the greatest variety,
At J. ALBERT'S, Tailor and Draper,
47, Fish-street Hill, Seven Doors from the Monument.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—MR. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, having with unremitting diligence long made the Science of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, where mechanical contrivance is requisite, his peculiar study, continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single Tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one-half the usual charges. Teeth cleaned if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Extracting, Stopping, and every Operation on the Teeth and Gums.—Attends at home from Ten til, Four.

TO FAMILIES.—CLARK'S WORK on NATURAL and ARTIFICIAL TEETH will be found a valuable acquisition, on account of the useful information it conveys with respect to the Management of the Teeth and Gums, from early infancy to old age; and the most modern and improved methods of supplying the loss of Teeth and Palates.—"If the length of this article should appear to our readers disproportioned to the bulk of the book reviewed, our apology must be, that it is not our system to consider the number of the pages or of the volumes of the work before us, but the importance of the subject and the degree of useful information we may hope to communicate concerning it."—Monthly Magazine. "We think the book a very useful one, and as such we recommend it to our readers."—Literary Chronicle. To be had of the Author, at 76, Lower Grosvenor-street; and of all the Booksellers in town and country.

IMPORTANT IMPROVEMENT in PENKNIVES. The usual manner of manufacturing Penknife Blades has long been a subject of complaint. The inconvenience almost every person, in the habit of making Pens, has frequently experienced. To obviate this entirely,
THOMAS CLARK, EXETER CHANGE, LONDON,
has introduced a Penknife blade, manufactured entirely on a New Principle: the line of the edge being parallel with the side of the blade, forms a very acute angle: the instrument, therefore, even in inexperienced hands, may be easily governed; no cutting, but what is intended, can take place, and the Pen is formed with the greatest nicety and the utmost facility. The blade of this Penknife is beautiful in workmanship, and the Manufacturer can recommend it with confidence, as superior to any article previously introduced into this branch of Cutlery. Also can be used with the right or left hand.

THE LONDON and WESTMINSTER WINE and SPIRIT COMPANY, No. 16, STRAND, opposite St. Martin's Church.

Port, Vintage 1820	27s to 30s	Claret, St. Julien	48s
Ditto, Crusted	36s to 42s	Ditto, Lafitte and Margaux	72s to 96s
Ditto, 5 to 8 years in bottle	48s to 56s	Sparkling Champagne	72s to 84s
Sherry, Pale and Brown	27s to 36s	Ditto, and Creaming, of the first quality	96s
Ditto, Amontillado	42s to 48s	St. Peray, dry and spark.	72s
Madeira, West India	36s to 42s	Chablis	63s
Ditto, East India	48s to 60s	Hermitage, Red and White	96s
Bucellas	36s to 42s	Moselle, Sauterne, &c.	60s
Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, and Mountain	30s to 36s

Foreign Liqueurs of all kinds.
Superior Gin, 14s; Jamaica Rum, 15s; Brandy, 25s per gallon.—Six Dozen packed in a hogshead gratis.—Bottles at cost price.—Bottled Stout, Cyder Perry, and Burton Ale, in high perfection.

BREWING UTENSILS and HOME BREWED BEER, all this year, at T. JARVIS'S, Wine Cooper and Cooper in general, No. 3, Hungerford-street, Strand, near Charing-cross, at the following Reduced Prices, viz.:—A 1 Bushel Set, with Casks, &c. 2l. 3s.; 2 do. do. do. 3l. 3s.; 3 do. do. do. 4l. 4s.; 4 do. do. do. 5l. 5s.—Families waited upon to Brew their own Beer, and to Fine and Bottle Wines, with the Patent Bottling Machine, in Town and Country. Water Butts of all sizes, from 10s. upwards, and Wine Bottles. Bathing and Turtle Tubs Lent on Hire. Merchants supplied with all sorts of Packing Casks and Cases, at the trade prices. Casks, Pipes, Wine Bottles, and Utensils, Bought or Exchanged. Pickling Tubs, oval and round, of various sizes. A set of Utensils sent to any part of the Country, by an order for payment in London. T. J. would advise all persons to take a note of this—"No. 3, Hungerford-street, three doors from the Strand."
☞ DICKENSON'S new SELF-WORKING APPARATUS, for which the large Silver Medal of the Society of Arts was voted, which produces a brilliant Beer in half the usual time, saves labour in filling, and prevents waste.—Genuine Wines from Bond.

BURGESS' ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, Warehouse, 107, STRAND, corner of Savoy Steps, London.—JOHN BURGESS and SON, being apprised of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the ORIGINAL, to observe the Name and Address correspond with the above. The general appearance of the spurious descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following caution:—Some are in appearance at first sight "Burgess' Essence of Anchovies;" others, "Burgis's," and many more without address.—JOHN BURGESS and SON having been many years honoured with such distinguished approbation, feel every sentiment of respect towards the public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many disappointments.
Burgess' New Sauce for general purposes having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient sauce: will keep good in all climates.
Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy Steps.—The Original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

THE ARABIAN VEGETABLE PILLS, free from Mercury or Antimony, are unrivalled in their beneficial effects in Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Indigestion, and its numerous train of maladies, and are particularly mild and pleasant as an aperient. The superior efficacies of these Pills has increased the demand for them so much, that an additional number of Venders has been appointed in London for the accommodation of the Public; and they may now be obtained in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each, of J. V. Simpson (Proprietor,) 28, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden; Messrs. Stradling, Royal Exchange; Anderson, 156, Bishopsgate Without; Sequeira, 132, Whitechapel High-street; E. and F. Odling, 159, High-street; and 171, Union-street, Southwark; Ward, 321, and Hose, 309, Holborn; Prout, 226, and Burfield, 189, Strand; Stanley, 14, Tavistock-row, Covent-garden; Payne, 5, St. Martin's-court; Simpson, 21, Piccadilly; Hawkins, 11, Old Bond-street; Grignon, 174, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street; Colley, 5, Holles-street, Cavendish-square; Sanger, 150, and Chandler, 76, Oxford-street; White, 1, and Yard, 28, Lamb's Conduit-street; and of all Medicine Venders throughout the kingdom. Mr. Renard, 19, Rue Vivienne, is appointed vender of of these Pills in Paris.

FASHION, ELEGANCE, and ECONOMY COMBINED. Oxford-House, Furniture Magazine, 376, near Exeter 'Change, Strand. A clear saving of £25 per cent.—The Upholsterers and Cabinet Makers' Company, established May, 1821, is the only manufacturing depot in the Kingdom, where the public are allowed to select their own woods of every description, and inspect the progress of completion, thus preventing the possibility of their being deceived by the use of unseasoned coarse materials and bad workmanship. The Public are also invited to view the choice stock of Rose, Zebra, King, and other scarce woods suited to the purposes of Manufacture, and prepared for the choice of purchasers. This establishment has, since its commencement, received the sanction and support of some of the first characters in the kingdom; and the conductors will have the greatest pleasure in referring to their numerous patrons for the honour and probity of their transactions. A draftsman of taste and experience is attached to the concern, and the newest designs of modern elegant furniture always ready for inspection. The conductors beg leave to add, that their extensive means affords them facilities in the economical dispatch of orders, which no private manufacturer can equal. In proof of their determination to deserve support, they very respectfully submit the following list of low prices:—
Second class of Furniture.—Solid mahogany wardrobe, fine Spanish wood, 13l. 13s.; Drawers, from 3l. 3s. to 5l. warranted; chamber-chair, japanned in oil, at per chair, 4s. 6d.; rich carved mahogany four-post bedsteads, 4l. 4s. to 6l. 6s.; seasoned beds equally cheap; mahogany pembroke tables, 1l. 15s. to 6l. 6s.; good tent bedsteads any size, 1l. 7s.; a suite of four rich rose-wood tables, French polished, 25 guineas; French bedstead with rich hangings, lined, pole complete, 5l. 5s.; do. with palliass, mattress, 7l. 7s.; mahogany rich carved four-post bedstead, with rich town chintz, lined, silk fringe, drapery, &c. 14l. 14s.; drawing-room chairs, newest patterns, from 29s. to 30s. per chair; real rose and zebra equally cheap; couch, sofas, chaise lounges, from 5l. 5s. to 10l. 10s.; pedestal side-boards, from 8l. 8s. to 21l. and upwards; French bedsteads, japanned in oil, any size, 2l. 2s. Every article in the above trade equally cheap. Ship-tables, drawers, sofas, and sofa-bedsteads.—Goods carefully packed and shipped for any part of England or the continent.—No charge for packing.

FOREIGN WINES.
CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant, next to the King's, and opposite to the HAYMARKET THEATRE, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, has made a still greater and the greatest possible reduction in price of the following Wines, which he warrants genuine as imported.
FINE OLD PORTS, Vintages 1819, 1820, and 1821, high-flavoured, fruity, full-bodied Wine, 60 Guineas per Pipe.
SHERRY, pale and brown, shipped by the first houses in Spain, same price per Butt, permitted from the London Docks to the purchaser direct.
FINE OLD PORT, excellent SHERRY, and good and superior direct MADEIRA, all at 21s 6d per dozen, by way of sample. Fourteen dozen of any of the above Wine, full-sized bottles, package, &c. well packed in a good Port Pipe, all included for a remittance of 20l. or half the quantity in a Sherry Hogshead, at 10l.
CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.
OLD COGNIAC BRANDY (Otard and Martell), 23s 6d per gallon. Fine Old PINE-APPLE RUM, 15s 6d per gallon.
C. W. begs to announce that he has just returned from CHAMPAGNE, where he selected a large quantity of the very best Wines from the Vignerons of AI, AVIZE, and PIERY, so long celebrated for their richness, body, and flavour. This importation is confidently warranted as of the finest quality; Monsseaux non Mousseaux, rouge et blanc, 63s to 72s per dozen; Claret, Sauterne, Vin de Grave Chabli, and all that character of French Wines, 36s per dozen; the finest imported, 63s to 72s per dozen. Lisbon, Mountain, Madeira (W. I.), Teneriffe, 27s per dozen. Fine old crusted Port, 30s per dozen.
All other Wines, Spirits, &c. in proportion. Remittances must be sent with orders, and postage paid (or not attended to), and if the greatest satisfaction is not given, the whole of the money will be returned.
P.S. Portugal Grapes, now landing in Jars, in the finest condition, at 25s. per Jar, and retail at C. Wright's Depot, Regent-street, at 10d per lb.

ATKINSON'S BEAR'S GREASE—This approved article for restoring the hair, being in almost universal demand, some rival Perfumers have taken the advantage, and introduced an article of their own, got up exactly similar in pots and labels; only the importer's name is omitted. Many of these counterfeits are very deleterious, being generally a mixture of rancid animal fats, and alkaline oils. In appearance they approximate a good deal to genuine Bear's Grease, but the effect in use is diametrically opposite—they leave the hair harsh and dry, whereas genuine Bear's Grease retains its moisture a long time, leaves the hair beautifully soft and glossy, and independent of restoring the growth, is very pleasant for dressing it, as it does not dry so quick as the Huile's antiques, and is free from the unpleasant greasiness of pomatum, &c.—Sold by the Importer, James Atkinson, perfumer, 41, Gerrard-street, and by appointment by Messrs. Gattie and Pierce, 57, New Bond-street; Sanger, 150, Grange, 126, Firth, 45, Langley, 31, and Smith, 98, Oxford-street; Woodman, Piccadilly; Dobson and Mason, 38, Haymarket; Mattrass, Fleet-street; Gibbins, Fleet-market; Colley, 28, and Barber, 43, Bishopsgate-street; Montram, Burlington-arcade; Wakefield, Lamb's Conduit-street; and by most perfumers.
CAUTION.—The genuine is enclosed in a wrapper, with the importer's signature and address, price 2s. 6d, and 4s.; and in bottles, 3s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. and perfumed with Otto of Rose, extra price.

ROEBUCK IRON FOUNDRY, Stove Grate Manufactory, and general Furnishing Ironmongery Warehouse, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—CRUNDALL and HALLEN acknowledge the liberal support they have received from the Nobility and Gentry, and, in consequence of the very considerable increase of business, they have found it expedient to enlarge their premises to a great extent, which has enabled them to offer for sale a most extensive and elegant ASSORTMENT of DRAWING ROOM and other STOVES, calculated either for the mansion or the cottage, of the most superior workmanship and design to any house in the kingdom. Fenders, fire irons, and kitchen ranges on the most improved principles, and every description of furnishing ironmongery, a saving of full 30 per cent, for the approaching season. A large assortment of patent warm air stoves, ascending or descending flues, adapted for halls, offices, warehouses, and shops. Also the admirable economical patent French table lamps, in the greatest variety, diffusing a light equal to 6 wax candles, from 28s. upwards. Manufacturers of every article of fence work for parks, balconies, verandas, entrance gates, hurdles, &c., and from the extensive machinery and convenience of their premises, including the late reduction of iron, they are enabled now to offer the above considerably under in price to any house in the kingdom. Orders of any magnitude executed with promptness, by addressing a line to Crundall and Hallen, Roebuck Iron Foundry and Stove Grate Manufactory, Great Dover-road, Southwark.—N. B. Every description of castings made to order or model. Prompt payment, and no abatement.

SUPERIOR FOOD FOR CHILDREN, INVALIDS, and others. By the King's Royal Letters Patent.—Of all new introductions in Domestic Economy, none have ever met with more universal approbation than
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY AND PATENT GROATS;
they completely supersede the use of the common Pearl Barley or Embden Grotts, a Superior Beverage being produced in Ten Minutes, and at One Half the Expense. These Nutritious Preparations have been submitted to the Medical Profession throughout the United Kingdom, and have met with the most decided approval and recommendation; in fact, many Physicians of the greatest celebrity have declared that the Patent Preparations of Barley and Groats excel all other articles in use, as a Food for Children, &c. The Patent Barley makes superior Barley Water in Ten Minutes, and is infinitely better than the common Barley for thickening Veal, Mutton, and other Broths: it is also in the highest repute for making a most delicious Pudding or Custard. The Patent Groats produce in Ten Minutes an excellent, smooth, and delicate Gruel, which, owing to the Patent mode of preparation, will never turn sour on the stomach.
Sold Retail by all respectable Druggists, Grocers, &c. throughout the Kingdom, and Wholesale by the Sole Inventor, Patentee, &c. MATTHIAS ROBINSON and Co., No. 64, Red Lion-street, Holborn, London.
 Several imitations, under the titles of "Anti-Patent," "Prepared," &c. which are gross impositions, being daily offered to the Public, particular care should be taken to observe that the words "Robinson's Patent," the Royal Arms, and the signature of MATTS. ROBINSON, are affixed to each package, as none others are genuine.

R. W. EVANS, 146, STRAND, (near Somerset House) LONDON.
PIANOFORTES, HARPS, and all other Musical Instruments, from the first Manufacturers, at the lowest Prices. Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, composed by R. W. Evans, W. West, &c.

PIANOFORTE MUSIC.

DER FREISCHUTZ. An arrangement of this Popular Opera for the Pianoforte, with Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violincello and Flute		17 6
Or, in Parts	Evans, each	3 6
SERENADES ESPANIOLA, with Accompaniment for Two Flutes (ad lib)	R. W. Evans
No. I.—Introduction—Pastoral—Air, Spanish Dance—New Guarracha		5 0
No. II.—Introduction—Romance—Danza de Village—Fandango		5 0

DUETS.

All Idea, Duet	Moss	3 0
Santo Oh Dio!	ditto	2 0

OVERTURES.

Cherry and Fair Star	Ware	2 6
Cinderella	ditto	2 0
Der Freischutz, with Accompaniments	Evans	3 6
Gil Blas	Moss	2 0
Il Tancredi, with Accompaniments (arranged by Evans)	Rossini	3 6
Mother Bunch	Ware	2 6

FANTACIES, RONDOS, &c.

*Di Tanti Palpiti, a Romance	R. W. Evans.
*Let us Haste to Kelvin Grove	ditto	2 6
*My Lodging is on the Cold Grounds Fantasia and Waltz,	ditto	3 6
In My Cottage, with Vars. and Waltz	ditto	2 0

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

*Sicilian Melody, on which is founded the highly popular Song of "Home, Sweet Home," a Fantasia and Rondo	ditto	3 6

* Those Pieces have Accompaniments (ad lib) for the Violoncello and Flute.

Isabel, the popular Spanish Air—Vars	ditto	2 6

NEW SONGS.

	SINGERS.	COMPOSERS.
Ah! did I swear	Mr. Melrose	W. West	1 6
At Evening's close	Miss Carew	Moss	1 6
Away, those Doubts	Mr. Foster	Torri	1 6
Arrows of Love, or Beauty's bright Eyes	Mad. Vestris	W. West	2 0
And art thou, then, celestial Spirit flown	Mr. Bellamy	Evans	2 0
Braw fickle Wooer	Miss Holdaway	Wordsworth	1 6
Beside the foaming dashing Wave		Evans	1 6
Come O'er the Stream	Mrs. Waylett	W. West	1 6
Deserted Cottage	ditto	ditto	1 6
Fain would I marry	ditto	ditto	1 6
My Lady hath a foolish Heart	Miss Povey	Moss	1 6
November hail Clouds	Miss Stephens	Ware	1 6
Oh, hide me from those brilliant Eyes		Jones	1 6
Oh Happy Loved Spain	Mad. Vestris	W. West	1 6
Oh, Lady, touch thy Lute again	Mr. Nelson	Nelson	1 6
Oh, 'tis Love	Mr. Pearman	Evans	2 6
Oviedo's Tow'rs	Miss Kelly	Sorr	2 0
Oh, pleasant Eyes	Mr. Pearman	Moss	1 6
Portuguese National Air		Evans	1 6
Should a pretty Spanish Lass	Miss Kelly	Moss	1 6
That Merry Peal		Poole	1 6
The Moon will flake the Sky with Light	Miss Carew	Moss	1 6
They're a muggin	Mr. Wilkinson	Pindar	1 6
What is Prayer?		Evans	1 6

This is particularly adapted for a Juvenile Performer.

Oh, she is the Lilly (Duet)	Miss Povey and Mr. Broadhurst	Moss	2 0

QUADRILLES, WALTZES, &c.

The Cadets	Ware	3 6
The Freischutz	Moss	3 0
The Royal York	Ware	3 0
The Midlothian	Evans	3 0
Les Moissonieurs		3 0
The celebrated Pas Deux in Cherry and Fair Star		1 0

Pianofortes, Harps, &c. tuned, repaired, and let out on Hire in Town or Country.

LATEST STOCK INTELLIGENCE.

City, 4 o'Clock Yesterday.

Bank Stock, 202 3	Ex. Bills, 1000 40 60 56 68 dis.
Red. Three per Cents. 79¾ 8¾ 9¼	Do. 500 35 55 dis.
Do. 3½ per Cents. 85 87 4½	Do. small, 10 20 dis.
3½ for 1818 84¾	Bank for Acc. 205
Long Annuities, 19 18¾ 19	Cons. Open. 81½ ⅝ ¾ ⅜ ½
India Bonds, 70 80 70 dis.

FOREIGN.

Austrian Bonds, 90½ 1½	Mexican do. 58½ 7 9 8½ 8
Colomb. 1824 do. 56¼ 5 6½ 6 5	Peruvian do. 40
Danish do. 5 per Cents. 100	Prussian do. 1822, 90
Do. do. 3 per Cents. 58	Russian do. 85 3½ ⅝
Guatimala Bonds, 55¼	Spanish do. 1818, 13⅝ 12⅞

An express arrived yesterday from Paris, bringing the price of the French Three per Cents. on Thursday at 62. 80. ex-dividend.

The Allgemeine Zeitung to the 10th instant, arrived yesterday. An article, dated Napoli di Romania, October 19, taken from the Oriental Spectator, describes the Greeks to be in a state of alarm, and to have sent to Athens, and to several islands, for a supply of troops, but to no purpose. The Greek fleet, consisting of seventy sail, under Admiral Mianlis, is said to be waiting for the Turks. The crews of the Greek ships, it is added, go on shore daily to plunder, and lay waste the neighbouring country.

Under date of Constantinople, Nov. 10, it is stated that a new levy of 1500 horses has been ordered by the Porte, which are intended for the Morea. News had been received that the expedition had passed Cerigo in full sail, and it was hoped, in the Turkish capital, that the present campaign would put an end to the insurrection.

The arrival of Lord Strangford at St. Petersburgh is thus noticed:—

"St. Petersburgh, Nov. 15.—The new British Ambassador, Lord Strangford, arrived on the 8th, on board an English frigate, at Cronstadt, and came here on the 9th, with a numerous and brilliant suite of diplomatic agents and English naval officers."

ARRIVAL OF THE ENTERPRIZE STEAM-PACKET AT THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

(From the Cape Town Gazette of Oct. 14.)

We have at length the pleasure to announce the safe arrival of the Enterprise steam-vessel, Capt. Johnston, from Gravesend the 3d, and Falmouth the 16th of August. This interesting event occurred at an early hour yesterday morning. Signal having been made soon after day-light, that she was standing into Table Bay, a vast concourse of persons assembled on Green Point, and al other places from whence a view of the bay can be obtained. The wind being light from the southward and westward, the vessel steamed to her anchorage in magnificent style, under a salute from the Castle, which was returned by the Enterprise lowering and immediately re-hoisting her colours, and subsequently on passing near the shore, by manning her rigging and giving three cheers.

We cannot but congratulate the public upon this additional triumph of art and science over the elements; for although the voyage has not been accomplished in the short period anticipated, yet we have every reason to suppose, that whatever wants or defects may have been discovered, will be supplied or remedied in future; and we may confidently hope, that this mode of communicating with India will ultimately succeed to the extent of every reasonable expectation.

We have been favoured with some particulars of the voyage The greatest distance accomplished in any twenty-four hours, was 190 miles on the 10th October, performed not by steaming, but by sailing.

The greatest distance in the same time by steaming was 169 miles, on the 3d of September.

The voyage occupied fifty-seven days, during only thirty-five of which the engines were employed, and three days were passed at anchor at the island of St. Thomas,

The Passengers, we understand, speak in the highest terms of the ability of the commander, the engineers, and the crew of the vessel; and we hear that no inconvenience arises from extraordinary heat, noise, or motion. The accommodations are of the first description.

We are happy to inform the public, which we do from authority, that the Bank of Sir Claude Scott, Bart. and Co. in Holles-street, have resumed their business, and thereby redeemed the pledge they publicly gave of so doing, on or before this day at the latest, and which we hope will be a great step towards the restoration of public credit and confidence.

We understand that very favourable accounts were received yesterday from Leeds and Manchester, and that a considerable quantity of gold, which had been sent to these places to provide for a run upon the different banks, has been returned to London. The public mind is said to have become much tranquillized in that part of the country.

Liston is returned to town greatly improved in health, and will delight the public on Wednesday next by his inimitable performance of Maw-worm, in The Hypocrite, at Drury-lane.

During the night of Friday week, three large mastiffs got into a field belonging to Mr. Coleman, of Chiverell, and of a flock of ninety-seven recently purchased lambs they killed fifty, and dreadfully maimed and lacerated nearly the whole of the remainder. The poor things were driven over the hedges to the extent of a mile, and the greater part of the next day was occupied in collecting them together. So ferocious were the dogs, that it was with great difficulty they could be removed from the mutilated carcases of the lambs. The dogs belonged to Mr. Selby, of Stake, and Mrs. Butcher, of Chiverell, who caused them to be immediately destroyed, and who have since paid the value of the lambs.—Devizes Gazette.

On Friday morning James Hutcheson, Esq. a debtor confined in the Fleet Prison, was found dead in his bed, which was swimming with blood; it is therefore supposed that during the night the unfortunate gentleman had been seized with a coughing fit, and had ruptured a blood vessel; as no wound, or any other mark of violence, is to be seen about his body.

Thomas Hewitt, who lately obtained money at various places, under various characters, was again brought up to Mary-le-bone Office, when numerous individuals attended to make fresh charges against him. The cases having been gone into, which were nearly similar to those we have already described, the prisoner was fully committed to Newgate for trial, upon the charge of Messrs. Passmore, Smith, Mahony, and Maycock, those cases being distinct felonies.

On Friday morning a fire broke out in the machinery of Long Allar flax mills, at Bishop's Hall, near this town, which from the nature of the materials on the premises, threatened the most serious consequences. We are happy, however, in stating, that the fire was got under in about an hour, and that the mischief was confined almost entirely to the room in which it originated. None of the machinery was injured, but fifty pounds worth of flax was entirely destroyed. The happy effects derived from prompt assistance, and a plentiful supply of water, were particularly shown in the circumstance of many tufts of flax, hanging from the room immediately over that in which the fire broke out, and which was full of that material, being burnt, without the least injury ensuing to the very large and valuable quantity deposited above. Several ricks were scorched, but in a very trifling degree, by the bursting of the flames from the windows. The loss has been fortunately covered by insurance.—Taunton Courier.

ROYAL ACADEMY.

On Saturday, the 10th inst. being the fifty-seventh anniversary of the foundation of the Royal Academy of Arts, a general assembly of the Academicians was held at their apartments in Somerset House, when the following distribution of premiums took place:—

To Mr. John Wood, for the best historical painting, the subject Joseph interpreting the Dream of Pharaoh's Chief Butler and Baker, the gold medal, and the Discourses of the Presidents Reynolds and West, handsomely bound and inscribed.

To Mr. Joseph Deare, for the best group in sculpture, the subject David and Goliah, the gold medal, and the Discourses of Reynolds and West.

To Mr. Henry Barsett, for the best architectural design for a Royal Academy and Society of Antiquarians, the gold medal, and the Discourses of Reynolds and West.

To Mr. Thomas Webster, for the best copy made in the Painting School, the subject a Madonna and Child, after Vandyke, the silver medal, and the Lectures of the Professors Barry, Opie, and Fuseli.

To Mr. Edward Fancourt, for the next best copy made in the Painting School, the silver medal.

To Mr. Joseph Deare, for the best model from the life, the silver medal.

To Mr. Samuel Loat, for the best architectural drawing of the interior of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, the silver medal, and the Lectures of Barry, Opie, and Fuseli.

To Mr. Evan Williams, for the best drawing from the antique, the silver medal and the Lectures of Opie and Fuseli.

To Mr. Stephen Callerson, for the next best drawing from the antique, the silver medal.

To Mr. George Preshury, for a drawing from the antique, the silver medal.

To Mr. John Gallaghen, for the best model from the antique, the silver medal and the Lectures of Opie and Fuseli.

To Mr. Constantine Panormo, for the next best model from the antique, the silver medal.

The distribution concluded with a short Address by the President to the candidates and other students. The General Assembly afterwards proceeded to appoint officers for the ensuing year. Sir Thomas Lawrence was unanimously re-elected President. New council—M. A. Shee, J Jackson, J. Flaxman, and A. W. Callcott, Esqrs. Old council—J. Wyatville, G. Jones, A. E. Chalon, and T. Phillips, Esqrs. Visitors in the Life Academy, new list—W. Hilton, A. E. Chalon, R. Westall, and R. Smirke, Esqrs, Old list—E. H. Bailey, J. Flaxman, H. Howard, G. Jones, and T. Stothard, Esqrs. Visitors in the Painting School, new list—W. Collins, H. Howard, W. Hilton, and T. Stothard, Esqrs. Old list—J. Jackson, W. Mulready, M. A. Shee, and J. M. W. Turner, Esqrs. Auditors re-elected—R. Westmacott, W. Mulready, and J. Wyatville, Esqrs.

Another House Run Upon.—The run upon a certain house in Cheapside, it appears, was not for cash, but for "Howard's Beauties of Sheridan," and although it must be owned that a stoppage did take place in the supply, it was soon removed, and then new and pressing calls on the house were fully satisfied in the course of the evening.

Music.—Ladies and Gentlemen about to make their Christmas and New Year's Gifts will find an admirable stock of new foreign music for that purpose at the warehouse of R. Cocks and Co. Princes-street, Hanover-square.

The pretty Song, "Remember Love, Remember," sung by Miss Love, is just published, by Fentum, of the Strand.

Marshall's Peristrephic Panorama, in Spring-gardens, since the new additions have been made to it, increases more and more in public favour.

PROMOTIONS FROM LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

War-Office, Dec. 16, 1825.

8th Regt. of Foot, Ensign J. Byron to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Dirom, promoted.—15th Dittn, Lieut. C. Drury, from h-p 21st Light Dragoons, to be Lieutenant, paying the difference, v. Clinton, appointed to the 23d Foot.—23d Ditto, Lieut. H. Clinton, from 15th Foot, to be Lieutenant, v. H. J. Cotter, who retires upon h-p 21st Light Dragoons, receiving the difference.—30th Regt. of Foot, W. H. Monnsey, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Mansel, promoted.—34th Ditto, R. H. Webster, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Milner, promoted.—66th Ditto, Ensign T. L. Goldie, to be Lieutenant, by purchase, v. Gould, promoted: Ensign C. Herbert, from 93d Foot, to be Ensign, v. Goldie.—73d Ditto, Gent. Cadet F. Dumaresq, from the Royal Military College, to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Widdrington, promoted.—93d Ditto, F. A. Goulden, Gent. to be Ensign, by purchase, v. Herbert, appointed to the 66th Foot.

Unattached.—Lieuts. J. Haggerstone, from 83d Foot: A. Dixon, from 8th Foot; to be Captains of Infantry, by purchase. Ensign P. Le Poer Trench, from 86th Foot.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

DECLARATION OF INSOLVENCIES.

J Barber, King's-row, Dog-row, Mile-end, builder.—W. Hubbard, jun. White Lion-court, Cornhill, merchant

BANKRUPTS.

J. Harris, Norwich, bombasine dresser and dyer. Sols. Messrs. Poole, Greenfield and Gamlen, Gray's-inn-square.—C. Alderson, Lawrence Pountney-hill-place, Cannon-street, floor-factor. Sol. Mr. Fisher, Queen-street, Cheapside.—W. Hughes, Mill-wall, Poplar, ship-builder. Sol. Mr. Hutchison, Crown-court, Threadneedle-street.—W. L. Grosvenor, sen. E. Chater, W. L. Grosvenor, jun. and C. Rutt, Cornhill, stationers. Sols. Messrs. Gregson and Fonnereau, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street.—W. Smith and T. Richards, Manchester, tailors. Sol. Mr. Capes, Gray's-inn.—W. Catlfer, Liverpool, merchant. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—T. Monks, Horwich, Lancashire, bleacher. Sol. Mr. Willett, Essex-street, Strand.—J. Walker, Manley-house, Kennington Common, schoolmaster. Sols. Messrs. Van Sandau and Tindale, Dowgate-hill.—R. Hobbs, Duke's-row, Pimlico, brewer. Sol. Mr. Florance, Finsbury-square.—M. Bonty, Nodehill, Carisbrooke, Isle of Wight, wine-merchant. Sols. Messrs. Anderton and Williams, Quality-court, Chancery-lane.—M. Barker, Morton-banks, Yorkshire, malster. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—T. Varley, Staningley, Calverley, Yorkshire, cloth-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—I. Newton, Trowbridge, Wiltshire, chair-maker. Sols. Messrs. Poole, Greenfield, and Gamlen, Gray's-inn-square.—P. B. Etheredge, Norwich, manufacturer. Sol. Mr. F. W. Smith, Verulam-buildings, Gray's-inn.—J. Peace, Cumberworth, Silkstone, Yorkshire, fancy cloth-manufacturer. Sols. Messrs. Battye, Fisher, and Sudlow, Chancery-lane.—S. Whitford, Black Horse, West-street, St. Philip and Jacob, Gloucester, victualler. Messrs. Poole, Greenfield, and Gamlen, Gray's-inn.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LONDON ENCYCLOPÆDIA, in royal 8vo.—On the 31st instant will be published, (to be continued Monthly) Vol. I, Part I., of

THE LONDON ENCYCLOPÆDIA; or, Universal Dictionary of the Arts, Sciences, Literature, &c. Illustrated with 260 entirely new Engravings; a General Atlas of forty royal quarto Maps, and appropriate Diagrams.

CONDITIONS OF PUBLICATION.

1. This work will be completed in Forty Parts, or half Volumes, royal 8vo. price 8s. in boards, each part containing as much matter as any part of similar works published at one guinea.

2. A Part, containing 384 pages and seven engravings, will be published on the first day of every month, until the whole is completed.

3. The work is in so forward a state, that the Publisher can confidently engage for its regular and punctual publication; and that the whole will be completed within three years and a half from the 1st of January, 1826.

4. The paper will be of the best fabric and closest texture, manufactured for this work by Messrs. Longman and Dickinson; and the Type will be cast by Messrs. Caslon and Co,

5. To accommodate those persons who prefer that mode of publication, the work will also appear in Numbers, with a due portion of Engravings. Two may be had weekly, price 8d. each.

Subscribers' Names for this Work are received by all Booksellers in the United Kingdom; and Booksellers who wish to become Agents, are requested to apply by letter to Mr. Tegg, No. 73, Cheapside.

PROSPECTUS.

Encyclopædists, with other writers of Dictionaries, have been placed by high authority among the "pioneers of literature," a species of auxiliaries peculiarly necessary when science is on the advance. It is theirs to remove the obstacles which impede her progress in penetrating unexplored regions; and if they share not in the splendour, they secure the permanence, of her victories.

When science in any country becomes stationary, and reposes amongst privileged orders of men, in Colleges and Cloisters, Encyclopædias either do not exist, or fall into desuetude. It is when the thinking faculty of a nation is roused, and its institutions are favourable to the diffusion of knowledge, that the sphere of such works is created; that their importance to the best interests of society becomes acknowledged; and that, from their adaptedness to meet the intellectual craving thus excited, they are eagerly sought for, and promptly supplied.

The literary history of Great Britain, in a very striking manner, illustrates the truth of these remarks. The first Cyclopædia that appeared amongst us, though almost resembling the original chaos, and scarcely exhibiting even marked the commencement of a new æra, and opened to the rapidly-increasing numbers of our reading population the richest stores of intellectual wealth. This was followed, at various intervals, by others more erudite and comprehensive, each professing to offer greater advantages than its predecessor, and asserting a stronger claim to public patronage. In the present day there are no fewer than six principal Encyclopædias, diversified in their specific character and object, and of very different gradations in the scale of merit; yet are they all valuable accessions to our literature. They have united to enlarge the circle of knowledge, and to extend its benefits to great multitudes, who would otherwise have remained in comparative ignorance. The conductors of the "London Encyclopædia" have no wish to perform the invidious task of decrying the labours of those who have preceded them. It is not for them to point out the contracted plan of one, which excludes from its pages some of the most important branches of knowledge—of another, which devotes a disproportionate attention to subjects of comparative insignificance; whose most finished articles are prolix, whose science often misleads, whose theology is [illegible], and which, in its general execution, is as devoid of taste as it is defective in arrangement.

"The baby figure of the giant mass
Of things,"

It is equally beyond their province to dwell on the distinguishing excellencies of those Encyclopædias which possess an established and well-merited reputation. This would, indeed, afford them very sincere delight, and they could with pleasure expatiate on the philosophy that informs, and the learning that enriches, many portions of these invaluable compilations. They could refer with proud satisfaction to one, at least, whose object it is, on a philosophical plan, to embrace and arrange all science and art, and to render them subservient to the noblest interests of man.

But the duty which especially devolves upon them, and to the performance of which they would strictly confine themselves, is, first, to shew that there is ground yet unoccupied, and of very large dimensions, which requires to be cultivated by the introduction of another Encyclopædia; and secondly, to state the claims of their projected undertaking to supply this public want.

The most unthinking, as well as the most prejudiced, must be struck with the fact, that the period in which we live is extraordinary and momentous. Amongst the great body of the people an unparalleled revolution is at work: they have awoke from that ignorance in which they had slept for ages, and have sprung up in their new character of thinking beings, qualified to inquire and to discuss; and despising both the despotism and the bigotry that would prohibit or impede their improvement. This mighty movement of the general mass is felt even by those in superior classes, who, while they once imagined that learning was their prescriptive right, yet often contented themselves with very inconsiderable portions of it. They feel that they must now go forward, or be trodden down; that to retain their rank and character in public estimation, their minds must be better cultivated, their sphere of knowledge more widely extended. The intellectual spirit is moving upon the chaos of minds, which ignorance and necessity have thrown into collision and confusion, and the result will be a new creation. Nature (to use the nervous language of an old writer) "will be melted down and recoined," and all will be bright and beautiful.

This is a state of things in which books of every kind will rapidly multiply. Bread must be found for this great multitude; and, if nutritious aliment be not provided, there will be a fearful consumption of what is deleterious and baneful. Amongst the elementary treatises, the dictionaries, and other useful epitomes of knowledge, that come into requisition at such a period, Encyclopædias, as combining the principles, the progress, and the latest discoveries of science, with every thing valuable in arts and letters, must, of course, occupy a conspicuous place. Those which are now publishing, it is fair to presume, will not be able to meet the increasing demand; others, therefore, may enter upon the field of competition without risk to themselves, and without hostility to their contemporaries.

But in every new project of this description, there must be two things kept especially in view—it must be comprehensive, and it must be cheap. It ought to be in itself an independent and principal work; those who purchase it should be placed above the necessity of procuring any other. It ought to be, in all respects, so conducted as to claim its place in the splendid library of the opulent, and, to be at the same time, of price so moderate, and so copious in its information, that the humble mechanic may obtain it as almost within itself a sufficient library for him.

The work to which this address is intended to invite the attention of the public, has been prepared with a strict regard to both these considerations. It was suggested to the proprietor by the extensive patronage, and rapid sale of the Encyclopædia Perthensis, of the last edition of which he became the purchaser and vender, and which, having been completely disposed of, it was with him a question of business, whether to reprint the original work, or to fill up the vacancy by a new one. The considerations already offered, with the conviction that the Encyclopædia Perthensis would require such a revision as would be tantamount to the production of another work, induced him to determine on the latter measure. That which is now, therefore, intended to supersede it, is formed upon the general outline of the Encyclopædia Perthensis, somewhat extended and modified. While the scientific articles, for instance, will be brought down to the latest discoveries and improvements; under the generic description of arts, not only the ornamental but the manual, and those of general utility, and of daily practice, combining the callings of the artisan, the mechanic, and the practical tradesman, will be introduced; and instead of a verbatim copy of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary, it is intended to make that great work the basis only of the lexicographical department. That the words, though alphabetically arranged, shall be connected in all their principal inflections under general definitions; that the etymologies shall be revised and compared with all later works; that the definitions of Dr. Johnson shall be examined and simplified; the authorities or quotations arranged chronologically; and new authorities, including quotations (when required) from the works of all eminent writers deceased, inserted; together with accents to guide the pronunciation, after the manner of Walker's Pronouncing Dictionary.

The present work aspires to take the very first place, as a compendious Encyclopædia. It will be the study of its writers to blend conciseness of manner with copiousness of matter; to be full and yet brief. Where elaborate works must be consulted, references will be given to the best on every subject. To every principal science, art, pursuit, or trade, a distinct treatise will be devoted; to which, a short separate index will be at once subjoined. Next to plenitude of information, easy and expeditious reference will be considered. Thus the arrangement will be alphabetical: the convenience of the reader will in all cases be consulted; all that is elementary will be amply provided; and where professional and complete knowledge of a science is wanted, every means of obtaining it will be pointed out—so that to all classes of students it will afford the readiest and best method of acquiring the knowledge of which they are in pursuit; while to the traveller, the voyager, the colonial resident, the artisan, the mechanic, and the tradesman, it offers peculiar advantages.

